WHAT THE BEAUTIFUL NEW SEVENTH-DAY CHURCH COST.

The Church Held its Annual Meeting Yesterday to Elect Trustees and Hear Reports.—Building Committee's Report.

The Seventh-Day Baptist church held its annual meeting yesterday afternoon, and Trustees were elected. Mr. Charles Potter was re-elected for a five year term and Mr. William M. Stillman was elected to fill out the unexpired term of the late George H. Babcock. Mr. Stillman will have four years to serve.

The Board of Trustees, comprising Messrs. Charles Potter, J. F. Hubbard, E. R. Pope and J. A. Hubbard, reported that the new house of worship was completed and that there was money enough pledged from the members to complete the payment in full for the entire building and its contents.

The general expenses of the church for the year, including parsonage and cemetery, amounted to $3,035.65. In addition to this there has been raised for general benevolence, including prayer missions, the sum of $1,460.14.

The Sabbath school raised and paid out during the year, $260.

A report was made by Messrs. J. Frank Hubbard, Charles Potter, Joseph A. Hubbard, and Elias R. Pope, constituting the Building Committee, under whose direction the new building had been erected. The report stated that the total cost of the new church had been $65,500, exclusive of the lot.

The Building Committee's report contained the following:

On the 26th of February, 1890, a Building Committee, consisting of Trustees, George H. Babcock (now deceased) Charles Potter, Rudolph W. Titsworth, (now deceased), James A. Hubbard and E. R. Pope, with J. F. Hubbard as chairman of the committee, was appointed and instructed to raise funds and procure plans and estimates to build a chapel. When the matter of locating the chapel came up, it was found that it could not be conveniently and successfully connected with the former church, and the plan of building it was abandoned on the day when the ground was to be broken for the foundation.

On the 20th of April, 1890, the Building Committee reported in favor of moving the old church to the back end of the lot on which it stood, facing on Fifth street, and erecting the present building on the old site. The discussion of this report developed the new plan of purchasing the adjoining lot, and removing the old church to its present position on Madison avenue; all of which was determined upon promptly and unanimously by a large and enthusiastic meeting. The Building Committee was instructed to procure plans and estimates for this building, and on the 11th of May, 1890, the plans reported were adopted, and the work was ordered forward. The moving of the old church on Dogan about May 19, 1890, and our worship was conducted in the Congregational church until July 5th of that year. Plans were perfected, the main contracts made, and ground was broken for this building early in August, 1890. The corner stone was laid on the 25th of November, and a supplemental service in which the New Market church joined, was held on the following Sabbath, November 29, 1890.

The money for this building has all been raised within the church and congregation and without leaning in any way the accustomed church work, or contributions to the Lord's work outside the local church. There have been three subscriptions (115 subscribers) to meet the expenses as they have exceeded the "estimates" from time to time; but these have been promptly met without any special effort, and without delay.

The architect was O. S. Teale, the contracting mason, I. W. Pangborn, the contracting carpenter, John Chandler; the painting, etc., were made by Spicer and Hubbard; the dome ceiling and the relief ornaments are by Emil Brisard; the painting and color decorating by Woolston and Buckle, the glass work, including memorial window, by Arnold and Locke of Chicago. The organ is by Ruben Mildmer of Brooklyn. The memorial panel is the gift of Geo. H. Babcock. The belfry, four tubular ones, known as the "Westminster Chimes," are the gift of Charles Potter.

Mr. J. F. Hubbard, the treasurer, made his annual report, showing the total receipts of the year to have been $5,393.67, expenditures, $5,065.72, leaving a balance on hand of $332.75.

The following were also elected yesterday:

Clerk—Mr. J. D. Spicer.

Assistant Treasurer—Mr. George E. Stillman.

Auditing Committee—George E. Stillman and Charles H. Dunham.

Chorister—David E. Titsworth.

Organist—Miss Jessie M. Utter.

His Team Tried to Runaway.

Saturday night, at about half-past ten, a team of horses hitched to a large farm wagon turned into 80 Seventh street, from Front, just as a car went by. The noise of the car frightened the horses, and they started to run away. The driver, however, managed to stop them after being almost upset.

Fractured His Arm.

Mr. Guttridge of Netherwood fell out of a wagon one day last week dislocating his shoulder and fracturing his arm. The accident was caused by his horse running away.

Dr. Thomas D. Martin died this morning at the home of A. D. Emerson, of Prospect avenue, aged 73 years, after a lingering illness. He will be buried in Georgia.

Mr. Frank Dodge, formerly an employe of Mr. Estil of Park [illegible], has obtained a situation in New York. He will start at work in his new position next Monday.

Mr. Louis Armendsen has sold his pretty home on South avenue, Netherwood, and, much to the regret of his friends, will leave here to reside in Brooklyn.

Mr. I. J. Lynch of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city, attended a meeting of the Diocesan Union in St. Michael's club house, West Hoboken, yesterday.

Mr. William R. Moore, of New street, who has been confined to the house for some time with bronchitis, was able to leave his room yesterday for the first time since he was taken ill.

On Friday night, Grace M. E. church elected the following officers: Superintendent, John Valiant; Assistant Superintendent, A. A. Taft; Secretary, W. B. Griffin; and Treasurer, T. W. Powell.

The names of Messrs. Van Emburgh, Teel, Buckle, Stephenson, Petrie, Maltby, Barnes, Doane, Littell, Davis, Tobin and Veil have been posted on the board of Trade board to go to Westfield Wednesday night to bowl the Westfield Club.

Mayor-elect Henry E. Needham, of North Plainfield, conducted a most interesting meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms yesterday afternoon. The male choir, composed of the following gentlemen, gave several selections: Messrs. Hedges, Ford, Rogers, William A. Runyon, E. B. Ryder, Nelson Y. Hull, L. A. Hummer, Charles Hammer, A. J. Moore and T. E. Hazell.

There was a pleasant surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Risberg, on Plainfield avenue, Saturday night. It was given to Miss Amanda Risberg in honor of her 18th birthday, and was arranged by the Misses Annetta and Hannah Risberg. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. William Westphal, Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson, Miss Flora Pullan, Miss Josephine Chesterton, Miss Ella Chesterton, Mrs. Mary Mitchell, Miss Emma Chesterton, Mrs. Petro Stewart, Miss Emma Stewart, Miss Ada Westphal, John Nelson, A. Forzelingand T. A. Ellerson. Miss Risberg was the recipient of many handsome presents, among them being a gold ring from Mrs. Geo. Risberg. $60 in cash from the Misses Hannah and Annetta Risberg, and a pair of gold bracelets. Dancing was indulged in till twelve o'clock, and a bounteous supper was served. Miss Flora Pullan presiding at the piano.

CORNER STONE LAYING.

A NEW HOUSE OF WORSHIP TO BE ERECTED IN PLAINFIELD.

By the Congregation of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church.—The Sermon was Preached by the Rev. B. T. Tanner, D. D., of Philadelphia.

The corner stone of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, was laid yesterday afternoon. Many people were present. The sermon was preached by Bishop B. T. Tanner, D. D., of Philadelphia, in which he spoke of the work which the members of the church had done and what they should do. He also thanked all who had contributed money and helped the church in its infancy by contributions of needful articles, such as brick, lumber, etc., which would be used in the construction of the new house of worship. A report was read, containing the sum as of all who had contributed money, etc., up to date. A collection was then taken so that everyone might assist in the work.

The corner stone was then put in place, and in it was put a tin box containing the singing books and the report of the work.

In the evening a service was held by the congregation of the new church in Republican hall, and a further report of the work of the church was read.

Yesterday's collection amounted to $77.25.

REV. MR. BRAKER CALLED TO THE PASTORATE OF THE SCOTCH PLAINS BAPTIST CHURCH.

He is at Present Located in Philadelphia—Said to be an Able and Eloquent Preacher of Much Promise.

At a special church meeting, held after the morning service yesterday at the Scotch Plains Baptist church, it was voted unanimously to extend a call to the Rev. J. W. Braker of Philadelphia.

It will be remembered that the Rev. Dr. Paras resigned as pastor of the church last Fall. His resignation took effect, January 1, 1894.

Since that time the church has been hearing "supplies," and during the past three months three or four very able divines have occupied the pulpit.

The choice of the church has fallen upon a very eloquent and earnest worker in Christian fields. He is a young man, also.

PLAINFIELD SCHOOLS.

WHAT IS SAID BY PROF. MAXSON ABOUT THEIR COST.

An Extract From His Last Annual Report Which Shows the City's Status in Such Matters, in Comparison With Other Towns.

In view of the renewal of the contest whereby the Common Council desires to compel the Board of Education to confer with it before incurring any large expenditures for additional school accommodations, for which the Council must provide in the budget of appropriations, without having any control of the matter, the following extract from the last report of Prof. Henry M. Maxson, the principal of our Public Schools, may be timely:

COST OF THE SCHOOLS.

To the taxpayers the cost of the schools is a question of importance, and occasionally the fact is overlooked that, as the world goes, the price of a thing corresponds pretty closely to the quality, a good article demanding a good price and a low price securing a second-rate article.

It is proper for me to say in the beginning of my administration that I know of no schools of the grade of the Plainfield schools that have been maintained at so low a cost. Indeed, the cost has been kept so low that the schools have not always been supplied with the conditions that other schools of even less excellence have.

The ordinary method of judging the cost is to select another town of about the same size whose schools seem to me about on a par with the latter, and then pay more than this other town does without once considering the quality of the article furnished. It the business world that which is low in cost may be so poor in quality that it is really a dear bargain though the price is low. It is just so in school matters, the quality of the schools must be considered before deciding the question of comparative extravagance. On the basis of quality our schools should be considered with those of Montclair and East Orange that have a similar standard of excellence, but this would not suit the critics, for the State report shows that Montclair spends $60.31 per pupil and East Orange $60.24, while Plainfield spends $25.12, thus proving that Plainfield is really economical when compared with its equals from the standpoint of quality.

Another fallacious method is to divide the total cost of the schools by the number of pupils attending, and then if another city is found that spends a few dollars less on each of its children, again the cry of extravagance is heard.

Here is one city of ——— that spends $5 less per pupil than Plainfield does. An examination of the case shows that it crowds over fifty pupils into each room while Plainfield averages about thirty-five. This crowding means less expense for teachers and less expense for buildings; it also means poorer schools, poorer health and poorer minds in the children. Giving a younger teacher over fifty children to teach means so much less attention for each child, poorer teaching and slower advancement.

For my child I would rather pay a much higher price and secure more and refined instruction, more rapid advancement and purer air to breathe than can be obtained in a crowded room, and so would every parent that considers his child's interests.

As character is the highest product of the school work, it can be attained only by putting the child in charge of a teacher of high character, and such teachers can be obtained only by careful selection with the aid of good salaries.

It costs more to ride a mile on the railway than it did to ride on the old stage coach, but we travel farther for the money. So it is with the schools, it costs more to maintain them our children are more to get the money spent. The expense cannot be lessened without lessening what the children get. It is rather bound to grow, so more is demanded of the schools, just as the expenses of living increase from generation to generation as the wants of the people increase.

Proper Treatment of a Railroad Hog.

A car seat monopolist—one of those men who spread themselves out for more comfort than they are entitled to—was discomfited on a Royal Blue train between Washington and Baltimore. In the ladies' car, only one seat was left vacant. It was next to the window, so on it was placed the overcoat and large bag of the man who had no use at the other end of the seat. Two ladies entered the car, and the colored porter politely asked the man to give the vacant seat to one of the ladies. Immediately, with a look at the porter, will polite, requested the man to remove his baggage from the seat. The only reply was a grunt. The ladies passed on.

An athletic young man in the car, who was looking for his lady, rose from his seat, got one of the ladies to take it, and threw his overcoat over his arm, and strode to the seats occupied by the monopolist. He said not a word, but threw the overcoat's feet, tossed his overcoat across the back of the seat, threw the other man's overcoat to one side, dropped his valise to the floor and took comfortable possession of the seat. After the young man had seated himself, all the passengers in the car clapped their hands in applause. The other man winced, and burying his face in a newspaper and not emerge from it until the train stopped at Camden station.—Baltimore Sun.

FASHIONABLE SILK FABRICS.

They Are the Same This Season and Are Used For Nearly Everything.

To the Editor of The News:—

It seems scarcely possible that satin can have so long enjoyed the tremendous popularity now accorded them. It is too great to last. They are both shown in a wide range of quality and beauty in every variety of ware and combination of stripe that can be devised. The silk weavers ought certainly to be exempt from the pressure of previous hard times; they must have been steadily employed in order to produce the quantity of silk stuffs now demanded by fashion and shown by the shops. The fabrics are the particular rage this season and are utilized for everything—street costumes, wraps, evening gowns, draperies, every article of the feminine toilet except underclothing. Fashion has turned in a sensible direction, so far as the latter is concerned, and even the linen and muslin garments that personally daintily women have never discarded, even in the height of the silk underwear fever. The silk petticoat is seen, to be sure, but as it serves the purpose of a second dress skirt it can hardly be called an article of underwear.

Besides satin and moire there are many fancy weaves shown in stiff silks, with self and other colored figures and stripes, and the usual assortment of light summer goods, such as china silks and brocaded taffetas. The latter come in both flowered stripes and scattered sprays, which are usually self colored. Glace and shoodille seem to be worn especially for petticoats this season; and the separate bodices in which they appeared so prominently last year are generally made of striped taffeta or satin. It is said that bonnet-lore silks—black, sprinkled with small flowers or bouquets in the natural colors—will be much worn, but they are certainly very gaudy, particularly when made up in coat shape, with a bright vest and lace ruffles.

A recent English evening gown, reviving the pannier effect, is shown in the accompanying cut. It figures in a gronnet and is made of cream satin and moire antique. The plain satin skirt is bell shaped and has no train. The panniers and revers are of moire antique, while the full elbow sleeve set in of silk needle run lace. The puffed satin sleeves reach only half way to the elbow, but are supplemented by wide lace undersleeves. This is of course only suitable for a tall, slender person. A woman of robust figure must always avoid panniers, however fashionable they may be.

JUDIE CROLLET.

BISHOP VINCENT.

He Will Preside at a Gathering of Methodists in New York.

The ninety-fifth annual session of the New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held at Calvary church, New York, beginning on Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock. The addresses of the candidates will be made by Bishop Vincent, formerly of this city.

The Rev. Dr. John H. Vincent is known as a successful pastor, an accomplished scholar, a versatile author and editor, and the wise founder and inspiring genius of a vast educational movement. More than has been given to most men, it has been his lot to wield agencies destined to reach different generations. Of his own work he has had to say little or nothing, but his life longest, but, studying all with patient and sober gaze, the opinion is here recorded that what other benevolent activities may have fulfilled their course his work in connection with the Chautauqua movement will remain as an unabating boon to American Methodism.

THIEVES AT DUNELLEN.

They Left Shoes Behind, However, that may Lead to Their Arrest.

Some time during Saturday night, thieves broke into Ben Sanders's shoe store at Dunellen and stole the money in the cash drawer, some two dozens, three pairs of shoes, a lot of cigars and a razor. The thieves left two pairs of shoes, No. 6's, on which there were dots of white paint, insuating that they were painters. They first tried to force the lock on a rear door, but being unsuccessful in that they went to the front of the store, cut a hole in the window sash, unfastened it and gained an easy entrance. Suspicion rests on two individuals in the borough.

GOLD AND SILVER IN NEW JERSEY.

A Company Plans to Get the Precious Metals Out of Morris County Rocks.

A number of Newarkers profess to have discovered a silver and gold mine. It is located in Jacksonville, Morris county, and a company of Newark and New York capitalists has been formed, and explorations and assays have been quietly made for some time. This company has bought about three hundred acres of land where they say the gold and silver are, and a mill and refinery is to be established and the work of digging up the precious rock is soon to commence.

It is said the company awaits only the completion of the processes of refining to begin active work. All the preliminary explorations have been made, and silver ore, in the form of sulphurets, has been assayed repeatedly, and shows, it is said, the remarkable value of from $200 to $600 a ton. The existence of the ore has been known for years, but refiners have refused to make investigations because, it is said, of the common opinion that silver in paying quantities was incompatible with the geological formation of New Jersey.

The Ash Barrel was Burning.

Shortly after two o'clock yesterday morning, Policeman Frederickson, while at the depot, saw what looked to be a house on fire in the direction of Madison avenue. He walked down the railroad track to Park avenue where he had a better view, and easily discerned smoke and flames. He sent in an alarm from box 13, at the corner of Park and North avenues.

The fire proved to be an ash barrel in the rear of Mr. James Connolly's place, 201 Madison avenue. The barrel had caught fire from hot ashes it is supposed. A board fence had also caught fire and was burning. The flames were extinguished with a patent fire extinguisher.

Firemen Victims of an "April Fool" Joke.

Eighteen North Plainfield firemen were made victims of an April fool joke yesterday morning. About five o'clock the fire gong blew "3." The call was answered by eighteen firemen, who ran to the house in question where the fire was. About the worst fooled of all was Driver Peter Seader. He got ready to drive out, but the firemen held the doors closed, and cackled him out of his 66, for had he succeeded in getting the engine out he would have demanded his pay. "Pete" put his boots on in such a hurry that he pulled one of the tops off.

Second New Jersey Brigade.

The seventh annual re-union of the New Jersey Brigade society will be held at Asbury Park on Monday, April 16th. The society is composed of the 5th, 6th, 7th and 11th New Jersey regiments, and the 12th New York; 26th and 115th Pennsylvania; 1st and 11th Massachusetts, 1st Maine Heavy Artillery and Clark's Battery. A number of prominent brigade officers will be present, among whom will be Generals Jackies, Carr, Ramsay, Price, Ruebling and Dickinson. Elaborate arrangements have been made, and it is expected that the re-union will be a most interesting one.

Preferred Pure Green to Beer.

WILSON'S TURN COMING

He Will Soon Have Breckinridge on the Rack.

TRIAL TO LAST TWO WEEKS MORE.

The Colonel Was Waiting on a Veteran When He Contradicted Mrs. Blackburn's Testimony—Congress Not Likely to Claim the Star Witness.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Although the Pollard-Breckinridge scandal has dragged through the circuit court for three weeks to the exclusion of other cases which are equally important from a financial standpoint, it promises to hold the boards for two weeks more. Judge Bradley has lengthened the daily sessions of the court one hour by sitting until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, thus, from the time he commenced business under which the local courts have always finished work at 3 p. m. But despite this additional hour, which means a saving of one week's time, the lawyers do not expect to be able to deliver their valedictories to the jury before the last of next week.

Congressman Breckinridge today continues the recital of his version of the nine years' intrigue with Madeleine Pollard, and he may continue the tale one day in rounding out his story, after which he will pass into the hands of ex-Judge Jere M. Wilson for cross examination.

Witness Awaits Him.

From this inquisition the followers of the trial are anticipating their choicest entertainment. Mr. Wilson, a fast and 65-con-gressman from Indiana has a well earned reputation as the most trying man who could be selected from the local bar to take a witness in hand.

He is no respecter of persons in the court-room, following faithfully the axiom that "All men are equal in the eyes of the law," and he has a phenomenal facility at planning traps for a witness, leading him along different lines of inquiry which seem harmless enough at first, and then combining the conclusions therefrom in such question that puts the victim on record in another light.

Miss Pollard and her lawyers have buried themselves in taking notes throughout the colonel's testimony, from which they expect to draw material for cross examination.

The Kentucky colony here has been keyed up to a frenzy of anticipation regarding the course that Colonel Breckinridge would take in attempting to refute the testimony of Mrs. Blackburn. Had he waived the writ of habeas corpus and voluntarily of misstating facts, trouble would have been likely to follow, for that lady has friends of her own family and state who were expected to resent any reflections upon her veracity by other than legal methods.

No such complications have arisen as yet, and no provocation has appeared for a breach of the peace.

In the most part Colonel Breckinridge's account of the episode in which Mrs. Blackburn was a witness has agreed with her statements, only he has declared that the representations of a compromising nature were part of a preconcerted plan between himself and Miss Pollard whereby the young woman might preserve her reputation. The passages of the interview of which he has given an account differing from Mrs. Blackburn's he had said diplomatically that his recollection differed from hers.

Courts and Houses May Clash.

No trouble is expected by the Breckinridge forces from the refusal of Speaker Crisp summoning him to appear at the house to help make a quorum for the Joy-O'Neill election contest. A formal statement to the house of Mr. Breckinridge's important business which demands his presence elsewhere will probably lead the house to make no further call. The only question now under revoking all leaves of absence that was passed last week. Should the house refuse to do this, an interesting question of supremacy between the courts and congress would arise, which lawyers think would be decided in favor of congress in view of the constitutional provision to the effect that members in attendance upon the house shall be exempt from arrest except for treason, felony or breach of the peace.

There will be but little testimony for the defense after Colonel Breckinridge leaves the stand, and most of that will be in the form of depositions. When the material for the plaintiff will come, in which Miss Pollard herself will probably take the stand again, and the old principal of the Wesleyan college will be called to refute the testimony of Rankin Russell, to whom Miss Pollard was engaged in 1884. Dr. Rogers will testify that Russell could not have called to see her two or three times a week, as he said, because the rules of the school, which were strictly enforced, permitted a caller but once a week, and then in the presence of teachers, and will deny that Miss Pollard prepared to go with Russell at all, as she could not be permitted to kiss him goodby under the searchlight of a teacher's gaze. After the rebuttal, there may be witnesses for surrebuttal, and finally will come the closing arguments of the attorneys, from whom the city is expecting great efforts at pleading, as the reputations of the gentlemen and the ability of the bar can justify it.

TILLMAN'S IRON HAND.

Bound to Crush Opposition to Dispensary Laws.

SENT TROOPS INTO DARLINGTON.

South Carolina's Governor Seizes the Telegraph and Acts as Press Censor—Two More Spies Found Dead in the Woods.

Twelve Companies of Militia Still Loyal.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 2.—While there have been incidents of most interesting natural connection with the dispensary troubles here, there has been practically no excitement. Crowds have lined the streets—not for the purpose of demonstration, but to secure every item of news that can be had in the matter.

Governor Tillman established a telegraph censorship on Sunday, placing several militiamen—the most intelligent that could be selected—in charge of both offices to supervise all messages offered. These gentlemen have simply carried out Governor Tillman's instructions and have refused only a few telegrams that were calculated to arouse bad feeling.

Early in the day the governor summoned the governor's guards to the executive mansion. Drawing them up in line, he addressed them, saying that he was informed that their detachment was not their fault, but that they had been overawed by a mob at their doors. He told them that they stood before the people of the state as a disgrace, and that he now wished to give them the opportunity to wipe the stain from their brow and to restore them to honor. He asked for some instances as to whether they would obey his orders, in which event their arms would be given back to them.

Throw Down Their Bayonets.

As he made this assertion five of the men threw down their bayonets and were quickly followed by several others. Their captain begged them to desist and wait until the governor had finished. Governor Tillman, however, told them that their action was satisfactory, for he only wished to know what their position was. He then said to those who remained that they could leave, but if they determined to obey orders to report to the state penitentiary. The remnant of the company marched to their armory, and in five minutes thereafter they had disbanded.

During the day the governor notified the captains of the other companies that the arms must be delivered to the state within two hours. They replied that they did not know where the arms were and that it was impossible to comply with his orders. The governor informed them promptly that the guns must be produced.

On hearing this a number of prominent citizens, in the interest of peace and order, advised the men to give up the guns. On their earnest advice the young men soon expressed their willingness to do everything in their power to put their captains in possession of the arms.

When marching orders were given to the troops stationed at the penitentiary, Governor Tillman addressed them, saying:

As chief executive of South Carolina I wish to say a few words to you before your departure. I thank you for the promptness and zeal displayed by you in responding to the call for duty. Many of you have doubts as to the justice of the course pursued by me. You are reform Democrats and Anti's, but all South Carolinians, thank God. The reason of your going to Darlington is called to the dispensary law, and it is law as long as it stands on the statute books and until it is repealed or declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.

The newspapers have sown the seed of discord by teaching you that there are portions of the law of which you are not willing to bear, and that when they say that they lie. The right to make the laws is given to the people as old as the law itself. They know that they are not telling the truth when they try to make you believe that a man in Darlington were defending their liberties.

I said in my message to the legislature that a large force of militia would be necessary unless the police of the towns would enforce the law, but they would not do this. The dispensary is not the issue, but the right to make all the statutes, so help me God, I intend to enforce it. It is not a question of politics to be fought out by ballot or powder, but by the ballot only. So much for the opinions that you are going to uphold.

When the news came of the trouble at Darlington, God knows that I was never more shocked. When I was told that the sheriff was shot down, I was horrified. The sheriff telegraphed me that he was powerless. My first and natural impulse was to appeal to the military of Columbia. What did they do? They surrendered to the bayonets of those serving in the service of their state; but, thank God, there are men left who will obey orders and not be swayed from duty by mere political considerations. Two companies at Florence and Sumter did likewise when the action at Columbia was known.

Their Duty to Shoot If Ordered.

We then see the spectacle of the adjutant general running up and down trying to get men to do their duty. When ordered out, the Fourth brigade of Charleston—that crack command—left me with the impression that such was what was their duty. Those cowards in Charleston did like those in Columbia. Without a command I proceeded to Darlington to see what I could do to uphold the dignity of your law. Thank God, I have found them in you.

You are going on a delicate and dangerous mission. You must remember that the Darlington people are your fellow citizens, for they are in insurrection, and it is necessary for you to go there to uphold the law. Those who they destroyed a state dispensary. Nobody did this but the ex-barkeepers and their hirelings. You go as the arm of the law, and you must treat the Darlington people with consideration, but if you are ordered to shoot you must do so, or assist in the arrest of the ringleaders.

I hope to restore you to your homes as early as possible, but that will be until the nine spies are state government will be the laughing stock of the world. This ought to be a proud day to you. It is for me. I am proud of the glorious heritage to your children that you went to Darlington on Tillman's orders, and you are proud of it.

Thirteen companies went. Captain J. H. Tillman went with the troops. He said he had command of a company, the Capers light infantry, to Darlington, which he expected to meet them there 95 strong. There was a force of exactly 300 men all told. A number of boxes of cartridges were placed upon the train.

General Reichberg, who is in command, would not say anything about his orders. The troops will go to the special train over the Atlantic Coast Line road.

Immense crowds of people were at the stations at which the soldiers boarded the train. Three companies were left in the city. Three hundred volunteer citizens, armed with all manner of weapons, arrived shortly after the departure of the troops and are ready to obey the orders of the governor. More companies and more volunteers are to arrive. Nothing can be heard here from Darlington, as the telegraph company will not receive or send messages to or from the governor.

Tillman as Press Censor.

In an interview at the executive mansion the governor spoke freely about the situation. There was some indication of salvo in his manner, but altogether he was as collected as could be expected under the circumstances. The governor stated that in his opinion the worst of the danger was over. He said that inasmuch as Darlington and Florence were in a state of insurrection he felt it his duty to exert himself to the utmost to uphold the dignity and preserve the peace of the state.

At the time of the interview the 300 militiamen had just left on a special train for Darlington. In view of the number of prominent citizens who had come to respond to his call he was greatly gratified at having finally placed the troops en route to the scene of the tragedy.

"But will they shoot?" was asked.

"Will they shoot?" exclaimed the governor, with emphasis. "Well, you ought to have heard them cheer when I told them to go aboard."

When asked how soon he expected to restore civil law, he said he could not tell until that there was much at stake. Darlington and the community were in insurrection, defying the authority of the state, and the insurrectionists must be put down. The property of the state, meaning the dispensaries, had been destroyed. The guilty parties must be discovered and brought to justice.

The dispensary constables were being pursued and were in imminent danger of losing their lives. He would not permit them to be hounded down and shot like rabbits. Pending developments in these matters, he would keep the militia under arms.

A few minutes previous to this interview it was reported that the censorship of telegrams had been withdrawn. He was questioned as to the accuracy of the rumor and decided it very emphatically.

He said he did not wish to have anything sent out which would inflame the passions of the people, and for that reason and with a view of securing accurate reports he would continue the censorship.

"Now, I will play editor for you fellows," said the governor, with a laugh. "Just write out your reports, bring them to me, and I will look over them. If they are not sensational or incendiary, I will let them go."

Dispensaries Shut Up.

Governor Tillman has ordered all dispensaries in counties where there is any excitement to be closed until further orders. The governor said that if whisky should be stolen or destroyed the last few days of the condition would have been very much more desperate. The loss by looting of the two dispensaries on Friday night, he stated, is no consideration other than the infringement upon the law.

Governor Tillman considers the disappearance of the state arms from the armories of the seamen and volunteers in Columbia and those of the company in Chester as serious affairs. He says he is going to have the guns back and that he has two means of getting them. One is by writ of mandamus and sending all members to jail, and the other is by declaring martial law and making search for them.

Governor Tillman received a dispatch to the effect that nine fugitive constables boarded the train at Lake City on the northern road and arrived within a few hours they will have arrived safely in Charleston. Their names are Felder, Murphy, Hodgson, Gaillard, Scott, Mahata, Byron, Gardiner and Hastings. It is uncertain whether the Gaillard mentioned is the chief constable or his son, who was reported to have been found in a ditch in a wounded condition by citizens, who then killed him. There are seven constables still unaccounted for.

No Volunteers to Be Found.

DARLINGTON, S. C., April 2.—Everything is quiet here, for the most of war is now changed to Columbia. The adjutant and inspector general of the state troops arrived here on a special train, but no troops accompanied them. The inspector general, under the orders of the governor, has traveled over the state endeavoring to secure a force of volunteers to uphold the dispensary law, but the indications are that he has met with complete failure on all sides. All classes of citizens are now vowing to bear arms against South Carolinians.

The adjutant general has been in consultation with the most conservative citizens of Darlington, and the inference is that they have all agreed to use their influence to quiet the disturbed conditions. A strong determination exists to prevail, however, that Tillman's spies shall not invade private residences. The spy McLendon, who has been here, was spirited away by his friends and supporters of the dispensary law. McLendon was the man who killed Frank Norment, and a number of the dead man's friends are searching for him.

The spy who was captured in the woods near Rogers has also made his escape. The local authorities have released their commission and resigned by letter to the adjutant general.

Governor Tillman's military train bringing 13 companies and 280 men arrived here. They were met by the local military company and escorted to their quarters. Great excitement prevailed at the time the train arrived, but it has since died away. Governor Tillman has wired the citizens here that the presence of the troops is required to arrest those who participated in the riot three days ago.

If the governor desires to make the arrests of those now in jail he will have to send at least five times the number of troops now on the spot, and it is believed if the military is called on to arrest citizens that at least half, if not all, the soldiers will lay down their arms and assist the citizens in case of trouble.

Telegrams have been sent ahead of the train on which it is said the nine spies are traveling to Charleston in order to have them captured and held until a posse from this place can be sent for them.

A courier has just arrived from the country near Timmonsville announcing that two spies were found dead in the woods near that place this morning. All is quiet at Darlington. The troops are on guard, and citizens are at their homes.

Militia Have Lost Their Arms.

FLORENCE, S. C., April 2.—Although there has been no actual disturbance here, the excitement and feeling is quite intense and very bitter, and it would only necessitate an outbreak in the vicinity or some obnoxious order on the part of the governor to precipitate the citizens into war.

Darlington has asserted her independence of Governor Tillman and his laws. Florence is ready to follow her lead, and it is the opinion of many here in the adjoining counties that they will soon come in the attitude to take the cue from Darlington. McLendon, who was first thought to be seriously wounded, proves to have been unharmed, and was declared to be all by a friendly sheriff until arrangements for his escape from the county could be made.

The guns of the Florence rifles are still in the possession of the citizens, and no attempt has thus far been made to recover them. Even should such an effort be made by state troops, no arms will be found, as they have been removed.

ANGLO-INDIAN WIFE.

SAD CAREER OF AN ENGLISH WOMAN AMONG MOHAMMEDANS.

An Isolated and Cheerless Life—Conditions Which Are Contrary to Nature's Arrangements—Intended as a Warning to Romantic English Girls.

Not long ago a Mohammedan who was studying law in England wooed and won an English bride. In writing to his relations to announce and excuse the fact, he remarked characteristically, "One must have some one to shampoo one."

Now let me give an instance that has come under my own observation. A Mohammedan boy of low rank was left destitute at an early age. He was adopted by a benevolent English woman, who devoted her life to work among the native population. The boy was thus early cut off from the surroundings natural to one of his race and was brought up under Christian influence, and, to a certain extent, with English habits. In time he was sent to England to study medicine, and without being brilliant he worked his way steadily and creditably through his course. He formed very good terms with his fellow students and made many friends during his four years' residence in the country. One of these friends spoke with friends of the lady who had adopted him, and here he met an English girl, to whom he became engaged. It was arranged that he should go back to India first and establish himself in his profession, while his promised bride should join him when he had a home ready for her.

In course of time the girl started on the journey that was to take her to the man she loved. Among her traveling companions were many old Anglo-Indians, who heard with horror of the step she was about to take. They told her of the isolation, the cheerless life that lay before her, and entreated her to return to her own people. But she took no heed of their words, and she would be true to it. She received a mother's welcome from her husband's old friend and found a comfortable, well appointed house ready for her. She wanted nothing but her husband's society, and for the first few months she told herself her life was all she ever dreamed it might be. The early ardor of her husband was always ready with advice and sympathy, and she needed no younger companions, as she had come from a small country town in the west of England, where her father was a solicitor, and she had not, therefore, been used to much gayety.

The first few weeks of her life in India tried the bride's health sorely, and she heard of the delights of the cool hill stations with longing. Her husband thought her unreasonable and refused to wish to leave him, and besides their slender income would not support the expense of two separate households for four or five months of the year.

About this time the motherly friend died, and now the couple were indeed alone in India. It is true there were acquaintances whom he met in the exercise of his professional duties, but these met he seldom brought home, as they were not in the circle of an English woman. As time went on his duties increased at the hospital to which he was attached, he was more and more from home, and, turned too tired and jaded to be the pleasant companion he had formerly been. His wife grew pale and listless, and even the birth of a child failed to rouse her to interest in life.

She now knew something of what the term Bengal fever implied. And one night at her dark skinned infant a dread and horror of the future she saw stretching before it mingled with the tender yearning love she bore it, and she knew that death was calling, but her husband would not believe it, and blamed her for the wish to leave him. He would not hear of her going to the hills when the hot months once more drew near. Moreover, he gradually went back to many customs repugnant to a foreigner.

The poor woman had no friends, scarcely any acquaintances, for no European lives in force of numbers in India. She was outside the pale of English society, and no friendly hand was stretched across the gulf that now separated her from her husband's people, and her husband had no near relations. He was a sober, earnest minded man and held what he took to be extremely liberal social views. He was willing for his wife to have as complete liberty of action as he had seen his adopted mother always enjoy. He was a Christian and was ready to accompany his wife to the station church on Sunday if she wished to go.

Surely in all this he was a model husband, and yet each day made it more apparent that their views of life were antagonistic the one to the other. From the first the child, instead of being a bond of union, was a source of difference between them. The mother naturally wished to rear her child in traditional English fashion, while the father equally naturally wished her to be guided by the traditions of his native land. It should be inured to the extremes of climate of her native land and follow to the same extent that he himself had done the customs of his father's people. He said with truth that she was likely to live and die in the country, and that, above all things, the child should be fitted to get on here in ease and comfort. What good would it do her to have English habits and manners, that were only fitted to a colder climate?

The mother was firm and fought desperately for her child to have the same training as she herself had enjoyed, and the husband as resolutely endeavored to, in the hope of some day returning to England was daily growing stronger within him. The wife's heart failed her, and her husband were all the world to one another. Even her child was a source of constant anxiety and irritation, and her health was being undermined by worry of the climate.

As his income grew he sent his wife to the hills during the hot season, but his child, who was now 4 years of age, he insisted on having left with him. The influence of his plan of accustoming her to the heat. She who was once a loving, light hearted girl, who came to begin her life in India with joyful anticipations for the future, is now a pale faced, saddened woman, who shrinks from even chance acquaintances. Her husband is still devoted to her, and would that may follow when her circumstances are known. Yet any one would say she had made her vocation with almost every circumstance in her favor. But she had proved what many a sorrowing sister has found too late—that an insurmountable, an impassable barrier exists between the Anglo-Indian, the habits of thought and the social customs of east and west.—Frances E. Slaughter in London Queen.

Died From Rotten Mackerel.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Their First Photograph.

This picture, children, is an accurate copy of a photograph taken away out in Salt Lake City some time ago. Those of you whose parents take you often to the photographic gallery may not recall your first visit, but some of you may remember it. You, little boy, remember how your mamma trussed you up in your best and most uncomfortable Sunday suit and curl ed your hair around her finger until you looked as much like a tiny little outdoor calf as possible. Then how the man with the stained fingers took you in hand and propped you up against a thing that stuck into the back of your head like a huge fork.

If you remember all this, you will know just how the little boy in the picture felt. They lived about 15 miles from Salt Lake City on a farm and had never been to a town. Their mamma saw some photographs of a neighbor's children and resolved to have some of her own boys, so one morning she hitched the team to the big wagon and drove over the hard country roads to Salt Lake City. She took her pets up to the photographer's, all dressed in their best, as you see them, and the man fixed his little bayonet and sat one boy on it. Then he stood the other boy by his side, jammed their little heads into the racks and pointed the camera at them. Of course they had never seen a camera, and they thought that their time had come. They tried hard to look pleasant, but when the man hopped around and made faces at them they weakened. The little boy on the right screwed up his face in mortal terror, and his younger brother howled in chorus with him as the picture was taken. When he finished it up, he laughed, and so did those who saw it.

When the mother of the little boys drove in over the hard road two weeks later and saw the proof, she felt very badly. Finally she said as she ordered a dozen, sighing, "Well, I suppose I see them that way oftener than any one does."—Chicago Post.

Mr. Millais.

Sir John Millais was one of those prodigies who, having real genius, fulfill the promise of their youth. When he was a boy so little that his friends used to pile books on a chair to make a seat high enough for him to sit on while he worked, he was always sketching, hoping some day to be a painter.

His mother was an acquaintance of Sir Martin Shee, then president of the Royal academy, and she told him that her little boy had a great gift in the line of drawing.

"Don't encourage it!" said Sir Martin. "Many children show this sort of proclivity, and the end of it all is failure. It is not once in a thousand times that success is achieved. Bring him up to any profession but mine."

She then asked him at least to gratify a mother's pride by looking at some of her darling's sketches. He glanced at them and exclaimed delightedly: "It is your duty, Mrs. Millais, to encourage this boy! He is a genius."

The result of this advice was that the child was sent to the finest schools of art, and when the prize for the best historical drawing in pencil was awarded, at one of the Royal academy assemblies, the name of Mr. Millais was called. A child in short dresses was presented, and the Duke of Sussex, who was in the chair, called out in amazement:

"Is this Mr. Millais? Put him on the table!" And standing there he received his prize.—Youth's Companion.

Boiling Water Without Heat.

Procure a small bottle and fill three parts of it with water. Then place it, uncorked, into a saucepan partly filled with salt water and put the pan on the fire. The boiling of the water in the pan will raise the temperature of the water in the bottle to boiling point. When this is reached, steam will issue from the bottle. Remove the bottle from the pan, cork rapidly and seal with wax to exclude outside air. When the steam has evaporated, a vacuum will have been formed in the bottle.

Some curious experiments may now be performed. If the bottle is again plunged into the pot of boiling water, the water inside the bottle will boil, and the same result may be obtained by removing the bottle from the pan and placing a piece of ice on the cork.

The water may also be made to boil in another curious way. Take a straw or a tube of any kind and blow through it upon the glass. The water will begin to bubble up.—London Million.

COXEY'S ARMY SWELLS.

It Reaches Beaver Falls, Pa., With 270 In Line.

FRYE'S ARMY IS LARGER, THOUGH.

There Are Over One Thousand In the Ranks of the Industrials, and Hundreds of Recruits Are In Waiting—Western Men Traveling by Rail—Will Make Demands.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., April 2.—Several thousand people on foot and in vehicles met Coxey's commonweal at Beaver Falls when the army entered. The crowds were curious, but not cordial. A delegation of mounted citizens met Coxey and escorted him and his followers in a parade through the town. Camp was then pitched near the Beaver river on College hill. Meetings were held on the ground at once, and $30 was collected by Marshal Sufich.

In the evening the usual meeting was held in the opera house, and after the audience left the army, 270 strong, was marched to and put to bed in the theater. By 9 o'clock 125 recruits had joined, necessitating the formation of a new company called "The Cyclones," named after the astrologer. Eighty of the recruits were fosters from East Liverpool. Marshal Smith told his men that any one of them caught begging would be dismissed and prosecuted. One was dismissed at Darlington for begging and another at Beaver Falls for drunkenness. The march into Beaver Falls was uneventful.

THE ARMY BUGLER.

Before leaving Camp Marion Butler a religious service, with music, was held on the grounds. All night long the camp was visited here by the town people, several thousand sightseers coming from neighboring towns. Food enough to last the army for two days was contributed by the citizens, and the officers were entertained by a hotel keeper. The leaders are immensely pleased with the reception and the big batch of recruits. The police were on the alert, and 25 special constables were on duty. Several well known crooks were observed in town by the local officers, but were put away from the vicinity of the camp.

Carl Browne in his orders named the camp at Sewickley "Dust" in honor of the trustee of Economy, who provides lunch today at that town. Thirteen dollars was collected from the crowd during the evening, making the total $60. Browne said that most of the speaking will be done at Economy, as he fears a cold reception at Sewickley—an aristocratic suburb of Pittsburg.

Frye's Big Army.

LITTLE ROCK, April 2.—The industrial army is beginning to assume serious proportions in the southwest and is awakening serious thought among the industrials and people of this state. Two hundred more recruits of Frye's army arrived here on a stock train and joined their companions who were camped at North Little Rock. Nine hundred more at San Antonio are awaiting transportation. Two hundred and fifty from this city joined the forces and left for Memphis via the Bald Knob branch of the Iron Mountain, nearly 1,100 strong.

Their discipline was remarkable. There was no drinking, and while the army was in camp General Frye addressed at least 500 people on the financial situation at North Little Rock.

His language was temperate and mild. He avows that the movement is just starting and that within 30 days 40,000 men will be in Washington with a common purpose. They mean to be peaceable in their action and demand three things—government employment, the stoppage of immigration for 10 years and the prevention of aliens owning land in the United States. It is their serious, quiet and orderly demonstration that appeals to the people. They get everything they want along the line in the way of food and kind treatment. The railroads furnish transportation with little objection.

Mr. Bennett's Big Yachting Prizes.

NICE, April 2.—At a dinner given by Baron de Rothschild, Mr. James Gordon Bennett announced that he would give three prizes to be competed for in next year's yachting regatta. Each prize will be worth £1,000.

GANZ MYSTERY DEEPENS.

Two Bodies Have Been Identified as That of the Murdered Man.

WOODBURY, N. J., April 2.—A body found in the Delaware on Sunday has been identified as that of Charles Ganz of Swedesboro. According to the county records, however, the body of Charles Ganz was found in a creek a few weeks ago and was buried by his relatives. The coroner's inquest at that time disclosed the fact that murder had been committed, and two men who were last seen with Ganz are now awaiting trial, charged with the crime. The finding of the second body makes the case a very mysterious one, for everything seems to show that the first body was not that of Ganz, and it presents a Chinese puzzle to the police as to what hand the two men now under arrest had in the death of either.

Ganz was last seen alive on the night of Jan. 15. On that night he was drinking in a hotel. Two men were with him. They were Patrick Kerwin and D. P. Armstrong. The trio became involved in a fight, in which it was Ganz against the other two. Shortly after the fight Ganz left the hotel and started down the road.

Ten minutes later Kerwin and Armstrong left the hotel and started down the road in the same direction Ganz had taken. This was the last seen of Ganz.

On March 11 two boys found a body in a little creek. The body was taken to Camden and was identified by a brother of Charles Ganz as that of his brother. The county physician made an autopsy and announced that the man had been murdered. The neck was broken. There were many bruises, and it was shown that life had been extinct before the body had reached the water. Mrs. Ganz, the wife of the missing man, said the body was not that of her husband. She said the clothes were different than those he had worn. Ganz's mother was also doubtful. The latter then made a close examination and found on the body three marks. When these were shown to the two women, they admitted that the body was the one they sought.

The theory of the authorities was that the murderers had changed Ganz's clothes and removed every means of identification. Kerwin and Armstrong were taken into custody, and their trial was set for the next term of court. The body found yesterday was floating on the river surface, in the pockets of the clothing were the articles Ganz had on the person when he was last seen. His watch was there, as well as a number of papers, a knife and other things. The clothing was the same as that worn by Ganz when he left home on the 15th of January. So far as the examination has gone drowning was the apparent cause of death. Whose body it was the boys found in the creek and who is responsible for what the coroner's jury has declared a murder is puzzling the authorities.

Kentuckians Were April Fools.

CINCINNATI, April 2.—The Burnet House received from Washington a telegram engaging quarters for Colonel Breckinridge to hold a conference there with his constituents. The Kentuckians appeared, but Colonel Breckinridge did not come, and his constituents suspected they were among the victims of April Fool day.

An Oyster War On.

BRIDGETON, N. J., April 2.—Sheriff Allan R. Shinn sailed in a tug for the oyster grounds at Fortescue in compliance with a request from the riparian owners to protect their grounds from the raid of a powerful oyster association. Trouble is anticipated when arrests are made.

Sees a Millionaire's Son.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—Mrs. Mary Antonio Castro Majors, a member of a well known California Spanish family, began suit for breach of promise against Harry S. Cowell, son of the well known Santa Cruz millionaire lime king, Surry C. Cowell.

Aged Woman Wantonly Murdered.

POMEROY, O., April 2.—Elizabeth, the divorced wife of Dr. Richard Slaughter, was found dead on the next door neighbor's porch with three bullets in her head. She lived alone and was 70 years of age. The object of the murder is a mystery.

Fired the State Armory.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., April 2.—An attempt was made to burn the state armory here. The damage was not large, but the investigation that will follow will probably disclose some strange facts. The members of the militia refuse to talk.

Pension Office Clerk Kills Himself.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Major Frank Bell of New York, a special examiner of the pension office, shot and killed himself at his boarding house in this city. The cause of the suicide was despondency.

Died In His Chair.

CINCINNATI, April 2.—Mr. Theodore A. Rockford, a New York lawyer who came here to be treated for consumption, was found by his physician sitting dead in his chair at the Grand hotel.

Three Big Blocks Burned.

CONCORD, N. H., April 2.—A fire in Suncook rendered 30 families, consisting of 60 persons, homeless. Three large tenement blocks were burned. The loss is about $30,000.

Austria and Russia Are Allies.

VIENNA, April 2.—An imperial decree has been issued announcing that henceforth Austria and Russia will accord each other the "most favored nation" treatment.

TINY TICKINGS.

A bomb with a burning fuse attached to it was found near London.

The overdue British steamer Sorrento, which it was feared had been lost, arrived at New York.

Fire at Tampico, Mexico, destroyed the government custom house and $150,000 worth of property.

During a fight in New Haven, Ky., Harry Lee Scott shot Alfred Alverys five times, killing him instantly.

Patrick Rowan of Pittsburg, while drunk, shot at his wife, but the bullet struck and killed Edward Connor.

W. S. Ferrell, a wealthy citizen of Huntington, W. Va., was shot to death by the Biddle brothers, desperadoes, who escaped.

A fencing contest will take place between Harvard and Columbia early in June in April under the auspices of the Boston Fencing club.

Charles Brown, 18 years old, of Kennett Square, Pa., was shot and fatally wounded in a boyish quarrel by his cousin, Andrew Milton, 12 years old.

John Hayes and George Hartman, both employed at the insane asylum in Warnerville, Pa., settled an old grudge with revolvers, with the result that Hayes will die, and Hartman is in jail.

HONORS TO KOSSUTH.

The Patriot's Body Laid at Rest In Honored Soil.

BUDA-PESTH, April 2.—An immense crowd of people from all parts of Hungary came to attend Kossuth's obsequies. The great center of attraction for the people was the National museum, in which the body of Kossuth was lying in state. It is estimated that at least 150,000 persons of all classes entered the museum and walked past the catafalque. The procession was in a silent one, the only sound breaking the stillness being an occasional sob from some woman.

Several impressive incidents occurred during the day. One was the visit of a large number of maidens from Transylvania clad wholly in white, who deposited in any wreaths on the coffin, which was already almost hidden from view by the floral offerings piled upon and about it. The visit of the veteran Honved hussars also attracted much attention.

Five thousand inhabitants of Csegled walked in a body the long distance from there to Buda-Pesth in order to pay their last token of respect and love to the great Hungarian.

The funeral services were the most solemn ceremonies ever seen here. They were held in the vestibule of the National museum. After the singing of the national anthem, in which all present joined, Bishop Sarkany delivered an oration in which he eloquently extolled the patriotic services of Kossuth.

When the funeral services at the museum had been concluded, the coffin was removed from the catafalque and conveyed to the funeral car, to which were attached eight horses caparisoned with immense plumes. The procession was then speedily formed. In it were 27 special cars bearing between 2,000 and 3,000 funeral wreaths. Then followed 600 Honveds, some in mufti and others in uniform. The cortege occupied two hours in reaching the cemetery. The streets through which it passed were densely crowded.

The Big Miners' Strike.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 2.—The arrangements, as officially vouched for, are that today will see the closing down of at least 30 of the biggest plants in the region and the waging of another bitter fight between capital and labor. Fortunately, if many a bloody conflict in this region, in connection with even less formidable fights than the one at hand, have prepared the people here for the worst that may come.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

ROUTINE BUSINESS AT THE APRIL MEETING.

Mr. O. B. Leonard Resigns from the Board of Health and Mr. H. O. Newman Appointed in His Place—William Hillman Appointed Special Policeman—Fixing the Tax Budget—Petitions Presented and Bills Ordered Paid.

The City Common Council met in regular session last night. Present—President Lee and Councilmen Bird, Erickson, Fisk, Frost, Frazee, Gimm, Millington and Westphal. Absent—Councilman Dumont and Stockton.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Mr. J. A. Smith petitioned for permission to use two feet of the sidewalk from the curb in front of his store, for fruit, from May 1st to November 1st. It was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The petition of William Miner for permission to erect an 8x12 shed near the race on the west side of Bilger's alley, was referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings, with power.

A petition was read from J. G. Voorhees for permission to erect a shed 15x25 feet at the corner of Fifth street and Madison avenue. It was referred to the Fire and Building Committee, with power.

An appeal for funds for the colored Y. M. C. A. was read from the Rev. H. P. Thomas. It was referred to the Alms Committee.

Mr. Burroughs and others, in a petition called Council's attention to the bad condition of Terrill road. The petitioners said that they paid their share of the taxes but received no benefit from it, and it was in their opinion an unjust state of affairs. It was referred to the Street Committee.

The petition of Mr. Albert Hedden for permission to erect a shed 15x10 on East Fourth street, was referred to Committee on Streets with power.

Mr. Leonard E. Hart petitioned for the privilege of moving the house No. 223 Park avenue to the corner of Fourth street and Plainfield avenue. The petition was referred with power.

Residents of Albert street petitioned Council to macadamize that street. It was referred to the Street Committee.

Mr. Fisk said that the street had not yet been opened by the city.

Mr. Oliver B. Leonard resigned as a member of the Board of Health and Mr. H. Otis Newman was appointed in his place.

The Mayor appointed William H. Hillman as a special policeman. The nomination was confirmed.

Mr. Gimm of the Alms Committee, reported back the petition of Mr. Thomas for funds, stating that the Council had no power in the matter, and even if they had it would be a bad precedent to establish.

The rules were suspended to allow one member of the Finance Committee to pass up on the bills.

Mr. Fisk of the Finance Committee, reported that in making up the budget it was decided that $45,000 would be needed for the different departments of the city the coming year, exclusive of $33,000 for general purposes.

The Council then went into a Committee of the Whole to consider the different amounts for the Committees. Upon re-convening it was decided to make the amount needed for general purposes, $33. The dog tax was fixed at $3.

An ordinance relating to the assessment of taxes for the year 1894, was passed upon its first and second readings, and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Erickson, of the Fire and Building Committee, turned in a check for $25 for the fire department account, which had been received in an exchange of horses.

He also reported that Gazelle's engine had been sold to D. A. Woodhouse for $1,600, and asked that that amount be added to the Fire Department equipment fund.

Mr. Erickson stated that in making repairs at No. 1's house it was found that the bell tower is fastened to the house by a wire, which racks the building badly. A resolution, authorizing the committee to have the tower taken down at a cost not to exceed $45, was adopted.

The Board of Engineers of the Fire Department recommended that the name of Mr. Bartlett be transferred from the Montclair Department to the roll of the Plainfield Department, that gentleman having become a resident of our city. The recommendation was adopted.

Mr. Fisk, of the Street Committee, reported back the petition of Mr. J. A. Smith, stating that the Council had no power to grant its request.

Mr. Fisk said that the street railway extension matter was still unsettled. In reference to the "T" rail, the company had referred the committee to New Haven, Bridgeport and Springfield, where it is being used. The committee had sent there and had found that the "T" rail was a nuisance when used with macadam and that the only way it could be worked successfully was with the use of vitrified brick or stone between the rails. In New Haven the rails stood about 4 inches above the road bed.

Mr. Frazee said that he was sorry that the company could not have the franchise at once as the people in that section wanted the road bad. He was sure the company would lay such a track as was at present operated on Front street.

In reply Mr. Fisk said that if the constituents of the gentleman of the Fourth Ward would take the trouble to come before the Street Committee they would find out that the committee is trying to protect their interests. In their petition they ask for something that is against the law. "The Company" he said "want to put down a cheap, good for nothing road, which would in time become a nuisance. If the company is trying to put down this matter for them first place a business proposition before the committee. It is said the petition is signed by 600 property-owners. You can't find the one-hundredth part of that number on the line of the proposed railway. I find that those that are in such a hurry are merely a few persons having property to sell. When the company gets ready to petition for a franchise for a first-class road in every shape and manner we will meet them half way."

Mr. Frazee suggested that the committee appoint some night for a meeting between the Street Committee and the petitioners.

The City Clerk was authorized to buy tin tubes for city maps.

The ordinance relating to the changing of the street line on West Front street; repealing certain ordinances in reference to the repairing of streets; and relating to licenses, were passed upon third reading and adopted.

Closing Night of the Firemen's Fair.

Last evening the members of Engine Company No. 2, who have been holding a fair in Central Hall for the past week, terminated the entertainment from the place, and, having previously disposed of the articles for sale, devoted the entire evening to dancing. There was a large attendance present, it being the last night of the fair, and the floors were in good condition. Dancing was indulged in until about half past two. The committee who had charge of the affair, and conducted it so successfully, was composed of:

General Director, Frank Hand; Treasurer, E. S. Rogers; Secretary, William Chamberlain; A. T. Marsh, H. H. Connett, W. S. Marsh, James Dawe, Frank Schuck, Charles W. Newman, Charles Smith and Adolph Kuhrman.

The amount of proceeds are yet unknown.

In Honor of Their 18th Wedding Anniversary.

At about eight o'clock last evening Mr. and Mrs L. B. Woolston were visited by a number of their friends at their home on Duer street, in honor of their 18th wedding anniversary. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. J. Vetterlein, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. A. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitenack, Dr. Pocock, Miss Lanning, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Buckle and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston and Mr. and Mrs. Shroeder.

Shooting Matches at Campbell's.

Harry Campbell and Samuel Hall will shoot a match, at 25 birds, $50 a side. Huffinghaus rules, at Campbell's Club House Thursday afternoon, at two o'clock. This is the second match between Campbell and Hall. In the former one Hall won. On the same day Messrs. Ellis Campbell and "Jack" Banner will shoot against each other for $10 a side.

THE ROOF FELL IN.

Just After a Man and Horse Had Gone from Under.

About five o'clock yesterday afternoon the roof of an old shed in the rear of Mr. Morgan Bird's store property on East Fourth street, fell with a crash. The roof was composed of boards and heavy planks. A man named Barber had just driven from under the shed with a load of coal. The falling boards just missed the rear of the wagon. Had it fallen an instant sooner the man and horse would both have been caught.

BREVITIES.

—McGibbon & Co. have an advertisement in another column to which they ask special attention.

—Justice Mosher has issued summons in the contract case of Hedges vs. Jackson, returnable April 9.

—James Totten of Manson place was injured by being kicked on the leg by a horse yesterday morning.

—In Spain, only one-fourth of the population can read and write. In Plainfield, about everybody can read THE NEWS.

—"Dandy," a pet dog belonging to James McConnell of West Sixth street had its leg broken by a baker wagon this morning.

—A horse belonging to Mr. P. M. French balked on Somerset street this afternoon, causing much amusement to bystanders. After about ten minutes' coaxing the horse was persuaded to move along.

—The annual meeting of the Hillside Tennis Club will be held to-morrow evening at the Club House at eight o'clock. Officers and members of the Board of Governors to serve for the ensuing year will be elected.

—The hunters of early days were very attentive to the bluejay, for whatever might be said in the woods would be announced by this watchful creature, and his noisy cries often gave warning of a hidden foe.

—The Westfield Board of Trade will consider action to be taken in regard to the horde of peddlers who visit that town and take considerable trade away from local dealers. There is a town ordinance that provides for a fee if these peddlers do not take out a license.

—If a little woman wants to look tall let her wear a little hat or bonnet; if a tall girl is too tall she can look a head shorter under a big dark hat. This is on the principle of putting a sky frieze and a white ceiling in a little low room or bringing down a lofty salon with a decorated ceiling, a dark frieze, and a heavy molding.

—The fifth anniversary meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Methodist Episcopal church will be held in Vincent chapel on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock and in the evening at eight o'clock. Mrs. Willing, (sister of Bishop Fowler) Superintendent of Immigrant Bureau of New York city, will address both meetings. Mite boxes will be opened and reports read. All are welcome.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

THE REGULAR APRIL MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

A Breezy Time when a Petition of Citizens was Presented Against a High School Building.—The Petition Laid on the Table.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board was held last night. Members present Messrs. Probasco, Finch, Lovell and Jenkins. Minutes of the previous meeting read and approved.

The regular routine of business was suspended, owing to the presence of a committee consisting of Messrs. J. M. Whiton, E. R. Clark, A. V. Nolan and Rowland Cox, who represented property holders of this city, with a petition against the building of a high school on the property corner of Sixth street and Central avenue. The petition was received and laid on the table, after nearly an hour had been occupied discussing it. It was signed by 225 prominent citizens and was as follows:

To the Board of Education of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—The undersigned, citizens and freeholders of the city of Plainfield, having heard through the public prints and rumor that your Board contemplates the erection of a new public school building, at an expense of from $50,000 to $75,000, hereby respectively protest against the present erection of such building, at this time for reasons:

First—By reference to the following table, compiled from the last annual report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of New Jersey, it appears that the present cost of educating the average attending scholarship of scholars at the public schools in Plainfield is now considerably greater than the average cost per capita in any other city of similar size in the State, and also that it is now about one-third more to educate a child in Plainfield than the average cost in all of these cities. It also appears that the total annual expense for school purposes in Plainfield is materially larger than in any of these cities excepting those of much larger population, with the single exception of Elizabeth, which has three times the population, and nearly three times the number of scholars.

From the last annual report of State Board of Education:

Cities.	Cost per pupil for Teach-ers.	School Attendance.	Average Attendance.	Total expense for school purposes.
Orange, Union, etc.	$47.00	3,550	$1,668.50	$166,850 00

Elizabeth,	19.00	7,000	3,990.00	75,810.00

Second.—The percentage of taxation for school purposes is now larger than the percentage of any other department of the City Government, and with the proposed bill will probably be larger than for all other municipal purposes combined. We submit that in view of the financial depression, the stagnation of business and the large number of the unemployed, it is unwise to still further increase the public burden as proposed. In our judgment, it is rather a time for a wise exercise of economy, and no public money should be expended, or demands upon the taxpayers be made, except such as are absolutely to be imperative.

Third.—It has been stated that the present school accommodation is insufficient. This we are not prepared to dispute, but, if admitted to be true, we are of the opinion that a far more economical solution can be reached. We submit that if the Wadsworth property were sold, and the proceeds used to build additional accomodation on land already owned by the city, sufficient accommodation will be had, and a very large saving would result.

We are justly proud of the high standard of excellence of the Schools of Plainfield, but we assert that while this is undoubtedly desirable, it should not, especially in the more advanced courses subordinate all other considerations. It will not be disputed that the community owes to each child an education, but there is a wide and honest difference of opinion as to the limit to which this should be carried. When it reaches the point of excessive taxation, we assert that the first consideration should be given to the fundamental principles of education, and a rule which may be enforced in the higher branches.

We further and other reasons we protest against the proposed expenditure.

The report of J. Johnson, Collector, showed school monies collected for March, $703 33; and deposited in City National Bank to credit of Board.

A communication was received from Mr. A. Titsworth, City Treasurer, stating that he had received from Mr. B. Holmes, County Superintendent, a warrant for $1,386 75, State tax, the 10 per cent. balance due, and that the same was deposited in City Bank to credit of Board.

The Secretary reported the sum in hand, $40 for rent of premises corner of Sixth street and Central avenue, for March, also $75 for sale of greenhouse on same property. The monies were ordered deposited in the Bank to the credit of the Board.

For sick stomach and all other conditions resulting from constipation; go by the book on Beecham's pills.

Book free, pills 25c. At drugstores; or write to B F Allen Co, 365 Canal st, New York.

The Superintendent of Schools handed to the Board $875, for tuition for the second quarter. This was ordered deposited in Bank to credit of the Board.

The Committee on Truancy reported having had a talk with the Mayor, and the latter assured by him of his support in the matter.

Fernando Brown, colored, was at the meeting and agreed to take the contract of removing ashes from the schools for the coming year, and, if the Board would not pay more than 25cents, he would do it for that. Referred to the Committee on Buildings.

The Committee on New High School reported progress. The Committee on publishing the annual report in pamphlet form stated that the same had been received and distributed.

It was moved and seconded that the Superintendent of Schools be authorized to select the pupils of Miss Lewis' class at the Bryant school, one-half to come in the forenoon and the other half at the afternoon session. Adopted.

The Committee received from Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, a letter acknowledging the receipt of a letter of thanks from the Board for legal services rendered by him, and stating that he looked upon said letter more than as a matter of form, and appreciated it as a high compliment.

A communication was received from the Librarian of the Public Library thanking the Board for their annual report.

Notice was received from the Cashier of the City National Bank, of its having paid $1,000 in bonds and $52.50 in coupons due March 1, 1894, on the Washington school building. This leaves but $1,000 to be paid to make the building clear of debt. This is due March 1, 1895.

The next meeting then adjourned to the call of the President.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Engineer Fertie Munn Saved a Passenger Train from Being Wrecked.

Many of the passengers who traveled on the Blue Line that left Philadelphia for New York at 3.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, probably owe their lives to Engineer Bernard Munn of Elizabeth, whose presence of mind prevented a serious accident to the train.

The train when near Bound Brook was running at a high rate of speed, when there was an ominous snap, and Engineer Munn became quickly aware that one of the connecting rod straps had broken. That the rod strap broken then the result would have been a serious wreck, in which death would probably have come to both engineer and fireman, and to many passengers on the train.

Engineer Munn stuck resolutely to his post, and so controlled the locomotive that the train was nearing a standstill when the second strap snapped. Even at the slow speed the damage done the locomotive was considerable, though none was injured. The passengers, when they learned of their narrow escape, were profuse in their thanks to "Bertie" Munn, who was so affected by the strain caused by the accident that he could hardly speak. The train was delayed an hour.

Casino Decorated for the College Dance.

Elaborate preparations are being made in the Casino for the Amherst dance and concert next Thursday evening. The hall of itself is artistic and attractive, with its two stages at each end and the large chimney at the other, and with drapery and proper furnishings can be made an ideal ball room.

Decorators are engaged draping the hall from chandeliers and arches, and the latter will be studded with electric lamps to shine through the colors from above, offset by tons of Japanese lanterns underneath.

The concert will begin at eight o'clock and tickets are now on sale at Reynolds' and Leggett's drug stores, at Martin's bicycle store and at the club. The list of patronesses is as follows:

Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. G. orge Wasson Edwards, Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Daniel F Ginss, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, Mrs. Benjamin J. SILVER SEEMS VERY POPULAR.

New Fancy Articles Made of That Metal. Pretzen Lace Embroidery.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

There seems to be a demand for silver fancy articles this season. Not only are the usual silver washed photograph frames and puff boxes displayed, but a host of smaller articles—little novelties—backed with openwork edges run with ribbons, tiny pincushions in all sorts of forms with velvet tops, calendar frames and similar articles. In sterling ware the cup of souvenir spoons is as large as ever, and the demand for specimens of silver does not seem to have affected their cost, but stickpins and mounted pocketbooks are shown at reasonably low prices. Something new in plated goods has recently been brought out in the shape of an orange holder. It consists of an openwork hemispherical cup, of the right size to hold half an orange, affixed to a flat standard, and is pretty and convenient addition to the table service.

In the matter of fancy work, fashion is unmistakably retrograding. For 10 years certain of the ladies of the reign of good taste. In place of stiff monstrosities of embroidery in crude and impossible colors, fantastic adaptations of natural forms have been used, worked in subdued but truthful tints. Now there is a revival of the former meaningless ornamentation, unpleasing in both detail and general effect. Canvas cross stitch patterns are reappearing, and it looks very much as if old fashioned woolwork—ottoman covers, slippers and that sort of thing—were on its way to the front once more.

Parisiennes are pretending to busy themselves over a new kind of work which they call lace embroidery. A sketch is given of a pincushion cover in this style. A stiff spray of flowers is outlined with twisted white silk cord on a red or old gold satin ground, while the inside of the petals and leaves is filled in with a variety of small fancy stitches in white silk, which yet allow the satin ground to show. The stems are worked in regular stemstitch, not too close. This is a simple and rapid sort of embroidery and may be employed for other articles than pincushions—only do not expect anybody to recognize the species of flower represented. JUDIC CHOLLET.

COMMONWEAL'S PROGRESS.

Coxey's Army Camps In a Fashionable Suburb of Pittsburg.

SEWICKLEY, Pa., April 3.—The commonweal army encamped 12 miles from Allegheny City after a long march of 18 miles, and pitched their tents on the Grimes farm in the heart of Sewickley, Pittsburg's fashionable suburb. The residents flocked out, curious to see the notorious commonwealers, who looked even tougher than usual after the sweat and dust of the long march. The burgess had sworn in four extra policemen, but said he must have more after seeing the army. The men were exceedingly well pleased with their treatment on the way, particularly at Economy. The

CARL BROWNE.

Aliquippa steel works drum corps and an escort of 61 workmen headed the army into Economy. The Economites, part of whose faith is the belief in the second coming of Christ, did not believe that the movement symbolizes the second advent.

At Sewickley no donations were made, and not even a meal could be secured for the lectures, so the meeting was held in the open, and the men spent another night under canvas.

There was a great deal of grumbling at the meager meat supplied by the commissary. Detectives, constables and the sheriff of Allegheny county came out to see the commonweal and examined the faces of the men to see if any were known crooks, but none was recognized. The people here are in the verge of a panic, which increased after a glimpse of the army had been had.

Judge Stowe of Pittsburg and Mr. D. C. Hecker of the Standard Oil company ventured into camp at supper time. "The Unknown," after being told who they were, ordered them out, insulted them and finally compelled them to leave the grounds.

In the usual order Carl Browne said that the next camp at Alleghany would be named in honor of Grand Master Workman Sovereign. A colored man with a beggy and a tall hat, who says he will go "plum through," joined the commonweal at New Brighton.

Another Industrial Army.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—A large number of unemployed men assembled in front of the city hall and organized what they termed the industrial army. They were all strong and will start for Washington today.

LOS ANGELES, April 3.—One hundred and forty-seven men, 27 of whom are heads of families, started out on the march to Washington under the command of General Vinette. This command is known as the Second regiment of the industrial army.

COKE BURNERS RIOTING

Ten Thousand Men Obeyed the Call to Strike.

RECKLESS MOB USES DYNAMITE.

Men Driven From Work at the Pistol Point. Plants Blown Up and Buildings Fired. Sheriffs Swearing In Deputies and Preparing For More Trouble.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 3.—The storm has broken, and the scenes of 1891 are being repeated throughout the coke regions. The big coke strike is now on in full force. The call of the Scottdale convention was obeyed by more than half the workers in the coke fields, and it took fully 5,000 men from their work.

Ever since the close of the mass meetings on Sunday there have been more or less rioting and destruction of property, especially in this end of the region, and several calls have been made on the sheriff for protection. The situation is now in one of great peril throughout the coke section, and more destructive outbreaks are expected at any time. The ranks of the strikers have been swelled until today the best estimates give them 10,000 men.

From the outset the strike has been lawbreak, with a tendency to open defiance of law. The mines were rioting in several quarters at once. It has grown steadily worse, and there were serious outbreaks last night and this morning. At Oliver Works went out, leaving 1,500 tons of coke burning up in the ovens. The company, to save the property, attempted to put enough men to work drawing the coke, but the strikers made a ferocious attack on them with stones and clubs, driving them from the grounds. In the melee several men were badly hurt. Oliver people have telegraphed the deputies, and the works will be guarded together. The sheriff will be drawn under protection of the sheriff.

Terrorized by Armed Mobs.

The greatest outbreak was at the famous Mill Farm mines, near here. About 400 foreigners of the Columbia Iron company from Morrell and Wheeler armed themselves with guns, revolvers and clubs and started out to drive the men from the neighboring plants.

They first visited the Humphrey works, and finding the men at work they drove them away under the muzzles of pistols. One workman chose to stand at his post. He was given one minute to leave by a Hungarian who covered him with a revolver. After driving the workmen away they continued their march to Anchor, where the workmen offered no opposition and immediately left the works.

The next engagement was at Hill Farm. The men were quietly at work when the mob of infuriated strikers pounced down upon them, ordering them to leave at once. Some altercations followed, and the rioters enforced their demands by an attack in which the men at the works were seriously injured. During the conflict 20 shots were fired. A negro was nearly brained by a stone and very badly hurt.

After all the men had been driven away the rioters began firing the shanties, but desisted at the frantic entreaties of the women and children. Superintendent Harris and some of the Hungarians arrested for attempting to burn the property.

Strikers Vote to Return.

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., April 3.—One hundred warpers at the Standard silk mill, who quit work out of sympathy for the striking weavers, voted to return to work at the old wages. This is the first break among the warpers who struck five weeks ago.

Spring Elections in Connecticut.

HARTFORD, April 3.—The city election resulted in a Republican sweep of such proportions as Hartford has not seen for many years. The entire Republican ticket was elected, with the exception of Collector Browne, and both boards of city government are Republican.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 3.—The entire Republican ticket was elected except three ward councilmen.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 3.—The spring election resulted in the election of a Democratic council. Over 100 women took advantage of the new law and cast their ballots.

Fight With the Daltons.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 3.—Deputy United States Marshall Carr met, Bill Dalton and several of his gang of outlaws near Sacred Heart mission, in the Pottawatomie reservation, and a pitched battle ensued with winchester and revolvers. Bill Dalton and one of his men named George Thorn were fatally wounded, but the others escaped. Deputy Marshal Carr also received dangerous injuries.

Republican Gains in Ohio.

CINCINNATI, April 3.—Returns from Ohio municipal elections show Republican gains in many instances over McKinley's last vote, notably in smaller places. At Massillon, Coxey's candidate was defeated and a mixed ticket elected.

Positive It Is Gunn's Body.

WOODBURY, Pa., April 3.—A postmortem examination of the body of the man found at Paulsboro on Sunday was held by Coroner Smith and Sealed in a positive identification of the body as that of Charles Gunn.

Dolgeville Victims Buried.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., April 3.—The funeral procession of the six victims of the horrible tragedy which occurred in Dolgeville on Friday evening was followed to the grave by the entire population of Dolgeville.

Cured of Catarrh

Feels Like A New Woman Since Taking Hood's

Indigestion and Sick Headaches Also Relieved.

"Q. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla since last December for indigestion, catarrh and sick headache, and it has made me feel like a new woman. When I commenced taking it I did not have any appetite and for years I had to be very careful about my diet. Now I can eat any kind of food without any distress afterwards. I had a severe case of catarrh, and this with my indigestion brought on frequent attacks of sick headache. They bothered me very much. But since taking several bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla

All is Changed.

It has cured me of catarrh and my other troubles. I hope every one similarly afflicted will try Hood's Sarsaparilla and be convinced of its merit." MISS ELLA JOHNSON, 1215 Alder Street, Philadelphia, Penn.

BRECKINRIDGE TRIPPED

Fell Into One of Judge Wilson's Artfully Laid Traps.

COLONEL ALL DAY ON THE RACK.

For Hours the Congressman Defendant Stood a Scathing Cross Examination and Then Lost His Temper—Alleged Underground Letters to Miss Pollard.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Great expectations have been focused upon the cross examination of Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge by counsel—Congressman Jere M. Wilson, particularly here in Washington, where the abilities of both men are appreciated. The expectations began to be realized after the noon recess, when the colonel was delivered over into the hands of his opponents.

He had continued his story of the intrigue with Madeline Pollard through the morning, entering many and reiterated denials of various statements made by her and repeating his own version of the interviews with the Washington chief of police and of the correspondence between himself and the plaintiff.

He had been testifying for nearly two court days when his direct testimony was finished, and although Mr. Wilson piled him with questions all the afternoon the cross examination seemed to have been but just begun.

Finally at the close of the day, having secured the statement that he had written no letters to Madeline Pollard in 1890, Mr. Wilson sprung something very like a trap by dropping into a line of questioning which indicated that he has in reserve testimony to show that the member from Kentucky dictated underground letters through a typewriter at the capitol. Then for the first time the defendant seemed to lose his temper and made most strenuous denials. The typewriter whose testimony is next in order is a Miss Louise Lowell, now a clerk in the treasury department.

It had been expected that the colonel would be requested to reconcile his position as a churchman and a moralist with his course of conduct, and this expectation was not a misguided one, for the examination took that direction from the start.

His Acquaintance With Sarah Guess.

By questions concerning the colonel's residence in Lexington in 1884 Mr. Wilson elicited the information that his home was on the main street with the house of Sarah Guess, four blocks away. Then he asked:

"How long had you known Sarah Guess?" to which Colonel Breckinridge answered: "Oh, I can't tell. Perhaps 30 years."

"Did you know the character of her house?"

"I did."

"Had you ever been there before you went with the plaintiff?"

"I had."

"Then I understand that before you met the plaintiff you had for years known Sarah Guess to be the character of the house, known the location of the house and had been there before you went with the plaintiff?"

"Each of those statements is true."

Turning to the letter produced by the defense and purporting to have come from Miss Pollard, Mr. Wilson asked where the envelope was, and Mr. Breckinridge replied that it had been lost. It was his general custom to preserve all his letters, but the first letter from the plaintiff he could not find.

"You have received a great many letters from her?"

"I have."

"And you are only able to produce, of all of them, what is called this wooden or dummy letter?"

"I do not admit that it was a dummy letter. I have not said so. After the relations which grew up between the plaintiff and myself on the 1st of August, 1884, I did not want to preserve the letters because of many references in them."

"You have received many telegrams from the plaintiff?"

"I never was in the habit of preserving telegrams."

"So that of all your correspondence with the plaintiff, extending over nine years, you have only this letter?"

"It seems so."

Mr. Wilson requested a specific account of all Miss Pollard had said during the first visit of Colonel Breckinridge to the Wesleyan seminary, and that interview was again dissected, the colonel denying that Miss Pollard had said it was part of her agreement with Rhodes to repay the money he had advanced for her schooling if she did not marry him, but explained that she had asked if it would not be all right if she repaid the money.

In his most pathetic tones the colonel repeated all the details of the interview, how she had insisted upon telling him all, and he had remonstrated that there were things she did not care to tell, that he was a stranger, advising her to go to her grandfather, mother or uncles. He continued:

"There is an impression on my memory, although I cannot remember her language after 10 years, that she said she had given him even a higher proof of her intention to marry him. Then I told her that she could not afford not to marry him."

"And that same rule would apply to a man under the same circumstances."

Breckinridge on Moral Ethics.

"Well, that is a question of casuistry or sociology I would not care to answer. If you ask me whether I would advise a young woman who had sexual intercourse with a man to marry him, I would say 'Yes,' but with a man it would be different, for the knowledge of it by the public would destroy the woman and would only injure the man."

"Would only hurt the man?"

"Oh, it would not injure him so much as the woman. Society looks at these things differently. If a young man should come to me under certain circumstances, I would advise him to marry a woman; under other circumstances I would say to him, 'Better death or hell.' I am not talking of the justice of"—

"Oh," interrupted Mr. Wilson, with a contemptuous air, "I was not asking you about justice."

"Are you a member of the Christian Endeavor society?"

"No, sir."

"Did you take the Christian Endeavor pledge?"

"Never. To be candid, I will say that I was twice invited to deliver an address at the annual meetings in New York and Montreal on the possibilities of the present age. I wanted very much to deliver that, but was prevented."

By further questioning Mr. Wilson elicited the information that the colonel last June had delivered a speech to a woman's society in Nashville and had been presented a basket of flowers. He denied that he had said in his response that he had no wife to present them to and was anxious to explain what he had said, but Mr. Wilson would not permit.

"Are you a member of the Masonic fraternity?"

"I am."

"You knew that Miss Pollard's father was a Mason?"

"I did not. I knew that he was an Odd Fellow."

"Are there any obligations to the widow or daughters of members growing out of membership in those organizations?"

Phil Thompson objected to this question, and the objection was sustained.

An embarrassing presumption which Judge Wilson clung to throughout was that the same standard of morality should be demanded of men as of women. Along this line he questioned the gray haired congressman upon his reading of Byron and Burns, and when the attorneys across the table interposed their objections he justified his course with the reminder that the same questions had been asked his client.

To establish the fact of the colonel's familiarity with these two poets Judge Wilson quoted several passages from the "Cotter's Saturday Night" and other poems, which contained decidedly personal application and under which the witness could not help but wince. Then he tested his recollection regarding Louis XIV, Henry VIII, George IV and other historical personages noted for their disregard of marital obligations, putting the witness in a position which might have been laughable had it not been too serious.

Then Judge Wilson took another tack. After Colonel Breckinridge had admitted that he was in good health on the night of his first ride with Miss Pollard and had no throat trouble nor chills as Mr. Wilson loosely asked, he was asked whether it was a usual or unusual proceeding to select a closed carriage for a drive on a hot summer evening, to which the colonel replied, "Oh, no; I think it was," and the audience laughed.

Of the conversation or the ride he could only remember that Miss Pollard did most of the talking.

"You were not inclined to talk?" Mr. Wilson commented.

"Oh, that depends on the company I am in," replied the colonel. Continuing, he described how Miss Pollard had talked of her aspirations to be an authoress and how he had encouraged her, telling her that other women had been authors, but that it was a matter of work, like any other vocation."

"When you put your arm around her, had there been anything of a suggestive nature?"

He Speaks of Remorse.

"Well, I cannot answer that definitely. There was no particular word or act that I could lay my hand on. There was just something internally that moved me to. If she had rejected me, I could not have said, 'You have encouraged me,' and yet I would have been surprised if she had resented it."

"Well, then, you drew her to you, and how long were you in that position?"

"Oh, I cannot say."

"And what was talked about?"

"Nothing was said." [Laughter and rebuke from the judge.]

"I want to know how long you held her in your arms?"

"The transaction could not be stated as to time. It was all one transaction. I took her in my arms, drew her across my lap, drew her to me. It was all one action."

"Did you give her any further evidence on that occasion?"

"I did not."

"You were a man of 47 and she a girl of 17 to 21?"

"That was all true and much more. No man in America had been more fearful of such an action than I with the domestic surroundings I then had. I have attempted to make no excuse for it. It just happened so."

"And the fact that she was a young girl in school makes it all the worse?"

"You cannot frame words too strong to characterize it. I have not attempted to justify it or even defend it, and all the hell I have suffered since then I have deserved."

"And understand you to say that the enormity of the act cannot be overestimated?"

"There is but one punishment which I have not deserved, and that is to marry the woman who was concerned with me in the act."

"As a lawyer, since you claim you did not seduce her, will you tell us what you consider seduction?"

"I mean to say that I did not seduce her by any promise of love or reward that she did not come to me a maiden or a virgin; that I did not seduce her in the physical sense that she came to me a maiden and left me a maiden, in the lower sense, that I did not offer her money."

"Do you know that a dumb man can seduce a woman; that by taking her in your arms and seducing her, with or without opening your mouth or winking your eye, you can seduce?"

"I am not prepared to attempt under oath a new definition of seduction. I only know what happened in that carriage that night was not seduction."

A Definition Asked.

"Do you know that a married woman can be seduced?"

"I suppose in a moral sense that is possible."

"Now, you went there as her attorney?" asked Judge Wilson after going over the giving of the $10 bill to Miss Pollard.

"Oh, no. There was no thought of my going in the capacity of attorney. There is the letter. It speaks for itself. I expected no fee. I supposed she wanted to go to some convenient little children's trouble which she had gotten into and which she greatly exaggerated when she said it was worse than a divorce suit."

"You had never seen her but once before, and you came at her request?"

"The letter speaks for itself."

When they met on the train to Lexington the next day, Colonel Breckinridge said, he had not known that Miss Pollard was to be on the train and supposed that she could not know he was there. While he was being greeted Miss Pollard and Mrs. Ellis rose and threaded their way from the courtroom.

Describing the interview on the train the colonel said: "I simply asked to be told if she stayed over in Lexington wouldn't she meet me and asked if there was any place she could go. She said she could go to Sarah Guess' house, and with some surprise I asked:

"What do you know about Sarah Guess?"

She said that Mr. Rhodes had once tried to get her to go there with him, and she had gone as far as the gate, but refused to go in."

"Nothing had been said about your meeting the night before?"

"Nothing had been really said, only when we met there was some sort of indefinite look—something more than a formal recognition."

"You knew of places in Lexington where people could go?"

"I knew of no particular place where I could take this person."

"How many places did you know of?"

"Do you mean in the sense of having been there?" returned the colonel.

"No, that you knew of?"

"Lexington was a place of 20,000 inhabitants. There were such places. But I would not have put such a girl as I supposed the plaintiff to be in the power of such a woman as I supposed Sarah Guess to be."

Miss Pollard had known the way to the house, the colonel continued, and then in response to questions as to his going home to dinner and returning to the assignation house he responded continuously, "I did, I did," with lowered head.

"The next morning did you go to church?" Mr. Wilson persisted.

"No."

"To Sunday school?"

"No."

"To Bible class?"

"I was not a member of any class," responded the colonel, lifting his head and tossing back his silvery mane.

The Cincinnati Meetings.

After going over again the visit to the house of Sarah Guess on the Sunday night when he was uncertain whether he would find the plaintiff there and his payment of money to her at the close of the evening before his departure, the conversation with Rhodes on election day (Monday) was touched upon, and he declared that he had not considered that he was acting in the capacity of attorney in that talk. Afterward the lawyer asked if Breckinridge had taken Miss Pollard to the house of Mrs. Rose in Cincinnati when they went out. He replied, "I want to be candid, and I will say frankly that I did not take her in the sense of going on the same train, but I took a car with the intention of going to Lexington." This was in October.

The colonel had known Mrs. Rose in Louisville and had kept a cigar store, but not "in an improper way" and under circumstances involving another person in his capacity as attorney. "I had met her on the street. We had shaked hands, and she knew that I knew certain things about her which I had obtained professionally, and she gave me her card."

"When was that?" Mr. Wilson inquired.

"About 18 months before."

"And you had kept her card all that time?"

"No. I knew her name and looked it up in the directory."

"How long were you there that day?"

"Perhaps half an hour; perhaps an hour."

"Was that the only time you two were there?"

"Guess not."

"How many times?"

"Perhaps four or six times during the two years."

In speaking of the visits to Sarah Guess', he said:

"Every arrangement, as I remember it, for each visit was accidentally made. When we went to Sarah Guess', there was never any agreement to meet there at any future time, but we would meet on the street and from these accidental meetings would come arrangements to visit Sarah Guess'."

"From whom would the solicitations to meet there come?" Mr. Wilson asked. "From you or the plaintiff?"

"There were no solicitations. We would meet, then walk along, strike together, and the matter would be arranged."

Just here Attorney Wilson tripped Breckinridge badly in cross examination. After several apparently immaterial questions as to his family he inquired if he had not had a typewriter make copies in 1890 (the time when Miss Pollard was confined in Cincinnati) addressed to "My Dear Sister Louise." Breckinridge denied absolutely writing such a letter and pronounced any such a forgery after he said his attorneys had objected to the question. Wilson said the original and copies were returned, but he would produce Louise Lowell, the typewriter who wrote them. Then the court adjourned.

PLEASED WITH WALSH.

He Is a Friend of Both Messrs. Hill and Crisp.

ATLANTA, April 3.—Patrick Walsh, editor of the Augusta Chronicle, has been appointed United States Senator from Georgia to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Colquitt. Governor Northen has made the appointment yesterday afternoon. Mr. Walsh is one of the best known men in the south. He is a staunch Democrat and has been Georgia's representative on the national Democratic committee and has attended all the Democratic national conventions for years as a delegate. He is largely interested in affairs in Georgia and was the organizer and president of the Augusta exposition of the products of the south.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Many of the senators are personally acquainted with Patrick Walsh. He is a native of Ireland, 54 years old and is a practical printer. He went to Atlanta about the close of the war, where he was first connected with The Constitution, and afterward he became manager and then proprietor of the Augusta Chronicle. He has always taken a great interest in politics and has also been a member of the legislature. He was a zealous advocate of Senator Hill for president, and no one was more delighted than the New York senator to hear of his appointment.

The Georgia members of the house received with satisfaction the announcement that Patrick Walsh had been named for the senate, and several of them sent congratulatory telegrams.

Representative Wheeler and Speaker Crisp are close friends. The Georgia men say Mr. Walsh has a forcible command of language and will make a strong man in the senate. The impression is that the financial question Mr. Walsh favors the prevailing Georgia idea, which is strongly opposed to the recent seigniorage veto and in favor of liberal silver legislation.

The Dainty Boy.

Freddy would never eat his dinner,
So of course he grew daily thinner and thinner—

Munched him quite up before he knew.
And all they could find of poor Fred was—

A simple milk test is the following German method: Dip a very bright steel knitting needle into a deep pan of milk, and at once withdraw it in an upright position. Should the milk be nonadulterated with water some of the liquid will adhere to the needle; but if water has been put into the milk, even the smallest quantity, nothing will be found on the needle.

OATMEAL BAGS FOR THE BATH.

Every Particle of Soap Should be Removed from the Skin.

An authority calls how to make the oatmeal bags which, used in the bath, give a velvety softness and whiteness to the skin. Take five pounds of oatmeal, ground fine, a half pound of pure Castile soap reduced to a powder and a pound of powdered Italian orris root. Cut a yard of thin cheese cloth into bags about four inches square, sewing them on the machine and taking care not to leave any untied threads where a break may let the contents soon work out. Mix the soap, oatmeal and orris root thoroughly and fill the bags loosely. Sew up the opening in each and lay them away to use as required. They are used as a sponge, dipped in warm water, making a thick, velvety lather and wonderfully softening the skin, while the orris imparts a lasting fragrance.

It will be remembered that all soap applications, even the purest should be entirely rinsed from the skin. Hospital nurses are trained to wash patients first in soap and water, then in clear, very hot water to take off the soap. It is recognized that boiling water is one of the excellent mild disinfectants.—N. Y. Times.

THE INTERRUPTED STAIRCASE.

An Improvement on the Ladder Device Which Has Now Prevail.

This title, "The Interrupted Staircase," is used to distinguish this design from the usual straight run staircase which is seen and endured in the majority of our dwellings. The ordinary staircase is a gaunt, uncompromising, yet necessary ladder, that fills three-fourths of the average hallway, and no attempt is made to modify and make more endurable, if not more beautiful, its monstrous practicality.

A STAIRCASE IN LOUIS XV. STYLE.

We have here a suggestion from the Decorator and Furnisher showing how the modern staircase may be improved. In this instance a landing or platform which requires the platform only two steps up, and a decorated screen. The planed carved or roof-like lights the weight of the wood, and suggests the easy lines of the Elizabethan period. This screen work could be carried further up to meet the staircase from the right of one standing in the hall, or the upper screen, reaching the ceiling, may be lowered to form a screen the height of the frieze, as shown in the picture.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Tincture of camphor, ten to twelve drops in a tumbler of water, makes a good daily wash for the teeth.

Pickles or vinegar will not keep in a stone jar which has ever been used for lard or any other kind of grease.

Mildew can be removed by rubbing green tomatoes and salt on the spot, then exposing it to the rays of the sun.

To keep tea napkins and tablecloths from fading, put a few grains into the washing water; for blue, use sugar of lead instead of borax.

For a severe sprain take the white of an egg and a teaspoonful of the strongest spirits of turpentine. Put into a bottle, shake it thoroughly, then bathe the sprain often, beginning as soon as possible after the accident.—Detroit Free Press.

Pickle Improves with Age.

The best housekeepers never let their pickle jars become empty, for, if well made, pickle should not spoil, but keep good for years, mellowing and improving with the lapse of time. It is observable that much more pickle is consumed in spring than at any other season, and the wise housekeeper will not be found unprovided with supplies to meet the demand.

Ink-Stains on Carpets.

To remove freshly-spilled ink from carpets, first take up as much as possible of the ink with a sponge; then pour on cold, sweet milk upon the spot and take up as before, pouring on milk until at last it becomes only slightly tinged with black; then wash with cold water, and absorb with a cloth without too much rubbing.

She Was Very Nice.

Oil or beef-tea baths are good for stiffy ankles.

There's nothing SO GOOD as Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening. Wherever introduced, it drives lard from the kitchen, and indigestion from the household.

It has been tried by every test, and has met every requirement.

It is as much superior to lard as the electric light is to the tallow-dip.

The only question now is, will you give your family the benefits which its use bestows?

There's nothing LIKE Cottolene

In composition, in healthfulness, in flavor, or in economy.

Its success has called out a lot of imitations and counterfeits made for the sole purpose of selling it in the place and on the merits of Cottolene.

Avoid them all. They are made to sell and they are a sell.

Little children teach those of larger growth many a lesson. Would that older people were always as thoughtful for their blessings! Little B. had just recovered from a tedious illness and was wild as a colt with the pleasure of being out again. The other day he was invited to a picnic and came home brimming over with the happiness he had enjoyed. That night, when he said his prayers, as usual at his aunt's knee, he added of his own accord: "I thank Thee for giving that picnic and letting me go to it."

The Boy King of Spain.

Here is a story of Alfonso XIII., who, although but a little boy, is King of Spain.

At Madrid recently the famous sculptor, Senor Querol, was engaged to make a statue of the young king, but the artist had great difficulty in hitting upon a suitable pose for his royal subject which should be natural and spirited. He was sitting one day thinking and regarding the boy as he sat looking out of the open window.

Suddenly the sound of a military band was heard in the street, and immediately the little king sprang up and brought his tiny hand to his forehead in the military salute.

"The flag, sir! the flag!" he exclaimed. Salute the flag!"

In an instant the sculptor had found the pose he had been seeking, and made the statue represent the king just in the act of saluting the Spanish flag.

Later on, when the sculptor was at work on the statue, the king asked:

"Are you going to make me big?"

The artist replied that the statue would represent the king just a little larger than he was.

"Well," replied the young monarch, "I want you to make me very big, with a long mustache!"

Dorothy's Mustache.

I'm sick of "mustn'ts," said Dorothy D.;
Sick of "mustn'ts" as I can be.
From early morn till the close of day,
I hear a "mustn't" and never a "may."
It's "You mustn't lie there like sleepy head,"
And, "You mustn't sit up when it's time for bed;"
"You mustn't cry when I comb your curls;"
"You mustn't play with those noisy girls;"
"You mustn't be silent when spoken to;"
"You mustn't chatter as parrots do;"
"You mustn't be pert and you mustn't be proud;"
"You mustn't giggle or laugh aloud;"
"You mustn't rumple your nice clean dress;"
"You mustn't nod in place of a yes."
So all day long the "mustn'ts" go,
Till I dream at night of an endless row
Of goblin "mustn'ts," with great big eyes
That stare at me in shocked surprises.
Oh! I hope I shall live to see the day
When some one will say to me, "Dear, you may;"
For I'm sick of "mustn'ts," said Dorothy D.;
Sick of "mustn'ts" as I can be.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in Wide Awake.

A Mysterious Cavern.

On the north side of Table Mountain and near its top is an opening in the lava that has since its early days been known as the "lion's den," says the Oroville, Cal., Mercury.

It was so named from the fact that for years it was the lair of a band of ferocious California lions that, when the country was largely devoted to sheep raising, made mighty depredations upon the flocks and caused the owners much annoyance and loss. When pursued, the animals would seek refuge in this den, and no hunter would dare to enter it.

The ground about the entrance was covered with the bones and remnants of sheep and other animals. With the increase of population the lions have gradually disappeared, although as late as last spring two of the animals were seen to enter the cave.

Strange to say, no man has ever penetrated this cave to its fullest depth. The mouth is about four or five feet high and three feet wide, and the opening descends with a sharp incline for about two hundred feet. Further than this it has never been explored.

Home-made Oysters.

Years ago a family lived on a farm in a little country, where there was no railroad, and the nearest city was a number of miles distant. The family was very fond of oysters, and how do you suppose he managed to have some always "at hand?" He would drive to the nearest city, buy a bushel of "real live" oysters, and bring them back home with him. But that was not all. They were then carefully placed in cans with the cellar floor, where it was rather dark and cool and a little damp.

The most interesting part, however, was to keep them alive. Every little while someone would go "down-cellar" and feed them by sprinkling them with meal and with water. One of the little girls in the family, who is now grown up, says she can remember how the oysters closed their shells with a snap after they were fed, but perhaps that was only in her imagination. Anyway, if they happened to be forgotten for a time they would be found patiently waiting with their shells open ready to receive their next meal.—Harper's Young People.

What They Did For Baby.

The good old pump by the orchard path
Gave nice, clear water for the baby's bath,
The clean, white chips from the pile of wood
Were glad to warm it and cook its food.
The cow gave milk in the milk-pail bright;
The top-knot Biddy an egg new and white;
And the tree gave an apple so round and red,
For dear little Ray who was just put to bed.

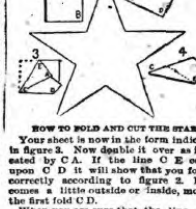
STARS AND SCISSORS.

How to Make Five-Rayed Stars at a Single Stroke.

This is the way to obtain the exact shape of a star with five rays, by a single cut in a straight line with a pair of scissors in a single piece of paper.

Take a letter sheet double, folding it to the left, A B, as in figure 1.

Then fold it according to the line C D figure 2, so that the angle A C B shall be half of the angle B C D. You will get this by folding the sheet according to the line C E figure 3, which is no other than the prolonged line C B of figure 2.



HOW TO FOLD AND CUT THE STAR.

Your sheet is now in the form indicated in figure 3. Now double it over as indicated by C A. If the line C E comes upon C D it will show that you folded correctly according to figure 3. If it comes a little outside or inside, modify the first fold C D.

When you are sure that the line C E comes exactly on C D, cut with your scissors along the straight line marked by dots figure 4, and, unfolding the paper, you will have the star with five rays, and can cut as many thousands of them as you like on the same plan.

Too Big for a Little Boy.

We had been invited to join a company who were to make the trial trip on a small yacht built for the use of one of our government inspectors. We were well under way when the young man who was engineer determined to play a joke on the little boy he saw with us.

Just as the little fellow was about to take a drink of water from the large tin dipper, which had been provided for use rather than ornament on the boat, the man at the throttle pulled a rope which blew the whistle.

The boy dropped the dipper and ran crying to his mother.

"Why, Howard," she said, "you are surely not afraid of a whistle?"

"No," he yelled, "but that is too big a whistle for such a little boy."—Anna B. Rodda, in Detroit Free Press.

Mabel's Amen.

Being taught to say "Amen" to close her evening petition, not realizing its meaning, and having remembered some of the street peddler, who had visited the street that afternoon, to her great delight, little Mabel finished her prayer by saying: "A man, he sells bananas, buy one one!"

An Obedient Boy.

Papa—Where is my new pipe?
Small Son—I—I broke it.
Papa—See here! I told you that if you took my pipe again to blow bubbles with, I'd whip you.
Small Son—I wasn't blowin' bubbles with it. I was only smokin' it.

Waits of Irish Wit.

An Irishman told his friend that he had defended him against the abuse of his enemy. "What did the scoundrel say of me?" said his friend. "He said you were not fit to carry garbage to a bear." "Did he? I am glad you were there to defend me. What did you say?" "Why, of course, I contradicted him in the flattest terms, and silenced him in a minute, for I declared most confidently that you were."

"Pay me the six-and-eight-pence you owe me," said an Irish attorney to one of his clients. "For what?" "For the opinion you had of me." "Faith, I never had any opinion of you in all my life."

An Irish girl told her forbidden lover she was longing to possess his portrait, and intended to obtain it. "But how if your friends see it?" inquired he. "Ah! but I'll tell the artist not to make it like you; so they won't know it."

Small Wonder.

We were standing there together
In the untidily moonlit manner
Looking upward at the asteroidal twinks,
And with purpose to support her
My arm was raised
Kept a reaching out in promissory kinks.

Our tongues they were a-tether,
Quite as silent as the heather
While the crickets kept a-going to chirp,
And the half inclined to kiss her,
I was fearful 'twould precipitate her father and his eighty-dollar "purp,"

But the scarcity of leather
Agitating toward my nether
Garments made me quite suspect a coup d'etat,
So I said her, telling her,
Why it hadn't consummated,
And she said it 'twas cause she hadn't any Pa

A Friend in Need.

How often we find that when misfortune befalls us we are deserted by many whom we imagined were our most devoted friends, while those who had strong claims for sympathy and help. From those we know little, we naturally expect little or nothing. But here in the animal world we have a most wonderful example of disinterested friendship in the time of need. A poor sparrow by some mischance had lost the sight of both eyes. Few people have much to say for the sparrow, he eats the young seedlings just as they are coming up in the garden, so the gardener persecutes him, and the farmer hates him because he makes raids on the corn. Now this poor blind bird would have had a very poor chance against all the world; without his eyesight he must speedily have come to grief, but a hen, upon whom the sparrow had no sort of claim, took upon herself the full charge of him, guarded him jealously under her wing, brought him food, and protected him from his brother sparrows, who would soon have killed him. We may learn a good deal from this hen, we who are only too ready to turn away from sorrow and misfortune, because when we have no prospect of help and hope they might cloud and disturb our peaceful horizon for a time.

TARIFF DEBATE OPENED

Voorhees Fires the First Gun In the Senate.

THE HOUSE STILL FILIBUSTERING.

Democrats Cannot Get a Quorum to Vote on the O'Neill-Joy Contested Election Case—Another Batch of Presidential Appointments Sent to the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The principal interest in the senate centered in the speech of Senator Voorhees, the chairman of the committee on finance who launched the tariff question upon the sea of senatorial debate. While his speech was read from manuscript, it was delivered with all the fervency which characterizes his usual tax tempore efforts. There was an unusually full attendance both on the floor and in the galleries, and the conclusion of his remarks was greeted with a hearty burst of applause.

He landed the Walker tariff bill of 1846 as "blessed and glorious measure" and regretted exceedingly that this bill did not more closely resemble it. He vigorously defended the income tax feature and the free wool clause and as vigorously condemned the sugar bounty and reciprocity features of the McKinley bill, the former being characterized as "a jumble and a fraud," the latter as an "unconstitutional freak."

He called attention to the fact that the days of the nine hundred and fifty-six adversary of Thomas Jefferson, "that great emancipator of mankind," and quoted extensively from Mr. Blaine's "Thirty Years In Congress."

In the morning hour Senator Morgan sought to have passed a bill providing for the carrying into effect of the awards of the Paris tribunal of arbitration in the Bering sea matter, but when it was on the eve of its passage it went over until the bill could be reported. At 4 o'clock the senate went into executive session and considered executive business for more than an hour and then adjourned.

House will Filibuster.

For five hours in the house roll call followed roll call in an endless attempt to bring the Republican filibuster against the O'Neill-Joy contested election case to a close, but at no time were the Democrats able to muster a quorum, and the fight was finally abandoned for the day.

Mr. Patterson of Tennessee, who has charge of the case, said: "This case will be kept before the house until it is disposed of if it takes all summer. It might as well be understood now as later on. Those who have any idea that it will be abandoned will find that they are mistaken." Just before the house adjourned Mr. Patterson gave notice that he would ask the house to sit in continuous session until the case was decided.

The last vote was taken on the Democrats on any roll call was 170. This is nine short of a quorum. About 10 Democrats are voting on every roll call against $40,000.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The president sent to the senate the following nominations:

Consuls—Richard M. Burke of Illinois at Chihuahua; John Bidlake of North Dakota at Barranquilla; James H. Dinsmore of Texas at Chemnitz; Otho George H. Ernst of Wisconsin at Hohenberg, Bohemia; William C. Foster of Arizona at Trinidad; Walter H. Henry of North Carolina at Cayenne, West Indies; Clifford Smyth of New York at Cartagena, Colombia.

Collector of Customs—John A. Wilson at Burlington, N. J.

Postmasters—Frederick G. Wiese at Bordentown, N. J.; John W. Thompson, Cape May; John G. Smith, Bound Brook, N. J.; George B. Perkins, Rochester; Clarence McClellan, Mount Vernon, N. Y.; George F. Van Dam, Tompkinsville, N. Y.; Horatio Judah, Port Richmond, N. Y.; William K. Wright, Renovo, Pa.; Enoch Enochs, Ardmore, Pa.; George W. Seamans, Uniontown, Pa.; John L. Garrett, Chester, Pa.; Lewis C. Moon, West Chester, Pa.; Harry E. Bensall, Miffintown, Pa.; James M. Goodhart, Lewistown, Pa.

The Ems Is Safe.

FAYAL, Azore Islands, April 3.—The North German Lloyd steamship Ems, from Bremen on March 17 and from Southampton on March 18, for New York, now several days overdue at the latter port, was towed in here by the British oil tank steamer Wild Flower. The Ems had her propeller frame broken and was leaking.

Lynched With a Handkerchief.

MARION, N. C., April 3.—Holland English was taken from jail at Bakersville and hanged by a mob of 300 persons for the murder of his wife, whom he killed to marry another woman. A flaxen handkerchief was used to hang English, no rope being at hand.

Crushed Under Wheat Scales.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Two immense hopper scales filled with wheat on the ninth floor of the Chicago Dock company's warehouse collapsed, killing Thomas Keller and Peter Thompson. Several other workmen were injured.

Another Big Strike In Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, April 3.—The biggest labor war Rhode Island has ever seen is on. It is a struggle of the weavers against the two loom system—a war against an improvement which they claim is impracticable.

Distress In Andalusia.

MADRID, April 3.—The distress in the province of Andalusia is acute. At San Lucar a mob of people out of work pillaged the bakeries. Riots have occurred at El Cia, in the province of Seville.

Excitement at Buda-Pesth Abates.

BUDA-PESTH, April 3.—The excitement of the past few days has abated. During the funeral of Kossuth 250 cases of people injured during the crushes were treated.

Bourke Cockran Returns.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Representative Cockran of New York was on the floor of the house after a month's absence in Florida, Texas and Mexico.

Saxton's Banking Bill Vetoed.

ALBANY, April 3.—Governor Flower sent in five vetoes to the legislature, including Senator Saxton's bill to amend the banking law.

Fire In Port Jervis.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., April 3.—A disastrous fire started in a paint store and burned several buildings. Loss about $40,000.

Poles Cause a Riot.

BUFFALO, April 3.—Eight Poles caused a riot on Walden avenue, and the reserves were called out to subdue them.

Weather Forecast.

Fair; winds shifting to southeast; warmer this evening.

SOUTH CAROLINA QUIET.

Another Militia Organization Has Voluntarily Disbanded.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 3.—There is no warlike aspect about the capital city, and everything is peace. The guards at the executive mansion have been withdrawn, all the local militia are giving up their guns, and Governor Tillman himself says there is every reason to feel safe now. Throughout the day the governor has had offers of services from several outside military companies, all of which he has declined.

The telegraph censorship has not been discontinued, but the governor himself passes upon all telegrams, rejecting some and changing others. The sensation of the day here was the refusal of the Newberry rifles to remain stationed at the telegraph offices to supervise the telegrams and their notice to the governor of their resignation.

In reply Governor Tillman said to the men:

"Your resignation is not accepted, but you are dismissed from the service of the state, as unworthy to wear its uniform. The arms and equipments in your possession will be delivered to Colonel John Gary, Watts, assistant adjutant inspector general, and you can depart to your homes. You do not need to fear. I will pay your hotel bill, and I trust I may never be bothered with any more such bandbox and holiday soldiers."

DARLINGTON, S. C., April 3.—There is not a more quiet town in the state than this. The town is still under martial law, and the troops are still here, and they have marched and drilled all over the town, but that is all they have done.

The town is again taking on its usual everyday appearance, and the business houses are open, and trade is being conducted as quietly as formerly, and if it were not for the presence of the military the town would present its ordinary appearance.

FLORENCE, S. C., April 3.—The threatening clouds have passed away. Florence is now under military guard, as a detachment of the troops which went to Darlington has arrived here, with the adjutant general of the state in command. The citizens are prepared to resist any aggressiveness on the part of the military, but General Farley does not apprehend any trouble. He asserted that he will do everything possible to allay excitement. The telegraph office may be closed here at any moment.

LAWYER JOHN H. JACKSON DEAD.

Expired This Morning at Seven o'clock at His Home.

Lawyer John H. Jackson, of the firm of Jackson & Angleman, died at his home on Second place this morning at seven o'clock. Mr. Jackson has been in ill-health for the past three or four years and for the past few months he has been failing very fast. He was at his office last Friday. His mind was clear up to the last, and it was only last night that his law partner, Mr. Angleman, called upon him and had a talk with him in reference to a case they are conducting.

Mr. John H. Jackson was born at Rahway of English parents. At an early age he went to England where he was Queen's counsel for a while. Returning to America he read law in the office of Col. James, whose name has been before the public recently in connection with the Lizzie Sage case, he being counsel for Mr. Sage.

Mr. Jackson came to Plainfield about the year 1871, and entered into partnership with Lawyer George Snydam (who later became Judge), but who is now deceased. The firm at first had offices in the Stillman building on West Front street but afterwards moved to the corner of Park avenue and Second street. About 1880 Mr. Angleman was taken in and the firm of Jackson dissolved partnership. For awhile Mr. Jackson and Mr. J. Oakley Nodyne, who is now Justice of the Peace, became connected in a law firm. In 1883 Mr. Jackson and Mr. William H. Codington, Jr., now ex-City Judge), who was then reading law with Mr. Snydam, formed a partnership under the firm name of Jackson & Codington. He continued with Mr. Codington until last year, when the partnership was dissolved and Mr. Jackson and Winfield S. Angleman formed a partnership, which existed up to the time of his death.

Mr. Jackson was a good lawyer. He could prepare one of the strongest briefs of any in the profession, but he was no talker. Up to a few years ago Mr. Jackson was a very vigorous man, enjoying good health. He was muscular and weighed about 200 pounds. He believed in physical exercise and was one of the greatest admirers of his will. But since suffering with stomach troubles he had wasted away to only a semblance of his former self.

He leaves a wife and two children. He was 44 years old.

PERSONAL.

Miss Gussie Colthar of Dunellen is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Kitchen of Somerset street.

Mr. Stratton of Cranford has taken Mr. Lovell's house on Third street. He moved in yesterday.

Miss Florence Williams of West Seventh street was tendered a surprise party on Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Gurnell and son of New York were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Galbraith Sunday.

William Baker, one of Walter Scott's most trusted employees, will go to Buffalo, N. Y., next week to put up a Webb press.

Mr. Frank Patience has moved with his family from West Fourth street to Watchung avenue and East Second street.

Mrs. Sarah Garretson of Millstone has returned to her home after a visit of three weeks with Mrs. Wm. Runyon of East Front street.

Mrs. Ira F. Biker, who was so seriously ill during the Winter, is very much improved in health, although still unable to go out of doors.

Bessie Bird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bird of West Front street has been taken to the Home for Feeble Minded Children, at Vineland.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Walker of Chatham street have returned from Sayre, P., where they have been spending a week visiting Mr. Walker's parents.

Mrs. Curtis, of Elmith street, will entertain the members of the Ladies' Cycling Club at her house on Thursday afternoon for an extra "whist" meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Harry Squires of East Ninth street have gone to New York to their apartments in Hotel Savoy where they will remain for several weeks.

Prof. Thomas Bitchie, of the General Theological Seminary, New York city, will preach at the fall choral vesper service at Grace Protestant Episcopal church next Sunday evening.

Dr. H. G. Stephenson was walking in town yesterday. He is still weak and quite lame from the effects of the grip. He attributes his recovery to Dr. Prosco's excellent and kind treatment.

Mihran H. Kouchian, a portrait artist, of No. 1325 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., is the address of an excellent crayon artist, who has made some crayons of Plainfield people which have greatly pleased them.

Mr. Fred Smillie and family of Central avenue preparing to move to Washington, D. C. Mr. Smillie is an engraver and has received some of the government work, which necessitates his residing at the Capital. Mr. Smillie has sold his Plainfield house to Mr. St. John McCutchen of Rockview avenue, who in turn has rented it to Mr. Paterson of Ninth street.

The choir of the Church of Our Saviour at Netherwood was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guion on La Grande avenue on Saturday night. Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Bobbby, Bertram and William Tallamy, Arthur Albertus, Percy Wheeler, Richard Simpson, Frank MacDonald, Fred and Louis Tallamy, Orville ring and George Neilson.

THEIR ANNUAL MEETING.

Ladies' Aid Society of the Crescent Avenue Church Elects Officers.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Crescent Avenue church held its annual meeting in the church parlors yesterday afternoon.

Reports were made showing the standing of the society and of the work done by all the societies in which the ladies of the church are working. About $3,000 had been collected during the year by all the several branches.

The following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. William Scribner.

First Vice President—Mrs. W. R. Richards.

Second Vice President—Mrs. S. E. Dunn.

Secretary—Mrs. Hateh.

Treasurer—Miss Kate Martine.

Mr. Frank Hedden of East Fourth street has a picture, recently given to him by an old farmer near Somerville, of the first railway train in America, as it appeared ready for starting, on the Mohawk and Hudson Railway, on part of the New York Central Railway, from Albany to Schenectady, about July 31, 1831, executed at the time on black paper, with a pair of scissors by a Mr. Brown of Pennsylvania and lithographed from a photograph of the original picture in possession of the Connecticut Historical Society. The train is made up of the "John Bull engine and two coaches.

In the coaches were Mr. Lansing of Albany, ex-Governor Yates, Thurlow Reid, Esq., editor of the Albany Evening Journal; Major Meier of Albany, Jacob Hays of New York, "a celebrated thief catcher;" Mr Dudley of Albany, Billy Winnie, "a well known postman," Joseph Alexander, Esq., Geo. Benedict, and a few whose names are unknown.

Returned All Right.

A person disappeared from Dr. Cooley's sanitarium on Westerveit avenue about a week ago and his disappearance started a story of an insane person being at large in the borough and that he had escaped from the Brookside Retreat on Somerset street, where that class of persons are cared for. As a matter of fact the person who disappeared was not confined there at all, and was not in any sense mentally afflicted. As such persons are not sent to the sanitarium on Westerveit avenue, which is only patients suffering with nervous and other troubles, the Brookside Retreat being for those having both nervous and mental troubles.

The patient who went from the Sanitarium, was not aware of the anxiety he had caused. He went on a visit to New York, and returned Sunday.

Heard Reports and Elected Officers.

The Y. P. S. C. E. connected with the East Third street church held a business meeting last night. Reports were read and officers elected. The question of forming a Junior Endeavor Society was discussed and a committee of three appointed to take some action in the matter. The committee composed of Messrs. L. W. Randolph, L. L. Brady and Miss A. Kyle.

The following officers were elected:

President—C. E. Thomson.

Vice President—William Richards.

Corresponding Secretary—L. L. Brady.

Recording Secretary—Charlotte Happe.

Treasurer—Mrs. C. Meyers.

Poisoning at Bound Brook.

The first of last week a little child who lived in Bound Brook died very suddenly in that place. It was not known at the time just what caused the child's death, but it has since been found that she had been playing with her sister in the street when one of them found a bottle filled with some liquid. Not knowing any better, all the children drank from the bottle with the result that the two children were taken sick, and one died. The bottle is supposed to have contained poison. The dead child has an aunt living in the borough.

Officers Installed.

Last evening the following officers of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. were installed:

Junior Past Councillor—H. D. Tompkin.

Councillor—Charles A. Leland.

Vice Councillor—Jesse Scull.

Assistant Recording Secretary—G. C. Bedford.

Conductor—George F. Koster.

Warden—F. G. Welsh.

Inside Sentinel—James A. Harned.

Outside Sentinel—J. A. Kitchen.

A Fishing Expedition.

William Schorb, Benjamin Gower, Elisha McCready and George Gowley, went fishing in the Passaic River on Monday, and with some ten dollars, worth of fishing tackle, bait, etc., succeeded in landing nine fine suckers. On the way home one of the party lost his hat, but the night was dark and no attempt was made to recover it.

His Fingers Crushed between Barrels.

Rudolph Spiegal, an employee at J. A. Tinley's saloon on East Second street had the two first fingers on his left hand crushed between two barrels while transferring them in the cellar, on Monday evening. Dr. Adams dressed the wounds.

MUSIC HALL DIRECTORS MEET.

To Consider the Question of Dissolving the Corporation.

A meeting of the Music Hall directors was held last night in the office of Mr. Craig A. Marsh. It was decided to call a meeting of the directors for next Monday night to consider the question of dissolving the corporation. If the directors agree to dissolve the corporation, a meeting of the stockholders will be called for the same purpose.

BREVITIES.

—Van Eps, the jeweler, has moved into the store recently vacated by Caleb Dickinson.

—George Nichols, while fishing at the New Market pond, Saturday, caught a carp weighing 7½ lbs.

—For two weeks R. W. Rice & Co. will sell fine potatoes at seventy cents per bushel. See advertisement.

—The regular monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms Thursday afternoon at half-past three.

—Read Carey's special announcement to-day, of a two days sale beginning Friday and including Saturday afternoon and evening.

—Fairview avenue, the new street that runs through Watchung Park is being ploughed and graded, preparatory to macadamizing.

—A business meeting of the Reform Club will be held in Reform Hall, to-morrow evening at eight o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

—Mr. Callman of the Bee Hive calls special attention to his special sale of "Ball's Kabo Corsets," which will only last for two weeks longer.

—The mountains were alive again last night for the third time this Spring. A standing reward of $25 is offered for the arrest and conviction of the miscreants.

—The first business meeting of the Ladies' Cycling Club for this season was held in their rooms on the corner of Fifth street and Park avenue this afternoon at three o'clock.

—To-morrow night the Dunellens and the "Wake-ups" of Rahway, bowl the deciding game in the series of five on the Dunellen alleys. Many will probably go from here to witness the contest.

—The Young Men's League of Hope chapel are arranging for an entertainment which is to be given at the chapel to-morrow evening. The proceeds are to be added to the excursion fund.

—Edward Krummenacher, a waiter in Caspar's Hotel, East Front street, caught one of his fingers in a bread-cutting machine on Tuesday and had part of the finger cut off. The wound was dressed at Hebard's drug store.

—Through some mistake the owners of two light overcoats got mixed at the Liederkranz entertainment, Monday evening, and each one went away with the other's coat. Theo. Smith of East Third street would like to exchange the one he got for his own.

—The barn of John Klopp, on the Springfield road, was burned early Monday morning. A cow and a number of chickens were burned, together with a lot of hay and grain and a wagon. It is supposed that some tramps who had slept in the barn set the place on fire.

—It is said that some of the hotel and saloon-keepers in this city and North Plainfield who sell a certain Newark brewer's beer, are about to combine and get their ice from the brewer. This is on account of the advanced rates which went into effect yesterday. Five in all are in the new deal.

—Kilroy's original living pictures, which fit so ingeniously into Mr. E. E. Rice's gay and gorgeous burlesques, the new "1492," at the Garden Theatre, New York, continue to be, in somewhat hackneyed but expressive phrase, "the talk of the town." The Garden Theatre never before held such big audiences as are flocking there, and they never included more fashionable or refined people. The house nightly responds with applause as each vivid and beautiful art example is revealed. Two exquisite new examples, Koppay's "Spring Flowers" and Thuman's "Three Fates," have been added to the collection this week. Mr. Rice's admirable singers and comedians are working together with a great deal of spirit, and the burlesque was never performed with more vivacity and humor than now. A souvenir of uncommon value will be given on Monday, April 23, to celebrate the 300th performance. It will be a mammoth statuette, groups of the characters who constitute the Royal family of Spain.

Tried to Break into a Dunellen House.

An attempt was made to break into the house occupied by J. T. Barrett, on the Smock farm, Dunellen, last evening at about nine o'clock. Mrs. Barrett was alone in the house at the time. The intruders, after trying both the windows and door and finding they could not gain an entrance, left the house. Mr. Barrett moved to Dunellen, Monday, and up to that time resided on Summit avenue, North Plainfield.

—Woodside Cottage, at Netherwood Heights, has been taken by a family from New York, and is now being refurnished and put in perfect order. About the 15th of April everything will be in order for the reception of guests.

To Hold a Pool Tournament.

A progressive pool tournament has been arranged among the members of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum, to begin about April 5th. The prizes are as follows: First, a billiard cue and a pair of shoes; second, a billiard cue and a box of cigars; third, billiard cue, and, fourth, a billiard cue.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

ALL NEGROES MUST LEAVE.

Ordered to Get Out of Franklin Park by Saturday Night.

FRANKLIN PARK, N. J., April 4.—The action of the Law and Order League of this place in ordering all negroes to leave Franklin Park by Saturday night has caused a commotion among the colored settlers.

The Law and Order League was induced to take this step on account of the feeling of unsafety among the white residents of Franklyn Park since the horrible Baker tragedy, when Mrs. Moore Baker and her infant were murdered by two negroes, who were in turn killed by Baker.

Some of the negroes have already left Franklin Park, and it is expected that others will follow their example.

The Law and Order Society is in earnest and determined to get rid of the negroes, and if necessary the League will offer the negroes inducements to leave for good.

TO CHANGE THE JUDICIARY.

Features of the Bill Proposed by the Joint Committee.

Following is a full synopsis of the new judicial system bill under consideration by the Joint Committee of the New Jersey Legislature:

The inferior courts of Common Pleas, courts of General Quarter Sessions and Special Sessions of the Peace and Orphan Courts are abolished, and in their places are established county courts in each county. Judges to hold these courts are to be appointed and their duties defined under the act. All the powers and jurisdictions of the abolished courts are vested in and exercised by the judges of the abolished courts.

Sheriffs shall be the ministerial officers and county clerks the clerks of the new courts.

The judges of the Supreme Court and judges under this act are to be the judges of the new courts. There shall be appointed as judges of these courts by joint convention, two judges for Hudson, two judges for Essex and one judge for each of the other counties, who shall hold office for seven years from March 1, next to and until their successors are appointed and qualified. Every judge must be a counselor of seven years standing, a resident of the county for which he is appointed for three years preceding his appointment and must remain a resident of such county during his term of office. No judge can practice in any of the courts of the county for which he is appointed. The judges in any county may divide the court into two or more parts, and judges may sit in any county in the State.

Salaries of the judges are to be, in counties less than 30,000 population, $1,800 per year; from 30,000 to 50,000 population, $2,000; from 50,000 to 80,000, $4,000, 80,000 to 90,000, $5,000; 90,000 to 100,000, $6,000; over 100,000, $7,000. The State Treasurer to pay the salary of each judge, and fees now paid to common pleas judges to be paid into the State treasury.

The joint caucus will decide as to the manner of appointment of the judges.

AMHERST COLLEGE MUSICIANS.

Glee, Mandolin and Banjo Clubs at the Berkeley Lyceum.

Concerning the Amherst College Glee Club which is to appear at the Casino to-morrow night, as advertised elsewhere, to-day's Sun has the following of an entertainment given last night:

It is reported from London that the study of college humor has become a serious vocation with many English people. That being the case, it is a lucky thing that the Amherst College Musical Association has decided to send its glee, mandolin and banjo clubs over to England this Summer on a concert tour. There is a sufficient supply of characteristic American humor in the Glee Club songs to keep every subject of Queen Victoria guessing for a year.

The audience which filled the pretty little Berkeley Lyceum Theatre last evening, to listen to the Amherst boys' concert, did not have any guessing to do, however, to arrive at a quick and accurate estimate of the humor of the glees. That was not only because it was an American audience, but because it was an Amherst one, too.

Amherst alumni, their sisters, mothers, wives and daughters made a social event of the concert, made it very like an evening reception at a private house, with the music for the principal entertainment. There was a wildly enthusiastic reception to the glee club when it roused the sentiment for alma mater with "Old Amherst." After that there was a series of successes from the banjo and mandolin clubs, the vocal soloists, and the new-yes, and the old songs.

Millinery at Edsall's.

At the opening of his temporary millinery department yesterday, Edsall exhibited many new and elegantly trimmed bonnets, which caused quite a furore among the hundreds who visited his place of business.

There were pleasant comments upon the refined taste displayed by Miss Guyton in unique styles, and artistic combinations of colors.

Although she was under disadvantage, as to want of space to display the goods, yet the showing was fair.

There was a noticeable absence of that tiresome "sameness" seen in so many millinery departments. Among the large number of hats shown no two of them resembled each other.

The verdict was that Edsall's new millinery department promises to be a headquarters in the future for the latest styles in these goods.

PRETTY PRINCESS ROBES.

Very Elegant, Used to Fit and Not Ridiculously Popular.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

The princess robe, declared by the arbitrary law of fashion to be the mode, has not been adopted with whole souled enthusiasm, although it has a certain elegance that few gowns possess, neither attain, no matter how rich or in how good taste they may be. Perhaps the small number of princess costumes worn is due to the fact that they are extremely difficult to fit properly, and that there is no convenient way of fastening them, except in the back, unless the front be draped in such a way as to conceal the closing.

It is certain that the style will never become vulgarized, at any rate, and it is now rather exclusive, so much so that it can be said to never go really out of fashion any more than fine lace or low cut evening bodices become obsolete. The two piece costume has the advantage of allowing more variety in the wardrobe, since the skirt may be used with different corsages, especially if it be black, and it is thus more economical. Moreover, an ordinary dressmaker will make a success of it where she would make a failure of a princess gown. When the latter fits well, however, it is an ideal garment, as it leaves the long lines of the figure unbroken, and the bodice is kept in perfect position by the weight of the skirt.

Two or three models of street gowns are shown in the style, with a draped front lapping over and fastening at one side. In one case the front of the corsage is plain and closes in the middle by an invisible fastening of hooks and eyes, but this plan could be followed successfully only by an experienced and first class modiste. A sketch is given of a full dress toilet cut in the princess fashion. It is made of violet satin, with brocaded figures in green. It has a round train and closes in front under a full tablier of lace, which falls to the bottom of the skirt, where it is caught up on each side by a flower-de-luce made of lavender velvet. A lace flounce continues from these points toward the back, becoming narrower as it approaches the train.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHO WILL BE LAY JUDGE!

Stover of Plainfield, Crane of Union, or Schmidt of Elizabeth.

The Trenton correspondent of the Elizabeth Journal writes to that paper as follows concerning the Union county lay judgeship:

Will it be Judge Stover, Judge Crane or Judge Schmidt?

This is the question which is agitating the Union county contingent at the State House.

Mr. Rowland M. Stover of Plainfield is backed by James E. Martine and his following from the "Colorado of the East." Editor Schmidt of the Elizabeth Freie Presse is being pushed forward by a part of the German contingent of the Union county politicians. Mr. J. Williams Crane comes with the approval of the best class of Democrats in Union township and in other parts of the county, and it is yet undecided which will have the greatest influence with the Governor. The friends of all three are seen occasionally in the Governor's room, those of Mr. Stover and Mr. Schmidt more frequently than those of Mr. Crane.

Apply to this Locality.

The following are some of the bills introduced in the Senate and House at Trenton, which are of special interest to this locality:

No. 220, Mr. Codding, annexs parts of townships of Woodbridge and Raritan, Middlesex county, to Clark township, Union county.

No. 91, Mr. Stokes, for the President, invests the sole licensing power to sell malt and spirituous liquors in boroughs in the governing boards of said boroughs, and repeals the borough license act, approved February 7, 1894.

No. 314, Mr. Olcott, provides for the consolidation of the school districts in each township into one district, and the election of a board of education for the township to consist of nine members, who shall have supervision of all the township.

COXEY AT PITTSBURG.

The Commonweal Army Taking a Two Days' Rest.

ESCORTED IN WITH BRASS BANDS.

The General Has Decided to Continue His Trip Through Washington and Into the South.—General Frye's Big Army Gets as Far as St. Louis.—Coast Division Starts.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—The commonweal army has arrived. At Lower Allegheny it was met with bands by the Iron Molders' union, pattern makers, boilermakers, bakers and other labor organizations and a large crowd of people. When the city line was reached, a halt was taken for lunch, and then the army marched to Exposition park, where it went into camp for two days.

Long before the arrival of the commonweal the streets in the vicinity of Wood's run were packed with people. Director Murphy of the department of public safety became alarmed, as the crowd was wrought up to a high tension of excitement, and refused to allow the army to come into the city by that route.

A change was then made, and Coxey and his followers marched in over the Brighton road. Many houses were decorated, and along the route to the parks the army was greeted with cheers by the crowds who thronged the sidewalks. A feature of the parade was 100 bicyclists carrying banners inscribed "Coxey's Brigade."

It has been ascertained that Coxey and a large number of his followers have decided to take a trip through the southern states as soon as his mission to Washington is fulfilled. This decision was arrived at a day or so ago, and the trip will be made with a view of converting as many southern people as possible to the ideas advanced by Coxey. As at present figured out by Coxey it will require the best part of two months for his army to go to Washington and see the Coxey measures acted upon by congress.

Then the army, or as much of it as remains intact, will make a trip through Virginia and North and South Carolina, being joined in the latter state by Frye's band of Texas Coxeyites. The scheme is to march the southern farmers over to the Coxey-Browne-Smith ideas. When this is completed, the task of the reformers will be fulfilled, and the army will disband.

While Superintendent of Police O'Mara does not anticipate the slightest trouble from Coxey and his cohorts during the stay here, he has made preparations to stop any trouble if it is found necessary.

Said he: "We will have our entire police force either on duty or in the police barracks, and if they are called on they will make short work of Mr. Coxey. So long as they pass quietly through our streets they will not be interfered with. We will give them police protection from the boys, who might be tempted to throw stones or molest them. If we permitted them to be hooted at or stoned, it might cause a row, and for that reason we will protect them."

Frye's Army at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, April 4.—General Frye's army of unemployed workmen arrived at Jefferson barracks from Poplar Bluff and camped on the railroad yards at Ivory Station. The army presented a picturesque sight as the train pulled in. The commonwealers were all on the tops of the box cars, many wrapped in blankets to ward off the cold. There were 13 cars in the train, some loaded with cattle.

Over the car in which were General Frye's headquarters was floated the American flag. The Old Glory was saluted by a company of United States regulars as the train came to a stand before the barracks platform.

Captain Boudre requested General Frye to keep his men together. The general at once posted pickets aboft his camp, while Captain Boyd and Captain Young posted police officers and detectives at every road leading into Cinadelet with orders not to let any of Frye's army enter the city. After getting into camp breakfast was cooked, consisting largely of cornmeal mush, of which there was scarcely enough to go around.

The California Division Starts.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 4.—The San Francisco contribution to the commonweal army, numbering 250 men, left the city for Oakland. Thence it is their intention to proceed to Washington. At Sacramento they will be joined by 100 more unemployed now in camp there, awaiting the arrival of the San Francisco regiment.

O'NEILL SEATED AT LAST

Deadlock In the House Is Finally Broken.

THE BERING SEA BILL PASSED.

Senator Allison Delivers the First Speech In Opposition to the Tariff Bill.—An Amusing Spat Between Senators Harris and Frye.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The second day of the tariff debate in the senate opened with a much smaller attendance in the galleries and on the floor than was present the day before. Before going to the consideration of this question Mr. Morgan called up the Bering sea bill reported by him on Monday, and it was passed without amendment. In the course of his remarks on this bill he paid high tribute to the memory of Lord Rannen, one of the British commissioners, who has died since the adjournment of the Paris tribunal.

The feature of the day's proceedings was the speech of Senator Allison against the tariff bill. He arraigned the action of the committee on finance in giving almost autocratic powers to a subcommittee of three and censured the majority for its unwisdom in framing the measure. He attacked the substitution of the ad valorem method for the specific, and he bitterly denounced the "revolutionary" character of the proposed legislation, which was about to overthrow the policy of 30 years under which the country had prospered to a phenomenal extent, and jeopardize the industries which had grown up under protection and the livelihood of the millions who were dependent on those industries for employment.

The day closed with a sharp passage at arms between Senators Harris and Frye, the former being taken to task for his unwarranted intention to try to "railroad" the bill through the senate.

"I am much obliged to the senator from Maine," retorted Mr. Harris sarcastically, "for the lecture which he habitually gives us once a week, and I am glad to see him getting it out of his system for the week."

"My lecture will depend on the action of the other side," replied Senator Frye equally sarcastically. "It is no lecture, however, to inform the senator from Tennessee that this side of the chamber knows its rights and will maintain them."

The incident closed here, and the motion of Mr. Call that the senate proceed to the consideration of executive business prevailed.

O'Neill Seated.

The deadlock which has prevailed in the house for the week past over the Joy-O'Neill contested election case was broken. Charles F. Joy was unseated and John J. O'Neill seated as representative from the Eleventh Missouri district. On the final vote 34 Democrats and 3 Populists voted against Mr. O'Neill. The last vote was taken on the following:

Resolved, That John J. O'Neill was elected a representative to the fifty-third congress from the Eleventh congressional district of Missouri and is entitled to the seat.

The resolution was adopted—155 to 28. There was some Democratic applause upon the announcement, and by direction of the speaker Mr. O'Neill, who was in the hall, came forward to the bar of the house and was sworn in.

The English-Hilborn case from the Fifth California district was called up immediately afterward and debated for two hours. The vote on the resolution declaring Hilborn entitled to his seat was defeated, but on the succeeding vote on the resolution declaring Mr. English elected the Democratic quorum broke down, and the house adjourned. Although 11 Democrats voted for Hilborn, there is no doubt that today when a quorum is secured Mr. Hilborn will share the fate of his late colleague, Mr. Joy.

A YANKEE IN GRAY.

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS ("M. QUAD.")

COPYRIGHTED 1894 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER I.

The day and date is the 21st of July, 1861.

The scene is the battleground of first Bull Run, a field made memorable forever.

From daybreak to high noon the Federal army under McDowell has been moving down on the Confederate position selected weeks ago by the generals old in the strategy of war. On the flanks brigades have grappled in the open fields, regiments have dashed at each other in the forests and thickets. Here a little ground has been gained, there a little lost. It has been the skirmishing which precedes every battle, locating the enemy, testing his resistance, drawing his strength and discovering his designs.

The hour is high noon. The Confederate front has been pressed back, the left wing shattered. Men looking down on the battlefield from the hills of Centerville have every movement in plain view. As 12 o'clock the battle is won for the Federals. Bee, Barstow and Evans, who have held the Confederate center, have been beaten back by Burnside, Sykes and Porter. They give way slowly and grudgingly, fighting as they break back, and they are trying to rally, when there is a clatter of bayonets being fixed to muskets, and a thousand men rush for and at the double quick. It is the New York Twenty-seventh, and Colonel Slocum leads it, the first bayonet charge of the war—"Forward! Forward!" And the wedge drives into the Confederate center and rolls the fragments right and left.

The cheering is heard a mile away above the noise of battle. The Federal center moves forward to pursue the shattered enemy, and couriers ride away with the news, "We have pierced the Confederate center and won the day!"

Behind the flying Confederates is a plateau of 300 acres, comprising two or three farms. There are two or three farmhouses, orchards, meadows, thickets of pine, barren fields. Here is Stonewall Jackson with 5,000 men in reserve. The fragments of brigades, regiments and companies are hurled back to the slopes of this plateau to be rallied and reformed behind the reserves. Couriers ride away to Beauregard to ask for more artillery, infantry and cavalry, and while the Federals pause to replenish their cartridge boxes and gird up their loins for a last struggle 5,000 fresh Confederates are hurrying forward to the plateau.

Noon becomes 1 o'clock. The skirmishers are at work all along the front of the plateau, but there is no fighting.

Another hour slips away. The Federals have waited too long. At noon they could have carried the position with a rush. At 1 o'clock they would have met with stubborn resistance, but victory would have perched on their banners. Now as the Federals are ready to move the Confederate 5,000 have become 10,000, and their 10 pieces of artillery have become 20.

A majority of the troops are fresh and their nerves unshaken, and all are ready for the grapple.

Thirteen thousand Federals move against the plateau at different points almost as one man, and the battle opens with a great crash. Under General Jackson's immediate orders are five or six regiments. On the right of his line is a Virginia regiment. On the right of that regiment is a company from the Shenandoah valley. They have not been in action yet. As the Federals move up to the attack Rickett's Federal battery, supported by a Minnesota regi-

"Halt, men, halt! Those who are not cowards will follow me!"

ment, are in front of Jackson's men. The battery is wheeling into position, when the Virginia regiment is ordered to charge it. With a wild cheer, the command dashes forward, but is met with such a withering volley from the western men that it falls back in confusion. Let us follow the company on the right. As it falls back its captain is left lying on the field. The first lieutenant should be in command, but neither he nor his fellow officer seeks to rally the disorganized men. The company is breaking back in a mob right under Jackson's eyes, when a private seizes the flag from the panic stricken color bearer and shouts:

"Halt, men, halt! Those who are not cowards will follow me!"

It was too late to rally the company as a whole. It was breaking back on the reserve, headed by its two lieutenants, but at the call to rally about 30 of the men turned and raised a cheer and followed the flag. The sight of the flag and the echo of the cheers put heart into the beaten regiment. Something like order came out of confusion, and a moment later two-thirds of the regiment were fighting over the guns. The other regiments of the brigade moved up, and they came just in time. The First Michigan and Fourteenth New York were charging up to support the Minnesota men and save the guns.

And now for the space of a quarter of an hour 5,000 men fought with bayonet, with clubbed muskets, with whatever weapon they could wound or batter. It was the fight of a mob. It was a mob which went circling round and round the battery long ago disabled by the killing of all its horses. The Thirty-eighth New York, followed by a portion of the Fire Zouaves, went forward yelling and cheering, but they came too late to save all the guns. The Confederates held the ground and retained three of the pieces. As Jackson rides forward the company from the Shenandoah valley is dragging one of the captured guns to the rear.

"Who commands this company?" asked the general, looking in vain for a commissioned officer.

The men halted and stared at him, but no one replied.

"Where is your captain? Where are your lieutenants?" he demanded.

"Can't tell yo', general," answered a private who was bareheaded and coatless, "but the boss we are workin under jest now is that ar' Yankee with the flag!"

Jackson was about to speak further when an aid delivered an order, and he rode hurriedly away. There is no more fighting on this front. To the right and left the Federals are pushed again and again, but always to be beaten back. Did they number twice as many they could not dislodge the Confederates from the plateau. Nature made it for the key of a battlefield.

It is 3 o'clock, and the fight still rages fiercely. It is 4 o'clock, and the Federals are still battering at the slopes of the plateau. Half an hour later the volleys of musketry suddenly increase in volume, the artillery redoubles its fire, there is wild cheering all along the Confederate front. Johnston's troops have come up from the valley. He throws them into the battle, and the Federals are driven back. Then comes a brief counter push forward in pursuit, and the troops who were giving way slowly and retiring in good order suddenly become panic stricken.

An army panic is like unto nothing else in the world. It is like madness, in that feeling of terror which makes sensible cowards of brave men for a few hours. In 30 minutes from the first wild shouts of alarm the highways leading back to Centerville were choked with the shattered, disorganized and fleeing Federal commands. Here and there feeble attempts were made to check the terrified mob, but each effort only increased the panic.

What were they fleeing from? Death? If so, almost every man of them had faced death for hours that day without flinching. They faced it now, as terrified men discharged their muskets and threw them away. Officers, mounted and of cavalry commands dashed into the mass, as fieldpieces and limbers and caissons, drawn by horses which seemed to have caught the spirit of terror, turned in from the fields at a mad gallop and came down upon the mobs before. Men flee, like shadows from a plague, but they know from what they flee.

Rushing into the highways, fighting each other as they struggled to reach the van, stumbling, falling, a child of fear came every where in the army which had fought so well and long streamed into the hamlet of Centerville. There was no pursuit. There was n't a brigade in the Confederate army in condition to pursue, nor was the extent of the Federal disaster known to Confederate officers. Here was a strong position, and here it was that troops who had not been in action were formed across the highway leading to Washington to check the panic stricken thousands. Mounted officers rode into the mob and shouted commands and appeals. The panting fugitives paused for a moment, but it was not to listen, not to obey, not to feel ashamed of their fears. It was but to draw a long breath and then dash at the wall of glistening bayonets. The wall menaced them, the bayonets pointed at their breasts, but with one mighty surge the living wave dissolved the wall, broke it to right and left, the fragments to right and left, and the stream of humanity poured on over the hills and flowed the faster for its temporary check. It could not be checked again until it reached the Potomac.

CHAPTER II.

Let us go back a few weeks and connect the chain of events.

The thunder of a hundred guns had been a bit loser at Charleston, and the south was rushing to arms. One who has not witnessed the beginning of war cannot comprehend the insanity of excitement which accompanies the passage of such fateful days. We of the north were delaying, hoping, trying to make ourselves believe that war would be averted, though no one could tell how. While we were delaying the south was acting. No man in any southern community dared talk of peace. While the north raised regiments the south put brigades into camp and planned a campaign. While the north prattled the south possessed itself of fort after fort. The streets of every city echoed the tread of marching men; every village was aroused by the music of the fife and drum. That generation knew nothing of war. Men looked upon the waving flags and rippling banners, the marching volunteers and the holiday attire and said to each other:

"Then this is war? Men who have written of war have deceived us. There is no suffering, no wounded, no dead. Let us also join in the march."

But historians had not deceived them. They were deceiving themselves. The beginning of war is merriment and laughter. The end is marked by thousands of marble headstones bearing the single word "Unknown"—those and crape and tears and desolation. It is 4 o'clock in the afternoon of one of those never to be forgotten spring days of 1861, to memberers now only by gray haired men and women. The scene is the ancient town of Winchester, in the beautiful Shenandoah valley, the garden spot of the Old Dominion. Under cover of a wooden awning sheltering the front of the old store and postoffice two men are seated at a table borrowed somewhere for the occasion. One of them wears the uniform of a militia captain; the other is in citizen's dress and has a look of manner and a paper before him. Hear what the captain is saying to the men crowding up until they stand six or eight deep before him.

"We want 60 more men to fill up this company. Within a week we shall be ordered to the front. We want only young men and good men. Now, then, you all who want to go to war and see some fun put your names down on this paper. You, there, Steve Brayton, step up and sign!"

"How long shall we uns be gone, captain?"

"I reckon on 60 days."

"Then I'll put down."

"And I!"

"And I!"

"Say, captain," called a young farmer from the rear rank of the crowd, "can't yo' make the time 30 days? The old man's feelin sorely this spring, and he can't do no farm work. I'd like to go along with yo' all, but I can't spare over 30 days. Make it 30 days, and I'll put down."

"We want sixty more men to fill up this company."

"I don't like to say 30," replied the captain as he stood up to look over the crowd, "but we've got to get there, wherever it is, and then we've got to have a fight or two and march around, and I should reckon on 50 days anyhow. Better come along. You never did have so much chance to see fun in all your life before."

"Well, I reckon 10 or 20 days won't make no great difference anyhow," said the man. And he pushed forward to add his name to the list.

Directly opposite two men sat looking out of a second story window. They were in the law office of Justin Williams, a lifelong citizen of the town and a lawyer of repute. He was a man of 55, but carried his age lightly. The other was a young man of 24, well built and handsome, having a plain but kindly face. He was Royal Kenton of Rhode Island, a graduate of law at a prominent university and the junior partner of the law firm of Williams & Kenton. They were uncle and nephew. Kenton had come down about 18 months before. As the relative and partner of a prominent citizen he was treated with courtesy. As a Yankee, fresh from Yankeeland, he was a subject of criticism, and in no case was there a little heart in the hospitality accorded him. There could not have been. He represented principles antagonistic to the south. There was no neutral ground in those days. A man represented not himself, but his section of country. The opinions of his section were considered to be his. A southerner at the north would have been looked upon through the same eyes and held responsible to the same extent. Kenton was not a villain, but they detested him as a Yankee.

"Well, I am sorry this trouble has fallen upon the country," said the old lawyer as they watched the crowd opposite. "I have long felt that it must come sooner or later, but I hoped it would not be in my day. Nothing can now prevent war."

"But everybody appears to think it will end almost as soon as begun," replied Kenton.

"They do not stop to reflect," said the lawyer as his face assumed a more serious look. "I am a southerner, and I believe the south has been fully justified in her course, but our people are foolishly underrating the strength and temper of the north. They will not let us go because we blunter and threaten. If the south secures a separation, it will have to be won on the field of battle. It was ho, and it has come, and it is to be deplored."

"If war comes, business will have to go," observed Kenton as he looked about the office.

"War is here, and our business has already died," replied Williams. "Martial law will soon be proclaimed, and there will be no more use for judges, jurors and attorneys. I have wanted to ask you for several days what course you mean to pursue. If it was to be a war of 60 days, six months, or even a year, we might make certain plans, but it is to be a long and bloody struggle, and this very valley will be a battleground. We may as well close our office today as a month hence. Amid such excitement as this there can be no call for our services."

"I am a northern man," said Kenton after a moment's thought.

"Yes, they call you a Yankee."

"I have cared nothing for politics. There is a great principle herein involved, but our greatest statesmen are divided over it. The south seeks independence from a federation which has become unbearable. The north, or at least a goodly portion of it, denies the right of secession. This coming war is the consequence. I stand on neutral ground."

"You are neutral today, but you cannot be 30 days hence," said the old lawyer as a troubled look came into his face. "Do you find any neutral men in that crowd down there? Have you heard any neutral talk among our people? It may not be 10 days before you will be put to the test."

"What test?"

"Of your allegiance to one side or the other. Every young man in our town is hastening to volunteer. I am too old to be taken now, but later on I may be forced into the ranks. It will be a war in which the south will need her last man. I am not pledged to a southern confederacy, but I am pledged to Virginia. I go with my state. You have come down to court your kin with us. It is for you to answer whether you are for or against your adopted state. Think it over. If you wish to go north, the routes are still open. If you wish to remain, you will be asked why you don't volunteer. I do not seek to influence you. Be guided by your own conscience. Tomorrow we will settle all business matters between us. It may be years before there is any further call for our legal talents in this or any other Virginia town. Military law will soon override everything."

The old lawyer rose up and passed down stairs on his way home without further remark, leaving Royal Kenton in a brown study, which was interrupted 10 minutes later by wild cheering on the street. He went down to ascertain the cause, and a man who had just volunteered swung his hat and replied:

"Hooray! We uns is gwine to send fellers right on to captur' Washington and ole Abe Lincoln!"

CHAPTER III.

Night comes, and the streets of the old town grow more quiet. Men have cheered themselves hoarse, and intense excitement has wearied everybody. An even 500 men have signed the roll, and more will come in tomorrow. The recruiting office has been closed by the removal of the table and the departure of the captain. With that officer we have little to do. With the man in citizen's clothes who assisted him we have much. Let me introduce to you as he sits on the veranda of the village inn Duke Wyle, 25 years of age, a bachelor, the only son of ex-Judge Wyle, the nabob of the village and county. The young man has been educated for nothing in particular. He has done nothing in particular since he left college.

"Duke? Oh, Duke's all right," was the reply to any half meant criticism. "The old man's got plenty of money, and Duke will never be put to work. Duke likes to hunt and ride and is a little wild, but he'll steady down after a bit. Don't you worry about Duke!"

And when the news of war came Duke found the excitement in his nature craved. When the volunteer company was full, he was to be its first lieutenant. He and Royal Kenton were acquaintances, but not friends. In the beginning they had been attracted toward each other, and there was promise of close intimacy. But no two men can love the same woman and be friends—be anything less than enemies. Both were frequent callers at the old mansion standing at the head of the long street, in which resided the widow and daughter of the late Hon. John Percy, one of Virginia's oldest and wisest senators and statesmen. If Marian favored either one, if she was interested in any one of her numerous beaux, no sign of encouragement had been given. Kenton and Wyle were only two out of twenty, and yet it seemed to be generally understood that she would ultimately favor one or the other.

"Hooray! Hooray! We uns will be in Washington in less 'n 30 days!"

It was the voice of Steve Brayton shouting as he drew near.

"Yon there, Steve?" called Wyle as the enthusiastic volunteer was swinging his hat and making ready for another cheer.

"W'at's wanted, lootenant?"

"Come up here!"

"Doggone me hide, but I want to git down thar and hev a fout so bad 'at I can't stand still!" growled Steve as he came along down the veranda. "What's up, lootenant? Hain't dun gone and got word that them ar' Yankees is goin to give up without a font, hev ye?"

"Say, Steve, do you know there's a Yankee among us?"

"No. There's no news this evening. Sit down."

"Whoop! I'm powerfully minded to set out by myself and git thar befo' the fracas is all over!" exclaimed Steve as he hesitated to take the chair pushed at him by the other's foot.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

CLASH AT THE POLLS.

Catholics and Anti-Catholics In a Short but Bloody Fight.

KANSAS CITY, April 4.—The American Protective association and the Catholics came together in a bloody conflict at the polls of this city. It cannot be stated which side is responsible for the affray, as the partisans of each loudly charged the other with being the full cause of all the trouble. More than 100 shots were exchanged between the combatants in less than that many seconds, and when the firing ceased the following named were lying dead, dying or helpless on the pavement:

Killed—M. E. Callahan, city sidewalk inspector, shot through the right side.

Fatally injured—Harry Powier, laborer, shot through the head. Con Brosnahan, contractor, shot through the kidneys; Jerry Fate, deputy constable, shot in the face.

The riot was the culmination of the bitter feeling which has been manifested by action and words ever since the polls opened in the morning.

The two antagonistic elements were solidly divided in their choice of candidates for mayor. The aggressive support that each side gave to its candidates during one of the hottest campaigns ever known in this city engendered a strong sentiment of bigotry.

The riot that resulted so fatally was the climax of a series of smaller riots that took place during the early part of the day between the same opposing religious factions. This first took place on the Southwest boulevard, in the little suburb, very close to Callahan Station No. 3, and those who took part in it had been heated to the fighting temper by reports that had been hourly arriving from the various polling places. Constable Pate interfered among the crowd of angry disputants, and Callahan, it is said, flourished a pistol. Pate called on him to surrender. Callahan fired, but missed. Pate returned the fire and shot Callahan dead. The shooting then became general. The police reserves quickly arrived and quelled the riot.

TILLMAN TAKES COMMAND.

Dissolves Militia and Seizes the Police Powers of Cities.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 4.—The missic war lists which Governor Tillman's proclamation of last Saturday plunged the state of South Carolina seems to have practically come to an end. Three more were killed and four others wounded during the five days' "insurrection." The declaration and enforcement of martial law in the counties of Barnwood and Florence have cost the state $15,000 or $20,000 in actual expenditures and will entail the more expensive legacy of a thorough reorganization of the militia on different and novel lines.

That Governor Tillman himself considers the declaration of war a failure is evident from the steps taken by him in a speech dismissing to their homes the few companies of militiamen who have remained since Sunday as a sort of garrison for the city. After heatedly denouncing the yarn-ous elements declared by him to be covertly defying the execution of the dispensary act he gave notice to the cops that their rather reluctant aid in the spring services would not be required a...t to suppress a revolt against the liquor law, whether actual or supposed.

Instead of the rigors of martial law, the governor admitted that he would appeal to the civil powers with which he was invested by the legislature for the enforcement of the dispensary law. The municipal police of the towns in which the law was ignored would be supplanted hereafter by constables holding authority from the state; and, if necessary, the next legislature would be called upon to pass a municipal police bill putting the control of the police force of every city and town in South Carolina in the hands of a commission appointed by Governor Tillman.

The public announcement of a further resort on the state government's part to regular and peaceful measures rather than arbitrary and despotic ones, together with the immediate disbandment of the troops left in Columbia, had naturally a marked effect in quieting what little apprehension remained after Monday's pacific developments. The companies which had been held in readiness for use at the state penitentiary got on board the trains and went home, instead to escape further service in the burlesque "war."

Dispensary War Wonding.

FLORENCE, S. C., April 4.—It appears that the dispensary war is waning, and South Carolinians have reason to be glad of it. Since Friday last the state has been on the brink of bloody revolution. Many prominent citizens have pledged themselves to do everything in their power to bring about a peaceful end of this unfortunate affair.

A DESPERATE SITUATION.

Eleven Thousand Hungarian Strikers Facing Three Hundred Armed Deputies.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 4.—The situation throughout the entire coal regions at the close of the second day of the big strike of coal miners and coke workers is very alarming, and it looks as if bloodshed and destruction of property will only be avoided by resort to military power of the state. As in 1891, the strikers have been receiving food supplies from the company stores, which have been cut off from them. The great foreign element among them would have not the means to obtain it. The only way it can be secured is by sacking the company's stores, but to do this they must overpower deputy sheriffs who are standing guard with winchesters.

Eleven thousand strikers bivouacked last night at different places between here and Scottville, and it is generally believed that numerous raids will be made on the company stores.

If an outbreak among the strikers takes place anywhere in the region, the inevitable result will be loss of life. The strikers realize the force of an encounter with the deputies, but their condition is desperate, and they may attempt to overpower the guards.

About 300 deputies are standing guard at the different works. Their forces are scattered, and should an attack be made by one of the big mobs it would be certain death to offer resistance. Terror reigns from one extremity of the region to the other, and every hour brings the possibility of a deadly conflict between the mobs and the authorities and the destruction of property by fire and dynamite. In the houses of the strikers a large number of shotguns and rifles are stored, which will probably be brought into use soon unless the situation changes.

FIRE CAUSED A PANIC.

Fourteen Persons Injured In a Wild Rush From a Hall.

PROVIDENCE, April 4.—While the drama "The Lost Child" was being presented at Iron's hall, Olneyville, by the young people of St. Mary's Catholic church, a fire broke out in the barber shop directly under the hall. The blaze was not discovered until it burst through the floor at a corner of the hall.

The large audience rose en masse and started for the stairways, from which they found the hall filled with smoke the people became panic stricken. A wild rush for the fire escapes followed, and the frightened crowd was soon crowded over each other in their attempt to reach the windows. Eight persons were severely injured by being trampled under foot, and Mrs. James T. Kennedy was so seriously injured that it is feared she will not recover.

During the rush down the fire escapes many persons fell to the ground, six being so badly injured that they were carried home in the ambulance. Their injuries were composed of dislocated arms and ankles, although an unknown woman had her back broken. The fire was quickly extinguished by the department, it being confined to a pile of papers in the rear of the barber shop.

Fatal Foundry Accident.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—By an explosion of gas at the Etna furnace John Joyce, a top filler, was buried to death. John Higgins, a fellow workman who tried to rescue him, was fatally injured.

THE LETTERS TO LOUISE

Breckinridge Denies That He Ever Had Them Written.

A TYPEWRITER WHO SAYS HE DID.

Miss Pollard Says She Received Them and That Sometimes They Began, "My Dear Sister Louise." The Colonel Continues His Story Under the Lash.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—There was a variation of the order of testimony in the Pollard-Breckinridge trial to-permit the introduction of evidence that Colonel Breckinridge had carried on a typewritten correspondence with Madeline Pollard from the house of representatives in 1886. The demand from the plaintiff's lawyers to be permitted to follow this course brought a delicate question of law before the judge.

It was conceded that documents might be brought into a case and a witness questioned upon it in cross examination from which to lay the basis for contradiction, but whether the existence of a missing document could be asserted and the defendant asked whether no wrote it was another question—a question which Judge Bradley decided in the affirmative after listening to the arguments and consulting authorities. He held, however, that the witnesses could not be asked to give their recollection of the contents of the letters.

Accordingly Mrs. Louise Lowell, who conducted a business in typewriting and stenography at the capitol in the year 1886 and had been discovered by the plaintiff last Sunday, stated that she had copied the mysterious letters upon a typewriter for the colonel and had also addressed for him the envelopes of envelopes to "Miss Pollard, 20 North Upper street, Lexington, Ky.," having made an entry of the address in a notebook which she produced, but which did not entirely substantiate her statement because it seemed to have been used in 1887 and 1888.

Miss Pollard also appeared in a speaking part once more to testify that she had received the letters in question. During her brief appearance the lawyers had their hands full endeavoring to make her confine herself to answering the questions directed to her, for in her untrammeled utterances when on the stand before she scored some of the most telling points for her side.

Miss Pollard Recalled.

When Miss Pollard went to the stand, she was asked:

"Miss Pollard, did you receive correspondence from the defendant in 1886?"

"I was never correspondent from him," she began in her dramatic tones when the defense interposed objections, and her counsel asked her down to a direct answer.

"Yes," was the answer.

"Without telling the contents, give a general description of them," said Mr. Carlisle.

"They were written in typewriter."

"Anything more?"

"Colonel Breckinridge used to call me!"...

There was another chorus of objections. Indeed every attempt of the plaintiff at generalization brought forth the same result. So after considerable trouble with Miss Pollard and requests to her to be specific on the part of her lawyers she said that before August, 1886, the letters had been received. Some were begun "My Dear Sister Louise" and "My Little Sniffire," all addressed by a typewriter.

"What became o' them?" was asked.

"They were all destroyed as soon as I had read them because he always asked me"—

"One moment," Mr. Breckinridge shouted, and his colleagues chimed in, burying her voice under their objections.

Then on cross examination Miss Pollard said that she had never received typewritten letters from any one but Colonel Breckinridge.

"Did you on direct examination say anything about the beginning of letters."

"Can't you answer my question?"

"Answer the question," put in Mr. Carlisle.

"I did not."

"How were the letters signed?" prompted Colonel Breckinridge.

"How were they signed?" Mr. Butterworth repeated, and she plaintiff said: "Yes, Mr. Butterworth, I remember very well how many of them were signed. They were in lead pencil. That was the one thing he did write on them."

Back to the stand came the colonel, and replying to the first question he said: "There having been no such manuscript written by me, of course I said nothing about disparity in ages."

Denials equally emphatic were entered against the questions whether he had not often spoken of how badly he wanted to see his "Dear Sister Louise," that he had cautioned her to destroy them on account of people who might look into Bureau drawers, that he had told her to mail them by a certain train, so that he would receive them at the capitol in the morning; that he had written her to mail him a postal card, signing it Mary Smith, and requesting him to send her a copy of a civil service report or agricultural department report.

Did Not Call Her "Little Spitfire."

"Did you address her as 'Little Spitfire?'" was another question.

"I did not."

"Did you tell her to stand up before the looking glass and scold herself for you?"

"Having written no such letter, of course I did not."

"Did you frequently protest your affection for her in those 'Sister Louise' letters?"

"As there were no such letters, of course I did not."

The colonel could not remember having met Miss Pollard during the forty-ninth congress, but in the summer of 1887 he resumed his relations with her, visiting the house of Sarah Guess half a dozen times. He had met her perhaps at other times, "but not in the sense you mean," the colonel assured his questioner.

"Of course I wish to make this as little offensive as possible," Mr. Wilson said. "You understand my question, I see, and I understand the sense in which your answer is intended."

The events after Miss Pollard's coming to Washington in the fall of 1887 were retraced. The colonel told how he had met Miss Pollard near the Catholic institution where she was sheltered and had taken her on a long drive, when they had met "as a woman in her condition and a man supposing himself to be the author of her condition would meet," he explained; had discussed the arrangements for her comfort and home affairs in general, Miss Pollard inquiring whether any one in Lexington suspected her condition. Arrangements were then made for sending her money, which was always accompanied by a note, generally signed "Bge"—a contraction of "Breckinridge," which he used in indorsing his papers.

Upon Mr. Wilson asking whether the letters were couched in such language that a stranger would have understood their subject matter, the colonel said that one receiving the letters with the money might have understood or suspected something, but that he could not if seeing the letters without the money.

"So that a stranger never would have dreamed what they were about?" Mr. Wilson commented.

"Oh, that is a very broad statement," returned the colonel. "Of course I cannot be expected to say what a stranger might have dreamed of."

These little exchanges of repartee sprinkled through the testimony enlivened it considerably, and the colonel was perfectly cool throughout.

"Do you wish to be understood as saying that you supported her in whole or in part during the two years that she was at the Academy of the Holy Cross on Massachusetts avenue?" was another question, to which the colonel responded: "I would not wish to be understood as saying any thing about it if I could avoid it, but as a matter of fact my contributions to her were not lessened. They were irregular amounts, and I understand that they helped to pay her board at the academy."

The Protested Notes.

"But did you not say that the gossip reported to you in New York, and the fact because she had run into debt at the Holy Cross?"

The colonel had understood that this was the case. Afterward Miss Pollard had told him that a lady friend of hers had made successful investments through a friend in New York, and the gentleman was willing to make similar investments for her if he would indorse her notes, so he had indorsed 10 notes.

Incidentally the colonel hinted that he knew the name of the lady and gentleman in this transaction, but Mr. Wilson suggested that the names were not wanted. With these notes or the proceeds Miss Pollard had paid her debts at Holy Cross and had shown him the receipts. Some of the notes for $50 each were identified by the witness, and all were signed "Madeline Breckinridge Pollard."

The 10 notes were replaced by five more for $100 each, payable by the colonel. This transaction was late in 1892. He had never received notice of what became of them; did not know whether they had been protested; was sure that he had never received notice that two of them went to protest.

"Now, to refresh your memory," began Mr. Wilson, this testimony having been elicited by a succession of questions, "do you not know that notice of the protest was sent to you both in Lexington and Washington?"

He did not, and the attorney said, "Do you know the particular object for which those last notes were drawn?"

"I do very well."

"Was it not to enable her to purchase her wedding trousseau?"

"Nothing like that. There is not a scintilla of truth in it," was the colonel's impressive answer, and he wanted to tell about the deal, but Mr. Wilson choked him off with a reminder that his counsel would examine him later.

His relations with Miss Pollard had been resumed in 1890. He had met her at three places—on 21 H street, once on Fourth street and again with a certain woman the plaintiff was willing to trust, who had moved several times.

"The plaintiff was solicitous that our relations should not be known, to which I cordially assented," he explained.

"Then you and the plaintiff were equally solicitous to conceal your relations?"

"Well, I thought at times she rather preferred to have them known."

"But in spite of this you continued your relations with her?"

"I did. Sometimes the plaintiff would come to the gallery at the house; would send her card to me, and I would meet her in the library as a corridor. If I may say so without levity, those things seemed to arrange themselves. There was no periodicity, if I may use the word, about them."

Their Various Meeting Places.

"But you could not meet her at the Convent of Holy Cross. That was not suitable for such enterprises."

"Yes, sir," meaning that he could not arrange meetings there.

"Did you ever have a room in the northwest section?"

"We did try that experiment, but of all the unsatisfactory experiments that was the worst I ever tried. We had not been there more than three or four times before the plaintiff said that it seemed that every window within three blocks had eyes when we went in there, and I was sure that people were standing on every doorstep the night we had time I went. I am rather a peculiar looking man, so people remembered me, and we gave that up."

"Then you and the plaintiff went on orders for silence from the bailiffs followed this passage.

"Did they continue while she was stopping at 25 Lafayette square, a house kept by a woman named Mrs. Fuller who keeps an excellent house, with a high class of people?" Mr. Wilson asked.

"I can indorse all you say of Mrs. Mefner," responded the colonel complacently, "for I have boarded there myself. A most excellent lady, a most pleasant house." He stroked his hair, thrust his hands into his pockets and leaned against the judge's desk as he gave this recommendation.

"Now, you have criticised Miss Pollard for telling these people at Lebanon and saying she had been to dinner at your house to explain her absences with you," said Mr. Wilson, "but would you have wanted her to tell what she was really doing at those times?"

The colonel declared that he had done everything but marry her to keep secret their relations, but did condemn her for having brought Mrs. Mefner in as a witness and making her swear to what she had heard from Miss Pollard as though it was the truth, thus putting the lady in a false position.

"You are a fatherly looking man," continued Mr. Wilson, "and she a young girl. Both of you were from Kentucky. Can you conceive of a better excuse for her to give for her absence than that she had been to dinner with a respectable elderly gentleman like yourself?"

"Nor can I conceive of a keener one to be used afterward for a suit like this," was the reply.

The applications of Miss Pollard for a civil service position which Colonel Breckinridge had indorsed were handed up to be read by him, and of course in them was the statement that Miss Pollard was a person of good moral character and good repute, whom he would recommend for employment by his friends and would trust "unhesitatingly," the indorsements being made upon his honor; also that she was well educated and that he knew of nothing to disqualify her from filling a government clerkship.

His Wife's Worksheet.

During a part of March and April, 1892, Representative Breckinridge said, when his attention was called to another phase of the case, he had seen Miss Pollard two or three times a day and one day seven times. He remembered a time when he took lunch with her, and they had had strawberries, but was certain that this was before the 12th of April and not the 16th or 17th, after the secret marriage, as Mr. Wilson would have it.

He had frequently met the plaintiff in the house of Mrs. Thomas on F street, but had never been received in his wife's.

"Did not you meet her once when she was using this basket that had belonged to your wife?" Mr. Wilson inquired.

"Never, never under heaven!" answered the colonel, striking the witness box.

"Did not a servant come in while you were with her and she was using that basket?"

"No servant ever did, for I never knew for a moment until it was brought in here that I had that basket."

He had taken Miss Pollard to lunch at Solari's, at the Shoreham and the Lossam, all well known restaurants, but had never taken her to call on friends at the Ebbitt House, although Miss Pollard might have said so as a blind.

During the spring they had gone to assignation houses and had scenes which would have occurred at any other place under heaven.

"Unpleasant would hardly be a word to characterize those scenes," he said. He had met Miss Pollard in New York in September, 1892, but not "improperly," and then her "improperly" there in February, 1893.

"Where did you go then?" Mr. Wilson inquired.

"I can't tell the place. I simply hired a coupe. She got in, and I told the driver to take us to some safe place. He took us close to the elevated road, up toward Fifty-second or Fifty-third streets. It was a large building that looked like a hotel."

Here Mr. Wilson suggested that it was near the hour for adjournment, and as he desired to take up an entirely different line of examination it was hardly worth while to proceed further, and the court adjourned.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

OF THE HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Annual Reports Read by Mrs. N. W. Pike and Miss Cora Shepard, and Addresses Made by Mrs. Jennie Fowler Willing.

The ladies of the Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. church celebrated their fifth anniversary yesterday by meeting in Vincent chapel. Mrs. Jennie Fowler Willing of New York made addresses at the afternoon meeting, after which a collation was served. The tables were presided over by Mrs. John MacNaughton, Mrs. Charles Horne, Mrs. I. W. Pangborn, Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mrs. J. R. Joy, Mrs. Hyde and Mrs. Fenno. The members of the Young Ladies' Missionary Circle acted as waitresses.

In the evening, Mrs. N. W. Pike read the annual report of the Society.

The Society decreased in numbers last year, owing to many going to the sister churches. The loss of the First Church has been their gain. The society has at present 59 members, of whom eight are life members. Among the work done has been the sending of $100 to the Industrial Home in Tennessee to establish an Elizabeth A. McGee room in memory of the late Mrs. McGee of this city. The total amount sent out for missions has been $488.82. The society closed the year with a balance of $7.89 on hand.

For the Young Ladies' Mission Circle, Miss Cora Shepard made a very encouraging report. The Circle has 31 active and 10 associate members and has done considerable good work, among other things sending money to Mary Parker in Florida.

Mrs. Willing also made an address in the evening.

PERSONAL.

Miss Theresa Hoch of Somerville was the guest of Miss Maier of this city last week.

The Rev. Dr. Barnes, pastor of the First M. E. church, is attending the M. E. Conference at Newark.

Mrs. Catherine Webster of East Second street, starts this morning for California. She expects to make an extended visit.

Mrs. Frederick Gray of Hillside Avenue, who has been ill almost all Winter, has been improved and is now in a precarious condition.

The engagement is announced of Miss Florence F. Randolph, only daughter of ex Freeholder George W. F. Randolph, to J. Barton Groendyke of Somerville.

Miss Irene Bill and Mr. Percy Davis were united in marriage at the St. Olive Baptist church last evening. The pastor, the Rev. Mr. Gibson, was the officiating clergyman.

Mr. Dildrick Brenner died at his house on Somerset street, aged 79. He had been ill nearly all Winter. He leaves two sons George and John who live in the borough.

Henry Newton and Miss Jones, both of this city, were married Monday night, at the Mt. Olive Baptist church by the Rev. Mr. Gibson. After the ceremony there was a reception at Mr. Maden's on Fourth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Steward Todd moved from Somerset street to Westfield yesterday. Mr. Todd has obtained a position with the Baldwin Locomotive Works at Paterson. He was a fireman at the North Plainfield electric light station.

Mr. George H. Stewart died at his home in Washingtonville yesterday morning, of pneumonia, after an illness of short duration. He was 70 years old. His brother, James H. Stewart, is a wheelwright, and lives in North Plainfield.

Miss Lillian E. Britts, captain of the Ladies' Cycling Club, has arranged their "runs" for Tuesdays and Fridays, during April. The ladies will meet at their rooms on Park avenue, corner of Fifth street, on Tuesdays, at two o'clock, and Fridays at three o'clock. The first "run" will take place this Friday at three o'clock and will be to Scotch Plains and back. All notices of the club will be put on their bulletin board at the rooms, instead of notification by postals.

Miss Mina Wyckoff was most agreeably surprised last night by a few of her many friends, who called upon her at the Crescent flats, having met at Miss Searing's, on Madison avenue, according to a prearrangement made by Messrs. A. E. Johnson and F. E. Faulks. Messrs. Sheridan and Lawson furnished the music for dancing, which was kept up until two o'clock. Among those present were: Miss Minnie Smith, Miss Essie Smith, the Misses Annie and Sadie Searing, Miss Lottie Corbett, Miss Ida Dunham, Miss Lizzie Stafford, the Misses Lulu and Madeline Bird, Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Wyckoff, Miss Minnie Wyckoff, Miss Laura Van Ness and Messrs. A. Wilson, R. F. Crane, M. Stevens, A. Compton, Bert Honeyman, John Voehl, T. J. Kurnals, Jr., George Johnson, Jr., Edward Johnson, F. Faulks, John Mowen, Harvey Dayton of New Market, and E. Van Doren of Bound Brook.

To Hold a Club Dance.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum held a meeting Tuesday night, and decided to hold a dance in the hall on Thursday evening, April 12th. The following committee was appointed to make the arrangements: Messrs. W. Kiely, M. Cashin, J. J. Flynn, Charles Lang and W. O'Connor.

—How is this for genuine April weather?

DRAGGED BY A TRAIN.

Philip Mitz's Narrow Escape This Morning at Dunellen.

Philip Mitz of Dunellen, who is employed in Mr. L. H. Boehm's dry goods store, had a narrow escape at Dunellen this morning, from serious injury. He, in company with two or three others who come to Plainfield on the 6.55 train every morning, were on the way to the station, when the train started out, they claim, ahead of time. Mitz ran to catch it and succeeded in getting hold of the railing of one the cars, but he missed the step and fell. His friends expected to see his legs cut off, as he was dragged a considerable distance before the train was stopped.

BREVITIES.

—Alert's Hose Company will nominate officers to-night.

—Engine Company, No. 2, will nominate officers to-night.

—The new borough Council will meet to-morrow night.

—One candidate was initiated by Unity Lodge, K. of P., last night.

—It is said that a branch of the A. P. A. is to be organized at Westfield.

—The Fraternity Club have moved in their new room, over Woolston & Buckle's.

—Mrs. Caroline Sullivan of West Third street, fell yesterday and broke her right arm.

CHURCH AND CHAPELS.

MEETING OF THE CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH AND ITS AUXILIARIES.

Reports Made by the Superintendents of Hope, Bethel and Warren Chapels and the Home School.—Elders and Deacons Elected.

The annual meeting of the Crescent Avenue church was held in the church parlors last night. The Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, the pastor, presided, and Mr. L. G. Parsons acted as clerk.

Messrs. Israel C. Pierson and John Bushnell were elected elders for a term of three years.

Mr. Stephen S. Struthers resigned as deacon, and Dr. W. H. Murray was elected to fill out the remaining year of his term.

Mr. S. H. Whitney was elected deacon for a full term of three years.

Dr. Richards read the annual report of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church which had been submitted by Mrs. A. B. Beers, the president of the society for the year 1893. The report showed the membership to be 149. The receipts for the year had been $781.13 disbursements, $778.59, leaving a balance on hand of $2.74.

Reports were then made by the chapels connected with the church as follows:

BETHEL CHAPEL.

Mr. S. A. Ginns is superintendent of the Sunday school and the Rev. Wm. Alexander, pastor of the chapel. Mr. Ginns reported that the year just closed had been most satisfactory, and there had been the best average attendance at the Sunday-school of any year since the chapel had been in existence. The school had been self-sustaining. During the year two members—Francis Stansby and Peter Wyckoff had died. The school has 236 scholars and an average attendance of 117. During the year $4838.42 had been raised and paid out.

HOPE CHAPEL.

For Hope chapel, Mr. H. C. Squires, the superintendent, reported for the Sunday-school, and the Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, the pastor, spoke briefly of his work.

Hope chapel, during the year had cared for its own needs, and had done much to allay the sufferings of people in its vicinity. The Sunday-school is crowded for want of room and new classes cannot be formed. The total membership is 546, with a total attendance of 317.

The ladies have united with the chapel during the year, 43 on confession of faith and 3 by certificate. The chapel contributions amounted to $600. The chapel has a Ladies' Aid and Dorcas society. This society raised $100 in the year just ended. There is also a Y. P. S. C. E. with a membership of 59, connected with the chapel. There are also three Kings Daughters Circles engaged in active work at the chapel.

WARREN CHAPEL.

Superintendent L. N. Lovell and Pastor J. O. McKelvey reported for Warren Chapel. Mr. Lovell, in his report went briefly over the chapel's work since it became connected with the Crescent avenue church. On Feb. 5th, 1893, a conference of teachers was held in reference to the matter. As no other church felt able to take it up the Crescent avenue church had decided to buy it. This course was decided upon at a meeting of the church held March 12. Mr. Lovell had been chosen superintendent, Mr. J. K. Van Arsdale, (now deceased), assistant, and Mr. J. K. McKelvey, pastor. At that time there were 80 scholars and officers in the school. On October 27, morning service was begun and since continued.

Three communions have been held and 17 persons confessed Christ. The large infant class had been divided up among nine teachers. At present the school numbers 231 members, with an average attendance of 137. The total receipts have been $703.85, and the disbursements, $675.34, leaving a balance on hand of $27.50.

CRESCENT AVENUE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Superintendent John W. Murray read the report for the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school. The membership of this school has not increased in the last ten years, as the members as soon as they get a little age and experience in the work have been sent out to other fields, such as the chapels. The present membership is 1,500. The receipts for the year have been $690.69. A balance of $68.99 is due to the executive fund of last year. $275 is due to the school from the church. $1,016.50 has been raised for mission.

Mr. Struthers made a brief report for the deacons.

Trustee Charles Place stated that the trustees usually reported at their annual meeting and that he hoped to see such an attendance at their meeting as was present last night. He said he thought the total church expenditure for the year would be $10,000, $1,500 of which had been paid for the repairing of the church steeple.

Treasurer F. R. Andrews read a report of money collected for benevolent purposes outside of the ladies' work, as follows: Sunday-school, $11,508.25; disbursements, $11,080.30, leaving a balance of $413.25.

Dr. Richards stated that owing to the death of Dr. J. K. Van Arsdale, the church clerk, who had carefully and faithfully performed his duties, no accurate report of the church would be made as present. He said that during the year there had been $15,000 raised, $10,000 of which had been for benevolent contributions, while only about $12,000 had been expended for current expenses, leaving a balance of $3,000. There had been 45 persons baptized and 15 members had died and 17 had been dismissed. The present membership of the church is about 1267. The meeting was closed with prayer by Capt. Ostrom.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

12 REPORTED KILLED.

Armed Deputies Guard the Woods Against Marching Mobs.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 5.—1,500 strikers who followed their leader Davis, after he was arrested, camped near Scottdale last night, and his arrest has made them furious. Expecting Davis to get bail and return, they waited until 9:30 when, learning that Davis would not be here they elected Alexander Markey their leader and started on their march toward Mount Pleasant, a howling and desperate mob, ready to destroy everything in their way.

The number of deputy sheriffs and guards at the works between here and Mount Pleasant on the lines of the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroads has been doubled, and there are at least 500 determined men armed with Winchester rifles to repel attacks that may be made on the men at the works.

A report has just reached here that a battle occurred at Valley and twelve Hungarians were killed.

The story has not been confirmed.

The Racing License Fee Paid and Apologies Have Been Made.

ELIZABETH, N. J. April 5.—The check of the Linden Blood Horse Association for $5,000, which was paid to the Township Committee as a license fee to open their race track, has been cashed at the Second National Bank, New York, and the work of building the trunk sewer from Linden to tidewater, a distance of four miles, for which the money was collected, will begin at once. James W. Hope, J. H. Eddy and Sanford Clark of the committee, who voted for the license, have been re-elected as committeemen and apologies made to them in open service at the Presbyterian church in Roselle. Judge Vansickle charged last Fall two Grand Juries (James Martine of Plainfield being foreman of one) to indict the committee for granting the license, but in each instance no indictment was found.

Had a Donkey Party.

After concluding the business last night of Lone Council, D. of P., the meeting was opened to friends of the Council and a season of sociability enjoyed. There was singing and dancing, followed by a "Donkey Party," in which Mrs. Fred Canfield received first prize, a handsome plush cushion; William Campbell, second prize, a pretty pen wiper; and the booby prize, a stamp-box, was won by Mr. Walter Smalley. There was also a collation.

Killed in Sight of Home.

An express train struck John McCormick of Westfield, as he was crossing the track in front of the depot yesterday afternoon, killing him instantly. He was on his way home from a business trip to Washington, D. C. He leaves a widow and five children, two of the latter married.

Liberty Corner.

Two new cases of scarlet fever appeared here last week, necessitating the closing of the public school.

Mrs. D. E. Stevens will remove to Newark this week. The people in this community will miss her very much.

Racket at the Gravel Pit.

Sarah Staats and Mrs. John Wolfe are neighbors and live near the gravel pit on George street. This morning Sarah hung a blanket on the fence dividing the two yards and Mrs. Wolfe threw it off. The blanket was placed back on the fence and this time Mrs. Wolfe not only threw it off, but threw a brick. Mrs. Staats woman on the head with a broomstick, at least that is what the latter swears to in a complaint which she asked Justice Nash to draw. The complaint was issued and a warrant issued for Mrs. Wolfe's arrest.

GRINDING OUT LAWS.

THE LEGISLATURE MILL IS NOW RUNNING ALONG RIGHT MERRILY.

Gov. Werts Signs the Bill Enabling Women to Become Notaries Public.

—The Act Against College Hazing Defeated.—An Act is Well Advanced to Prevent Plural Office Holding.

TRENTON, N. J., April 4.—The House got at it a. m. Mr. Harrigan of Essex offered a resolution that the Judiciary Committee be relieved from further consideration of the referendum amendment, and that the amendment be taken up by the House sitting as a Committee of the Whole. The committee promised to report the amendment at its earliest convenience, whereupon Mr. Harrigan withdrew his resolution.

House bill No. 118, that no sheriff or under-sheriff, constable, marshal, or police officer shall hold any other civil office, came up on third reading, and was advocated by Mr. Storrs of Essex, who said that its passage would do away with "Pooh Bahs" in politics. He cited the case of Chief Edward Kelly of Summit, who, he said, held three or four offices. This man had too much power, and the people of Summit demanded the passage of the bill.

Mr. Harrigan said the real father of the bill was Ambassador Bayard, who had a grudge against Chief Kelly.

Mr. Derr of Hudson, introduced a bill providing for a non-partisan police commission in Hoboken. It is to consist of four members appointed by the Mayor.

The School Census bill was amended so as to authorize the State Board of Education to appoint the Supervisor of the Census.

The Anti-Hazing bill came up on third reading, but was vigorously opposed by Mr. Storrs, who said that such matters ought to be regulated by the faculty of colleges. The bill was lost by a vote of 30 to 32.

The Senate passed bills making the open season for catching trout from July 1 to July 15, and repealing the act providing that the school fund shall no longer use the proceeds of the riparian leases. After advancing a batch of bills to the third reading the Senate adjourned for the week.

Governor Werts to-day signed the bill making women eligible to the office of notary public, and he sat at one, under this law, would-be notary public Miss Ida Fhares, an amanuensis in the office of Adjutant-General Stryker. This secures for Miss Fhares the distinction of being the first woman notary public in New Jersey.

The Second-Class County Freeholder bill will be vetoed by the Governor, and the proposition of law thus fails, so far as its operation this year is concerned.

The House Committee on Militia to-day investigated the reorganization of the 1st Brigade N G S N J., by Gen. Plume two years ago, resulting in the disbanding of two regiments and in the promotion of Campbell to Brigadier-General to succeed Gen. Sewell. It was charged that Gen. Plume's action was illegal, as the Governor alone has the power of reorganization.

Col. Barnard said that Gen. Plume had destroyed the discipline of the brigade as was amply proven by the drunkenness of the men at Sea Girt last year. He asked the reinstatement of all the officers dismissed for alleged mutiny. The committee will hear the case further next Wednesday.

One a Day Is Better Than a Satin One Monight For a Little Girl.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

All wool French challies are selling at very low prices, and they are shown this season in extremely pretty patterns. There are small detached flower sprays on a light ground—tiny moss rosebuds or violets—and also more connected floral designs, dainty Persian patterns in medium shades and various stripes and checks, mainly in red. These goods not only make cool and pretty dresses and tea gowns for "grownup ladies," as children say, but are especially suitable for little girls and misses' attire, being sheer, soft and inexpensive. Any row ribbon bands, so much used as trimming of late, are particularly appropriate decorations, the color of the ribbon being chosen to match that of the figure on the goods. This garniture is even prettier than lace for children's frocks, being less quickly defaced.

Cashmere, flannel, thin French serge, challie and for exceptional occasions china silk are the richest materials that should be used for a little girl's gowns. There is no danger that she will not look distinctly well dressed if her wardrobe is carefully selected and well made. Let money be put into the fitting and finishing rather than into the stuff itself. Plained and figured white nainsook dresses trimmed with a modest amount of fine valenciennes lace or delicate embroidery are infinitely preferable to silk frocks for little people, for nainsook is new every time it is washed, while silk is old at the second time of an active child's wearing. The main thing to be desired in immature faces, seven plain white slips a week are better and show a more refined taste than one satin one a month. Keep the little girl a child as long as possible. Do not encourage her vanity in mature materials and make her a mere doll. She can be a little girl only a little while at most. The time will soon enough come when her personal attractions will have to be supplanted by fine clothing. While they are sufficient in themselves do not eclipse them with rich stuffs and elaborate styles.

A sketch is given of a dress for a girl from 8 to 12 years old. It is made of challie and trimmed with bands of No. 1 ribbon. These bands are arranged on the skirt in the form of large vandykes, the upper points of which are ornamented with ribbon rosettes. The plain round bodice has a full vest trimmed with horizontal bands of ribbon, and a wide ribbon belt defines the waist. The close sleeves have a puff from shoulder to elbow, and bands of ribbon simulate cuffs at the wrists.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

—The quarterly meeting of the County Board of Agriculture will be held in the Court House at Somerville, Saturday, April 14, at two p. m. Prof. E. B. Voorhees, Director of the State Agricultural Station, New Brunswick, will deliver an address on "How Much and What Kind of Manures to Use."

—The employes in train service on the Central Railroad of New Jersey have received a book of instructions for operating and caring for automatic air brakes, compressed air train signals, gas lighting apparatus and steam heat. The book contains nearly 500 questions, and every employe whose duties are connected with the operation of the air brakes will have to undergo an examination on the subject.

—The Central Railroad Company is going to test the speed of two of their best engines, Nos. 385 and 451. An indicator diagram is attached to the cylinders, which registers the action of the steam, and shows the motion, if any. In order to get the revolutions made, two men are strapped on the breast beams of the engine, with stop-watches, taking the number of revolutions per minute, which enables them to get the exact time to the mile. Charles Kinnan, son of D. R. Kinnan of Raritan, representing Stevens Institute, with Edwin Custer, Chief of Tests of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, will make four trips from Jersey City to Philadelphia. Any one who has the courage to ride 381 miles strapped on the front of an engine, riding backwards, would make a good captain for the Princeton football team.

To Change the Term of City Clerks.

A bill has been introduced in the House of Assembly which provides for election of city clerks in third class cities, by the governing board, for a term of three years.

As Plainfield is a third-class city this will enable the board to fix the term of City Clerk here, if the bill becomes a law.

Smith and Agpar are There.

Two of Plainfield's crackemen took part in the Interstate manufacturers' tourney at Degler Park, Brooklyn, yesterday. They were Charles Smith and Neaf Agpar. Both entered in the third event, fifteen birds each; handicap; entries, $15 each; four prizes; fifty-three entries; value, $795. Division, 40, 30, 20 and 10 per cent. of purses.

Smith killed four and lost two, and Agpar killed six and lost 6. The event was for 15 birds but only six were shot at, as darkness stopped the event.

The event to-day will be the Great American Snakes' value guaranteed $4,000. But as there are 81 entries at $25 each, the stakes will amount to $1,275, to be divided on the basis of 50, 25 and 25 per cent. Both Smith and Agpar have entered.

Presbyterian Church Meeting.

The congregation of the First Presbyterian church held its annual election in the church last night. The reports read were of a very favorable character. There are about 345 scholars in the Sunday-school.

Messrs. Abram L. Cadmus and Howard A. Pearse were elected elders, and Messrs. John Lindsay and E. F. Nexsen were elected deacons.

The following trustees were elected: John C. Paul, C. E. Bond, R. V. Cadmus and F. B. Martin.

THE DARLINGTON INQUEST.

Evidence Is Being Taken In Secret Night and Day.

DARLINGTON, S. C., April 5.—The inquest was in session all last night. The coroner's jury called for Capt. Gaillard, under military guard, gave their testimony during the night and then returned to Columbia. The inquest is entirely secret, heavily guarded by troops. There is no disturbance, and up acently the inquest will proceed without disorder. The inquest is expected to continue two or three days.

Dr. V. H. Payne of New York, a guest at the Cleveland hotel, shot and killed Henry Green in the hotel. Green had gone before General Richardson, commander-in-chief of the state volunteers, and made affidavit that he had seen Dr. Payne committing an act of indecency, which is under guard of soldiers, on last Sunday with his pockets filled with bottles of whisky.

Dr. Payne met him in the hotel corridor and spoke to him in regard to the statement which Green had made. Hard words were passed on both sides, Green giving Dr. Payne the lie and making demonstrations toward him, and Payne pulled his pistol and shot him through the heart. Dr. Payne was arrested.

CHARLESTON, April 5.—The municipal authorities here have very little to say concerning Governor Tillman's proclamation announcing his intention to take charge of the police forces of all the cities and towns in the state.

The proclamation created something of a sensation, but was not unexpected in official circles. It is considered scarcely likely that Governor Tillman's proclamation assuming control of municipal police will in any way affect the present status of the police department of this city. Under the judicious direction of the mayor and superintendent of police the state constables have been fully protected and rendered every necessary assistance in making their raids on the blind tigers here whenever the department has been notified of their intention.

COXEY'S MEN KEPT CLOSE.

The Pittsburg Police Allowed Them but Little Freedom.

PITTSBURG, April 5.—The commonweal formed in line and made an attempt to march to Pittsburg, where a large meeting was to be held on the Monongahela wharf. The Pittsburg and Allegheny police authorities put their men on this move, and the veterans were compelled to return to their barracks. Notwithstanding the absence of the army the meeting was held as then arranged. An immense crowd had gathered, the lowest estimates placing the number between 10,000 and 20,000 people. Coxey and Browne made their customary speeches, varying little from former efforts.

About eight the commonwealers as a body were prevented from carrying out their intention of attending the Palace theatre, where during the evening Coxey was booked for a speech from one of the boxes. As the army was about to move on the theater Chief of Police Murphy confronted them with a large force of police and forbade them leaving the exposition grounds. Carl Browne made a vigorous protest, but realizing that he was under the ban he ordered his men to return to their quarters.

The severe discipline exercised by the police toward the Coxeyites is accounted for in a measure by the fact that during the previous night Judge Braden's house was robbed, the plunderers securing $50 in cash and other valuables, and a number of other smaller houses were ransacked.

The police attribute these depredations to Coxey's army or its followers and will allow them no more freedom than is necessary.

The commonweal left Alleghany this morning, accompanied by the Pittsburg and Alleghany police escort and under the control of the police departments of both cities. The army will encamp at Homestead to-night and at McKeesport to-morrow night.

It Was Too Much.

A Cass avenue man has a thirteen-year-old boy, who hasn't had wings for the past ten or a dozen years, his father says, and the unanimous opinion of the neighbors is with the father. The other day he approached his wife.

"Say," he said, "will you get me a bicycle?"

"Yes, and be glad to, if you'll be a good boy," was the prompt response.

The youngster seemed to be overcome by the paternal generosity, and was silent for a moment, but that wasn't it.

"Then, pop," he said, "but I guess bicycles come too high for a boy like me."—Detroit Free Press.

NINE MEN KILLED

Bloody Rioting In the Pennsylvania Coke Regions.

THOUSANDS OF ARMED HUNS.

Strikers Attack the Frick Company's Works at Connellsville.

Twice the Rioters Were Beaten Back by the Armed Deputies Before They Sentered.—Chief Engineer Paddock Barbarously Murdered by the Mob.—Hungarian Women Beat a Man to Death.—National Guard Is Called For.—Another Summons Said Planned For Today.—Many Strikers Arrested.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 5.—It would take columns to tell in detail the exciting events of the third day of the big coke strike now on in the Connellsville region. At least nine lives have been sacrificed during the past 18 hours. Unless the strong arm of the military interferes the dead will be mounted by scores instead of tens. Such excitement was never known in this region, and people everywhere are exercised and apprehensive of greater dangers.

The climax was reached when a body of strikers numbering several hundred marched into the Davidson works of the H. C. Frick Coke company at Connellsville, Fayette county, where men were working. The strikers had been there in the morning to get the men out, but no one was with them in the afternoon when they returned deputies had been placed to receive them.

When the strikers approached, they were ordered to stop. They refused on and tried to get at the men in the ovens. The deputies fired.

The strikers returned the fire and charged, driving the deputies and men from the plant.

Chief Engineer Paddock's Murder.

Chief Engineer Paddock of the Frick company ran up in the flight of the works. The strikers followed and shot him in the back of the head. They beat him and crushed his head with stones and threw his body through a window to the ovens, 40 feet below. They then attempted to fire the tipple, but left when they saw the deputies returning with a large force from Connellsville.

Hearing of Paddock's murder, hundreds volunteered to avenge his death. The pursuing party, in command of County Detective Frank Campbell, overtook the strikers half a mile from Davidson and opened fire on them. The strikers fired in return, but no one was hurt.

Three strikers fell. One was killed instantly, shot through the body, and two others were wounded.

Another of the strikers who got the start of the main body was shot by a deputy at Broad Ford, a mile distant. He was also killed instantly, the ball penetrating his neck.

Eleven strikers were captured where the fighting took place, and the pursuing party kept up the chase until Davison, a point seven miles distant, was reached, where 53 more of the strikers were captured. All the efforts of the deputies and more level headed citizens were needed to prevent the lynching of the 11, who were taken back to Connellsville.

The line of march was then had their way, and a special train arrived here with six of those who were in the mob that killed Paddock. A great crowd greeted their arrival, and amid cries of "Lynch them!" the prisoners were hurried up a back street to jail. A large body of the strikers were grouped on the street and made a rush to rescue the prisoners, but were held back by the big crowd and the deputies.

At the jail Hugh Frick, assistant chief engineer of the Frick company, identified five of the prisoners as among those who killed Paddock. Thirty more of the strikers were then taken to the jail, and the deputies will return to bring them to jail.

Other Fatal Encounters.

Paddock was highly esteemed and was widely known. His murder occurred in the sight of his home. All the officials of the district organization of strikers will be arrested for complicity in the Paddock murder and inciting the riot and murder. Every effort will be made to hunt down the guilty ones.

At the Mayfield plant of the McClure company two men were fatally shot during the day. The strikers charged the men at work in the morning, but were driven off by the deputies after a striker was shot through the body. In the afternoon they returned and were again driven off. There was much firing, and a deputy was fatally wounded.

At a riot at the Painter works the woman beat a workman fatally. Sheriff Whitelin has called on Governor Pattison to order out the national guard. The sheriff and his deputies are helpless. Unless the national guard is in the region soon there will be more bloodshed. The strikers have planned a mammoth raid from one end of the region to the other for to-day, and nothing but the military, and plenty of them, can prevent loss of life and destruction of property.

BRECKINRIDGE THROUGH

His Evidence Finished After a Hard Day on the Stand.

JUDGE WILSON AS THE INQUISITOR.

Line by Line Mrs. Blackburn's Damaging Evidence Was Held Up to the Colonel. Dared Not Deny It Flatly—Judge Bradley Scores the Spectators.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The inquisition at the hands of Judge Jere Wilson regarding the testimony of Mrs. Governor Black is now world in the talk of the city but for some remarks from Judge Bradley which enlivened the close of the day's proceedings and have obscured all other passing features of the trial in their interest. He scored the spectators in unmeasured terms. This lecture from the court was followed by an early adjournment because the cross examination of the colonel, who had occupied the center of the stage since last Thursday, was finished, and his attorneys wanted a council of war before proceeding.

It had been a hard day for the colonel because Judge Wilson spent most of it in a detailed comparison of the testimony of Mrs. Blackburn and the defendant, compelling him to reconcile or explain their differences. To spectators it looked at times as though the attorney was heading things toward a Kentucky tragedy, such as Mrs. Blackburn intimated would have obviated the necessity for her appearance in the witness stand had her husband been living. He seemed to be seeking from the defendant a statement that Mrs. Black knew and lied with the truth, but the questions and answers furnished one of the finest exhibitions of hair splitting on record.

Colonel Breckinridge averred that Mrs. Blackburn's description of nearly every one of the material occurrences when their paths were crossed were wrong, but gainful but his denials by the statement that she had confused times and places had put constructions not intended upon his utterances; had omitted things he had said by Madeline Pollard, but inserted a saying clause that she had no doubt honestly endeavored to give her recollection of events.

The Colonel's Denials.

"I deny that that occurred in that way and in that connection," was his answer when Mr. Wilson pinned him down to a direct statement regarding his story to Mrs. Blackburn that, being a man of honor, he had been obliged to propose marriage to Miss Pollard on discovering her feelings toward him.

"Now, Mrs. Blackburn says that she told you that an unusually high sense of honor in that connection. Do you deny that?" Mr. Wilson persisted.

"I deny that I have any recollection of it having transpired in that way."

Colonel Breckinridge's version of the conversations between himself and Mrs. Blackburn, including that in Europe, differed radically from that lady's, as did his memory of what she had said about being obliged to withdraw her protection from Miss Pollard unless they were more discreet in their conduct. "That did not happen in that form and in that connection," he said, and his answer was substantially the same regarding his (Breckinridge's) requests that Mrs. Blackburn should go to New York with the plaintiff until the case was settled.

"I was urging her, so far as I could with out exciting her suspicion, to get the young woman out of town. I endeavored to leave the impression on her mind that the affair was engaged. If I may use such a word, I was honestly endeavoring to carry out the contract with Miss Pollard as I received her, and I do not blame Mrs. Blackburn for feeling a little acutely."

"Do you deny that?" Mr. Wilson demanded, recalling the flat denial in Mrs. Blackburn's testimony regarding his description of the interest he felt in Miss Pollard and of the standing of her family.

"I have no recollection of that, and my recollection is that it happened in a different way," was the final answer, and later the witness said: "Mrs. Blackburn puts her own construction on my words in commenting on this part of her testimony."

Reading to him the testimony of Mrs. Blackburn to the effect that he had never paid the slightest attention to Mrs. Wing, but to have it repeated that he was engaged to her and to famil iarize his family with the idea of his marriage and when congress adjourned he was going home to make arrangements for his marriage, Mr. Wilson asked for the witness' recollection on that point.

"Part of that was never said by me according to my recollection, and part of it was not said by me at all," was the answer. "Congress had already adjourned, so that shows that Mrs. Blackburn confuses these conversations, although she honestly endeavors to relate them."

"Do you deny that you told Mrs. Blackburn you were not to marry Mrs. Wing?"

Differed With Mrs. Blackburn.

"I differ substantially from what I evidently said that. Mrs. Blackburn gets the different conversations commingled. I can not remember myself the exact conversations she refers to, but I do not."

The colonel was sure that Mrs. Blackburn had not told him that she had told Miss Pollard that if his intentions to Mrs. Wing were as she had represented he was a villain. He said: "I am sure Mrs. Blackburn did not use such an offensive word as that in connection with me. Mrs. Blackburn was a lady I have known for years, and as a hostess she would not have used such a thing."

When it was proper for a lady to call a man a villain in her own parlor if to circumstances warranted was a question, often, Colonel Breckinridge said, which he did not care to discuss.

Mr. Wilson endeavored to pin down the colonel to a denial of the statement that its had told Mrs. Blackburn that he had no love for any other woman than Miss Pollard and finally secured the answer, "I am sure that no such conversation occurred."

"You do not remember it?" said Mr. Wilson.

"Well, I will say that I do not recollect that such a conversation happened."

Regarding the letters which Miss Pollard had asked him to name the day, called him "Willie," and he had stroked her hand affectionately and had said, "No demonstrations before Mrs. Blackburn," he said: "Such a scene did happen, and it was a superb piece of acting."

"Was I interrupted Mr Wilson. "On your part or Miss Pollard's?"

"On her part and possibly a little on mine.

"You were both playing a part?"

"My part was ended. That was an act not down on the bills. I thought she was going too far and was angry. I rose and said, 'My engagements are such that I cannot say when I will marry the young woman.' I did not say that I would come back and name the day."

Mrs. Blackburn had said that he ended the scene with the last statement. "Mrs. Blackburn's memory and mine do not agree on that," he said when asked if he remembered that on a subsequent visit, when Miss Pollard had again pressed him to name the day, Mrs. Blackburn had said that Colonel Breckinridge had already promised to name to her the day, and that was sufficient.

When Mr. Wilson asked why the colonel had not said all these things on direct examination, the colonel was proceeding to say that the jury had heard all he said, and that he had endeavored to give the substance of them, whereupon Mr. Wilson broke in that he did not want a speech, and the defendant's counsel interposed he should be allowed to make his statement.

The Interview With Major Moore.

The examination was carried on from Mrs. Blackburn to the first interview with Major Moore, the Washington editor of police. The statement of the major that Miss Pollard said that the colonel should marry her at once, and he named the 31st of May," the colonel said, happened in a different way from the major's account, adding:

"I said, 'Yes, I will marry you the last day of this month if God don't interpose.'"

"Did God interpose?" Mr. Wilson inquired.

"If God did interpose," responded Colonel Breckinridge, raising his right arm, "I think it time from the bottom of my heart for having gotten me out of such a possibility." [Laughter and reproof from the bailiffs.]

"Do you say that Major Moore stated what did not occur on that occasion?"

"On the contrary, his recollection of the substance of what I said is practically identical with mine."

"You did promise to marry her on the 31st of the month?"

"Oh, it was not a promise., I was in an excited frame of mind. I just waved her off saying, 'I will marry you at the end of the month if God does not interpose,' and went right on talking."

Colonel Breckinridge gave the impression of a man deeply worried when he returned to the witness box after the noon recess. The pallor of his face had given away to a deep flush, and he took advantage of a momentary wait while the lawyers were fumbling over their papers to sink back into the chair for a rest.

His attention was first called by Mr. Wilson to the second interview in the office of Major Moore on May 17, when he had engaged lunch with Miss Pollard across Major Moore's hand and promised that after Miss Pollard's child had been born in New York he would marry her. That was the substance of the happening, the colonel explained, although it was by no means all that had occurred, nor were the words quoted accurately.

The plaintiff was earnest, was nervous and at times hysterical during the conversation. There was nothing then said about the shooting out of his life because he had agreed to take care of her until her child should be born and for an indefinite time thereafter, and to also take care of the child. It was intended to relieve Major Moore's mind.

"Was it the understanding that you were not to be married?" Mr Wilson asked, "and that you were to relieve his mind of his suspicions against her?"

"Not that exactly, but Major Moore was a gentleman in possession of certain information against her character, and she wanted me to relieve his mind of that impression and give him the belief that she was a person I would marry."

"But what was the necessity for representing at that time an engagement of marriage?"

"Because she affixed that condition to her promise to go away the next morning."

Her Threat to Commit Suicide.

"Did you not hire a cab and drive to the express office to get the package of clothes she had sent to Lexington?"

"I think not. I may have gone some time to the office to send a box for her or to get one she had sent. I don't remember it, but if so I did not know it had any connection with her suicide."

In this connection he said: "This was by no means the first time she had spoken of suicide. She had talked of that perhaps a dozen or 20 times before."

"Do you now recollect or that she spoke to you regarding your relations with colored women?" Judge Wilson continued.

"I never heard of that until she spoke of it on the stand."

"Did you on any occasion visit the plaintiff at Mary McLendies' on Second street in this city?"

"I did not. I never did," with great emphasis.

"In January, February or March, 1887?"

"I never did. I know of no time that I called on plaintiff and Dr. Parsons have located as the house where the child was born. I know there is a woman of that name on the list, but I called upon to warn that I was there. I know that certain persons have been sent there to train her as to what she will testify. I never was there, to train."

"You say certain persons have been there to train her. Has any one been there on your behalf?"

"I sent my son there because I had heard she was to be called to testify and that she had been seen by another witness in this same neighborhood." Objected.

"Did you communicate with the plaintiff there by advertisements in The Evening Star, and did you arrange to have type written letters prepared for your communication with her with some person in this city?"

The colonel was strenuous in his denials. In such a conversation as was made by him or for him to his knowledge, and such advertisements, if published, would not convey any information to his mind.

Judge Wilson Hooked.

With this reply Judge Wilson quietly returned the defendant to his own attorneys for redirect examination. Mr. Butterworth drew out the statement that he had never been on terms with Mrs. Pollard for any other woman than Miss Pollard and finally secured the answer, "I am sure that no such conversation occurred."

"You do not remember it?" said Mr. Wilson.

"Well, I will say that I do not recollect that such a conversation happened."

Regarding the letters which Miss Pollard had asked him to name the day, called him "Willie," and he had stroked her hand affectionately and had said, "No demonstrations before Mrs. Blackburn," he said: "Such a scene did happen, and it was a superb piece of acting."

"Was I interrupted Mr Wilson. "On your part or Miss Pollard's?"

"On her part and possibly a little on mine.

"You were both playing a part?"

"My part was ended. That was an act not down on the bills. I thought she was going too far and was angry. I rose and said, 'My engagements are such that I cannot say when I will marry the young woman.' I did not say that I would come back and name the day."

Mrs. Blackburn had said that he ended the scene with the last statement. "Mrs. Blackburn's memory and mine do not agree on that," he said when asked if he remembered that on a subsequent visit, when Miss Pollard had again pressed him to name the day, Mrs. Blackburn had said that Colonel Breckinridge had already promised to name to her the day, and that was sufficient.

When Mr. Wilson asked why the colonel had not said all these things on direct examination, the colonel was proceeding to say that the jury had heard all he said, and that he had endeavored to give the substance of them, whereupon Mr. Wilson broke in that he did not want a speech, and the defendant's counsel interposed he should be allowed to make his statement.

The Interview With Major Moore.

The examination was carried on from Mrs. Blackburn to the first interview with Major Moore, the Washington editor of police. The statement of the major that Miss Pollard said that the colonel should marry her at once, and he named the 31st of May," the colonel said, happened in a different way from the major's account, adding:

"I said, 'Yes, I will marry you the last day of this month if God don't interpose.'"

"Did God interpose?" Mr. Wilson inquired.

"If God did interpose," responded Colonel Breckinridge, raising his right arm, "I think it time from the bottom of my heart for having gotten me out of such a possibility." [Laughter and reproof from the bailiffs.]

"Do you say that Major Moore stated what did not occur on that occasion?"

"On the contrary, his recollection of the substance of what I said is practically identical with mine."

"You did promise to marry her on the 31st of the month?"

"Oh, it was not a promise., I was in an excited frame of mind. I just waved her off saying, 'I will marry you at the end of the month if God does not interpose,' and went right on talking."

Colonel Breckinridge gave the impression of a man deeply worried when he returned to the witness box after the noon recess. The pallor of his face had given away to a deep flush, and he took advantage of a momentary wait while the lawyers were fumbling over their papers to sink back into the chair for a rest.

His attention was first called by Mr. Wilson to the second interview in the office of Major Moore on May 17, when he had engaged lunch with Miss Pollard across Major Moore's hand and promised that after Miss Pollard's child had been born in New York he would marry her. That was the substance of the happening, the colonel explained, although it was by no means all that had occurred, nor were the words quoted accurately.

The plaintiff was earnest, was nervous and at times hysterical during the conversation. There was nothing then said about the shooting out of his life because he had agreed to take care of her until her child should be born and for an indefinite time thereafter, and to also take care of the child. It was intended to relieve Major Moore's mind.

"Was it the understanding that you were not to be married?" Mr Wilson asked, "and that you were to relieve his mind of his suspicions against her?"

"Not that exactly, but Major Moore was a gentleman in possession of certain information against her character, and she wanted me to relieve his mind of that impression and give him the belief that she was a person I would marry."

"But what was the necessity for representing at that time an engagement of marriage?"

"Because she affixed that condition to her promise to go away the next morning."

Her Threat to Commit Suicide.

"Did you not hire a cab and drive to the express office to get the package of clothes she had sent to Lexington?"

"I think not. I may have gone some time to the office to send a box for her or to get one she had sent. I don't remember it, but if so I did not know it had any connection with her suicide."

In this connection he said: "This was by no means the first time she had spoken of suicide. She had talked of that perhaps a dozen or 20 times before."

"Do you now recollect or that she spoke to you regarding your relations with colored women?" Judge Wilson continued.

"I never heard of that until she spoke of it on the stand."

"Did you on any occasion visit the plaintiff at Mary McLendies' on Second street in this city?"

"I did not. I never did," with great emphasis.

"In January, February or March, 1887?"

"I never did. I know of no time that I called on plaintiff and Dr. Parsons have located as the house where the child was born. I know there is a woman of that name on the list, but I called upon to warn that I was there. I know that certain persons have been sent there to train her as to what she will testify. REED CAUGHT NAPPING.

Vote Taken on the Bland Bill Without Debate.

COULD NOT PASS IT OVER THE VETO.

Silver Men Lacked Seventy-four Votes of the Necessary Two-thirds.—An Exciting Scene In the House.—Senator Allison Finishes His Speech Against the Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—All programmes that had been mapped out for the Bland seigniorage bill when it was to be called up on the motion to pass it over the president's veto were suddenly smashed, and the vote was had upon the motion amid a scene of such inextricable confusion as has seldom been witnessed on the floor of the house of representatives. The strong hand of the speaker carried the bill to a vote without a single word of debate upon it. The Republicans had expected to hear the welkin ring with the discordant cries of the Democrats and had arranged to force enough debate to give all those on the silver side who were antagonistic to the administration an opportunity to voice their discontent.

But by one of those parliamentary blunders which occasionally occur they missed their opportunity, and intrenched behind the wall of a parliamentary technicality the speaker braved their thunders and refused to entertain any of the dilatory motions that it was all a mistake. The bill came up after the house had unseated Hilborn from the First California district and had seated English, the contestant, in his place.

Republicans Were Off Guard.

There was at the time great confusion on the floor. Members on both sides were conferring in groups. The speaker with uplifted gavel surveyed the house for a moment. Mr. Bland expressed a willingness to have the vote taken immediately. Mr. Reed, Mr. Burrows, Mr. Dingley and Mr. Hopkins were in hurried consultation to the left of the speaker's rostrum. As it subsequently appeared, they agreed that Mr. Dingley should make the opening argument for his side.

Meantime no one addressed the chair, and the speaker stated the question to be on the motion to pass the bill, the president's objection to the contrary notwithstanding.

"All those in favor will answer aye," he continued: "contrary, contrary sign."

Again he paused a last, and addressing him, he added, "I is a bang of the gavel. "The clerk will call the roll."

"Mr. Allen," began the clerk.

There was a gasp of astonishment on the Republican side as they awakened to realize that the roll call had begun. The Democrats who were anxious to have debate suppressed were overjoyed. Amid a great uproar a dozen Republicans jumped to their feet and clamored for recognition. They saw the opportunity for exposing to the public gaze the dissensions in the camp of the enemy slipping from them. Bland made a hard fight. The confusion was so great that the clerk got no further than the first name. "Too late, too late!" shouted the Democrats as Mr. Reed tried to make himself heard above the uproar. At last by dint of hard pounding a semblance of quiet was restored.

A storm of protest came from the Republican side of the house as speaker after speaker sought to interrupt the roll call, and amid intense excitement the roll was taken up. The silver men were 74 short of the necessary two-thirds to pass the bill over the veto. On March 1, when the bill passed the house, the vote stood 189 to 122. Yesterday it stood 188 to 114. Two Republicans and twenty Democrats, 38 Republicans and 6 Populists voted to carry the bill over the veto and 58 Republicans and 56 Democrats against it.

In the Senate.

In the morning hour the senate passed after a wary controversy the senate bill for the appointment of a receiver for the District of Columbia, with an amendment proposed by Senator Allen prohibiting pool selling on race tracks.

The senate also considered briefly a resolution offered by Senator Peffer for the repeal of all laws which give the secretary of the treasury authority to issue bonds, and Senator Peffer spoke in support of it.

Then the tariff bill was laid before the senate, and Mr. Allison concluded his speech in favor of the bill. His remarks were directed in particular against the substitution of the ad valorem for the specific system and against the income tax. He also opposed the increase on distilled liquor and the tax on incomes, while at the same time he delivered a strong attack against the policy of "following in the footsteps of England and of opening our markets to that country," thus giving her the gold with which to wage her battle against the world and himself.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Mills took the floor in defense of the ad valorem system of taxation and contended that the bill did not meet with his entire approval, but it was always necessary to compromise in legislation.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SOME PLAIN TALK ON THE SUBJECT OF CORSETS AND THEIR EFFECTS.

Young Women In Paris — Women Seen Through London Spectacles — An 1830 Ball Dress — The Women of the Future.

A Delicious Way to Cook Shad.

The human body is the most beautiful of created objects. It is strong, delicate, supple and graceful. This applies pre-eminently to the female form, but while nature seems to be satisfied with the way God made the trees, flowers and animals she is not satisfied with the way he made her body, so she seeks to improve perfection.

She trusts God to shape and plan the universe, but not her body, for while he put a sufficient number of bones inside her body to hold it erect she forseeth must supplement them with a layer of bones outside to change and improve the outside of the figure. So we have that abomination known as the corset.

History tells us that as nations have grown wealthy and extravagant, the people giving themselves up to excesses of all kinds, the corset has been laced tight and even tighter as the climax of frivolity approached. The consumption of corsets in America, not including those imported, is said to be 60,000 yearly. What does this argue for the state of morals in our country? It is said that national dress keeps pace with national history. Both begin in simplicity and end in voluptuousness.

Tight lacing has been one of the high water marks of the self indulgent period. The body, when incased in stiff bones or tight lacing of any kind, is incapable of graceful motion, healthful exercise and ability to perform the work of life.

The "Venus of Milo," the acknowledged standard of beauty of form, has a waist below the girth of the modern belle, and the undulating lines and curves of the statue flow into each other, revealing great refinement of curvature and imperceptible gradation.

How different is the corset made form, with high, square shoulders, waist like an hourglass, less extremely prominent, an artificial and ungainly attire!

If your horses, cattle and dogs were subjected to the cruel treatment young women inflict upon themselves, the newspapers and the officers for the prevention of cruelty to animals would be on the tracks of the guilty parties. But why should women exhaust their vitality by injurious modes of dressing? "Oh, it's the fashion!" comes the reply.

But what is fashion that her laws should be obeyed in defiance of all the laws of beauty, grace, true grace and health? It she declares that woman shall wear a hump at her back, wide crinoline skirts trailing in the dust or a waist like a wasp, there seems to be no resistance. The plates and fashion papers of the day represent only caricatures of the female form.

The same remark applies to women in more buildings than the drink curse among men. Both sins seek to extenuate themselves on the plea of moderation. A woman can no more be married to fashion than a drunkard with a glass of whisky.

More harm to the health and vitality of our race is done by corsets than by rum. This article of clothing violates the laws of good health. It weakens the body, enfeebles the mind and dwarfs the soul.—Mrs. O. H. Hutchings.

Young Women In Paris.

Over 20 years ago the Home For British and American Young Women was founded in Paris. Miss Leigh, whose name is known throughout the world in connection with the institution, has been the wife of a Canadian archbishop for some years, but has never had her interest in nor stopped her labors in behalf of the work.

Since its establishment the home has befriended over 7,000 young women, taking care of them in a city where unprotected young women are in much danger and providing many of them with employment through its office. The home is open to all respectable English speaking girls in every class of life without distinction of creed. The work is branched as follows: 1. A home for daily and unemployed governesses. 2. For young women apprenticed in shops. 3. For ladies' maids, nurses, etc., seeking situations. 4. Sanitarium. 5. A free registry for those who are seeking situations.

The home is situated at 77 Avenue Wagram in Paris, and a letter sent to this address announcing a young woman's arrival by a certain train will insure her being met at the railroad station and taken to the home. Hundreds are Governesses and Artistes' stations, 19 Rue de Sèvres, Washington House, formerly 153 Faubourg St. Honoré Young Women's Christian Association and Home, 28 Faubourg St. Honoré.

Most of the young women aided by the society are workers in some trade, artists, professional and naval officers, or of professional English speaking men. This fact should encourage any gentlewoman of slender means in Paris to organize any vocation to enjoy these addresses for possible reference and refuge in a day of need.—Bert Patterson.

Women Seen Through London Spectacles.

Women cling to the idea that they are all born infants and needs, and that men hold a monopoly of evil, from which it is their duty to shield them. Men are taught from their earliest years that they are to protect women. They do not choose to believe that really bad women can exist in any numbers of life. They only recognize the fact of a few rare specimens, often of all sex belonging to quite another sphere, upon which it is easy and best to turn one's back entirely.

It is time that this enclosure of the good sex and purity of women should cease. Women are women, and not so very much above human nature. If girls like them en masse, for the very degraded are just as much theirs as the very noblest and best. The question at issue is just as important as the question of morals, only somehow the world has to be taught at that first lately, and the greatness of both can only be attained by a wider and freer knowledge of their faults and not unselfish for evil.

Therefore it is time for everybody come to study it a real, and not from a comel. We plead for justice for all sexes and believe without prejudice to condemn a vice and be kind to the sinner above all, to have patience with a fellow creature, how reprehensible, in fact how sinful they overstep the proper bounds of speech which we ourselves may consider correct and not controlled. Such a thing as a real severity be the noblest virtue, but such a deplorable sin, for it is to show much graver deficiency.

But this sinners can't sit still and defend themselves, while the proclaimers of a new thing are hard at work to prove a good cause with all the power of defense available against the dreadful curse of outraged hyperserviveness.—London Queen.

An 1830 Ball Dress.

Here is a dress, worn by a girl's first ball dress, to me from a letter written in 1838 by a young woman of 15 to her maiden aunt: "I went to the ball and enjoyed myself very much. Perhaps you would like to know how I was dressed. I had on a bishop's lawn dress at 50 cents a yard (it was a very nice piece), and got Miss Almira Bradley to make it. She made it Grecian bodice and leg of mutton sleeves plaited down. She said that ruffled sleeves were entirely out of fashion. I had a piece of pink gauze ribbon tied in a bow at the bottom of the plaits, and a piece of the same tied around my waist and tied in a bow at the point.

"I had a pink Donna D'Ala scarf, with a tassel at each end fastened on the left shoulder with a very small pin quet. I had a new pair of white kid and a new pair of French slippers and a lace underneath handkerchief trimmed with a narrow lace edging. I wore a thin flannel petticoat and a thick one, with another cambric muslin one over that. I had on a pair of worsted stockings and silk ones over them. I had my hair curled at the barbers. I had to sit still two hours to have it done. I went to the ball at 7 o'clock and got home at 2. Miss Sarah Hildreth was the belle. She looked very beautiful. She had on a satin dress, with a black blond over that, and a black muslin tilla. Her blond dress was so long that it dragged seven or eight inches."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Future Woman.

Mrs. Theodore Sutro, the well known society woman of New York, has the following to say about the "woman of the future:"

"She will not wear trousers. On the contrary, her garments will be prettier, and she herself will be, if that is possible, more feminine than she is now. She will be what she is now. Why? Because she will realize by being all these, that her power will be increased in a corresponding ratio. Women's rights are not wanted. Emancipation in a man's sense with the bona fide woman, the woman without little personal vestiges, is something which is fatal to her appearance, who wears big boots and would like to wear high hats and to do other incursions on his wardrobe.

"Of course all this will come now, and looking at things from his point of vision can be kindest for not wanting to meliorate in favor of any one so unattractive to him as the person. They will be more marriages for love in her day than there are now, for the reason that natural selection will replace conventions. She will be qualified for work, and not forcing it will not marry for support. She will be able to provide for herself, and when she marries it will be because she loves the man and finds him congenial and sympathetic to her and will not retard her mental and moral development. She will be freer and freer from the silly fetters of speech which we ourselves may consider correct and not controlled. Such a thing as a real severity be the noblest virtue, but such a deplorable sin, for it is to show much graver deficiency.

But this sinners can't sit still and defend themselves, while the proclaimers of a new thing are hard at work to prove a good cause with all the power of defense available against the dreadful curse of outraged hyperserviveness.—London Queen.

How to Cook Shad.

Take a large dripping pan and stand it on the stove. Put into it a heaping tablespoonful of well clarified beef fat or suet. Let it melt till the bottom of the pan is well greased, then lay in the inside of the fish stickings. Now take a five pound shad, split for broiling, dry it well on a coarse linen cloth, sprinkle it generously with salt and lay it, flesh side down, in the skin side of the fish on top. Stand in a hot oven and let it cook until the skin seems to be puffed up in blisters and is just a nice brown and crisp, when you may know it is done.

Have a platter larger than the fish quite hot. Grease it on the inside with the fat side of the dripping pan and quickly turn the cook from the pan onto the platter, just as you would turn an omelet from a pan. It will come out nice and whole, the roe and the entire fish being as perfectly done and quite as delicious as planked shad. Serve with pieces of lemon and garnish with parsley.

The advantage of cooking a shad this way is that all the bones, and flavor are retained and no odor of cooking fish spread through the house. Try it and you will never cook a shad any other way. It is delicious.—Good Housekeeping.

Women Miners In India.

The women, in spite of their marriages at 14 and 15 years of age, were strong and well set up and in manner perfectly gentle and modest. Each was dressed exactly as she would have been for any other occupation, though her cloth and sari were perhaps a little dirtier than they would have been in a less grimy calling, and each wore a mass of bangles and anklets, some of them very interesting specimens of barbaric silver and bell metal work. Save for a little pause of curiosity to look at me and my clothes, they worked steadily on, pushing forward the heavy trollies, which, when laden, weigh about eight hundredweight.

One or two had requests to make of the foreman as he went by—in general these being trifling things, such as taking half a day's leave or some little point about the land they held—but the general quiet, good order, discipline and respect were all points that impressed me much. I saw few questions which I put to them about their hours, which are only eight a day, their food and amusements, which seemed largely to center in the bazaar of Sasaram, were straightforwardly and frankly answered.—Bengal Cor. London Graphic.

Floor Coverings.

In using denim for floor coverings lay it over padded paper, which will make it look much heavier than it really is and will also deaden the noise that results from too flimsy a floor covering. I have this material used with excellent effect in a really handsome dining room as a background for a very large eastern rug that was laid in the center of the room. If one does not choose to put a floor in order by staining or painting a border, use the denim, matting or in grain or brussels filling in plain colors. If one large rug is used it is quite unnecessary to cover the entire floor with any of these materials, except it be the matting. One advantage in using denim is that it can go into the washtub and renew its cleanliness and what beauty it has as often as one chooses.—New York News.

For the Bath.

A delightful preparation for the bath and one that is good for softening and whitening the skin is made from oatmeal, pure castile soap and Italian orris root, powdered. The soap is powdered and mixed with the oatmeal and orris root and put in small bags of cheesecloth to be used in place of a sponge. Enough of the bags to last a long time may be made from five pounds of meal, half a pound of soap and a pound of orris root. Make as many bags as you can from a yard of cheesecloth, cutting them about four or five inches square and stitching them tightly. Fill the bags loosely and sew up the other end. Dip in warm water when you use one.—Chicago News.

For Those In Mourning.

Visits of condolence are made a week after the funeral. A card is left, and no effort is made to see those who are in sorrow. A number of women have asked me if it is proper to send invitations to friends who are in mourning. Of course one would not go to the end of the month had passed, but after that time it is quite proper, and certainly our friends who have had sorrow come to them do not like to think that they are forgotten. It is no longer considered in good taste to have "R. S. V. P." in the corner, but, instead are the English words, "The favor of an answer is requested." This is, how ever, never written on a dinner invitation, for that presupposes a reply.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Discontent Dispellers.

How much woman's interest in everything about her, which is a part of her latter day religion, improves her physically is a frequently commented upon fact. The fresh complexioned, keen eyed woman of 45, alert and interested, is a common sight today, but only a short time ago that age was looked upon as almost if not quite hopeless. Says George MacDonald in one of his novels: "I believe that many women go into consumption just from discontent—the righteous discontent of a soul which was meant to sit at the Father's table and cannot content itself with the husks that the swine eat."—New York Times.

At Home Days.

If women would only realize how disappointing it is to go a long distance to call upon one and then find the one they desire to see just gone out. There would be more at home days, aside some particular day each week upon which they would be at home, have that day understood by all their friends and allow all things make it a point to stay in upon the appointed day. And a call seems so much more homelike and cheering with a cup of chocolate, tissue of time to be had or one light cake are its readiness. Try it and see if you and your friends are not both better satisfied with each other.—New York Commercial.

The Blissful Onion.

There can be no more sinful dinner without the aid of the luck of onion. Every soup, every meat course and every sauce and dressing, whether for fish, flesh or salad, needs the flavor of the onion. This blessing is considered, but the professional cook keeps the secret. Two cups of onion juice in any cream soup instantly kills the starchy, pastry, nursery taste. One cup will do for a sauce or cream gravy out of the common. Rub the bowl with a leek or a slice of onion and the tamest salad, red or green, has sap.—New York Telegram.

In Behalf of Baby.

Do not discourage the baby from using his muscles because of rumpling his clothes or even taking the shine off your furniture. His little limbs are given to him to develop and perhaps to you, too, when, mothers, you are old and have to depend on them—than the polished legs of your table. Little girls have to play an all important part in their life, especially when they come to work for another baby life. So do let the girls have some muscular development as well as the boys.—Detroit Free Press.

Cries of Sick Children.

In the crying of sick children there are many peculiarities which when differentiated lead to correct conclusions about their ailments. In pneumonia and capillary bronchitis, according to a medical paper, the cry is moderate and peevish and muffled, as if the door were shut between child and lover. The cry of croup is hoarse, brassy and metallic, with a crowing inspiration. That of cerebral disease, particularly hydrocephaline, is short, sharp, shrill and solitary.—London Tit-Bits.

Chat Helps Digestion.

Serious, gloomy and cross people should eat alone. A man or a woman with a scowling face and a savage temper will give every child and sensitive adult about the table indigestion. Deep thinking or preoccupation of mind retards assimilation and digestion. As a rule, meal times are dull times. Foods are eaten too rapidly, taken into the stomach only partially masticated and often forced down with drafts of ice cold water, which weakens the action of the gastric juices.

Palating the Lily.

The mother who decks her debutante daughter with diamonds is more ambitious for show than sensible. Youth is a girl's highest jewel and needs no sparkling setting other than the flash of clear eyes, the gleam of white teeth, the sweet, sunny smile, with a soul behind it. Painting the lily defaces it, and diamonds on a young girl seem to suggest that her charms need enhancing because she is not herself satisfying.—New York News.

A Thought For Parents.

Each one of us is bound to make the life circle in which he lives broad and happier. Each of us is bound to see that out of that small circle the widest good may flow. Each of us may have fixed in his mind the thought that out of a single household may flow influences that shall stimulate the whole commonwealth and the whole civilized world.—Dean Stanley.

A Hair Receiver.

A hair receiver may be made of white linen, embroidered in some slight design, lined with wash silk and folded to a triangular shape, then overhanded together. If the maker chooses it can be pinched for eyelet holes and laced together with a narrow silk cord. This enables the quite necessary taking apart and frequent washing.—Exchange.

In selection of a petticoat everything depends upon the lining. A girl with hips wants a yoke to her skirt, and the slender damsel will look well built if all her skirts are cut wide and fastened with a drawstring.

An exquisite window drapery is of flue silk damask in flower-de-luce designs in shades of gold, with the under curtain of rich silk in iridescent colorings of mauve and nile green caught up in horizontal folds.

After ironing linen place it near the fire or in the sun until perfectly dry, as the garments will be much stiffer than if left to dry slowly. This hint is especially useful with collars, cuffs and petticoats.

A mother should keep herself in perfect sympathy and close touch with her young daughters, being indeed their nearest friend, and until married no one should be allowed to come between them.

Fine lace, if it is torn, should be mended before sent to be cleaned. If you do not know the lace stitch, simply darn with very fine thread in meshes about the same as those in the lace.

Ouida once said, "Cut your gowns out of your dog blanket, save your best clothes, if you will, but mind who cuts them."

The best face powder with which to beautify a woman is the kiss of her little baby.

BROWN RE-ELECTED.

Republican Landslide Occurs at the Rhode Island Elections.

PROVIDENCE, April 5.—The election in the state resulted in a sweeping Republican victory. The Democratic plurality of 185 of last year is changed into a Republican majority of more than 3,000 and a plurality of 4,500. The legislature, that was claimed by both parties last year, is overwhelmingly Republican, and there will be scarcely a Democrat in either branch.

The Democratic city of Woonsocket has gone Republican for the first time in a state election in many years. The entire GOVERNOR BROWN AND HIS OPPONENT.

Woonsocket assembly delegation is Republican. The little town of Tiverton, always considered a Democratic stronghold, is also Republican.

The Hon. Franklin P. Owen, the present speaker of the Democratic house of representatives, has always been returned from the town of Scituate whenever he cared to run. He was caught in the flood, however, and lost. The result of the election insures the choice of ex-Governor Peabody Wetmore as the successor of Senator Dixon in the United States senate.

The Democrats expected to lose the legislature, but were fairly confident of electing their candidate for governor. They did not, however, expect a landslide.

Almost complete returns give Brown, 28,091; Baker, 18,890. The Republicans are celebrating the victory all over the state. The vote of the city of Providence was: Baker, Democrat, 9,308; Brown, Republican, 10,430.

AMHERST GLEE CLUB.

CONCERT AND DANCE AT THE CASINO LAST NIGHT.

A Very Fine Audience Greets the Students, and Heartily Encores Their Efforts.—The Affair Winds Up With a Gay Dance.

A fine audience was present last evening at the Casino, to listen to the Amherst College Musical Association Concert.

The Casino was most beautifully decorated with the Amherst colors,—purple and white. The electric lights all covered with tiny Japanese parasols, and the chandeliers with large ones. The over-head lights were strung with screaming electric lights splendidly covered with Japanese lanterns. All combined gave the hall a very quaint and artistic appearance.

With the exception of the first number, everything was heartily encored at least once, and mostly twice, and several times the students were thrice recalled. The glees were very well selected, and did much credit to the leader, Mr. Burnham. The "Soothing Lullaby" was quite a surprise, as it began and ended with "Mrs. Winslow's, 25 cents per bottle." All the encores were new and amusing.

The solo parts were well rendered, particularly Mr. Loud's and Mr. Porter's.

The Banjo Club, however, carried off the honors of the evening and received most hearty applause. Their playing was in perfect unison, "The March of the Cuirassiers" being especially taking.

The Mandolin Club, also, deserves much praise. The concert was brought to a close by the singing of the Amherst medley.

Altogether the concert was one of the most pleasing which has been given this year.

The following was the programme:

PART I.

Glees.

Song to Alma Mater ..... Prof. J. F. Genug.
The Banjo Club.
Old Amherst ..... Amherst.
Columbia March ..... Benning.
Glees.

Solo by Mr. McAllister.
The Mandolin Club.
Paul Jones' Waltz ..... Lorraine.
Glees.
Sutegor Vhar ..... Horace.
Solomon Levi ..... Sinclair.
Rosalie Rosalie ..... Gilbert.
Solo by Mr. Burnham.

PART II.

The Banjo Club.
Love and Beauty Waltz ..... Lorraine.
Glees.
Selected.
The Tar's Farewell ..... Adams.
Serenade ..... Yourtelhof.
Solo by Mr. Loudd.
Glees.
Soothing Lullaby ..... Harrington.
A foot ball tablet ..... Fleet'et.
Solo by Mr. Porter.
The Banjo Club.
March of the Janissaries ..... Benning.
Amherst Medley ..... Hyde '98.

The patronesses were: Mrs. J. Edgar Cutler, Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Jemmine, Mrs. G. Wharton Edwards, Mrs. William E. Lowe, Mrs. Frank O. Herring, Mrs. Joseph P. Mason, Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Charles Starr Munn, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Samuel McCutchen, Mrs. Orville W. Waring, Mrs. Walter E. Stewart, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Alex. Gilbert, Mrs. Daniel F. Stockton, Mrs. George W. VanBuskerk.

Quite a large number remained after the concert to reward the players and singers with a merry dance under their own colors.

RIGHT ROYALLY RECEIVED.

Jersey City's Catholic Club Welcomes a Plainfield Delegation.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum bowling team was given a royal reception at Newby City, last night, by the Catholic Club of that place. The latter club is one of the most prominent in Jersey City and has as fine a building as any similar organization in the State. The bowling match was followed by an elaborate collation and it was with reluctance that the Plainfielders took leave of such genial hosts. The score was as follows:

Cornell Student Taylor Set Free.

Papers ordering the release of F. L. Taylor, the Cornell sophomore imprisoned for contempt of court in refusing to testify before the Grant Jury about the chlorine case, were served on the Sheriff yesterday, and Taylor was at once released. The case will be argued at the General Term which convenes April 24, and if overruled an appeal will be taken to the Court of Appeals. In case the action of Judge Forbes is sustained Taylor will be remanded to jail to serve out the remaining fifteen days of his term. Taylor is very indignant at the Cornell faculty for dropping his name from the rolls, but says he will endeavor to be reinstated in the university.

APRON SALE AND TEA.

IN THE PARISH BUILDING OF THE CHURCH OF THE HEAVENLY REST.

Under the Auspices of the Women's Friendly Society.—The Proceeds to Go Toward Liquidating the Debt on the Parish Building.

The ladies of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Evons, are determined to clear the new parish building of the debt which now encumbers it, and for that purpose an apron sale and tea was held yesterday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Women's Friendly Society. The parish building where the sale was held, was profusely decorated, and the glow of the many colored lights, made the decorations all the more beautiful.

Pink was the color of the evening, and walls were graced with handsome pink streamers, while festoons of pretty smelling flowers adorned the prettily arranged tables which were laden with all sorts of fancy goods and delicacies as would tempt the visitors with becoming a purchaser.

At one end of the room was a large table upon a mounted platform where all might partake of a generous repast at a nominal cost, while pretty girls fluttered in and out of the throng in their efforts to induce the many bystanders into a purchase.

The officers of the Women's Friendly Society of the church are: Mrs. Lewis, President; Mrs. Chas. Graves, Treasurer; Mrs. Vogiard, Secretary; and the ladies in charge of the sale are Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Graves.

The young ladies who have charge of the tables are:

Fancy Table—Miss Lillie King and Miss Wenzel.

Candy Table—Miss Lillie Miller and Miss Phillips.

Chocolate Table—Miss Price and Miss Atkinson.

Lemonade—Miss Mason and Miss Florence Miller.

Refreshments—Mrs. Vogiard, Mrs. Millington, Mrs. Ross and Mrs. James.

Ice Cream Table—Misses Mary and Katie Graves and Mrs. Yonger.

The sale will be continued this afternoon and evening.

Mr. Clifford Beaty of West Front street has returned from a visit with his brother at New Market.

Special Policeman Edward Shimer has become connected with the Metropolitan Insurance Company, as agent.

Mrs. Edward Smith of Bound Brook, who has been the guest of Mrs. William Kitchen of Somerset street for several days past, returned home yesterday.

Miss Galley, one of the teachers of the North Plainfield public school, is unable to attend to her duties on account of sickness. She is at her home in Raritan, at present.

The funeral of Diedrich Brenner, who died at his home on Somerset street, Wednesday, will take place Sunday morning, at 11.30 o'clock, at St. Peter's German Lutheran church, on Grove street.

Court Pride's Ball.

The third annual ball of Court Pride of New Jersey, No. 8294, A. O. F. of A., in Sauziger and Turner Hall last night proved a success and was well attended. Those who had charge of the affair were:

General Director—Henry Windham.

Floor Managers—Thos. Boohan, Thos. Marley.

Assistant Floor Managers—Sam. J. Flynn, J. Sullivan, Thos. Roddy.

Reception Committee—L. J. Donahue, M. Gill.

Invitation Committee—D. Crowley, J. Goff, N. Force, S. Lunger.

—The handsome silver cup, the trophy won by the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city, as champions of the Diocesan Bowling League, has been received by the club.

—A granite headstone was knocked over against a monument in front of Mr. Townsend's marble works, on Somerset street, by some one last night, and a large piece chipped out of each corner of it.

OUR Y. M. C. A. AHEAD.

IT CONDUCTS THE LARGEST EDUCATION WORK.

Leading Every Other Association in the State.—Something for Plainfielders to Feel Justly Proud of.

The reports presented at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A., held last evening, showed a total average of 54 in attendance at the educational classes. An average weekly attendance of 55 at the Young Men's meeting and an average attendance of thirteen at the seven sessions of the Bible Training Class. Twenty-five dollars were forwarded from the extension fund which is subscribed by members of the Association to carry on the work among young men in this and other lands.

The Boys' Department had four meeting. Reports were also received about the new building, finances, outpost and physical work.

From a comparison of reports from the Associations of the State received in pamphlet form during the past few days it is seen that the Plainfield Association conducts the largest educational work of any Association in the State. Our Association reports more men on committees —and only two Associations report a larger average weekly attendance upon their Sunday afternoon classes.

Two report more situations secured.

Only three visiting Associations had a larger delegation than Plainfield at the late State Convention at Montclair.

BREVITIES.

—Borough Council meeting to-night.

—Senate Lodge, Knights of Honor, held a social last night.

—Harry Hilton has moved from Scotch Plains to a Long Island hotel.

—Grand Army Posts are making arrangements for the observance of Memorial Day.

—Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will hold its regular meeting next Tuesday evening.

—Alert Rose Company is now quartered in the Fire Department Headquarters on East Second street.

—There can be little harm to fruit buds so long as the dandelion has failed to appear, says an old-timer.

—The average number of passengers in and out of Jersey City is said to be on an average of 30,000 daily.

—"I am no prize fighter," said one of our laundry men, "but if any one gives me cuffs, I'll proceed to do'em up."

—The wickeder a man is the harder he will try to persuade himself that his conduct is prompted by a good motive.

—Pre-occupation of mind is a great safeguard from temptation. Fill a bushel basket corn and you will keep out the chaff.

—Hilfpot & Ayers commence work on their contract for building roads in Union county this week.—Somerset Messenger.

—This morning a team of horses ran up East Fourth street from Rheaume's lumber yard, where they they had been left standing.

—The music at the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday at 4.15 p. m. will consist of whistling and vocal solos and singing by the male choir.

—Beginning April 9th, jewellers Van Eps, Collier and Doane will close their stores at eight p. m., for the Spring and Summer months.

—Mantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., will meet to-night, when it is probable that Chief of Records Newcorn will have the Past Sachems' regalias ready to present to those entitled to receive them.

—New Brunswick is rejoicing in the prospect of a competing telephone company that promises to reduce the cost very materially. It is said the new line will extend to Bound Brook, Plainfield and Princeton.

—Mr. F. M. Hulett has rented the store adjoining his own and recently occupied by him and lately vacated by Williams Bros., grocers. An archway has been cut between the two stores and he will use both.

—Mr Chas. M. Raybert's horse got out of the stable, on North avenue, and ran out to Front street this morning. It was finally stopped and headed for home. As they attempted to put the animal's halter on it again ran out of the stable and around through Fourth street.

—If it is a fact that some of the Music Hall draperies are being converted into stockings on the floor of the dress making rooms it is a disgrace to the management. The draperies were put there to help the acoustic propensities, and they should not be removed to fit up the "green room."

"Olde Folkes' Concert."

The "olde folkes' concert" at the Mt. Olive Baptist church last night was attended by an audience that completely filled the church.

The programme was rendered without the slightest flaw and repeated applause showed the favor with which the audience greeted it, and Mrs. Thomas was praised by all for her undaunted efforts to make the affair a success. The proceeds will be used in the extension of the church, the congregation having grown so rapidly as to crowd the present edifice on Sundays.

After the programme, ice cream and cake were served in the basement.

It is proposed to repeat the entertainment some time the latter part of this month.

BISHOP VINCENT ON THE RELATIONS OF MINISTERS TO WOMEN.

Any Preacher Seen on the Street Before 1 o'clock is to Be Suspected.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The services of the Methodist Episcopal Conferences, being held at Calvary Church, Harlem, are opened each morning by a short service at which there is a reading of Scriptures by Bishop Vincent, the President.

As Bishop Vincent reads he also expounds, and the exposition takes the form of a mingling of fatherly advice and up-to-date comment on events of interest. Among the advice given to his ministerial brethren this morning was the following:

"The relation of a minister of the Gospel to the women of his congregation is one of the most delicate in human life. The line is so fine between the delicate esthetic interest in a woman with whom perhaps you may be brought into personal contact and the sensuous feeling which leads to too great an appreciation of a woman on the other sex, and often to sin, from which there must be a bitter awakening.

"Any preacher seen on the street at one o. m. is to be suspected."

MILKMAN ROLL'S ALARM CLOCK.

It Frightened the Baby, and Now Mrs. Roll is Suing for a Divorce.

It seems that a noisy alarm clock was the primary cause of the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Laura Roll of Springfield, against her husband, William. He had an alarm clock at the head of the bed, and when it cut loose in the morning it woke not only William and his wife, but the baby as well, and Mrs. Roll did not like it because it frightened the baby.

The case was on trial yesterday before Vice-Chancellor Green in Newark. Mr. Roll's father is Undertaker William S. Smith of Springfield. He testified that his daughter and her husband were boarding in his house at $3.50 a week, and that when a child was born to them he wanted to raise the price of board, but they demurred, and as a consequence he had to keep not only the husband, wife and child, but a nurse as well, for $2.50 a week.

Mrs. Roll's chief complaint was that her husband had frequently stayed away all night and said he did not love her.

Roll said that he was locked out of the house at least twenty-five times when he went home at 10 o'clock at night, and that he had to sleep in a wagon in the stable. He said in court that he loved his wife. He did not love her all the time, but sometimes he would love her for a day or two. She was always kind to him, he said, and he was willing to live with her now.

A Nuisance Complained Of.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—As a subscriber to your valuable paper, and a citizen of the Borough of North Plainfield, I take the liberty to call the attention of the Street Commissioner to the deplorable condition of Grove street in the vicinity of Rockview avenue.

The street is constantly littered with old rags, papers, etc., which blow from "the dump" and find lodgement in the front yards, porches and every conceivable nook of the adjacent dwellings.

It is a disgrace to the borough that any such nuisance as "the dump" should be allowed to exist.

It is a nuisance which calls for the immediate attention of the commissioner.

LACE AS A TRIMMING.

It Is Seen on Gowns, Capes, Hats, Bonnets and Almost Everywhere.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Lace holds a prominent place in summer fashions. It trims gowns and capes. It figures largely in hats and bonnets and is made up into all sorts of pretty accessories that may be worn with any costume. Wide and narrow applied bands of guipure are still a favorite mode of decoration, while black net bands are used bearing a heavy pattern worked in silk or jet sequins. The flat application of lace shows the heavy varieties to great advantage.

Sometimes the entire back of the bodice is covered with guipure, the front having figure lace pieces or being otherwise adorned with the same lace. This is a very effective style of trimming and gives an appearance of elaboration at the cost of little trouble. Not only are black, white and ecru laces worn, but various shades of decided yellow, ranging from straw color to old gold. A waist of plaid silk was seen, having a cream ground crossed with bands of light violet and tan and trimmed with bretelles of pale yellow lace of a light quality, and the combination was most pleasing. Separate lace yokes are sold, having a deep flounce of lace around the lower edge.

The embroideries shown this year are also very pretty. There are many new patterns in entirely white goods, both wide and narrow, while colored dress chambrays are shown deeply embroidered along one edge, which has a hemstitched border. The scarlet ones, worked in black or white, are especially attractive. Narrower embroidery for trimming white muslin appears in white, having an inlaid pattern in colored cambric, turquoise, pink, yellow, red or violet, and the edge is usually embroidered in the same color. Very wash all over embroidery is also in vogue for the yokes of thin gowns, and edged trimming may be obtained to match it.

With the increased popularity of lace has come a demand for shaped pieces—not only corselets and figaro jackets, but pelerines, collars, yokes and epaulets. A sketch is given of the corsage of a reception gown made of cross green striped silk. It is a plain round bodice, fastening invisibly under the left arm. A sort of pointed pelerine of guipure, divided back and front, covers the shoulders, while wide lace epaulets fall over the balloon sleeves, which extend only to the elbow. JUDIC CHOLLET.

NUPTIALS.

Dunham—Quick.

The Unionist-Gazette has the following account of the wedding of Mr. Oscar M. Dunham of this city to Mrs. Quick of that place:

A pretty home wedding took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of Hugh Gaston, on Ross street, at 4:30 o'clock.

The contracting parties were Mrs. Katharine Gaston Quick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gaston, and Oscar Wilson Dunham of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. G. Reed, assisted by Rev. Cornelius Schenck of Plainfield. The ushers were John G. and William G. Gaston, brothers of the bride.

The bride was attired in a very becoming gown of fawn colored silk entrain, trimmed with point de Gene lace.

The wedding presents were numerous and beautiful. After the bountiful collation had been served, Mr. and Mrs. Dunham left by carriage to Bound Brook to take the 6:45 train for Washington, D. C. About fifty guests were present.

Building and Loan Association League.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Building and Loan Association League of New Jersey was held at Trenton yesterday. Twelve of the twenty-one members of the committee were present, beside the president and secretary of the League. Mr. S. R. Struthers of this city, was among those present. The principal business was the consideration of the exemption clause in the income tax bill. The original bill, as passed by the House of Representatives, exempted from tax all associations which made loans only in the State in which they were organized. The Senate Committee added a clause which practically nullified this exemption. A strong committee was appointed to use all possible influence to have the exemption clause changed again so that no tax should lie on the earnings and savings of these workingmen's saving banks.

Suicide from Grief.

James H. Williams, of Elizabeth, aged 66 years, died yesterday morning from the effect of an overdose of morphine. His daughter Gussie, who was a teacher in Public School No. 1, died after a brief illness on Tuesday night, and it is now believed that he became deranged from grief and committed suicide. He was a veteran of the Sixth New Jersey Volunteers.

Willow Grove Wants a Post Office.

Efforts are being made to establish a post office at Willow Grove. The residents of that place have long complained of being compelled to travel two miles to Westfield for their mail.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION.

The State Convention to be Held at Bridgeton.

The annual convention of the New Jersey Baptist Young People's Union will be held at Bridgeton, on Wednesday and Thursday, May 16 and 17, and arrangements are now busily going on for the programme of very great interest.

Among the features now promised are these: Addresses on religious liberty, "Trophy of the Ages," by Dr. H. M. King of Providence, R. I.; addresses by Rev. L. L. Henson of Baltimore, Chairman of the Board of Managers of the B. Y. P. U. A.; addresses on "Temperance Work and Methods," by Miss Mary Campbell, of New Brunswick, secretary of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union; "Question Box," by the Rev. J. Judson Iverson, of Bridgeton, president of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union; addresses by "Uncle Boston" Smith, of Minneapolis, on Christian Work; address and conferences by A. M. Brickell, recording secretary of the B. Y. P. U. A.; Rev. G. H. Russell, D. D., Rev. C. A. Cook, Bloomfield; H. J. Rosaids, Rutherford, president North Association, B. Y. P. U. A.; Rev. F. A. Smith, Somerville, and others with whom correspondence will be opened. Entertainment will be furnished free, and preparations for coming should be at once begun.

Jack Benford Should be Looked After.

Much sympathy is expressed for "Jack" Benford, a boy sixteen years of age, because of his affliction. His mind is unbalanced, so a physician says, and the boy's parents are not in circumstances that permit of him receiving proper treatment.

The neighbors say they would'nt be surprised to see him killed by a train at any time, for he wanders along the railroad and once or twice has attempted to catch hold of the steps of a passing passenger train.

Scores Made by Plainfielders.

Almost every State in the Union had a representative in the shoot at Dexter Park, Brooklyn, yesterday, and in the crowd back of the score were Men who have gained celebrity in the world of sport, among them being Mr. T. K. Keller of this city. There were 50 entries in the event of the day, among them being Charles Smith and Neaf Apgar of this city. Their scores were as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	K. L.

DARLINGTON EVACUATED.

Tillman Orders Troops to Go Home—Yesterday at the Convention.

DARLINGTON, S. C., April 6.—The dispensary war is over—that is to say, peace has been entirely restored, and the convention which has been in session here for two days is now free to adjourn. Governor Tillman has already begun to reorganize the state militia. Only 18 companies responded to his call to go to Darlington, and he intimates that there will be a series of court martials. Officers will be appointed to-day to collect all the state arms and accouterments there and bring them to the state armory here. Similar action will probably be taken all over the state.

CALDWELL'S DECISION.

A Great Victory For Organized Labor and the Union Pacific Employees.

OMAHA, April 6.—Organized labor won a great victory when in the United States circuit court Judge Henry Caldwell handed down his decision in the Union Pacific wage schedule contest. In the legal opinion this declaration of the court stands out most prominently:

A corporation ill organized capital; it is capital consisting of money and property. Organized labor is organized capital. It is capital consisting of brains and muscle. What it is lawful for the stockholders and officers of a corporation to associate and confer together for the purpose of fixing the wages to be paid employees or of the dividing of some other means of making their investments profitable. It is equally lawful for organized labor to associate, consult and confer with a view to maintain or increase wages. Both act from the promptings of enlightened self-interest, and the action of both is lawful when no illegal or criminal means are used or threatened.

The courtroom was thronged with railroad men at the hour set for the rendering of the decision. There were few preliminaries before Judge Caldwell began the reading. As the opinion proceeded the faces of the Union Pacific officials brightened, while those of the employes grew serious as they saw the drift of the decision and began to realize what a remarkable victory was in store for them. At the conclusion the silence became oppressive, and until Marshal White declared a recess not a movement was made on the part of the spectators to break the spell. It was the dramatic ending of what has been a most dramatic case.

COXEY IS STILL MOVING.

Now Has an Army of Over Four Hundred Men.

"GREAT UNKNOWN" IS IDENTIFIED.

He Is a First Class Drill Master From the West—Homestead Welcomed the Commonweal With Open Arms and Provisions—Steadily on to Washington.

PITTSBURG, April 6.—Coxey's army, having rested for two days, started out briskly for Washington from here. The procession passed over the main thoroughfares in Pittsburg, which were thronged with thousands of spectators. At Homestead on account of 500 men the commonweal was headed by the Homestead steel works band they paraded the principal streets on the way to the citizens grounds, where dinner was served and camp pitched. Later a meeting was held, which was attended by several thousand people. Previous to the arrival of the army Burgess McWhinney swore in 20 deputies, who will serve until the "soldiers" leave town.

Sixty-six members of the army were arrested on the streets of Allegheny, and after a hearing 35 were discharged and 31 sent to the workhouse for 30 and 90 days.

THE "GREAT UNKNOWN."

The workhouse now has 60 members of the commonweal to care for during the next month.

The greatest blow the army could suffer came in the shape of an order from all the Chicago, Chicago and New York papers for the correspondents to leave the army and go to Uniontown. The crowds that assembled along the line to cheer the army had been drawn out by the truthful description of it given by these men, and nearly all the provisions contributed have come because of the reports, which were absolutely true, that the men had nothing to eat. Now that the advertising agents have been withdrawn the army will be in a bad plight when it reaches the sparsely settled mountainous districts.

Dr. Kirtland, Jasper Johnston and Weary Ides no longer belong to the commonweal. They have been ignominously disbanded and their names scratched off the roll Coxey said, "We will have no dime museum freaks in his aggregation."

At Homestead the reception of the commonweal was very cordial. A large number of recruits enrolled, swelling the army to 400, and 100 more are expected to join. The Sunday camp will be at Brownsville.

Pyle's Army Must Move.

ST. LOUIS, April 6.—Colonel Pyle and his industrial army will leave East St. Louis today and go into camp on the National turnpike near Collinsville. This move is made by order of Chief of Police Walsh of East St. Louis, who is determined that after today the city shall be rid of the army. Considerable grumbling is heard among the men, who have grown discouraged as a result of the privations undergone since arriving here.

Two hundred members of the army were offered work by the water board at laying mains. They were offered $1.50 a day for one year, but refused to accept, saying they were not there to dig mud and lay pipe, but were going on to Washington to force legislation in their behalf.

Industrial Army Coming.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 6.—The regiment of the industrial army which arrived on Tuesday from Los Angeles is stranded here. The effort of the leaders to secure transportation was denied, and they have been unable to get out.

The men are being provided with shelter and an abundance of food by the citizens, which may account in a measure for their reluctance to walk. Threats to secure transportation by force were common in the ranks, and considerable anxiety was felt by the people of Oakland regarding the outcome. Arrangements were at last made with the railroad by which the army will leave Oakland on a train of box cars provided by the road.

Who the "Great Unknown" Is.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., April 6.—The "Unknown" commander of the Coxey forces is Major William Packer Clarke of the Second battalion, Colorado national guard. Major Clarke is considered the best drill master in the state. He was formerly connected with The Daily Star of this city. He left on a visit to Pennsylvania about three weeks ago. He is a grandson of ex-Governor William Packer of Pennsylvania.

One of the Bankers Dead.

PLYMOUTH, N. H., April 6.—Frank Hanson, one of the noted Hanson brothers, actors and comedians, died here. He was 35 years old and had been sick with consumption for a long time.

A Barrel Fell on Him.

BOSTON, April 6.—Frank B. Bellnett, a state representative, was struck on the head by a barrel which fell from the roof of a house. He is suffering from stunning shock of the brain.

Representative Wilson's Condition.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 6.—Congressman Wilson continues to improve and has gained several pounds in flesh, but the cough has not left him.

Will Be the Fighting Element.

DENVER, April 6.—Governor Waite says he will not permit the Jackson-Corbett fight to come off in this state.

Ice In the St. Lawrence Moving.

MONTREAL, April 6.—The ice in the St. Lawrence river is slowly moving down.

Rheumatism

Intense Suffering Ended

By the Blood Purifying Qualities of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Rheumatism is now generally admitted to be a disease of the blood, originating in acidity of the vital fluid. Hood's Sarsaparilla being a radical blood purifier, neutralizes the acid, restores the blood to the vitality of health and thus cures the disease. The following is from Mr. N. C. Godfrey, a well-known carriage and wagon manufacturer of Clayton, N. J.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen: One year ago I was stricken down with rheumatism, and for three summer months it seemed to me there was to be the whole system, and I am sure in my case Hood's Sarsaparilla acted directly upon the blood, as it gave me relief in so soon. I have made it my business to explain to my friends suffering with rheumatism what Hood's Sarsaparilla did for me, and I would highly recommend it to all." N. C. GODFREY, Clayton, New Jersey.

MISS POLLARD AGAIN.

She Gives the Lawyers Some More Trouble.

POINTS AGAINST BRECKINRIDGE.

Rankin Rossell's Testimony Torn to Tatters by Mrs. McClellan Brown—Some of the Plaintiff's Cousins Construct an Alibi. What the Colored Cook Saw.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Rebutting evidence for Madeline Pollard was the order of the day after the case for the defense had been closed. There was first some contradictory testimony regarding the birth, death and name of Miss Pollard's second child, the plaintiff herself being called as a witness for her opponents to relate how it had been sent to a foundling asylum. Of course the slender woman kept the opposing attorneys on the anxious bench for fear she would again get away from them and help her own case, as she had done under cross-examination.

The rebuttal brought forth several people from Kentucky—three of them cousins of Miss Pollard—to prove an alibi for her in reply to the depositions of Mrs. Miller (nee Shingleberry), Hiram Kaufman and John Crockett, the witnesses for the defense who had attempted to blacken her character. Mrs. Miller had sworn that in 1877 and 1878 she (Madeline) was living with an aunt five miles from Lexington and acting improperly with men in the neighborhood.

John Brandt was among them, but according to her witnesses she lived in Pittsburg from 1876 to 1880 with an aunt. Mrs. McClellan Brown, wife of the former principal of the Lexington institute, identified flatly the testimony of Rankin Rossell and incidentally exhibited a photograph of Miss Pollard taken in 1877, the year in which she first met the colonel. The photograph corroborated the testimony that Miss Pollard was at that time a schoolgirl, her dress coming to the top of her shoes.

Mrs. McClellan Brown.

Mrs. Brown said: "The rules for receiving company of gentlemen in the city were that visits could be made Friday evenings and they stay in the parlors, library and office, all opening one into another. The teachers received their company at the same time and place. This had been the rule since the founding of the institution. When I went there, I found folding doors between the rooms, which I had taken down, and I put up portieres, which were hung close to the walls and were never drawn. Often there were none there, for the portieres were put up for special occasions and taken down."

"Did you ever see Rankin Rossell at the college?" Mr. Carlisle asked.

"Is it possible for a young man to hold a young lady in his lap there for an hour and a half in the evening?"

The answer of Mrs. Brown was lost in a hurried exclamation from Mr. Shelby which approached the intensity of a yell. He argued that conditions could be described, but not the presence of the willingness or possibilities arising from those conditions, and in this he was sustained.

"Young ladies were not permitted to see young men alone at all and never to see them but once a week," said the witness. "We had two young ladies that year who were engaged, but they were not allowed to receive calls but once a week. The young ladies received their visitors in public in the public rooms."

"Do you remember the last visit of Mr. Rossell?" was asked.

Mrs. Brown did not know that of her knowledge, but remembered the last time she had seen Rossell.

"I last saw him on the occasion of the literary contest, when Miss Pollard won the great victory for her society."

When asked to tell what manner of man Mr. Rhodes was, she said impressively, as though delivering an oration: "A country gentleman of honest face, of green habit and manner, with the use of strong oaths and language and reverential toward ladies. He was an admirer of Miss Pollard's intellectual attainments, anxious for her best development."

"Bright, but not deep," was the description she gave on cross examination of Miss Pollard's mind.

"You would hardly expect a schoolgirl of that age to be deep. The victory she won was notable," the witness continued, "because of her youth. Her opponent was much older."

Judging her youth from her repeated tardiness," interjected Colonel Philip Thompson.

"No, from her appearance," declared Mrs. Brown.

The Typewriter Again.

Judge Bradley took a hand in questioning, eliciting the information that on Friday night there usually had been room to do Sunday's work during the period of the school.

Mrs. Louise Lowell was recalled, and over the objections of the defense she was permitted to tell the substance of the letter to Miss Louise. The letter, she said:

There was much difficulty in getting the statement in proper form. Mrs. Lowell began:

"I thought from the beginning of 'My Dear Sister Louise' that he was habituated by a storm of objections, being informed that Lee Hornish's wife was not named.

Starting on a new tack, she said: "Naturally from the tenor of the letter"—to begin waynlaid by the protests of the defense.

Finally, when pinned down to telling the substance of the letter, she related: "He spoke of the great disgrace I brought on their name. I told her that I, for one, did not think, and the expression that he never knew two of the same family of such different ages to love each other so well. That was the tenor of the letter, as well as of other similar ones which followed it. In one he spoke highly of some manuscript which had been sent him for criticism and told how grand he thought it was, the person whom the letter was addressed. He told how impatient he was to get away from the duties of the school, both from her and described in glowing terms the happiness they would have when he returned. He cautioned her in one not to leave her letters around, as some one might look in her drawers. Once he called her 'little sister,' or 'dear Miss Spiritz,' and told her to stand before the looking glass and give herself a scrubbing face."

"He told her that letters mailed at a certain time reached him in the morning; those mailed at another time reached him at night, and requested her to mail them so that they would arrive in the morning. In one letter he expressed doubt whether his letters reached her, and requested her if she received that one to send him a postal card asking for a civil service report and sign it 'Mary Smith.'"

During her cross examination Mrs. Lowell said that she had told friends in a general way that Congressman Breckinridge had her write love letters for him, but could not imagine how Miss Pollard's attorneys had got hold of the facts. The letters had been handed to her written in Colonel Breckinridge's hand. She had copied them and returned to him the manuscript and copy.

The Colored Cook's Testimony.

Another witness was the colored cook from the house on H street, where Miss Pollard had lived with Mrs. Thomas, who declared that Colonel Breckinridge had said to her last April that he wanted her to come and cook for them when he and Miss Pollard began housekeeping.

"Did Colonel Breckinridge call often?" Mr. Butterworth inquired.

"Often, very often."

"How often?"

"Sometimes every day; sometimes twice a day; sometimes three times a day."

Miss Pollard had come to the house in February. Mary fixed the day of the lunch because the people had sailed for Europe that day, and Mrs. Thomas had the pleasure of taking the house for six months.

"Mr. Breckinridge called to see Miss Pollard two or three times a day exceptin when he was out of the city. He was absent from the city for three times, and them times tel'ms would come."

Colonel Breckinridge had said they were going to housekeeping in the early fall; and knew Miss Pollard and put his arms around her when he called during the month of May (after his marriage to Mrs. Wing secret) in New York. She thought he had been away one week about the 16th or 20th of March and again about the last of April. Miss Pollard had been with Mrs. Thomas since the 1st of February, when she was compelled to take a boarder. Mary said on redirect examination that "her people" was the family of a well known gentleman, and Mrs. Thomas did not keep a boarding house, but merely took the house during their absence in Europe.

Mrs. Minear, who had appeared before, as the landlady of the Lafayette square house, was recalled and was asked if Miss Pollard had been there during the month of August, 1892, and the question was objected to. Mr. Carlisle explained that Colonel Breckinridge had testified that Miss Pollard was not in town that month, but Mr. Shelby returned that he had only testified that he did not see her in that month.

The question being admitted, Mrs. Minear asserted that from her books she found that Miss Pollard was there on the 31st day of August, staying for a few days. This was the time when, Miss Pollard asserts, Colonel Breckinridge met her at the depot on her arrival in the city and proposed to marry her formally for the first time. Here the court adjourned.

STRIKERS DISBANDING.

The Backbone of the Great Coke Strike About Broken.

JAILS FILLED UP WITH ROTTERS.

The Determined Stand Taken by the Sheriffs and Citizens Discouraged the Lawless Hosts, and They Lost Their Courage—One Hundred Arrests Have Been Made.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 6.—Unless there is a radical change in the situation in the Pennsylvania coke region the strike of the miners and cokers is about broken. The authorities have taken a stand and are determined to put down the rioters at any cost now. This policy has thrown the lawbreakers into a state of demoralization. After the sheriff's posse concluded the engagement with the mob which murdered Chief Engineer Paddock and landed the leaders and over 100 strike men the county jail everything quieted down, and the reports from every point in the region show that the lawless horde has been generally subjugated.

Small outbreaks occurred at several places early in the morning, but as the day advanced the strikers lost courage, and the rebellion thus stamped out. Numerous raids at every working plant at daybreak commenced to diminish in size, and by the time half the route of each mob was covered the forces were almost completely disbanded.

Strikers Elect a New Leader.

Thus commenced the beginning of the end of what was intended to be a desperate strike of coal miners and coke workers in the history of the country. The strikers elected a new leader at a delegate meeting held at Scottdale last night. Martin Mackey, who takes the place of President I. H. Davis, who is now behind the bars here awaiting the charge of murder.

The strikers are still making threats of breaking into jail here and setting those imprisoned free. The report that Sheriff William had gone to Harrisburg and applied to Governor Pattison for troops to preserve the peace and protect the lives and property of the workmen who want to work and the coke operators who want to give them employment is untrue. Sheriff Wilhelm was on the point of calling on the state authorities for military aid when the mob killed Engineer Paddock and Davidson, but concluded not to do so after consulting with his attorney.

The turning point came after the battle between the posse and the mob at Broad Ford, and the sheriff found it unnecessary then to apply for military support.

The community was startled by a report that the dead bodies of eight Huns had been found in the woods near Dawson. This report has not yet been verified, and Coroner Jacobs says that the reports he has received from his deputies do not indicate the truth of the report.

Work at the coke plants was confined to the same number as were running on Wednesday. Very few attempts were made by the strikers to drive the workmen out. Additional re-enforcements were sent to Banning and Upton on the Lehigh Valley road broke while the engine was going 50 miles an hour. There were seven men on the engine. A. King of Manchester, engineer, was instantly killed. John M. Feeney of this village was badly cut and scalded and will die. Two other men, names unknown, who live in Catasauqua, were also severely injured.

CALM IN THE HOUSE.

The Urgency Deficiency Bill Passed—Pettigrew Says There Is No Defeat.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The house was like a calm after a storm. After the passage of minor bills and resolutions the consideration of appropriation bills was resumed. The urgent deficiency bill, carrying something over $1,000,000, was taken up and passed, with one important amendment providing for the continuation of the work of the census bureau until March 4, 1895, and providing for the publication in a condensed volume of 250 pages of an abstract of all the returns of the present census.

After the deficiency bill was disposed of the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill was resumed. Only one amendment was adopted—that setting aside $30,000 for the establishment of star routes of new postoffices. The main fight will come today on the amendment to abolish the 2cdollars subsidy for the fast ocean mail trains running between Springfield, Mass., via New York and Washington to Atlanta and New Orleans.

Representative Bland, the chairman of the committee on coinage, says that he expects to call a meeting of the committee this week for the consideration of the silver bills pending before it. He has not yet, however, consulted with his colleagues on the committee as to a time for a meeting, but thinks that one will probably be called for next Wednesday.

Speaking of the action of the house on the president's veto of the seigniorage bill, Mr. Bland said that he was pleased to have had the debate thereon continued all this week and run into next week. He certainly did not expect a vote on the bill before Saturday, and he had said to a fellow member that he could safely go out of the city until that time. He declared that there was no preconcerted action on the part of the silver men or any conspiracy or prearrangement for the prompt vote that was taken, as had been intimated in some quarters.

The senate pursued the even tenor of its way during the morning hour without a ripple of excitement to ruffle its surface. Among the bills passed was a resolution introduced by Senator George of Mississippi and referred to the judiciary committee, which provides for a 20 per-cent reduction in the salaries of the executive officers, in "view of the depressed financial condition of the country, the indebtedness of the people and the increased value of money."

The bill for the destruction of the weed known as the Russian thistle was considered in the morning hour, and after debate by Senator Mills in opposition and Senators Kyle, Allen and George in its support it went over without action.

Immediately after the expiration of the morning hour the senate went into executive session on motion of Senator Call of Florida.

The Senate.

The senate spent the entire three hours of the executive session in considering the nomination of H. W. Long to be register of the land office in Gainesville, Fla., which was at last rejected by a vote of 16 to 32.

Fatal Engine Accident.

ASHES ON THE SLIDE.

When Jim and Bill and I were boys a many years ago,
How glad we was to hail the coming of the snow!
Our sleds, fresh painted red and white, that seemed to respond right briskly to our elastic tread!

As we dragged them up the slippery road that climbed the rugged hill
Where pretty Miss Thomas meetin' bones, so solemn like and still.

Ah, coasting in those days—those good old days—was fine indeed!
And that time, Bill, you have yer knew, were paragons of speed!
And if the hill got bare in spots, as hills will sometimes do, then
We'd haul on ice and snow to patch those bald spots up again!
But, oh, with what sad certainty our spirits would subside,
When Deacon Frisbee sprinkled ashes where we need to slide!

But Deacon Frisbee long ago went to his lasting rest,
His money well invested in farm mortgages out West,
Bill, Jim and I, no longer boys, have learned through years of strife
That here and there along the course wherein we hoped to glide
Some envious hand had sprinkled ashes just ahead of us,
And that malicious, envious hand is not the deacon's now,
Grim, ruthless Fate! that evil sprite none other than is Sorrow,
Strews ashes on our pleasure, peace and care come at thy beck and go,
The while we, with joy to-day, to-morrow within its woe!
And still I sigh like one who turned his face unto the wall and died
As must expect to get his share of ashes on his slide!

WEARING OUT SHOE LEATHER.

The Advantage of Wearing Leather in Proper Condition—Information Free.

"I have but one maxim for you," said a successful and wealthy merchant to a young man who went out of his employ to better himself, "and that is a pendulum," "and that is never to try to save your shoe leather, but always be economical of the cloth that forms the seat of your trousers."

The young man pondered this bit of advice a long time, but he thinks that he never will wear out the cloth of the seat because it is his profession to wear out shoe leather.

If he had waited for them to come to him probably they would never have come, but he has got the information with pantaloon material.—Youth's Companion.

Small Millie, anxious to help entertain company, ran to where she was sitting on her mamma, volunteered this piece of information, pointing to her still smaller brothers who came into the room: "These is my little buddies, and they's bof boys."

GOOD HEALTH

HOME NURSING.

What the Expectant Nurse Will Do When the Doctor Orders a Bath of Any Kind.

The attention demanded by an invalid will of necessity depend much upon his condition and the nature of the illness, but there is one point to be always observed, the patient must be kept clean and tidy. In regard to this care as well as the baths that are part of the treatment, The Housewife gives some practical directions as follows: The body should be regularly sponged and the hair combed as the patient can bear it. In very weak cases only part of the body may be sponged at a time, and in doing so care must be taken not to expose the patient unnecessarily to any cold or draft. In cases where perspiration is profuse, a little sanyte acid added to the water is wonderfully cooling and refreshing. The doctor in attendance may order a bath. A cold bath is from 33 to 60 degrees F.; a cool bath from 60 to 72; a temperate bath is from 75 to 85; a tepid bath is from 85 to 95; a warm bath is from 95 to 100; a hot bath is from 102 to 112.

Always use a bath thermometer in testing the temperature of the water, as the hand is an imperfect guide. After a cold bath see that the patient is well dried and rubbed till the skin glows and a feeling of warmth is experienced. In a warm bath the invalid is lowered up to the neck for about seven minutes, unless otherwise ordered. Too long immersion is apt to become passive. A warm blanket should be in readiness to be wrapped around the patient on leaving the bath, especially in the case of young children. Warm bathing is usually followed by a refreshing sleep.

A vapor or Turkish bath may be easily improvised when required. Place the patient on a cane bottomed chair and envelope him or her closely in blankets. Then place a spirit lamp or even a pail of boiling water under the chair, and the steam thus generated and confined by the blankets induces a perspiring condition. Ten to fifteen minutes should suffice, after which rub briskly and put to bed.

If a cold pack be ordered, procure three pieces of flannel, in breadth to reach from the patient's neck to the hips, in length sufficient to go round the body and overlap. Dip one piece of the flannel in cold water—the colder the better—and wrap it round the body next the skin. Over this place a dry piece of flannel and wrap in the blanket. Keep on for about half an hour and then remove, rub the skin briskly, and put on the third piece of flannel (previously well warmed). The sensation of a pack is very agreeable, and the patient enjoys the exercise of rubbing.

Hot water in which hot water is used, the blanket being wrung out and wrapped round the patient. He is then packed in the same four folds and allowed to lie quiet for half an hour; then rub him briskly and make him comfortable.

A Good Exercise For Girls.

Many parents think that if girls are taught to hold back the shoulders a graceful carriage will follow as a matter of course. This is a mistake, for centering the attention on the shoulders has a tendency to give them a stiff and awkward expression, whereas they should be left free to express all the human emotions, as they

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

TWO TAKING DOGS.

A Splendid Bulldog, Not to Flatter an Ha-Ha Canna, and a Very Interesting Poodle.

There is something quite pathetic about the bidedvotedness of a bulldog. The fervent looking of created things, be it, or his admiration for his master, is positively touching. With the chest of a prize ox, he has weak lungs, and usually dies early from consumption. The one whose portrait is here given is a splendid specimen of the race—a prize winner. His face, when he smiles at a visitor, is a nightmare. He is as the schoolboy said of his master—all jaw. And he has no nose to speak of, or small with—an excellent thing in a bulldog. In spite of his unprepossessing visage, it must be admitted that the bulldog is looking up among canine pets and may yet be the pampered darling of the boys and girls.

Here is an interesting poodle in Count Fosco, and for one of his race very handsome. Of course he is clever, can perform many wonderful tricks—poodles always can, but his special peculiarity is an extraordinary fondness for hiding in cabs. If he is out with his master or mistress for a walk, and after an hour or two they find he trots along until he catches sight of a cab rank, and then, selecting an empty one, he leaps into it as neatly as possible, and retiring himself in the darkest nooks ever his owner with a perfectly contented expression, inviting him or her by a short bark to take a place too.

The funny part is that no amount of persuasion will ever induce Count Fosco to leave the cab. He is fatigued and intends being driven home and fed.

Sometimes the donut takes an airing alone—in fact, he has been known to wander five or six miles from home, but his owners never feel any anxiety about him. They know he will come back at last—in a cab. His plan when alone is to jump into a cab when he is tired and sit in the vehicle in the most patient manner until the driver comes up and wants to know what the strange passenger wants.

Sometimes the cabmen try to turn him out, but every effort to dislodge the lazy creature has proved in vain, and at last it is discovered that Count Fosco beats his name and address upon the brass collar round his neck and the amused and puzzled driver mounts his seat and drives his old fare home.

This is certainly a curious fancy in a dog, and though one would dearly love to possess so knowing a creature as Count Fosco his cab fares might prove inconvenient.

A Tale of a Frog.

Five children went a-walking—
Tom, Jack, May, Maud and Lou—
Along a lane to where a brook
Where reeds and rushes grew.
Each one was gay and happy
And merry as a bird.
When in among the rushes
A strange, odd sound they heard.
They stared around in wonder,
But nothing could they see,
Only the rushes waving.

Said they: "What can it be?
It cannot be a donkey!
It cannot be a dog!"
When, all upon a sudden,
Out jumped a little frog.
As off they ran in terror,
All screaming, "What is that?"
Jack left his cap behind him,
And Tom his new straw hat.
How the little frog that day
Laughed to see them run away.

Adjectives and Verbs.

This is an amusing game. The chief player writes a letter, leaving out all adjectives and verbs. He then asks each member of the company in turn for an adjective or verb, which he writes in the blank spaces left for the parts of speech. When the letter is finished, he reads it aloud.

To Welcome the Budding Year.

April is in the maple, thrilling and near;
There's a flash of wings of the heaven's over there;

There's a veil of green on the nearer hills;
There's a burst of rapture in woodland rills;
There are notes in the air, floating in jest;
There's an arch of rain, spanning the west.
April is here!

Already close by our summer dwelling
The first bird warbles from field to forest
And softly whispers, "The spring is here."
—Bryant.

For the New Cotton Gowns.

The graceful floral designs suggestive of sunshine and summer pleasantness cannot fail to find favor. Them, too, a girl never looks better than in a cotton gown, and the patterns of the forthcoming season have been from the usual attractions to commend them.

Zephyrs are introduced under many new aspects. Some have crinkled crape stripes, the coloring delightful. They have powerful rivals in the cotton crapes and crepons.

The multicolored effects intermixed in the web lies are a la the oriental Indian, all plain grounds and the upstanding checks and stripes. Contrite with lines and checks the plain drill will be worn as the weather brightens.

MYSTERIOUS TIMBUKTU.

Interesting Facts Concerning the "Holy City" of Central Africa.

How long and how little is detail more about Timbuktu than that it is a mysterious sort of place somewhere in Central Africa! In point of fact, Timbuktu is an unrivalled, delicious town, dependent for its supply of food on the fleet of vessels and boats that ply on the Niger. It is situated in the interior of sand a few miles north of the Niger.

From a distance Timbuktu looks like a mass of ill looking houses built of sods, constituting a muddy ridge. It is built in the shape of a triangle, with its apex toward the north, and is about three miles in circumference. It contains about 1,000 houses of stone and several mosques. The most famous is the Great Mosque, which was founded by the King of Mali, Mansa Moussa, in 1327 and is three stories high. The streets outside the town and is surrounded by extensive ruins, which prove that Timbuktu originally was a much larger town than it is today.

Timbuktu is divided into seven quarters, and the most populous part is the quarter of the Sankores. Here dwell the Arabs of the Sonrhay, Touaregs, Fellatahs, Arabs of various tribes, Bambaras, Mandingos and Moors. The population has been estimated at from 16,000 to 20,000 persons. They are intelligent and industrious and have the reputation of being kind to strangers. Timbuktu is merely a great market, the point of reunion for merchants. Here the wares of the north are exchanged for those of the south. The sultan of the Touaregs does not live in Timbuktu. It is ruled by a kind of mayor, who receives his authority from the former and acts in accordance with his interests.

The port of Timbuktu is at Cabra, a small town of some 600 houses, about five miles distant. The Niger, with its fleet of boats and canoes, plies along to and fro, giving great life to the scene. The environs of Timbuktu are peopled by numerous tribes. On the west are various Arab tribes, part of the great tribe of the Beraiders, on the east and southeast the Touaregs, the present dominant power in Timbuktu and masters of the middle course of the Niger, while on the south, across the river, are the Sourhays. Alfanser is the paramount chief of the Touaregs today. Timbuktu is supposed to have been founded by the Touaregs about the fifth century of the Hegira. It is only since the seventeenth century that Europeans have visited Timbuktu. Until then it was known only by reports as a fabled haunt of wealth and magnificence.

Bread For the Germans.

There have been efforts made by the agricultural department to teach the Germans how to bake and eat corn bread. The attempts have been unsuccessful, and those by this method has been a failure then far. It appears that maize bread does not harmonize with the rest of the diet, generally preferred by the Germans and to which they are accustomed. Rye bread will always be the bread for the majority of Germans, and the best made from the very choicest of wheat flour is demanded by the wealthy classes.

Famous Laces.

The famous honiton laces belonging to Queen Victoria may possibly be taken to Coburg in honor of the wedding of Princess Melita of Edinburgh. These laces, veil, bodice trimmings, and flounces have only four times been worn by the queen—at her own marriage and at the weddings of the princess royal, the Duke of Albany and the Duchess of York. The queen values the laces highly, and it was asserted a great favor when she allowed them to be used in adorning the wedding gown of Princess Beatrice.

Superstitious Nursery Superstitions.

Here are a few of the many nursery superstitions: The thief in the candle, the stranger in the teacup, the name that lurks in the coffee grounds, the bubbles in the teapot that mean kisses, lucky money, the burning of the right or left ears, the itching of the nose, the turning of the purse, the meeting of the ant. All these are harmless little things at which the children laugh. They do not influence conduct. They make superstitions ridiculous.

The Umbrella in Many Times.

In modern countries, from the earliest times, the umbrella was one of the insignia of royalty, and on the sculptures of Egypt and Nineveh there are representations of kings and queens with servants with umbrellas over their heads. To this day, in most eastern climes, the umbrella has a significance which has never been given to it here. Upon state occasions nabobs of importance of India, China, Japan or Persia would never think of appearing without this emblem of dignity.

Galvanized Iron.

Galvanized iron is merely ordinary iron which has been dipped in molten zinc and retains a surface coating of the zinc when removed. It has come to be of great importance and usefulness, as by this simple process any article may be made to combine the strength and cheapness of iron and yet be wrought in the form most, as the zinc is unaffected by water or air, oxidizing only at a high temperature.

The Deathwatch.

The "deathwatch" is a popular name applied to certain beetles which bore into the walls and floors of old houses and make a ticking sound against the wood. Many superstitions have been entertained respecting the noise produced by these insects, which is sometimes imagined to be a warning of death.

An Admired Steam.

One of the most admired stanzas in Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" is the fourteenth:

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear:
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

Plant Superstitions.

In Germany, so it is said, the greatest care is taken that the hopeful shall never be allowed a place among the flowers with which maidens test their love affairs, and for a similar reason it is most unlucky to gather the crocus, as it is said to draw away one's strength.

A Nice Fish Sauce.

Brown 2 tablespoonfuls of flour in some butter. Stir in a little water and 2 tablespoonfuls of good fish stock and let it boil. To this add 3 or 4 tablespoonfuls of mustard, 2 of vinegar, just enough sugar to taste and a pinch of salt. Stir it while it simmers till quite smooth, and serve very hot.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

THE COUNCIL OF 1894 HOLDS ITS FIRST MEETING.

Mayor and Councilmen Sworn In.—The Mayor's Message.—The Salaries of the Clerk and Counsel Raised.—Israel Stout Appointed Street Commissioner.—Committees Appointed.—Other Matters.

The new Borough Council held its first meeting last night.

Mayor Saunders called the meeting to order and administered the oath of office to Mayor-elect Henry E. Needham.

In retiring Mayor Saunders said it was hardly necessary to introduce the new Mayor as he had been in the Council for a number of years and his marked ability was well known to all. "He was always right," said ex-Mayor Saunders, and if he makes half as good a mayor as he has a Councilman, at the end of the year he will be the best mayor the borough has ever had, and I shall feel like giving him my support."

In reply Mayor Needham said he believed the retiring mayor had been called the incomparable mayor. The latter he would not be said, had been conscientious and able men, and the last one had been no less able and conscientious than those who had gone before him.

Mayor Saunders then swore in the new Councilmen, Messrs. Peck, Valiant and Lounsbury.

The new Council now stands as fol. lows:

REPUBLICANS.—4.

James C. Peck, George F. Edwards. John Valiant, Henry B. Lounsbury.

DEMOCRATS.—3.

George H. Neul, Joseph H. Howell.

Mayor Needham read his annual message, which was as follows:

BOROUGH OF NORTH PLAINFIELD, April 6, 1894.

Gentlemen of the Council:

In accordance with custom it becomes my duty at this, the first meeting of the council, to place before you for your careful thought some of the matters pertaining to the interests of the borough that have impressed me as deserving of consideration.

SEWERAGE.

In regard to providing a system of sewage for the borough:

A special committee appointed last year in their report, state, why, in their judgment, a better way of disposing of sewerage than the present method is needed, and their reasons for favoring the intercepting sewer system, not noting also the advantages that would result from co-operating with Plainfield in this enterprise.

In view of the probability that the said city will soon be in a position to commence this work, the appointment of a special committee by this council would be called for, who should have this matter in charge.

A public work involving the expenditure of so large an amount of money, as the construction of a sewerage system, would demand, should not be entered into until full investigation had been made of plans and cost and an expression of approval obtained from the taxpayers of our community.

The continued growth of the borough will, before long, if not at the present time, make this improvement a necessity.

SIDEWALKS.

As act requiring that sidewalks, within certain limits in the borough, be constructed of stone flagging, or other similar material, went into effect the 1st inst.

In many places the walks are in bad condition, a source of danger to those compelled to use them, and in others no sidewalks whatever have been laid down.

These cases demand a prompt and strict enforcement of the provisions of the ordinance referred to.

MARSHALS.

The appointment of two marshals to do patrol duty at night has met with approval by our residents.

Watchfulness is especially needed during the night for the better protection of person and property against the attacks of those evilly disposed, as well as for the prompt giving of alarm in case of threatened danger.

It is urged that provision be made for the continuance of this service.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Your attention is called to the need of providing some method by which fire alarms may be given at night. The expense of providing and placing a sufficient number of electrical boxes at various points so that alarm could be sent to the electric light station and the steam whistle blown, would be small in comparison with the increased safety that would result from the use of such a system.

Our fire department, always prompt to respond, and prepared to do efficient service, would thus be enabled to be on hand to fight the flames before they obtained headway.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The value of possessing a complete transcript of all conveyances, mortgages, and other papers relative to transactions in which the borough is or may be interested, or concerned, was realized recently when a paper of the above-named years ago was required as evidence, was missing.

To this end, that the records showing the rights of the borough in cases where disputes may arise in the future, may be complete, I would call your attention to the importance of having all papers entered in book provided for that purpose; a full record of all proceedings of the council; that whenever a change occurs in the corporate affairs of the borough in possession of the retiring clerk he turned over to his successor in office, and a receipt taken for same.

The keeping of these records places considerable responsibility upon the clerk and the increasing responsibility of his office would indicate the growth in importance of the borough, and the taxable values of the same, would seem to call for action taking into consideration the compensation of both the borough clerk and counsel.

FINANCES.

The last annual report as printed shows a balance in the borough treasury in favor of the borough.

The appointment of a finance committee would be a proper time for the council to verify this balance by comparison with the statements of the borough collector and treasurer.

Such a committee discharge of the duties that devolve upon this council may be expected, and will entitle the gentlemen who have been called to this body many of the confidence of the borough.

Respectfully submitted,
HENRY E. NEEDHAM, MAYOR.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A communication was read from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., asking for an appropriation of $30 to help defray the expenses of Memorial Day observance.

A similar communication was also received from Major Anderson Post.

Both were laid over.

A letter of inquiry was read from Mr. D. H. Groendyke and others asking why the sidewalk had not been laid on Mercer avenue, between Washington avenue and Grove street, as the ordinance authorizing its being done had been passed by the Council. The matter was referred to the Street Committee.

Warren Engine Company, through its secretary, petitioned Council to pay the chief engineer of the fire department $100 per annum. The petition was referred to the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps. A report of the Grove street improvement was read from Mayor Saunders, and a motion was carried that the Council extend to ex-Mayor Saunders a vote of thanks for the efficient manner in which he conducted the work and his marked ability in the matter.

The following bills were presented but only the following were ordered paid, the others being held over to give the committees time to verify them:

J. Lines	$80.00
Wm. Hall	30.00
W. N. Pangborn	66.25
H. N. Spencer	34.72
Wm. Hall	30.00
C. A. Reed	126.70
J. Vetterlein	30.00
H. H. Wood	21.12
B. E. Gavin	25.00
H. Reichold	25.00
Wm. Hall	22.00
F. Kellogher	10.00
Middlesex Electric Light Co.	25.00
Samuel Moore	1.25

The Mayor appointed the following committees:

Streets and Public Health.—Messrs. Valiant, Neul and Peck.

Fire, Water and Lamps—Peck, Lounsbury and Howell.

Licenses and Marshals.—Lounsbury, Howell and Edwards.

Auditing and Finance—Edwards, Valiant and Neul.

Laws, Ordinance and Elections—Neul, Edwards, Valiant.

Printing and Stationary—Howell, Peck and Lounsbury.

The by-laws and rules governing the Council of 1893, and every Council since that time, were adopted as the by-laws and rules of the Council of 1894.

A resolution was adopted making the salary of the Borough Clerk $200 per annum. This is an increase of $100.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution appointing James K. Arnold clerk.

Mr. Neul objected to the resolution on the ground that there was no vacancy. By an act passed in April, 1893, the term of borough clerk was now two years.

Mr. Vetterlin had been appointed in April, 1893, so that according to the new law he had another year to serve. It appeared of his stand Mr. Neul cited the case of Mr. Cooley, who had been elected for a year, but after the law was changed it was decided that he could serve three years. The only difference in the two cases was that Mr. Cooley had been elected before the law was passed, but Mr. Vetterlin had not been appointed until after the law had been passed. Thus there could be no doubt of Mr. Vetterlin being effected by the law.

It was decided to refer the matter to the borough Counsel.

The salary of the borough counsel was fixed at $200 per annum.

A resolution was adopted appointing Mr. C. A. Reed borough counsel for a term not to exceed one year.

The salary of the borough marshals was fixed at $60 per month.

Mr. Howell offered a resolution appointing Mr. W. N. Pangborn borough marshal to serve at the pleasure of the Council.

Mr. Neal, in seconding the resolution, said that he believed it his duty as a citizen of the borough and as a member of the Council to vote for Mr. Pangborn, who had fulfilled the duties of the office in a fearless, and faithful manner. "We are sworn officers," Mr. Neal concluded, "we must do our duty to the public. I believe it is the general sentiment of the people at large that Mr. Pangborn be re-appointed. The fact that he was not got him to become into any controversy over illegal arrests is of great importance. I, therefore, not as a politician but as a citizen and Councilman second Mr. Pangborn's appointment."

Mr. Valiant said he had given the matter considerable thought, and that he felt that he must first do his duty to the borough, and that he didn't intend to let party fealty stand in the way of his duty. He thought they should have more time in considering the matter. He therefore offered a resolution appointing Marshal Pangborn for one month, on until May 15. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

The salary of the street commissioner was fixed at $50 per year and $2 per day while at work.

The street committee was authorized to advertise for bids for crushed stone for street work.

Mr. Israel W. Stout was appointed Street Commissioner for one year, by the following vote:

Yes—Messrs. Edwards, Peck, Valiant, Lounsbury, and Howell.—5.

No—Neul.—1.

The Auditing and Finance Committee was authorized to compare the printed borough reports with the books of the collector and treasurer.

Council adjourned for two weeks.

Progressive Pool.

HER LIFE CRUSHED OUT.

HORRIBLE FATE OF AN EVORA MOTHER.

Mrs. Henry G. Shirley Found on the Railroad Crushed into an Unrecognizable Mass.—She Had Been to the Grocery Store.

The engineer of train No. 1 that leaves Plainfield, bound east, just before seven o'clock, saw a dead body lying beside the track near the Pond Tool Works, this morning. He notified the "section boss" and Patrolman Wheeler, and the two took a "hand car," and went after the body. The body was mangled into an unrecognizable mass. The men placed the remains on the car and took them to the freight house, where a box two feet square was secured and the bloody pieces put in it and taken to the morgue.

The body was identified as that of Mrs. Henry G. Shirley, of Evora, by her two sons, John and Henry. Undertaker Carey prepared the face so that of Mrs. Shirley.

Mrs. Shirley lived with her son John, on Front street, a short distance below the Pond Tool Works.

The body was fully 100 feet from the point where she crossed, so that she must have been killed to instant death.

The dead woman was a widow, her husband having died January 5, 1893. She was about 50 years old. She leaves four sons and one daughter. The sons are John, Henry, Charles and Theodore. They all live in Plainfield. The daughter resides in Massachusetts.

She had her purchases—eggs and bacon—in a basket when killed, the whole egg was found between the tracks.

Where Mrs Shirley crossed the track a path has been worn by people who cross over to Cullen's store. School children also are in the habit of crossing there on their way to the Monroe avenue school. It is a wonder that some one has not been killed there before this.

It is customary with those living in that section to cross the track to Mr. Cullen's grocery store, on South Second street, and Mrs. Shirley, with others had often made the journey across and back with safety. Last night, about eight o'clock she told her son that she was going to the store for eggs and bacon. When she left the house the son laid down and did not see her alive. He did not wake until this morning when he discovered that his mother was not home. He did not know the horrible fate that had befallen her until his neighbor reformed with the news that a woman had been found dead on the track. Then John went to the morgue and identified the remains. The Coroner has not been notified of the discovery may be better imagined than described.

Mr. Cullen says that Mrs Shirley left the store at about 8:30 for home. She must have been killed at once, as her remains have laid along the track all night.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Pangborn of Jackson avenue, who has been seriously ill, is improving.

Mrs. John Neal of Boston is visiting Mrs. Albert Bedden of Park avenue.

Mr. Thomas Scelly, formerly of Millstco, N. J., is now a resident of this city.

Mrs. Ruth Wortman of Franklin Park is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. Van Middlesworth, 110 Liberty street.

Miss Jennie Randolph of Madison avenue has returned from a visit with her sister, Mrs. Smith, at Trenton.

Miss Sophia Brower of Montclair has been spending her Easter vacation with her mother on East Fifth street.

Richard Day of East Front street has been confined to the house for some days past, suffering from an attack of neuralgia.

Mrs. A. D. Easter and daughter, Miss Mabie, of Castleton, N. Y., are guests at the home of Letter Carrier Edward T. VanWinkle of Elm place.

Councilman W. G. E. See and Lawyer Northup have taken possession of the house recently occupied by Mr. J. J. Pollion of Putnam avenue.

Lawrence O'Reilly, a merchant in Chicago at No. 4 Park Row is in town for a few days visiting his brother and sister at No. 246 East Second street.

Miss Dolley, of the North Plainfield public school, has sufficiently recovered from her recent illness as to be partly able to resume her duties. During Miss Dolley's absence, the class was taken charge of by Miss Claypoole, a former teacher in the school.

Dime Sociable.

The young ladies of the Congregational church gave a dime sociable in that church last night. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The programme was composed of funny sayings and actions of the Pease sisters who were supposed to be from Alaska.

The young ladies who took part in the entertainment were Miss Robinson, Miss Parsons, Miss Kirkner, Miss Shepard, Miss Bethune, Miss Jenkins, Miss Chase, Miss Fuller and Miss Dwight, the two latter being children.

There were about 100 people present.

Pickwick Papers.

About seventy-five persons were present at All Souls' church last evening when Pickwick Papers, by Charles Dickens, was discussed. A paper was introduced by Mr. H. B. Wells, after which a free discussion of its merits took place.

NO BLOODSHED, GENTLEMEN.

Mr. Goodwin Accuses Councilman Neal of Misleading the People.

At the close of last night's Borough Council meeting there was a little incident that might have ended, but for the interference of ex-Mayor Saunders.

Mr. John Goodwin walked inside the railing that separates the lobbyists from the Councilmen, and inquired why the money paid to "Dave" Carney for overseeing the street railway work had not been placed in the report. Mr. Goodwin followed his remarks to Mr. Neal, and concluded with:

"You are misleading the people."

Councilman Neal thumped his cane on the table once or twice and made a motion as if to strike Mr. Goodwin, at the same time saying "You can't reflect on my integrity, you——." But just then Mr. Saunders stepped in between the men and attempted to pacify Mr. Neal.

Mr. Neal took his hat off and tried still to get at his man, who kept saying "Let him alone."

Mr. Neal said that it was not the first time that Mr. Goodwin had made insinuations against his integrity.

Mr. Goodwin, nevertheless, wants to know about that money.

BREVITIES.

—There was a snow squall to-day.

—The price of coal has been reduced from $6.50 to $6.25 per ton.

—The corner-stone of the Emmanuel Baptist church will be laid to-morrow.

—A second installment of a "Yankee in Gray" appears on our third page to-day.

—The Arlingtons defeated the West Ends, in a game of base ball, on the Horse Plainfield grounds, this morning.

—Papers have been served in the case of the Queens Company vs. Zimmerman & Happy, which is returnable before Justice Nash on April 14.

—"David Smith," one of A. G. Hoagland's drivers, had two fingers crushed while moving a piano on Friday night. The wounds are very painful.

—A number of colored families of Franklin Park, have already removed from that vicinity in obedience to an order issued by the white residents.

—The bank of earth in front of the Meeker property on East Front street has been removed, and John Meeker will sod the spot known as "Setzler's row."

—"That long felt want" of Plainfield is now being successfully filled by Estell's first-class millinery department, he says. See his advertisement in to-day's News.

—During the shower yesterday afternoon it was noticed that in several parts of the borough it would be raining on one side of the house and the sun shining on the other.

—Robert Douglass was fined $3 this morning by Judge Coddington, for riding his bicycle on the sidewalk. In the case Fred Bach for a similar offense, decision was reserved.

—Next Friday night the deciding game between the Board of Trade and Westfield Club teams will be played at the Board of Trade alleys. Each team has won two games.

—The three white coats which could not be designated by the owners at the Leidenbrant ball, Monday night, have turned up all right. Frank Hand had "Tenny" Smith's coat, and John Dane and Hand relinquished their claim on each other's coat.

—The pupils in Harned Academy are soon to organize a foot-ball team, and a series of games will be arranged for the Summer season. The grounds will most likely be on a vacant lot near the school, but the members of the team have not yet been announced.

—Messrs. Andrew and Frank Huff have begun the erection of a colonial residence on Park avenue, below the Cedar brook bridge. The foundation walls are now up and ready for the carpenter's to-day. The building is to be 35x35 feet in dimensions and will cost about $4,500.

—Anyone can make money but the q estion that bothers everyone is how to save it. Mr. White, in his advertisement, tells how you can make one dollar do the work of two. This progressive merchant always has something new to offer and the list of money savers that they tell about in their advertisement is well worth your attention.

FELL TWENTY FEET.

William Laing, a Carpenter, Injured Yesterday.

William Laing, a carpenter of East Third street, was injured by falling from a scaffold while at work on Mr. Mosteheen's new house, on Willow avenue. About four o'clock a board of the scaffold broke and Laing fell 20 feet to the ground. Besides being severely bruised he sustained a injury to his left wrist, which was out almost to the bone. It is supposed that he fell with his hand upon his saw, which he had in his hand at the time.

Mr. Thorn took the injured man to the office of Dr. Adams, where his wounds were attended to.

—Yesterday Justice Storms of New Market rendered judgment in the case of Mrs. Cooper vs. Charles Coriell, in favor of the plaintiff for $67.50. Judge Coddington represented the plaintiff.

SPRING COATS AND CAPES.

Some of Them Are Strictly Ornamental and Afford No Protection.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Coats and capes are both worn, coats for general use being made of light cloth, unlined, with gigot sleeves. The cloth has body enough to remain in shape without lining, and the additional weight is thus avoided. The full skirt of the coat has a three or four inch satin facing inside, which suffices to make it hang properly. Capes are of cloth, satin moire, velvet or lace, separate or combined, and are cut full enough to reach to the ends of the fingers, generally falling below the waist, although shorter ones are seen.

Black moire capes are shown trimmed with bands of cream guipure insertion and fastened with a large bow, the ends of which are ornamented in the same way, while velvet ones appear thickly embroidered with jet and spangles, looking altogether too warm for the season for which they are intended. The neck is usually finished with some ever of high fanciful collar or with a ruffle of lace, the sheer effect of lace or thickly plaited three or four inch ribbon are often adopted. Most of the capes are black, unless made to match a gown. They are frequently lined with brightly tinted silk, generally of a solid color. Capes made of heavy net are also seen plaited or ruffled and trimmed with bands of velvet and black or white lace. These are worth nothing as protection, of course, and are designed merely to give finish to the street toilet. Cape plaits net is used in preference to the light lacy kind and is more effective and durable. No plain capes are seen. They all have some sort of wide trimming about the neck or shoulders. One of the prettiest has a plaited pelerine pointed back and front, while another consists of a deep ruffle of lace. A third has a yoke bordered with a wide ruffle.

Rather an odd Parisian model of a wrap is shown which it is difficult to define as either a cape or a cloak. It consists of two accordion plaited panels of black silk crape, which are gathered into a pierrot collar, and fastened over the wearer's shoulder, to the bottom of the skirt. They are entirely separate back and front, and open like a cape, the arms are concealed among the plaits. These openings are overlaid by deep accordion plaited epaulets of the same material. Two ends of black satin ribbon fall from the neck to the hem of this singular garment, which is very light, very full and very becoming.

Campbell Won the Match

The shooting match, Thursday afternoon, between Harry Campbell of this city and Samuel Hall of Perth Amboy resulted in a victory for Mr. Campbell he killed 38 out of 55 and Hall killed 31 out of 55. The match was for $50 a side.

Harry Campbell also shot a match with Scott Terry for $10 a side, at 10 birds. Campbell also won this match. He killed nine straight and Terry only killed seven.

In the match between Ellis Campbell and John Banner, the men tied with four out of six.

A sweepstake, followed in which D. Terry, H. Campbell, Scott, Terry, Samuel Hall, took part. Campbell killed 4 out of 5, Hall, 3, and S. Terry 2.

Desperate Jail Delivery.

GREENSBURG, Pa., April 7.—A desperately executed jail delivery was successful here by which eight criminals escaped. Jailer McCready and his assistant, William McSherry, were knocked down by Peter Madden, who attacked them with a piece of lead pipe. An alarm was given, and within an hour four of the escaped convicts were recaptured, but four others—the worst in the gang—are still at liberty. A large posse of officers is in pursuit.

"As required by law, I have this day exhibited the several bank books of Hon. Wm. B. Sutphen, State Treasurer, and find that the above stated amounts are standing to his credit as Treasurer in the banks of the State.

"I have not deemed it necessary to submit to you a report in minute detail of the operations of the Treasury since the date of my last annual report, because these operations are shown in full upon the books of the office and will form part of the report of my successor at the close of the current fiscal year."

GROVE STREET IMPROVEMENT.

Mayor Saunders' Report of the Work Done.

Ex-Mayor Saunders submitted the following report last night of the work done on Grove street:

Hon. H. F. Needham, Mayor of North Plainfield, New Jersey:

MY DEAR SIR—I have the honor to submit to you herewith a statement of expenditures in connection with the Grove street improvement. You will observe that the letter for the work up to the first of April has been $1,794.36. This sum is given as follows:

Amount contributed in labor from the unemployed fund	$691.00
Contribution in cash and teams	284.47
Received cash from subscribers to date	819.89
Total	$1,797.36

The cash contributions that is, those exclusive of the unemployed fund and contributed cash are as follows:

J. F. Wilson	$100.00
Wm. Hollenbeck	25.00
J. M. Emerson	5.00
Mrs. C. J. Taggart	5.00
Total	$250.00
Cash expenditure, as per report herewith	$167.79
Balance available	$82.21

The cash remaining to be collected from subscribers is as follows:

Balance due on J. F. Wilson's subscription	$25.00
Balance due on J. M. Emerson's subscription	2.50
To be collected from freeholders	80.00

The freeholders have waited to contribute $60 toward the work which is now being done in excavating the channel of Greenbrook so that this sum added to the cash contribution leaves a balance of $132.21 for further prosecution of the work after April 1st.

I have paid to the Street Commissioner, Mr. Gavitt, $462.50, being the full amount of cash paid into my hands.

The contribution in cash and teams have been made by Messrs. Sandpo Brothers, Dr. J. H. Cooley, Mr. P. M. French.

The work has progressed, I think, expeditiously and economically. It is now nearly completed. The street has been graded from the borough line at the mountain to a point about half way between the bridge and Greenbrook Road.

The unfinished portion is light and can be completed at a small expenditure.

The work has been delayed during the past week because of the fact that the contributions in labor from the unemployed fund, and several of the contributions in carts have ceased.

Yours truly,
WM. L. SAUNDERS.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., April 7.—The army of the commonweal camped at Reynoldton last night, the men sleeping in the Court House. The entry into the city was watched by hundreds, but there was no demonstration. The march from Homestead along the river road through Duquesne was a tiresome one, and a stop of two hours was made at the latter place. The army was escorted into town by a delegation of the workers and a band. The Wilmerding band and laborers from several shops also escorted the army.

Four hundred loaves have already been baked for the Homestead business men. In a special order Marshal Browne announces that hereafter the commuesus shall be lettered and not named. There are already five commuesus, A, B, C, D and E. The stop at noon today will be at Elizabeth, and the camp at Monongahela City will be named Hrandy wine. There were four new recruits, and 440 meal tickets were given out.

The route taken from Homestead was by the river levee industrial road. At Homestead three wagonloads of provisions, 32 blankets, 130 pairs of shoes and other supplies were contributed. The rear flames of a brick kiln were also illuminating the night, and a small sum of money was secured. It is laid to Coxey's men, although but few were given the liberty of the town.

Baker Has One Thousand Men.

SACRAMENTO, April 7.—The California regiment of the industrial army, 800 strong, passed through here. The industrials were huddled together in eight boxcars, like a band of sheep. As the train entered the city they raised their flags and cheered. A company of 200 men was organized in Sacramento, the members of which will cast their fortunes with the newcomers.

The city authorities fed the army on soup, beef, bread and coffee. Colonel Baker, one of the field officers, speaking for the army, expressed great indignation at the treatment which the men had received at the hands of the Oakland authorities. He said they were on a peaceful mission, and "hungry men should not be treated like dogs."

Mayor Steinman arranged to ship the army east, and 1,000 of them left Sacramento on a special train of 20 freight cars. The train was guarded by Sheriff Hild with armed Major Honbert of the army had an interview with Governor Markham, asking him to interceded with the railroads and if possible engage free transportation. The governor told him he was forbidden by the constitution to have any dealings with a railroad corporation.

Mr. Coxey Contributes.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The first installment for the cache of provisions to be established here for the sustenance of the weary wights of Coxey's walkers during the days they will be in Washington after their long tramp is over arrived here. It came by the United States Express company from Massillon. It was a loaf of bread—a dry crust, and not a sweet morsel for a prodigal.

Tied to it with a string was a tag, mark ed: "From Arkansas for Commissary General Coxey's army. Washington. Dead head: account of charity." Across the top of the tag was boldly written, "Care of Grover Cleveland." The tag, as well as another which was attached, was covered with the names of the express messengers who had handled the loaf on its trip hither. The express agent ordered it sent to Colonel Redstone, the District of Columbia representative of the Coxey movement. It was sent to the White House instead. The messenger did not know whether or not it would next be sent to the president.

Another Army En Route.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., April 7.—The second regiment of the industrial army arrived here. After marching through the principal streets they were escorted to the Athletic park, where they camped, for the night. They were furnished comfortable quarters, and the city authorities gave them all the provisions needed.

Is Not "The Unknown."

DENVER, April 7.—The story from Grand Junction, Colo., that Major W. P. Clark of the Second Kentucky is managing Coxey's army is denied by friends, who say Clark is at the bedside of his sick mother at Williamsport, Pa.

Editor to Be Sued For Blasphemy.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 7.—Rev. E. L. Southgate has served notice on Charles C. Moore, the noted infidel and editor of The Blue Grass Blade, that suit will be filed against him in the circuit court for blasphemy.

Newfoundland's Scandal.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 7.—The government party held a meeting, and each man pledged himself to resign separately if the governor's action in their demand to dissolve the house be not in the affirmative.

Derailed on a Curve.

HURON, S. D., April 7.—The passenger train from the east while near Lake Benton, Minn., was derailed on a curve. Engineer Ed Drury was killed. The passengers escaped with a severe shaking up.

Young Counted Out.

PROVIDENCE, April 7.—Bissell Young, who was reported elected senator from Westerly, has been counted out. This leaves but five Democrats in the 105 members of the legislature.

Indicted a Colored Preacher.

CHATTANOOGA, April 7.—Rev. C. W. Lewis (colored) pleaded guilty in 14 criminal cases in the United States circuit court. Lewis has been doing a bogus pension business for years.

Burglars With a Money Order Book.

ALBANY, April 7.—The postoffice at Salem, the county seat of Washington county, was burglarized, and $1,300 in cash and the money order book was taken.

No Stay For Fuller.

NEWARK, N. J., April 7.—The United States supreme court has denied a stay for Robert Alden Fuller. He will be resentenced in a few days.

The Count Will Be Extradited.

QUEBEC, April 7.—Judge Chauveau decided that Count de Villeneuve, accused of forgery in France, should be extradited.

How Well You're Looking

Friends All Surprised

At the Wonderful Benefit From Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. H. R. Cole
Millville, New Jersey.

C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—Whenever I meet friends now whom I have not seen for some time, the first thing they generally remark concerns my healthy and healthy appearance. They ask what I have been doing. I have no answer for all: 'Oh! nothing only taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.' I have been afflicted for thirty years with a dry affecting at times my entire body but mainly confined to my limbs and more especially to my legs from my knees down to my feet. The skin, which had become a solid mass of dry scales for years, broke out about a year ago into running sores. At one time I had as many as nine on one limb which were as large as the size of a silver ten cent piece. They caused me great inconvenience and suffering by their constant and intolerable itching. I was induced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and after using nine bottles consider myself cured. The sores have long since disappeared, the scales are all gone, and my skin is as smooth as any one's could be. I have gained in weight from 130 to 160 pounds. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS "M. QUAD."

COPYRIGHTED 1894 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

"Sit down! You'll get there soon enough without any extra hurry! Say, Steve, do you know there's a Yankee among us—a regular, full fledged Yankee right here in this town?"

"Lordy, no! Has he an cum down to capture we uns?"

"He is here as a spy, Steve—as a spy to let 'em know up north what we are doing. You fellows are not very bright, or you'd have got onto him without my telling."

"Shoo! A Yankee spy right yere in this town? Hev yo' seen him with yo'r own eyes?"

"I have."

"And yo' kin name him?"

"I can. Do you know Lawyer William?"

"I reckon."

"Do you know the man in the office with him—fellow named Kenton?"

"I do, fur sum. He drawed up some papers fur me awhile ago. Purty nice sort of a feller, I take it."

"Didn't you know he was a Yankee?"

"No!"

"Well, he is. Any one will tell you that he came down here from the north only about a year ago."

"But he cums to go inter bizness."

"Yes, but he's a Yankee, and they are all alike—all down on us about the nigger, and all want to make us eat dirt."

"Shoo! Jest want to walk right over us and treat us into the ground, eh?"

"That's it, and he's one of them. No one knows how many letters he's sent off in the last two weeks. He probably sent one today, and they know in Washington just what we are doing here."

"But what's he doin yere if he's a Yankee spy?" persisted Steve. "Seems like I've heard they hang spies."

"And they'll hang him if he stays long enough! I'm thinking he'll get all the information he can and then sneak for the north and enlist in the Yankee army."

"Shoo! What's yo'r idea, lootenant?"

"I think somebody ought to wait on him and give him warning to leave the town at once. If he refuses to go, I reckon we can scare up enough tar and feathers to give him a coat."

"Doggone it, lootenant, but yo' are dead right! Yo're the captain arter jest walk right up to him this very night!"

"Well, you see," observed Wyle after some hesitation, "the captain and I are very busy waiting for war news, and we have sort o' decided to leave the matter to you boys. You'll find he's a Yankee spy, and you'll probably want to use him rough, and if we were along we'd be obliged to protect him. You'd better get aloof a dozen of the boys together and give Mr. Yankee a call tonight. Talk right up to him and let him see that you know all about him. Perhaps he's found out all the Lincoln government wants to know and is ready to go north. If he says he'll go, give him half an hour to pack up and walk him down to the train, which goes past at 11 o'clock."

"I see. But s'pose he says he won't go?"

"Tar and feathers, Steve—tar and feathers will make him change his mind!"

"They will, fur shore, and we uns will gie him tar and feathers! Yo' ar' sartin he's a Yankee?"

"Of course."

"Means to fight agin us?"

"Of course. You are not going to flunk out, are you?"

"Steve Brayton never did flunk in all his life, and he ain't goin to begin now, but"——

"But what?" impatiently demanded Wyle, who was in a hurry to begin proceedings.

"Seems like we orter hev some sort o' beginnin. He un drawed up them papers fur me and didn't make no charge, and I don't want to jump in on him all of a sudden. Seems like I orter be sorter civil and decent at first and find out what he un's doin or means to do."

"Steve Brayton, I'll scratch your name off the roll this very night! You ain't got the sand to make a soldier!"

"Shoo! Don't yo' be so frustrated! Hev yo' got that roll with yo'?"

"Yes."

"Good! Hand it over."

"What do you want of it?"

"I've dun got a plan. I'll take that paper along. I'll go like Baxter, Bill Taylor, Tom Henderson and six or eight mo', and we'll find that Yankee. When we've found him, I'll be civil and decent and say: 'Folks is a-tellin that yo' un is a Yankee spy, and that yo' un is gwine to skip out fur the north purty quick. How does yo' un constandnate?'

"What do you mean by that?" asked Wyle.

"That means how does he un stand. Is he un for the south or north? If he un's fur the south, let him put his name right down thar to be one of us. If he un's fur the north, we uns will cum back fur tar and feathers."

"Steve, you've hit it—hit it plumb center!" exclaimed Wyle as he rose up to shake hands. "You've got the idea exactly. Put that there paper right at him! If he's for us, he'll sign; if he's agin us, he won't. Get your men together and start out right away."

"We uns will find out all about it in an hour, lootenant, and doggone my hide if I ain't so chock full of fight that I've got to holler! Hip, hip, hooray! Aim low, boys, and giv' it to 'em heavy!"

CHAPTER IV.

The average writer of fiction describes every southern man as wearing long, black hair, a wide brimmed hat and a fierce mustache. The southern woman is pictured as tall and stately, with black eyes and raven tresses. Marian Percy was a true child of the south, and yet she had hazel eyes, brown hair and was petite in figure. As she passed the ragged little darkies in the street they looked after her and called:

"Golly me, but dar goes Miss Sunshine again!"

Of sunny disposition, charitable in thought and deed, respected by all, she had dignity without haughtiness, was a queen among girls without arrogance. If every other girl of the south was arguing for and enthusiastically approaching the right of secession and wearing the top Palmetto flag, Marian was the exception. Not that the momentous events were lightly passed over, but because she was weighing them and pondering deeply. Educated at the north, she had formed strong friendships and found hosts of friends. She had seen the Yankee at home, at his worst and at his best, and she rather liked him. That a general election, such as had been held so often before, should result in turmoil, bloodshed and separation she could not understand. Politicians defended the secession of South Carolina, but she was not wise enough to sift their sophistry from their constitutional arguments. The talk of a southern confederacy did not appeal to her patriotism. Her pride and part of them belonged to Virginia first of all. Virginia's weal or woe was her anxiety.

At 8 o'clock on the evening of the day of which we have written the widow Percy and her daughter were eagerly scanning the columns of a Richmond paper which had arrived half an hour before, when Royal Kenton was announced. He was received in a manner to let him know that his presence was welcome, and conversation turned at once to the all important question. After it had continued for a time Mrs. Percy suddenly observed:

"Mr. Kenton, we were speaking of you this afternoon and were agreed that your position was at least embarrassing."

"Which means," he smilingly replied, "that you have been wondering which side I would take in this contest."

Mother and daughter looked at him with considerable eagerness, but without reply, and he continued:

"No doubt I ought to be ashamed of the fact that I have lived to be 54 years of age and have taken no interest in politics. If all others were clear on this question, I could soon decide it for myself. Here we have some of the ablest men of America contending that no state is bound to the Union by any constitutional law, while others equally wise advise war as a penalty for secession. We have no precedent to guide us. No state was forced into the Union. If the people of any one state believe that secession would be a benefit, how can we deny her right to withdraw? And yet no state has a moral or legal right to imperil the welfare of the general government."

"I cannot speak for the south, but for Virginia only," said the mother. "I know little of politics. I am content to leave the question to the statesmen of our state. I have no bitterness of sectional feeling."

"You are from Rhode Island, Mr. Kenton," observed the daughter.

"Yes."

"But you came here to make your home with us. The state has adopted you, so to speak."

"Yes."

"You have become a voter here. You have no intention of returning to the north?"

"None whatever."

"Then you must stand on the same platform we do. You must stand by your state."

"He has doubtless given the subject serious thought," said the mother in tones meant to gently reprimand the daughter for her eagerness.

"I have indeed," answered Kenton, "and it seems to me that"——

STRIKERS STEAL DYNAMITE.

The Hungarian Miners in Possession of 2,000 Pounds of the Explosive.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 7.—It has just been discovered that the strikers have stolen 2,000 pounds of dynamite from the new powder house being constructed on the mountain side west of Dunbar, and great destruction of property is expected. The dynamite was stolen while the workmen on the reservoir were absent, the rioters breaking open the storage house.

The robbery has caused great excitement in the coke regions, and many believe preparations are being made for a renewal of hostilities. President Davis, who is in jail, said he would not withdraw his call for a convention on Saturday and urges the board to report at the meeting and arrange for a continuance of the strike. He, however, condemns the rioting and says that it must be stopped. An ugly feeling is developing, and there are indications that trouble will break out anew after if not before the Scottdale convention.

John McStay, the vice president of the Miners' District union, was captured by County Detective Frank Campbell at the house of Barney Connors on the Connellsville and Uniontown. He was found in bed sound asleep and was awakened and brought to Uniontown, where he was placed in the county jail, charged with the murder of Joseph H. Paddock. There was no alarming change in the situation except that the strikers commenced to move again in this section of the region. A meeting was held at what is known as the "Old College" and was attended by about 300 strikers. It was decided to meet at Oliver, a short distance north of town, and at midnight to start for Frick's Broomfield works, where it was intended to attempt a start this morning.

The authorities are prepared for them. At the courthouse guards and the sheriff's office, loading guns and rifles for the expected encounter. A fight will likely occur, as the sheriff will not allow the strikers to trespass on the company's property.

COAL STRIKE PREPARING.

Miners Are Being Rapidly Organized and Mean Business.

PITTSBURG, April 7.—There will be trouble in mining circles before many weeks roll around, judging from present indications. A coal operator well known in this part of the state, who has kept a close watch on affairs, said: "Within 30 days I look for another strike in the Pittsburg district similar to that now carried on in the coke regions. The miners are preparing for it, and the operators are anticipating trouble. The coke region victories have been repulsed and have gained nothing by their conduct, but their experience will not serve as a warning to others. The miners and cokers of the Connellsville regions have really had a grievance, but those who professed to be the leaders did not have enough intelligence to know how to secure their ends, and their followers plunged blindly after them, not knowing what they were doing."

The trouble brewing among the miners of this district is a matter of wages, and no amount of argument will convince the men that higher wages are out of the question at present. The operators will not agree on any fixed amount to be paid, and so long as they fail to do so nothing can be accomplished by striking."

The reorganization of the coal miners is being actively pushed by President Cairne and Organizer Miller. They have succeeded in very thoroughly organizing the Tom's Run miners, the Panhandle miners and the diggers along the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Their success among the miners on the Baltimore and Ohio has been remarkable, since the miners of that district have been disorganized for several years.

SERIOUS ACCUSATION.

Abbey & Grau's Orchestra Leader Arrested in Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Signor N. Mancinelli, director of the orchestra of the Abbey & Grau Grand Opera company, was arrested on a charge of picking pockets. The arrest occurred in a dime museum on Clark street. Signor Mancinelli denies his guilt and declares that the whole affair is a stupid blunder, but the museum people declare that he is a pickpocket, and that he and four other Frenchmen have been operating among the crowds that visit the museum for more than three weeks. Signor Mancinelli admits that he has been at the museum many times since he came to Chicago, but denies that he has picked a pocket.

It was on the complaint of Charles McCurren, a special officer employed by the museum, that the arrest was made.

He told the police that he had seen Signor Mancinelli edging his way through the crowds at the museum on several occasions and made the statement that he had seen the Frenchman place his hand in the pocket of bystanders. Stage Manager Lewis of the museum says he saw the Frenchman try to steal a watch.

At the central police station he made such strong protestations of innocence that the museum people said they would not prosecute him if he would keep away from the museum. To this Signor Mancinelli agreed, and he was allowed to go. He said he visited the museum so many times because he was collecting material for a book on America, which he intends to write after returning to Europe.

Election Bills Passed.

ALBANY, April 7.—The assembly passed two senate bills providing for election reforms. One provides that inspectors of election shall have full power to preserve the peace and good order in and about the polls at each meeting and order the arrest of persons offering to vote illegally. The other makes it a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than two years nor more than five years, for any person to vote or offer to vote illegally, or persuade or threaten to prevent any other person to vote illegally.

The Cause of the Tillman War.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 7.—Billy Floyd, whose fight with Rogers in Darlington a week ago nearly precipitated civil war in South Carolina, is in Charlotte. He escaped to Marven and Rockingham, this state, after the fight, where he has been lying low. He says the trouble with Hotel Clerk Rogers was brought on by a reference to the hotel's refusing to entertain the spies, and in the quarrel McLendon took his part.

Hale's Captain Killed Himself.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 7.—The Deutsche Nachrichten of Valparaiso of the date of Feb. 8 contains an account of the suicide *of Captain Alfred Mannsen, who was cap*tain of the steamer Hale when the famous vessel was in San Diego harbor. Captain Mannsen experienced business reverses, which are supposed to have led him to commit suicide.

The WREN in Business

It is characteristic of the Wren that it will sneak in and occupy the nest made by another bird, in preference to building one of its own. This same trait is often seen in business. It is shown by the imitators of

COTTOLENE

No sooner has the wonderful merit of this new vegetable shortening, so much better than lard, created for it a remarkable sale and popularity, than the business wrens are ready to move upon the market with many worthless counterfeits. Any housekeeper can be easily and cheaply convinced of the value of COTTOLENE by simply giving it a trial. They will then be unwilling to go back to lard, or go down to fraudulent imitations.

THE EVIDENCE IS ALL IN

Breckinridge-Pollard Trial Is Drawing to a Close.

ARGUMENTS TO BEGIN MONDAY.

Lexington, April 7.—Even the worst of fear, according to Mrs. Breckinridge, has failed to bring a sensation to the closing of the testimony in the Pollard-Breckinridge litigation, which had grown to be the most famous breach of promise case of modern times after five months and nearly two days of examination. The final expected and surrebuttal testimony of seven witnesses by the plaintiff, which was to have been in by noon, dragged out the afternoon session of Thursday before it was completed, and the court announced that it had hoped to have the case in the hands of the jury by noon, but that it would be impossible to get the arguments of counsel in before Monday morning. Judge Cantrill then announced that he had entered into a contract made in good faith, on her part at least, that she talked of the birth of her children with a friend, on which would give seventeen witnesses, and that the failure of fact was in which all manner of unthought things have been discussed throughout this month and more.

She was very much the mistress of the situation, as she has been on her former appearances, and was apparently enjoying her own story in her own way, and she succeeded in her determination, as well as in keeping the corps of lawyers on the defense in a state of constant confusion and she should get away from their control.

Colonel Breckinridge requested in all the various keys of which his voice is capable of very long and skilled the denial of the story of Mary Yancey, the colored cook, and other vital details of the case for the plaintiff. He also had witnesses from the usual order when two of Miss Pollard's attorneys, Mr. Calderon Carlisle and Mr. W. G. Johnson, were sworn as witnesses to silent their slights in the interrogatories on their visit to the Norwood convent they might have slipped the Christmas card into the volume of Washington Irving's works which has played so important a part in the trial. There was a colored woman called Aunt Mary of most remarkable facilities on the stand, for although she had never before seen Colonel Breckinridge she recognized him from his likeness to the 3-dollar child which has played so important a part in the trial.

When he came into the courtroom, Colonel Breckinridge seemed to be in high spirits, remarking to Major Butterworth, "I feel like a schoolboy at the prospect of a holiday."

He was not to have the holiday, however, for today will be spent in arguments by the lawyers over the instructions which they will ask the judge to give the jury upon the strictly legal aspects of the case.

Arguments to the jury will begin on Monday morning, so that the case will probably close by Wednesday night. There will be two speeches for each side. Mr. Carlisle will make the opening for the plaintiff. He will be followed by Colonel Phil Thompson, formerly member of congress from the Ilion Green State of Kentucky, Judge Butterworth, ex-member from Ohio, for the defense, and Judge Jere Wilson, ex-member from Indiana, who will give the final plea for Miss Pollard. From the announcement of speakers and expectations of a great display of eloquence oratory are warranted. Of the jewelry and impression that Colonel Breckinridge would address the jury in a mistake. Said Mr. Desha Breckinridge, the son of the defendant, "I never heard father speak. He has in his political campaigns, in the hands of his friends."

Some Strong Denials.

Miss Pollard's denials were forcible and voluble.

"Did you ever, at Wesleyan college or elsewhere," she was asked, "tell this defendant that you had ever had improper relations with John Rhodes?"

"There was never a word on my part that could be construed into such an admission."

"Did you ever have improper relations with Mr. Rhodes?"

"Never, Mr. Carlisle," she was saying when the defense interposed objection.

"Did you tell the defendant that you had been to Sarah Guest's with Rhodes?"

"I could not have said so. I never saw the place until I walked up to the gate with my hand on his (Breckinridge's) arm."

The young woman's face was flushed, and she spoke with a tragic air. Attorney Shelby attempted to interrupt her with an objection, but she raised her arm with an imperative gesture, quieting him with, "I must be permitted to answer this, Mr. Shelby."

"What was the conduct of Mr. Rhodes toward you?" was the next question, to which she replied, "He loved me," when she was cut off by an objection, which the court sustained.

"Was there any improper occurrence on the first carriage ride?"

"No, and he knows it as well as I—not until the night we visited Sarah Guest's."

"Did you suggest Sarah Guest's to him as a place of meeting?"

"Most assuredly not. I did not know of such a place."

"The defendant has sworn that on that evening he put a $10 bill in your hand. Is that true?"

"That is as false a statement as even he ever made. He could not have done it. No man could have put a $10 bill in my hand." This was said in an excited manner.

The Rock Marriage Denied.

After the noon recess Miss Pollard stated that she did not know Owen Tinsley, the brother of Squire Tinsley that he had ne boat at the squire's house on the Christmas of 1893, and that no mock marriage had occurred on that occasion, as Aleck Fallis has testified.

Some wrangling between the lawyers occurred before Miss Pollard was permitted to deny that a mock marriage had taken place.

"We were in the family room," she said, "where all the children were playing about. I was taken ill," said Mrs. Tinsley took me to her room. I afterward went home with my uncle and was put to bed there.

"He did write those letters to me addressed, 'My Dear Sister Louise,'" she continued, referring to the defendant.

"The outgoing letter said that when he lived

ABOUT WHICH BIG STORIES ARE TOLD.

A Trolley Line to Run on the Mountain Top and Fine Residences to be Erected on Each Side of Johnston's Drive, so Goes the Story.

Some months ago Mr. John H. French, who was supposed to represent a syndicate, began looking up the titles to ascertain the owners of property along Johnston's drive, with a view of securing the same.

A rumor got out that the trolley company contemplated running the trolley cars along the mountain top, and wished to secure the consents of the necessary number of abutting owners along the drive and interested Mr. French to help it. The trolley line now ends where the drive begins. Whatever there may have been in this story, there was no doubt but that Mr. French had suddenly manifested considerable interest in the property. He found that much of the property had been bought in by the township in 1884 for taxes, and this gave the township the title for 20 years, unless the amount of the delinquency was paid within two years after the tax sale took place.

In several cases it could not be found who owned the property.

An investigation was started by the Township Committee. It obtained an opinion from its counsel, Mr. Charles Reed, under which it was decided that the Committee could at least lease the property for the balance of the term, or for 20 years, 10 of the 30 years having elapsed.

In this opinion Mr. Reed says:

"The laws in relation to taxes provide that for two years after the sale the owner shall have the right to redeem by paying the amount and expenses, etc.

"After two years have elapsed the purchaser at the tax sale becomes entitled to hold the lands for the balance of the period for which the lands were sold, and then they again revert to the original owner, his heirs or assigns. The purchaser of the tax title has a right to remove at the end of his term any buildings or like improvements which he has put on the land.

The total cost of Johnston's, drive which was thrown on the township by the late John Taylor Johnston's becoming a bankrupt, was as follows:

Total cost	$25,185 43
Benefits	13,759.50
Costs over benefits to be paid by Township	$11,425.93

These benefits were assessed in various sums upon 26 lots of land fronting on Johnston's Drive.

Of these lots the following were in 1890 declared liable for delinquent taxes in the following sums:

Name	Number	Amount
Mine Lot	4	$328
Mine Lot	5	262.50
W. S. Smith	6	684.
Elizabeth W. Mills	7	1285.50
Charlotte A A. Glover	8	111.
Wallace Yeit	11	180.
	12	1260
Eliza M. Stelle	13	350.
Unknown	18	70.
Martha Drake	24	720.50
Florenz Shetter	27	250.
C. B. Seymour	28	175.
A. C. Johnson	29	175.

The property were sold in 1894 to the Township for taxes and costs amounting to $6,086.10.

The interest at 12 per cent, reached by Jan. 7, 1894 ..... $4,679.32

Making, together with such other fees, costs and expenses as are allowed by law 88,945.42

The total area of the property as it exends along Johnston's drive is estimated at about 80 acres, and Mr. French has secured the 20 years' lease of this at $90 per year.

It was a burden to the township, and by this change both parties are satisfied. It is considered that Mr. French has made an exceeding good speculation for those he is understood to be acting for, represented to be the Prudential Insurance Co. of Newark as backers of the Plainfield Trolley Company.

With this in their control it is understood that fine residences will be erected on the high and healthful mountain top along the picturesque drive which has been the boast of Plainfield, though the bitter cost of North Plainfield.

Since the foregoing was written a New York correspondent's letter in the Philadelphia Times of yesterday says that owing to the extra hazard at present, and for some time to come of stock, investments, a syndicate of New York capitalists has been formed to buy up all the real estate obtainable at sight prices within thirty miles of New York, and that it has already begun making purchase, considering such real estate the safest for investments. Whether this is the syndicate which has anything to do with the rumored mountain project, or not, cannot at present be learned.

THE OWNER OF THE FLAGGING IS LIABLE.

Judge Mosher May Sue for Damages.

While on his way home from his store, on Block avenue, about eleven o'clock Saturday night, Justice of the Peace Joseph Mosher, who resides on East Fourth street, stubbed his toe against a flag stone that was raised above the others and fell full length upon the walk. He had an umbrella in one hand and a pail on the other arm, so that he had no chance to save himself from tumbling. The Judge's nose, as a result of contact with the flagging, bore a very red and injured appearance yesterday.

Mr. Mosher fell with his arms bent under him so that he was powerless to rise for a few minutes. A colored man on the other side of the street saw him fall and noticing that he didn't rise, he ran over and heard the mandate of the law upon his feet.

When the Judge, bleeding at the nose, arrived home the blood was flowing down his whiskers. He may sue the owner of the flagging.

It was fortunate that in falling as he did with arms under him that he did not break any bones. As it was two of his fingers were badly bruised.

The Judge has decided that he will not go home by that street any more, "not if the court knows itself."

LAID THE CORNER STONE.

Another New Church for Plainfield.

The laying of the corner stone of the Emanuel Baptist church, on Filmore street, took place yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. There were about 400 people present. In the corner stone was placed the constitution and by-laws of the African Baptist Association, a list of members of the church, a report of the work, and a card bearing the name of Mr. Townsend, who contributed the corner stone.

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell, pastor of the church, said in part: "Christ was the corner stone of the world not through him we achieved a great victory and by him thousands of souls were saved. So we should labor in this new edifice of ours to bring souls to him who gave his life for us."

PERSONAL.

Mr. Aaron D. Thompson has arrived home from his trip South.

Mr. J. M. Higgins' new house on Duer street is about completed.

Mrs. C. T. Fowler has moved from Kirk's boarding house to the Albion.

Mr. Rowland M. Stover, of East Ninth street, was taken seriously ill Saturday night.

Mrs. Armstrong of Camden is a guest at the home of her son, Mr. T. S. Armstrong of Duer street.

J. B. Hill and family of Westervelt avenue will remove to Mt. Vernon this week to permanently reside there.

Dr. Frank R. Searles of East Front street leaves for Bayonne City to-morrow morning to take charge of his new field.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pope of Warren street have given up housekeeping and will hereafter board, having stored their goods at Carey's.

Mr. Joseph S. Darby of Willow Grove and Miss Ida May Sonuck of North Plainfield will be united in marriage in the M. E. church on April 19th, at 4 p. m., by the Rev. Mr. Randolph, pastor.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Shirley, who was killed Friday night on the railroad track near the Pond Tool Works, took place this morning at St. Mary's church. Interment was made in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The wife and oldest daughter of Rev. Edmund S. Miles of North Newburg, N. Y., are visiting relatives in North Plainfield. Rev. Mr. Miles is attending an M. E. church conference in New York, but will come to Plainfield before going home.

The funeral of Lawyer John H. Jackson on Saturday afternoon was attended by the Plainfield lawyers in a body. The services were held at his late residence, on Second place, and were conducted by the Rev. E. M. Hodgins, rector of Trees church. Prayer was offered by the Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park avenue Baptist church. Interment was made at Hillside Cemetery. The pall bearers were: Lawyers Craig A. Marsh, Nelson Runyon, Joseph B. Coward, Walter L. Hetfield, John H. Van Winkle and Charles A. Reed. Among the floral tributes was a handsome cross of carnations from his Rahway friends and a beautiful pillow of roses; calla lilies and pinks bearing the word "Papa." Before the funeral the lawyers held a meeting in Lawyer Nelson Runyon's office. Mr. Runyon was chosen chairman and Mr. C. A. Reed secretary. Remarks on the life and death of Mr. Jackson were made and a resolution passed authorizing the drafting of suitable resolutions upon his death. The committee comprises Messrs. C. A. Reed, J. H. Van Winkle and C. A. Marsh.

Taken to Jail for Taxes.

Charles McCarthy of Plainfield avenue was taken to the Elizabeth jail to-day for the non-payment of taxes. Mr. McCarthy once owned two houses on Plainfield avenue, but the property has been sold each year for taxes.

ALMOST AN ACCIDENT.

As the Result of Careless Practice Among Boys.

Saturday afternoon, about 4.30 o'clock, as Mr. Harry Spencer was driving down Somerset street toward home from the direction of the mountain, it was by the merest chance and owing to good horsemanship, that a little boy named Shepard was not run over. Mr. Spencer was driving along at a lively gait, but he had his horse under perfect control, when the Shepard boy fell off of the rear of a stone wagon, on which he had been stealing a ride. As he fell he landed almost under Mr. Spencer's horse's feet. With quick presence of mind he gave a strong pull on the reins, at the same time turning the horse to one side with such suddenness as to almost throw the animal off its feet. The front wheel barely missed the boy's arm.

This practice among the boys of climbing upon the rear of wagons and the dropping off in the way of other wagons should be stopped. It is just, loss of limb or life may result.

Sick From Inhaling Coal Gas.

Mr. George Feller's wife and children were almost asphyxiated from coal gas Saturday night. In the City Court.

Policeman Cooney, Saturday night, arrested a youth named Elmina Lindahl, for fighting with Charley Peterson, on Park avenue. Lindahl is employed by Mr. Vail of Park avenue. Who was present this morning and plead in his behalf stating that he had been a good workman and that he would be a model lad quiet.

Judge Coddington suspended sentence on Lindahl.

George Killen was fined $5 or 20 days for being drunk and disorderly and refusing to vacate the smoking room at the depot. When ordered out by Night Reporter Master Conroy, Killen became abusive and had to be put out. After he got outside he tackled Case, and with the assistance of ticket agent Franz, Killen was worsted. Conroy took him to the lock up.

The next prisoner to plead was Fred. Broff, who said he came to Plainfield from Philadelphia about six weeks ago, since which time he had been working as gardener for Mr. Brice of Evona. He said he had never been arrested before and was not accustomed to drinking. He took a glass Saturday night and it knocked him out. He was fined $5.

Jack Morecraft, arrested by Detective Corsa for being drunk and disorderly at the depot, was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, or be committed to the county jail for 20 days. Mr. Corsa said that Morecraft was so drunk that he had to be assisted from a passenger car by the conductor and brakeman. Morecraft denied that he was assisted any more than the conductor usually assists ladies and gentlemen.

Base Ball Notes.

A tie game of ball was played on the Park avenue grounds Saturday afternoon, when the West Ends and the High School A. A. teams crossed bats for the first time. Only two innings were played owing to the disagreeable weather.

The score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5
West Ends —	1	2	1	4	0	—8
H. S. A. —	0	1	0	4	3	—8

Batteries—West Ends, G. Firstbrook, and G. Boteril; H. S. A.—C. Smith and C. Sutphen.

Next Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, the Arlingtons and the West Ends will cross bats on the Park avenue grounds.

The Arlingtons of this city would like to hear from the Scotch Plains ball team, for a game on the latter's grounds, on the afternoon of Saturday, May 5.

"Billy" Keeler, a former Crescent player, is making a reputation for himself in the National League. "P. Jay," in the Recorder, says of him: "Keeler is proving to be a great acquisition to the Baltimore team. In the opening game at Macon, Ga., March 28, he led Brouthers at the bat with two singles, a triple and a homer. He fielded, too, in fine style. Hanlon says: 'The greatest surprise of the trip has been the work of Keeler. He fields finely, runs like a deer and bats hard and often. He has far exceeded expectations.'"

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Manager Ward of the New Yorks, intends to sign Anderson, who pitched in 1892 for the West Ends of Somerville, a trial this week. Anderson is a left-hander.

The Bride Said She was From Plainfield.

Mr. E. E. Vail found the following clipping, evidently cut from a New York paper, on West Front street this morning:

"At Stamford, Conn., last Sunday, a stylishly dressed young man, giving his name as Stacy Monroe Corwin, of Greenpoint, L. I., obtained a license to marry Miss Christine Lamade, of Plainfield, N. J. Rev. Dr. Vail performed the ceremony at his residence. The bride, who was young and exceedingly pretty, said she had met the bridegroom in Germany and had just come over to marry him. Whether there is any connection between this pair and the Vienna elopers has not yet been determined."

Women Praise Mr. Codding.

[From the Westfield Standard.]

To the Editor of the Standard:

DEAR SIR—A meeting was held in Trenton today in the interest of our scientific Temperance Instruction bill. Mrs. Emma Bourne, president of the State W. C. T. U. writes me, "Mr. Codding rendered very great assistance to Mrs. Hunt and myself in getting our bill introduced. We were in great anxiety, and he freely spent time to aid us." It gives us great pleasure to make this public acknowledgement.

Yours truly,
EMMA L. STARR,
Pres. Willard W. C. T. U.

To-Meet at Westfield.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbytery of Elizabeth will hold its twenty-third annual meeting in the Presbyterian church at Westfield tomorrow. At the morning session, which opens at 10 o'clock, Miss Baldwin, missionary from India, will give an account of her work in that country, her talk being illustrated by some of the young people of the church, dressed in Hindu costumes. At three o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Robert Speer, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, will make an address; dwelling particularly on the lives of children in heathen lands.

He Stuck in the Mud and Drowned.

The body of an unknown man was found yesterday morning in a lonely part of the Rahway river, near Crossfield, where a week before three feet deep. Cries for help were heard Saturday night, and several men went along the river, but, owing to the darkness, could not find any one. Yesterday Henry Bonn renewed the search and discovered the body tying close to the bank. The man was seen in the village Saturday, but no one knew him. He probably got fast in the mud while intoxicated.

MORE IS KING THIS YEAR.

It Appears in All Colors and Is Used For About Everything.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

There is no question as to the supremacy of more this year. Its popularity few years ago was so pushing to its present vogue, it appears, that it is called in millinery trimming for entire covering for the capes, hats—in fact, for everything. It is combined with plain silk satin and woolen materials and is particularly favored, especially in the striped weaves for separate waists. These are hardly as cool as the glace and china silk bodices of last year, but they have a great deal of "go" and are well worn still. The silk and satin plunge makes the coolest lining for summer gowns, but it is doubtful if it is any better than the silk and linen material which comes in fast black, white and mode colors. This is warranted to wash as well as muslin, and its chief drawback is that in some places cuts in the seams. To other aspects it wears well and is in itself a pretty stuff, having a faintly watered effect.

Black and white, which were so universally adopted last fall, have not yet disappeared as a fashionable combination. It is becoming to many persons and therefore held in favor.

Despite the fact that silk is so fashionable this year and is seen in such variety of style and price, fine wools hold a respected place among the materials used for rich toilets. There are beautiful silk and wool goods shown in striped and figured effects and all wool stuffs in serpone, fine serges and vigneons. Since the advent of flaring skirts very soft materials, such as cashmere and henriette, have retired into the background and are for evening purposes.

An effective street costume is shown in finely woven black serge trimmed with three rows of the silk in a white design, two wide and full at the back. The front of the bodice is of moire, forming a vest over which are arranged the Rose fronts of white with wide moire revers. The back of the bodice is plain, and there is a full short basque of serge, lined with moire. The moire standing collar is surrounded by an erect flaring collar of serge, lined with moire, high in the back. The sleeves are bouffant above the elbow, but tight below, extending in points over the hand. Cut jet buttons are employed as a finish.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

James Laing Helped Capture the Whale.

In the New York World of yesterday there was an extended account of the capture of a whale at Amagansett, L. I., by the residents of that village twenty years before. The capture was made by men under the direction of Captain Edwards' crew was Mr. James Laing of this city, who was so elated over the capture that he has written to his folks here telling of his part in the affair.

TARIFF'S RIGHT OF WAY

Democratic Senate Leaders Intend to Give It Full Sway.

A MOVEMENT FOR LONG SESSIONS.

All Eager to Hear Wright Senator Hill Has to Say on the Tariff Question—The House Commands Up Its Calendar With Great Industry—More Appropriation Bills.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—If the plans of the Democratic leaders of the senate do not miscarry, the senate will devote itself almost exclusively this week to the consideration of the tariff bill. Their plan is to have the bill taken up each day immediately after the conclusion of routine morning business, which means that they desire to adhere as much of the morning hour, which usually lasts until 2 o'clock, as possible, and cut out the discussion of miscellaneous subjects, many of which are introduced when a question like the tariff bill is under discussion for the purpose of obtaining delay.

They may not succeed in getting such an order as this, but the announcement of the purpose of making an effort in that direction is an indication of their intention of involving the debate as rapidly as it possibly can be done. The Democratic members of the finance committee will also probably undertake to extend the daily sessions until 5 o'clock, which will most likely be resisted by the Republicans.

Interest in Hill's Speech.

Great interest is felt in Senator Hill's speech, which is announced for this afternoon. It is known from former utterances that he is opposed to the income tax, and that while the bill was in committee he tried to have such changes made in the schedules and objected to the wholesale adoption of the ad valorem system. Indeed it has been said that he is a whole-hog free-trader, but this is a view he does not take. A little favor in his eyes. It is not believed that he has changed his mind, but he has been very reticent on the subject since the close of the Silver Purchase debate.

Whether Mr. Hill shall speak in accordance with his announcement will depend upon Senator Peffer. Mr. Peffer has not finished the speech he began on Friday last Thursday, and he will have the floor to proceed today if he insists upon holding it. It is considered probable, however, that he will yield it and continue his address later in the week. Senator Lodge has announced a speech for tomorrow and may also consume time with Senator Peffer. The latter is expected to consume all of another day and possibly two days more. These three speeches are the only ones positively announced for the present week, but there are other senators prepared to take the floor when the opening shall occur.

Other questions which may receive attention during the week are the Chinese treaty, the Russian thistle bill and the resolution providing for the coinage of Mexican dollars in this country.

The House Programme.

Appropriation bills will have the right of way in the house during the week. It is the intention of the house managers to push ahead with these bills and get them out of the way as soon as possible. Some of the pronounced Democrats are alarmed at the slow progress made in the senate with the tariff bill and the seeming indifference those in charge of it are manifesting. They say that if it ties up the work of the house the country will see that any responsibility for the delay of the tariff which may exist will lay at the door of the senate.

The principal fight involved in the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill is the question of subsidy to the new southern mail. It may require two days to dispose of this single item. After the postoffice bill is disposed of the consular and diplomatic bill will be called up. This bill will probably be made the basis for a general review of the foreign relations of the government.

The question connected with the attempt to restore Queen Liliuokalani will again be thrashed over. The Brazilian resolution and the matter of the withdrawal of Minister Gresham in saluting insurgent General de Mello will come in for their share of attention, as will also the Bluefields (Nicaragua) incident, but, if the house will only go ahead with the army bill. The river and harbor bill will follow it.

Wrecked on a Lee Shore.

HULL, Mass., April 9.—During a heavy snowstorm the three-masted schooner Mary A. Hood of Philadelphia, loaded with lumber pipe for Bath, Me., went on a lee shore, broadside on, off Strawberry hill. The crew was saved by the life savers attached to the Hull station.

Society Weddings in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, April 9.—At St. James' Episcopal church the marriage of L. M. Howland and Miss Leonora von Stosch of New York occurred. Miss von Stosch is a granddaughter of Peter Cooper. Mr. Howland was one of the World's fair commissioners from New York.

Newport Cottage Robbed.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 9.—The unoccupied summer cottage of C. D. Rhinelander of New York was robbed of a large quantity of furniture, brica-brac and crockery. Two men were arrested, charged with the robbery.

BLUEFIELDS NEWS.

The Blockade Raised—Protests Against Nicaraguan Interference.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9.—A special correspondent in Bluefields says that the blockade between Bluefields and Rama, which has existed since the assassination of Wilson, was broken when five steamships went up the river.

There are six Nicaraguans only in Bluefields, who are keeping the entire community in a subjugation state of terror and excitement. Were it not for the suffering of the poor people the Americans here would enjoy the nipping game played by Charlie Antayo. Without backing of any description from Nicaragua and with only five henchmen he has drawn about 30,000 taxes from the business men of Bluefields. There has been much suffering among the poor people during the last few days. The people are hoping that with the arrival of a United States warship they will not be again subjected to further outrage and cruel hardships.

A public meeting was held on the evening of March 31. It was addressed by Captain John McCafferty, who said in conclusion: "I am here with you to protest against the actions of these Nicaraguans, who have broken the peace of this community. They have no legal right to be here, and therefore you would be justified were they pounded and shot."

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, By the citizens of Bluefields—Americans, Englishmen, Germans, French, Creoles and Indians—convened in public meeting, this 28th day of March, that the chief Sally Bramble, with his band of Nicaraguans, is hereby requested, with the assistance of Messrs. J. Taylor and S. Hodgson, to remove control of the government of the Mosquito reservation; and be it further

Resolved, That we, the citizens of Bluefields, irrespective of nationality, also endorsed in general public meeting, do now pledge the said Albert Henry Clarence, chief of the Mosquito Indians, our moral and political support in the maintenance of all those rights guaranteed to the Mosquito Indians by the treaty of Managua, provided that the general government of Great Britain does not further interfere with the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine.

MORE RIOTING THREATENED.

Strikers in the Coke Regions Ready For Mischief Again.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 9.—If the announced programme of the strikers is carried out, today will be a day of rioting and bloodshed in the coke regions. Opinions differ as to the real likelihood of the strikers making good their alleged purposes to terrorize the region again. Mass meetings were held all over the southern end of the region on Sunday, and they were largely attended. The purpose of these meetings on the four days which went to get the men together to prepare for the threatened marches on the plants in operation today.

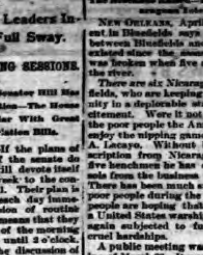
Against the avowed purpose of the strikers are the efforts of the deputy sheriffs to disarm them. Operations will be carried on today with a force of deputies about equal to that of the strikers. Sheriff Cummins, Chief Deputy Hogg and Deputy Sheriff Hall, of Pittsburg, Crumpin, Glenn and Hall, of Chicago and St. Louis, and Deputy Sheriff Hall, of Allegheny, will be in charge of the deputies. Sheriff Cummins has issued a proclamation warning the strikers against violence, and declaring that he will protect the men in their rights. He has also issued a proclamation calling upon all citizens to assist him in preserving the peace.

Against the above proclamations the strikers have issued a counter proclamation, declaring that they will not be interfered with in their peaceful picketing, and that they will not be disarmed. They declare that they will not be intimidated by the deputies, and that they will not be responsible for the consequences if they are molested.

Sheriff Cummins has received a telegram from Governor Pattison, stating that he will not call out the militia unless the sheriff's force is inadequate to preserve the peace.

Rheumatism Impure Blood

Grandmother and Granddaughter Both Cured by Hood's.



"G. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—I will write this letter to tell a little about what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I have been a strong woman all through my life until about ten years ago when I began to be troubled by rheumatism. It has been sometimes very severe off and on, and esterrh in the head has also caused me a great deal of annoyance. I have had dreadful pain-ful days, days I could not walk across the house to do my work without holding on to a chair or having someone lead me about, but thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla

I Am in Good Health

now. If do not intend to be without this medicine as long as I live, and it may not be a great while, as I am now 70 years of age. I want to tell you also about my granddaughter. A year ago she was almost covered with sores on her body, caused by impure blood. Her head and face were dreadful to look at. It was naturally a very great affliction to a young woman, being unable to go into company any. We went to a physician, did he told us to have her take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and take, "the right to have began on this medicine before." It was not long before her body was clear, as her head and neck; and he said, 'I know her blood is in an awful state, but Hood's Sarsaparilla

Will Bring Her Out All Right.'

So it has. Hood's Sarsaparilla thoroughly purified her blood and she is free from all eruptions. Her skin is clear and beautiful now. We all praise Hood's Sarsaparilla and are thankful there is such a good medicine. Mrs. ROBERTS, 1 Bridge street, Lowell, Mass. Hood's Pills are also been cured of a dreadful case of blood poisoning by Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. LOUISA A. WINGATE, Beverly, N. J.

WESTERN ARMY STRIKES A SNAG.

Troops and a Gatling Gun Waiting For Them In Ogden—Coxey's Commonwealers, However, Proceed Through Pennsylvania Undisturbed.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The unceremonious manner in which the freight car load of 41 unemployed men from Cincinnati was taken in charge by the police is a foretaste of the reception which awaits Coxey's army. Although the police department was taken somewhat by surprise by the unexpected coming of the party, there was no delay or difficulty in massing all the reserves at the suburban station to meet them.

Today the men will be brought into police court and a charge of vagrancy entered against them. The local law against vagrancy is a sweeping measure. It applies to all men without visible means of support who are destitute, likely to become charges upon the city, who have no vocation or means of gaining a livelihood or who solicit alms.

The penalty for those who are arraigned under the provisions of the act is 90 days in the workhouse at hard labor, but it rests within the discretion of the judge to accept the promise to leave the city at once or to accept $200 bonds as surety that they will not beg or become public charges.

There is no doubt of the application of this law to the band from Texas under Captain Primrose, for the search in the police station of the men showed that the total cash capital of the company amounted to about $2.

To Dispose of the Army.

Of course the men cannot give bonds for their good behavior if permitted to remain in the city, but it is not improbable that the court will accept their promises to leave town and have officers detailed to see that they keep their word, since it is evident that they are neither criminals nor confirmed tramps, and the expense of keeping them in the workhouse would be a large item.

In the meantime they have received fairly good meals and have been passably comfortable except for the ignominy of confinement in cells usually occupied by criminals. Captain Primrose, the leader of the band, may find himself in more serious trouble than his followers. There is an old law on the statute books, which was passed in 1830 and has never been repealed, which makes it an offense to bring into the District of Columbia any destitute people who are likely to become public charges, with a penalty of from $25 to $50 fine for each offense.

The police authorities are considering the advisability of bringing a charge of violating this law against the leader, in which case his fines, with the alternative workhouse imprisonment, would amount to a very heavy punishment.

The same charge may be brought against General Coxey if disaster does not overtake the army of the commonweal before it completes its itinerary. Of course the vagrancy act may be brought into application against the followers, and besides there are two other laws which it is the avowed and advertised purpose of the Coxeyites to break.

One is the act of congress regulating the use of the capitol grounds, which forbids in stringent terms any gathering, demonstration or parade, the making of any oration or use of threatening language or the display of any banner or device to attract attention. The other is a local law which forbids men to congregate on the steps of any public or private building. It rests within the discretion of the vice president and speaker of the house to suspend the capitol regulations for any proper purpose, and perhaps Coxey's agents will apply to them for permission to carry out their programme.

Major Moore Will Enforce the Law.

Major Moore, chief of police, said, in speaking of the march of Coxey, "These laws are on the statute books, and we have no discretion but to enforce them if Coxey's body does arrive, unless congress should give them permission to congregate on the capitol steps."

The details of the police movement against Coxey are kept a secret. No doubt he will be met at the district limits, and if the numbers of his army are too great for the police force with the local militia will be called to their aid. What to do with the army when it arrives and is taken into custody, if it should be, is a difficult question, because the jails and station houses of Washington will not accommodate such a crowd. To simply repulse the army and send them en masse to enter the district would be to turn them loose on the suburban residents of Virginia and Maryland, and this is an aspect of the matter which gives rise to much uneasiness here.

Major Moore has received a letter from the chief of police of Allegheny City describing the Coxey men in most uncomplimentary terms. He declares that there are several professional criminals in their ranks; that four or five burglaries were committed by them while they were in his town, and that there would have been more depredations but for the close police surveillance over the army during its stay.

Colonel Rodgers, the Washington representative of Coxey, said concerning the men arrested: "This body of men is not at all connected with the commonweal army, and Coxey men will come on in until word is previously sent to our headquarters, and none will come in disorder or without military discipline. There will be no resistance of the law, and none of the men will enter the city as a body until the main line arrives."

Labor Leaders Indignant.

Many of the labor leaders in this city are incensed at the arrest of the 41 unemployed men and declare that the proceeding was without lawful authority. They say also that Major Moore had no right to deal with these men in a manner intended as a horrible example for Coxey's army.

It is claimed that when the case comes into court there will be plenty of friends of the arrested men, including a constitutional lawyer and member of congress, and if authority has been overstepped in this arrest the proper people will be made to suffer for it.

It is held that a constitutional question is thereby raised which will be tested to the utmost, and the laboring men of the district seem to be aroused to a pitch of willingness to back such inquiries with their time and money.

Trouble For Industrials.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 9.—The special train bearing Governor West and a portion of the Utah militia which left here arrived at Ogden, where they were met by the mayor, chief of police and other officials. A consultation was held between Governor West, General Superintendent Bancroft of the Union Pacific and Superintendent Knapp of the Southern Pacific roads. Knapp was notified not to bring the so called industrial army into the territory, that they could not stay at Ogden or any other point within the territorial limits, and unless arrangements could be made to send them east they must be returned.

The consultation ended, and the troops were marched up town and the gatling guns planted in the public square. A long consultation between the territorial authorities was held in the mayor's office, and then the whole military force was placed under command of Lieutenant Lassiter of the Sixteenth United States infantry.

The governor and officials held another consultation, and the governor was informed that the industrials had been hailed several miles west of the Utah line pending arrangements which the Southern Pacific was trying to make with the Union Pacific for transportation east. The Union Pacific finally gave its ultimatum that it would not carry the men at less than full rates, and the Southern Pacific then ordered the train brought into Ogden in defiance of the governor's protest. Governor West expressed himself in strong terms to Knapp and characterized the whole matter as a conspiracy between the Southern Pacific and the state of California.

When the train arrived in Ogden, it was switched into the yard and surrounded by the militia. It was more than two hours before the men got anything to eat. They are still under guard, and the Union Pacific refuses to modify its ultimatum, while the territorial authorities are urging the Southern Pacific to take them west. The men are reported to be peaceful and orderly so far, but determined to get east if possible.

The Army at Brownsville.

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., April 9.—This town, where the distinguished and lamented Hinine spent the greater portion of his boyhood days, welcomed the army of the Commonweal of Christ fairly well. Great enthusiasm has been for weeks aroused over the proposed arrival, and the usual Sabbath quiet was disturbed early in the afternoon by the congregation of people upon the streets. The army camped in Braeebridge hall, in the center of town, and the marchers retired early. The feeling in Monongahela City is generally favorable to the Coxey movement, but no recruits were received.

DIED IN A CELL.

Case of Black Smallpox In a Chicago Police Station.

CHICAGO, April 9.—A case of black smallpox caused the liveliest kind of commotion in the Harrison Street police station. A man suffering with the plague died in a cell there, and from 30 to 40 officers and 45 prisoners were exposed to the disease.

The victim's name was Benson Sherman, but nothing further has been ascertained regarding him. He was brought to the station house, where he passed the desk sergeant that Sherman was drunk and asked the police to look him in a cell until he was sober. He was locked, and about three hours afterward the lockup keeper noticed that Sherman's face and hands had turned black. The health department was at once notified, and as soon as the health officer saw the man he pronounced the disease black smallpox.

Guns of the health office at once went and superintendent a thorough fumigation of the place. Everything was done to relieve the suffering of the man, and preparations were made to remove him to the pesthouse, but before the ambulance arrived he died. Inspector Laughlin, upon learning that a victim of smallpox had died in the station, ordered the place quarantined. Dr. Gunn also ordered that everybody in the station be vaccinated, and a corps of physicians was soon at work on the arms of the prisoners and officers. The prisoners were removed.

Ten Persons Breathed Gas.

BOSTON, April 9.—Ten people were nearly asphyxiated in a tenement house at 36 Carey street as a result of a leaky gaspipe. Six members of the family of John Glynn and four members of Patrick Geary's family are at the hospital and are considered in a critical condition.

TILLMAN IN A RAGE.

He Attacks the President and the "Blood Sucking Gold Thieves."

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 9.—Governor Tillman, in an interview given at the executive mansion here, gave vent to his pent up emotions and political prejudices as follows:

"Yes, they call me a Populist. I will tell them that I am the truest representative of Jeffersonian Democracy in the land in American politics today. Let me tell you that I don't see anything ahead now but for the southern Democrats to combine their forces with the western Populists and go into the next national campaign on new party lines. The northwestern Democrats and Republicans are now together. It is a combination against the moneyed interests."

The governor then, turning suddenly and in a manner just excited and very forcible manner, said:

"I despise Cleveland and his mugwumps. He is no better than the rankest Republican. He has destroyed the Democratic party. The south and west will be forced to unite and have a complete reorganization of party lines. The people who are afraid of the negro and other questions will have to cast aside their fears on those scores and come together on the one line of fighting the money combination. Cleveland has been working under the dictation of the New York bankers and bargaining with them in the matter of the issue of bonds.

"He promised the banks, if they would take them, there would be no more legislation on the silver question by this congress. Congress passed the seigniorage act, and he vetoed the bill, indicating plainly the nature of his bargain with the bankers. The whole thing is such a scheme of robbery that he ought to be impeached for it. It is a shame and a disgrace. The idea of this great government having to beg a lot of shylocks' assistance is so outrageous that there is not any language too strong in which to characterize it.

"Cleveland is owned body and soul by these scoundrels." He secured his nomination at Chicago through the influence of a subsidized press, and what votes he lacked there, after exhausting such means, he bought with promises of patronage, which promises have since been redeemed, and the goods have been delivered. His attempt to bowbeat and debauch the senators and representatives was outrageous in the extreme. If these cowardly congressmen up there had any appreciation of their duty to their constituents at home, they would impeach him.

"If the silver congressmen will issue a call for a silver convention and carry the war into Africa, we will teach those blood sucking gold thieves a lesson in politics such as they have not had since Jackson's campaign against the banks. The farmers of the south and west will move onward in a solid body and demand legislation that will give them relief from the grinding poverty produced by 6 cent cotton and 30 cent wheat."

More Hailstones Like Hens' Eggs.

EATONTOWN, Monm., April 9.—A hail of the largest hailstones ever witnessed in this part of the state occurred here. The streets were white with hail, and many window lights were broken. Many stones were as large as hens' eggs.

HER EMANCIPATION.

RADICAL CHANGE IN WOMAN'S EDUCATION NECESSARY.

She Should Be a Worker and Should Be Permitted From Childhood to Develop Her Individuality and Acquire Knowledge as a Boy Does.

Some one quoted Dr. Stanton Coit the other day as saying that New York girls are lamentably precocious. Precocity as a mark stability as that giddy insect and as changeable as the colors of the chameleon.

These terrible sentiments Dr. Coit modestly disclosed in an interview, but he did express some views in which all women and all men except bachelors will be profoundly interested. The subject was not make an exemplar even of the bachelors, for Dr. Coit himself belongs to the great unmarried, and he at least is decidedly interested in the subject.

"In the first place," said Dr. Coit, "the subject of the emancipation of women has not a fully been seriously taken up since John Stuart Mill's took on 'The Subjection of Women' appeared. It has been agitated by groups of people who were interested in the question of the rights of the question and who might be called faddists. But the whole subject has not been taken hold of with serious effort. The great trouble is to give both sexes, of women. Their defects are those of education and environment, not of nature. Today writes of the manner in which a girl is brought up with the object that she is to please her master—man. She is taught to be alluring, in one way or another, by her beauty, or her music, or her mind. And the aim of it all is to catch some man.

"Now, really, the same thing is even more true of the American girl, because in the sentiment it is the parents who arrange the marriages. The girl is scarcely considered in the arrangements. In this country, however, she comes with a woman herself without much assistance. As a consequence our American girls are the most alluring, the most fascinating, brilliant, and perfect type of sepet of any in the world. But, for all that, they are not more efficient. Take an English woman. An American woman does not perform the household functions which her English sister does; neither are our American women successful housekeepers. They are proverbially inefficient in that direction. They have failed in all these years to solve the servant question, and they are growing to be less and less of their children and to delegate their care and training to nurses and governesses.

"It is to education which is at fault. Suppose a boy was brought up with the sole purpose of making him attractive to some woman. But, no. He is permitted to develop his own individuality. He is allowed to do things and say things 'because he is a boy,' while the girl is always hushed up. It is terrible how women are kept in long clothes long past the time for walking, to use one of Mrs. Browning's expressions.

"It may be asked what her object in life might be if it were not matrimony. Is she the equal of men and able to have a career outside of the home? To this it might be answered that the most stupid men have careers, and indeed even if women were no cleverer than the most stupid men they, too, could take careers. They could be scrubwomen, if they could be nothing better, or walking upon body work they could go to and fill their lives with the interests with which a man fills his. It isn't strange that at present a woman's sole object in life is matrimony. How else is she to make a living? I think that women should become workers. Say that a woman marries at 25 (she ought not to marry earlier). There are 10 years, from 15 to 25, during which she is capable of earning her own living. Take out the most 15 years for child rearing. The woman is then 40, her children are in school, and she is free during the day. She is riper in mind and experience and is more fitted than ever before to perform valuable service in industrial and civil affairs. From that time until she is 70 she should be a worker. It is better for her and for society. Taking out the 15 years for the rearing of children, there are 45 years when she may be a member of the industrial world.

"When a woman marries she should have some means of earning her living. It may be said that she belongs to the industrial part of society, because she keeps her husband's house and takes care of the children. But she does not in reality, because she does not work for the man who provides for an employer. He is not free to discharge her if she does not do her work well, and she cannot work for some one else if he does not pay her. There should be some arrangement by which a certain portion of the man's wages should be set aside for herself left at his employer's for her to draw. I have seen so many, many cases where a husband spends his money in drink, or in gambling, or in something else, while the poor wife is powerless to prevent it.

"I am not at all sure that the problem should not be solved in another way. When a woman is rearing children, what is she doing? She is performing a civic function, just as much as the schoolteacher or the instructor who trains the soldiers and sailors of the country. If that is the case, why should she not be paid for her services and care be taken to see that they are properly done? It would result in the rearing of better men and women, as well as the payment of that unpaid class, the mothers.

"People will ask if all this liberty for women will not result in a general laxity of customs and morals, but there I fall back on my belief in woman's nature. I believe she is freer, purer, more delicate than man, and I believe that by this increased liberty to women men will be put where they will be judged by the same standard. If it is wrong for a man to smoke, it is wrong for a woman to smoke, and if there is no harm in a man's smoking then there is no harm in a woman's smoking. The only way in which to have absolute freedom is to establish one standard by which the morality of men and women shall be judged. Every restraint put upon man's laxity means added liberty for woman."—New York Sun.

A Dressing Room Hammock.

A tasseled hammock hung diagonally across a small dressing room is affected by some who strive after uniqueness rather than elegance. Filled with bright sofa cushions, it lends a decided air of oriental luxury. The easy appearance is further heightened by one apartment by a collection of musical instruments in one corner of the room and a single shelf of books running about the four walls as a beading to the dado.—Chicago Tribune.

A Hint to Biscuit Makers.

Biscuit made with an acid and an alkali, such as baking powder, soda and cream of tartar, or soda and sour milk, should be baked in very quick ovens. The hotter the better. An oven that will color a piece of white paper dark brown in one minute will be none too hot for this kind of biscuit.—Exchange.

High Heeled Boots.

It has been stated that a young lady went one day to an oculist with a trouble in her eyes which threatened frightful results. She was already in a state where reading was out of the question, and other entertainments of a similar character were a task. The oculist looked at her with his professional wisdom, asked her various questions, and then suddenly amazed her by asking her to put out her foot. The foot, in its kid boot, with a wicked little high heel, was thrust forth. The doctor eyed it a moment with a stolid face. "Go home and burn that," he said, "take off those heels. Keep them off for a month, and then come to me again and we'll see how the eyes are." The young lady learned by her experience and a little wise talk how near she had come to having no eyes at all. It served to show that there is the possibility that with that instrument of torture constantly at work in the center of the foot, where so many delicate nerves and tendons lie that are so intimately connected with all the other delicate nerves of the body, there must presently come disarrangements and disease that may reach the vital machinery.—New York Recorder.

Mother's Influence.

Early influences will leave their mark on later day actions. The training that a mother gives impresses the matter relations, though sometimes it is hard to find even a trace of the good in the superabundance of evil that has been acquired in willful straying from the path marked out by the tender guide.

Of one thing we may be certain. Whatever good there is in us was imbibed from the teachings of childhood; whatever land is a personal acquirement by no means to be commended. Mothers are always the purest, sweetest and last beings on the face of the earth. No one can take their place, and no one could even copy successfully their loving forbearance and gentle guidance. The person who is blessed with a mother, away into old age is happy indeed, for that anchor restrains without hampering the fragile vessel anxious to sail forth into the troubled waters.—Philadelphia Times.

The Use of Boiled Water.

"Cook your water as you do your food," is the advice of a well known physician. This is really not difficult to manage if the water is well distilled, and when properly filtered and aerated boiled water is as bright, sparkling and agreeable to the taste as any other. There are filters that come especially for aerating water as well as filtering it, and if servants are accustomed to fill the filter regularly the daily provision of water in this way becomes as much a part of the household machinery as the cooking, and one has always the satisfaction of knowing that water prepared in this way is perfectly safe. It must be borne in mind, however, that the temperature of boiling water must be just brought to a boil in order sufficient to destroy bacteria. Thirty minutes steady boiling is the rule.

Mourning Veils.

The use of nun's veiling for mourning veils is almost universal. One reason assigned for its wide supplanting of the traditional crape is that it is lighter and therefore less cumbersome. This is a mistake. It is softer and its drapery more manageable, but it has not by any means the body of crape, and every woman who has ever worn it knows how heavily and persistently it drags from the head.

A remedy for this drawback is to incline the head forward after the fancy end of the veil is thrown back, and pin it fast to the collar of the dress in front of the bustle. Use a small black safety pin. When the shower or end is thrown back, the pin is concealed, and the weight of the veil is their flows on the bonnet and hood.—New York Commercial.

The Reasonableness of Women.

Here is a singular fact that reflects rather badly upon our heads and hearts. Among the women there is constant controversy as to the advisability of taking risks on women's lives. Very conservative companies refuse them in toto, while others insist upon the application of certain restrictions and restrictions. For example, no company will insure a wife's life in favor of her husband, while nine-tenths of the policies issued on women are for the benefit of their wives. When cross questioned on this point, an officer of a great life insurance company recently said, in answer, but finally confessed that they feared man's abusing their opportunities. I simply state facts and leave individuals to draw conclusions.—American Woman.

Woman's Influence.

When women talk of the decay of chivalry in men, they forget that men are, to a great extent, what women make them. Men are the exact reflection of their wives and sisters and mothers. Through the history of the character of the women of that time we have a certain knowledge of the women of the era.

As it is impossible for the fountain to rise higher than its source, so it is impossible for men to rise higher than their wives, mothers, or sisters. So when women begin to realize the vast influence they exert they will not complain of the lack of chivalry when they do nothing to call forth that chivalry, devotion and respect.—Philadelphia Press.

Susan B. Anthony.

"American women," says Miss Maude Banks, General N. P. Banks' daughter, "do not realize what they owe to Miss Susan B. Anthony. When she began to work for their advancement, those were days when the usual newspapers would describe her appearance when she went under some such headlines as 'Cackling Hens.' The tears were in her eyes as she talked about it. Now, if it had not been for what she has done for women, take off those heels. Keep them off for a month, and then come to me again and we'll see how the eyes are." With that the young eyes were held, and the young lady learned by her experience and a little wise talk how near she had come to having no eyes at all. It served to show that there is the possibility that with that instrument of torture constantly at work in the center of the foot, where so many delicate nerves and tendons lie that are so intimately connected with all the other delicate nerves of the body, there must presently come disarrangements and disease that may reach the vital machinery and the health.—New York Recorder.

How to Touch Up the White Hairs.

Now that every woman must appear to be young, whatever her age, gray hair is more unpopular than ever, and women who have passed their first youth use many devices to prevent the first sign of encroaching time. "I have found out a capital way of touching up white hairs," said a youngish oldish matron quoted by an exchange. "Ordinary sienna earth put on with a camel's hair brush will not stain the skin, and turns those horrid little evidences either brown or black, according to the number of applications."

Where Tidies Fail.

The back and arms of easy chairs that are worn and soiled look much better if covers of quiet colored linen in ecru, gray or pale brown are used instead of the regulation tidy or dark blue, with a straggling conventional pattern worked on them, are used than with the old fashioned Gules and squares of white linen or lace. The latter only make the coverings look more soiled and faded by contrast.—New York Herald.

TO DRESS WELL AT MODERATE COST

is a problem that must be faced by many. Our success has been largely due to the fact that we can furnish clothing equal in style, cut and finish to those of the high priced tailors at a much less cost. With our own factory, producing large assortments of the highest quality of clothing, joined with the fact that during the months of January, February and March, while custom tailors were idle, we have been able to employ the best men at low wages, we are in a position to exceed all previous offers in clothing, both in qualities and prices.

We keep up to the minute on all new styles and as a rule are first to introduce them to the retail trade. Every detail of manufacture is so carefully watched that there is slight chance of dissatisfaction. If any should exist, our offer is always open to return the money cheerfully and promptly.

EDSALL'S

A TRAVELER IN IRONS.

Walked Twenty Miles With Handcuffed Hands.

HANDKERCHIEF HID HIS FETTERS.

After Tramping at Night All the Way From Mamaroneck to New York City an Escaped Prisoner's Manacled Hands Betray Him When He Buys a Ticket.

NEW YORK, April 9.—A medium sized young man, whose clothes were walking rags and covered with mud and dirt, climbed slowly up the steps of the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street station of the Third Avenue Elevated road. When he arrived in front of the ticket seller's window, he made several ineffectual efforts to get his hand into the change pocket of his coats. His movements were hampered, however, as his wrists seemed to be bound together by a handkerchief. The ticket agent asked him what was the matter, but the man made no reply. Then walking up to the ticket chopper he said:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but would you kindly get a ticket out of my pocket for me? I have injured my wrists and have to keep them bound together with this bandage. It prevents me from getting my hands around to my pockets."

Could Not Use His Hands.

"Certainly," replied the ticket chopper, and he stuck his hands in the man's pocket, pulled out one of two $ note pieces which were there and handed it to him. The man walked back to the ticket window, and after buying a ticket he dropped it in the box and walked out on the platform.

Policeman Caspar Platte of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street station was standing on the platform when the stranger came out. He noticed the handkerchief around the wrists and asked to see what the matter was.

"I can't take off the bandage," replied the man, and he tried to pull his hands around to the other side. The policeman grabbed them, however, and pulled away the handkerchief, revealing a pair of handcuffs.

"I thought so," remarked the officer. "I guess you'd better come with me."

"I guess I had, too," was the grim reply. "You seem to have collared me all right. It's hard luck to be caught now, though, after walking 20 miles."

The young man accompanied the policeman quietly to the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street station. There he gave his name as George Conklin and said he came from New Haven. He was unable to remember the name of the street or the number of the house in which he lived. Despite his misfortune in being recaptured, the prisoner imagined heartily as he told the police the story of his experiences during the preceding 24 hours. He was not a crook, he said, but simply a man in hard luck. He had been wandering about the country, he said, and on Saturday reached Mamaroneck.

Man's Arrest and Escape.

The man then went on to tell how he had entered the house of a Mr. Wells while the family was at church, and was helping himself to little knickknacks in the parlor when Mr. Wells came in. "I didn't want to argue," said Conklin. "I just jumped right through the window and into the arms of the town constable, who was passing. "

The man then related how he was taken to the town hall, handcuffed, locked in a small room on the third floor and left there alone while the constable went off in search of a justice of the peace. He escaped by climbing out of a window and down a water pipe. Then he made for the woods, where he vainly endeavored to rid himself of the handcuffs. He pounded them with stones until his hands and wrists became so sore and swollen that he had to stop. Then he made up his mind to come to this city, feeling confident that once he got there he could rid himself of them without any difficulty. It is nearly 20 miles from Mamaroneck, but Conklin says he walked the entire distance during the night, and his appearance when captured seemed to indicate that he was telling the truth. He was taken back to Mamaroneck this morning.

Seminole Boys' Fatal Racing.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 9.—News has reached out of a terrible tragedy enacted at the Baptist Mission college, at Wewoka, the capital city of the Seminole nation. There has been a bitter feeling against an Indian boy named Frank Short. One night recently, after all had retired in the dormitory on the third floor, three boys stole to Short's cot, picked him up, carried him to the window and threw him to the ground. The fall injured him so badly that he has since died.

Threw Off the Bloodhounds.

JACKSON, Miss., April 9.—Charles O. Summers, the detective sentenced to the penitentiary for five years for stealing $6,000 from the Southern Express company at Meridian, Miss., in 1893, has escaped for the second time. The bloodhounds refused to follow after striking the railroad.

Swift Talks in a Snowstorm.

BOSTON, April 9.—In a blinding snowstorm, with a bitterly cold accompaniment, Morrison I. Swift and a group of devotees held a meeting on Beacon Common to make arrangements for a battalion of 1,000 of Boston's unemployed to join Coxey's commonweal army.

Fresh Does Not Blame the Huns.

PITTSBURG, April 9.—H. C. Frick, who controls at least two-thirds of the coke making plants in the region, defends in an interview the foreign cokers and says they are hardly responsible for the trouble. He will not dispense with their labor.

Big Lockout Threatened.

CHICAGO, April 9.—There is a strong probability that the employers of labor in the various building trades will declare a lockout by next Wednesday and throw from 60,000 to 100,000 men out of work.

Bark Elma Plunted.

SAVANNAH, April 9.—The Norwegian bark Elma, which was blown ashore at quarantine station last August and afterward sold, has been floated and towed to this city.

Steam Fishing Boat Lost.

LONDON, April 9.—A steam fish trawler, bound home from Iceland, has been wrecked near Grimsby, Lincolnshire, and six of her crew were lost.

CHALLENGED HIS WIFE.

A Prize Fight Between Husband and Wife to Decide Who Is Master.

BUFFALO, April 8.—George Grawitz came home drunk after being on a spree for three weeks. He ate his supper in silence and then went up stairs into the garret. His wife heard him throwing things about, but paid no attention to him.

About half an hour later Grawitz came down stairs with two old fashioned shotguns. They were loaded for bear in the woods, and Grawitz was ugly. He made for his wife, and handing one of the guns to her he shouted, "Now shoot or get shot!" The poor woman took the weapon and staggered round the room, vainly attempting to get away.

She did not know how to handle the gun, and it went off in her hand. The charge entered the ceiling, showering plaster on the couple. The drink crazed man took this as an acceptance of the challenge for a duel, and raising the gun to his shoulder he took deliberate aim at his wife. Almost paralyzed with fear, the woman saw only one avenue of escape. It was a desperate change, but she took it. She made a sudden jump just as he fired and went through a window, carrying glass and sash with her. Grawitz fired a second shot through the window, but it did not take effect.

Mrs. Grawitz dragged herself to the house of a neighbor, who cared for her while the police were sent for. It took three policemen to subdue Grawitz. He was locked up on a charge of assault in the first degree.

Negroes Buried in a Wrecked Building.

MEMPHIS, April 9.—The three story brick building on 134 and 136 Beale street collapsed. Four persons were killed and five wounded, and there are believed to be two others in the ruins. All the dead, injured and missing are negroes of the lower class. The building was built in 1869 and was regarded as unsafe because of the inferior material used in its construction. The upper floors were cut up into lodging rooms for colored women and men.

Ballroom Extraordinary.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., April 9.—A dispatch was received here from Gillespie county stating that that section was visited by terrific hail storms, doing great damage to crops. Many cattle were killed by the stones, some of which were six inches in circumference. The grass chunks of ice went through roofs of houses.

WORK FOR 30 OR 40 MEN.

MACADAMIZING THE DRIVEWAY OF HILLSIDE CEMETERY.

Col. Tyler Says that Mayor Gilbert is to Have the Work Done, and that he Thinks it Will Furnish Work for 30 or 40 Men for a Month.

The Citizens' Organized Aid Association held a regular monthly meeting in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church last night. Col. Tyler presided.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A report was read from the treasurer, Mr. H. P. Reynolds, showing that the total amount received during March had been $15.75, making the total receipts $937.97, while only $38.50 had been paid out since the last meeting, leaving a balance on hand of $299.37. Col. Tyler stated that a check for $10 had been received by him at the meeting, making the receipts $314.37. The report was received and filed.

Miss Leonard, the secretary, reported that she had received a letter from Mrs. Walker Slone, stating that Mr. Moss had sailed for Europe for a trip of seven weeks and that he wished on this account to resign from the Council and have some one elected in his place so that the work might not be delayed on his account. It was decided that the secretary write a note to Mrs. McGee informing her that as the Council would only hold one more meeting before Mr. McGee's return, that it was the Council's wish that his name should remain on the list, as he had expressed an interest in the work.

The secretary also reported that she had received a letter from a gentleman in Bayonne City asking for information about the Plainfield Association as he had heard that it was a model institution and that it was Bayonne's desire to start just such an organization.

A report was read from the Committee on Co-operation, of which Mrs. Dexter O. Tiffany is chairman, by which it was shown that 24 churches would co-operate with the association, but that out of the 31 secret societies that she had written to, only 14 had responded, and only three of those were willing to co-operate with the association. There was little danger of overlapping charity, however, as the association had but very few on their lists that were receiving aid.

Mrs. George H. Babcock was elected a member of the Council to represent the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and Mrs. Charles C. Cokefair was elected as a representative of the First Methodist church.

The Employment Committee, through Mrs. Oglvke, reported progress.

The Rev. G. Kennedy Nowell, of the Distriction Committee, reported that during the past month 42 persons had applied for aid and work; 31 asked for work and help for aid; four had not applied for aid before and were helped; one was found unworthy and three were given work. The work on the road had stopped March 31st and since that time the Committee had no work to offer applicants. The total number of persons applying for aid and work from December 1st to March 1st, was 230. Mr. Nowell also stated that there had been a noticeable falling off in the number who applied for aid.

Ex-Judge William R. Codington was elected a member of the Distriction Committee, to fill a vacancy.

In answer to a question of whether persons belonging to the Association and not to the Council could attend the meetings, Col. Tyler said that the meetings were open to the members of the Association and also to the public.

Mr. Craig A. Marsh was appointed Counsel to the Association, on suggestion of Col. Tyler.

Col. Tyler said he had hoped that Mrs. Tiffany would favor the Council with a paper she had prepared on the subject of the aid Association at this meeting.

On motion, Mrs. Tiffany was invited to read such a paper at some future meeting.

Mrs. Woodruff said there was about 20 or 25 men who were repeatedly asking for work, four of whom were over 60 years old, and she would like to know if the Association could furnish work for them.

In reply, Col. Tyler stated that Mayor Gilbert was about to have the work of macadamizing the driveways in Hillside Cemetery begun, and that this would furnish employment for 30 or 40 men for a month at least.

The meeting then adjourned.

To Receive the G. A. R. Men.

The Soldiers and Sailors' Committee of the Women's Christian Temperance Union are preparing some boxes to send to the old veterans at the Sailors and Soldiers' Home.

In connection with the work the Union has invited the members of both Winfield Scott Post and Major Anderson Post to a reception in the W. C. T. U. Rooms Saturday night.

Plainfield Lawyers to Form a Bar Association.

Members of the Bar in Plainfield will meet on Monday night in Runyon & McKeefs's office, on East Front street, for the purpose of organizing a local Bar Association. The idea is to closely associate themselves fraternally and socially and to discuss matters of importance locally and generally.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., meets to-night.

THE DIRECTORS FAVOR DISSOLUTION

Of the Music Hall Association and Adopt a Resolution to that Effect.

At the meeting of the Directors of the Music Hall Association last night a resolution was adopted to the effect that in the judgment of the Board it was advisable and most for the benefit of the Music Hall Association of Plainfield that the same should be forthwith dissolved, and to that end it was ordered that a meeting of the shareholders be held on Wednesday, May 9th, at eight o'clock p. m., in the parlors of Stillman Music Hall, to take action in the matter and that the secretary forthwith give notice of said meeting, within ten days, by publishing the said resolution with a notice of its adoption, and by mailing a written or printed copy of the same to each and every stockholder of the association in the United States.

If the stockholders agree to dissolve the corporation, the directors will act as trustees and wind up the affairs of the association.

BROOKSIDE RETREAT SUED.

For $10,000 Damages by Mr. Thornburg of New York.

One of the cases expected to come up at this term of the United States District Court, at Trenton, is that of Mr. Thornburg of New York against the Brookside Retreat of North Plainfield, for $10,000 damages.

Mr. Thornburg claims that his wife was confined in the sanitarium without any legal justification.

Mrs. Thornburg was at the sanitarium for about two weeks in 1893, where she had voluntarily agreed to board with her mother and maid, being a sufferer from nervousness.

It is claimed at the Retreat that the women was allowed perfect liberty and privileged to come and go at will and that she went there with that understanding.

Mr. Charles A. Reed is counsel for the Brookside Retreat, and he is to be arrayed against the famous lawyer, Dr. O'Sullivan, who figured in the Carlyle Harris case.

A MATCH FOR $1,000 A SIDE.

Neaf Apgar and W. H. Wolstencroft the Winners.

There was a goodly sized crowd at Dexter Park, Long Island, yesterday afternoon, to see W. H. Wolstencroft of Philadelphia and Neaf Apgar of Plainfield defeat Thomas Peacock of, Westfield, N. Y., and Rollin Heikes of Dayton, O., in a race for $1,000 a side, at 100 birds each, 28 yards rise and 50 yards boundary, the score standing at the conclusion of the match 79 to 171. Wolstencroft and Apgar led from the start, and were favorites in the betting.

Wolstencroft killed 91 and missed 9; Apgar killed 88 and missed 12; total 179. Peacock killed 90 and missed 10; Heikes killed 81 and missed 19; total 171.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Linn Kissell started for New York on the 2.23 p. m. train yesterday. They will occupy a house on West Front street upon their return.

Mr. George H. Cornwell of Washington street has rented, through Mulford's real estate agency, Mr. E. B. Clark's house, at the corner of West Front street and Watwood place.

Mr. Rollin Heikes, the crack shot of Dayton, Ohio, who shot in a match at Dexter Park, Brooklyn, yesterday, has been a guest of Mr. T. K. Keller of East Front street, for the past week. Mr. S. J. Young, also of Dayton, was the guest of Mr. Keller over Sunday.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. William B. Voorhees of Brooklyn for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jeannette Johnson Voorhees, to Mr. Henry Frank Mandeville of Brooklyn, on Wednesday, April 18, at 5.30 o'clock, at Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees' home, Decatur street, Brooklyn. Mr and Mrs. Voorhees formerly resided in Plainfield.

The marriage of Mr. Theodore Zeller of North Plainfield and Miss Mary White will take place in St. Mary's church, this city, at two o'clock on Thursday afternoon. Rev. Father Smyth will officiate. Miss Rose Schaffer will be the bridesmaid and Daniel White will be best man. There will be no formal reception. The bride and groom will reside on Jackson avenue.

TO EXTEND WATCHUNG AVENUE.

From Its Present Terminus for 5,000 Feet to Cushing Road.

A project is on foot to open Watchung avenue from its present terminus, above Belvidere avenue, for 5,000 feet to meet Cushing Road, back of Netherwood. The proposed street will cut through the properties of Messrs. I. P. Brown, C. V. Siddell, John Darby, David Hand, John Collins and Mr. Woodruff.

Messrs. Runyon and Moffett have been engaged to push the project to a head and secure the consents of the property-owners.

At present anyone wishing to drive from Watchung and Belvidere avenues to Cushing road, has to travel over nine times as far as he would by the new proposed street.

The new house in the line of the street is the old Hand homestead, which now belongs to Mr. David Hand and no doubt he will gladly move it, as he will be the most benefitted of any of the property-owners.

BREVITIES.

Scared by Raccoons.

Last night Frank Heddenand Theodore VanNess went prowling for suckers in the brook in Lane's swamp. While in the thickest of the swamp both men were almost paralyzed with fright by two big raccoons, which they say barked like dogs and looked as fierce as bears. They jumped from the brook and took to their heels. Lane's swamp has lost its charm to two Plainfielders, who declare that they will not go spearing there any more.

WORK OF THE CONFERENCE.

A Plan That Might Give Laymen Too Much Power Is Voted Down.

At the M. E Conference at Newark yesterday the proposition that the "General Assembly shall not allow more than one ministerial representative for every fourteen members of an annual conference, nor less than one for every forty-five and an equal number of lay representatives," was unanimously defeated. It was the sense of the conference that laymen would therefor have too much power, and that in General Conference would be unwieldy.

Another proposition bunded down for action was that the General Conference of 1896 submit a resolution to meet on the first Wednesday of May, 1900, and once in four years thereafter. This was adopted.

There are forty thousand Sunday-school pupils in the Newark district, and during the year 18,000,000 tracts have been distributed.

—Alfred Raukerson's horse ran away on Park avenue this noon. It kicked like a bucking broncho, but was caught and stopped near Justice Nash's office.

—Reader Zax News article of yesterday entitled "A Real Estate Deal," a friend who is supposed to know advises us that the failure of the late John Taylor Johnston to pay according to certain agreements certain monies to help defray the cost of making Johnston drive, was not due to bankruptcy, as stated in the article, as he never became bankrupt, but it was owing to a defect in the law, whereby he could not be held liable, the township being in consequence compelled to bear the burden.

DRESSES FOR DAISY BELL.

They Look Sweet on the Seat of a Bicycle Built For Two.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

One want supplied makes half a dozen more. No sooner was a bicycle for women invented than necessity arose, for a special hat, gown and skirt for the rider to wear. The bicycle is an immense weight in the conventional dress reformer's side of the scale, for it is impossible to ride a wheel to advantage in long skirts, and a great many persons will make sacrifices to pleasure that they will not make for duty's sake. No doubt a large number of women now believe in short skirts who would have scouted the idea of them before the advent of the bicycle.

The long skirt is an undeniable hindrance in all active amusements and particularly in bicycling. The plain opening is always catching on the front of the saddle in mounting, while the hem gets between the foot and the pedal and prevents the making of true starting. Therefore women soon discarded the long skirt for bicycle wear and have now abandoned the skirt altogether, appearing in short, tight trousers similar to those worn by men. It is doubtful if women on this side of the water will follow fashion as far as that. Indeed it is not at all necessary to go entirely without skirts, as a short one falling just below the knees is no burden, does not interfere with freedom of movement and runs no chance of catching in the gearing when the wheel is in motion—a fruitful source of accidents.

These short skirts are commonly seen now. Full trousers of the same material are worn under them in place of a petticoat and cloth or leather leggings buttoning to the knee. A woman who wears the modern bathing suit has no reason for objecting to such a dress, which is comfortable and rational if not beautiful. For cold weather it may be made of heavy cloth and trimmed with bands of fur, while for summer wear silk cheviot and mixed goods, trimmed with rows of stitching, will be found serviceable. Drab, gray, brown, navy blue, dark green and black are good colors, and all serviceable kinds of decoration should be strictly avoided.

A sketch is given of a bicycle costume in navy blue cloth, the cloth leggings, worn over black shoes, being of the same color. The skirt and Eton jacket are trimmed with black stitching. An outing shirt is worn with a four-in-hand tie. The cap is of white duck. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Runaway in a Circle.

A baker's horse, frightened by a trolley car, made things lively on Front street, corner of Park avenue shortly after eight o'clock this morning, by running away in a circle. The animal went around and around like a merry-go-round horse, and finally fell down on the sidewalk at the corner. The driver was frightened worse than the horse and jumped from the wagon.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS. Weekdays and Saturdays alternately. It is a story of a northern boy who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

CARLISLE'S PLEADING.

Strong and Eloquent Speech In Miss Pollard's Behalf.

JUDGE BRADLEY'S INSTRUCTIONS

The Jury Is Given Minute Legal Direction For Their Guidance—A Dramatic Contrast Drawn of the Two Parties to the Suit—Jurors See a Tintype.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Attorney Calderon Carlisle, who is more deeply versed in International law than in breach of promise litigations, consumed the day in the criminal court in a review of the testimony before the jury in the Pollard-Breckinridge case. The argument was a detailed dissection of the evidence and was delivered in a clear, dispassionate manner although the lawyer at times referred to Colonel Breckinridge in very soothing but coolly worded terms.

The silver haired congressman conducted his case very unscholastic, joking with *his lawyers during the day, while Made*line Pollard, sitting directly in front of him, kept her face shaded by a black gloved hand most of the time.

Only once was there any interruption of the argument, and that was when Colonel Breckinridge sat the speaker right on the point of a family little about which he seemed to be rather particular. All day the closest attention was given to the speech by jury and spectators, so that there was a dearth of material to report, and that Carlisle will continue, and it is not impossible that the speaking will last until Friday.

Judge Bradley first announced his decision on the prayers for instructions. Nine prayers of the plaintiff were granted in modified form and five of them refused. Six prayers for the defendant were granted in modified form or substitutes granted, and five were refused. Incidentally the judge said that, while the burden of proof rested on the plaintiff to show that a contract to marry was entered into, if the defendant set up the defense that the contract was not made in good faith, the burden of proof would rest upon him to show that there was an understanding that the contract was not to be carried out, and that the statements made in the presence of other parties were made with this understanding on the part of the plaintiff and defendant.

Judge Bradley's Instructions.

The instructions granted for the plaintiff, in condensed form, are as follows:

First—If the jury find from the evidence that there were mutual promises of marriage, as claimed in the declaration, that would constitute a binding contract, and if the defendant married another person, that would be a breach of the contract upon which the plaintiff would be entitled to the damages claimed. In dealing with others before the contract was made, if known to him, would be no defense.

Second—The burden of proof is upon the defendant to show by a preponderance of evidence that there was an agreement that merely the claim of a contract was not to be carried out was agreed upon between them.

Third—If promises were made by the defendant to the plaintiff, but accepted by the plaintiff in good faith, this bad faith on his part would not constitute a defense.

Fourth—If the conduct of plaintiff and defendant, about and after the making of the contract is to be considered in judging its good or bad faith.

Fifth—If the jury find that the defendant promised the plaintiff in good faith to marry him, but thereafter formed doubts as to establish by a preponderance of proof a defense in bad faith, and that this is a defense, that he had illicit relations with her or she had him of illicit relations with others.

Sixth—If the jury believe there was intercourse between the two and the defendant knew that she was previously unchaste, it constitutes no defense.

Seventh—If she informed him that she had been impure with Rhodes, that constituted no defense.

Eighth—The secret marriage does not constitute a defense.

Ninth—If promises were not made until after the secret marriage, it does not constitute a defense.

Tenth—If the jury find for the plaintiff, they are to consider the prospective advantages to the plaintiff of the marriage, the loss of her feelings, reputation and chance of earning a livelihood by the breach of promise and may award exemplary damages as well.

Eleventh—If the jury find that the plaintiff was a chaste woman before the defendant, and that the attempt to impeach her character was made for the purposes of a defense, they may consider the fact in awarding damages.

For the Defense.

The instructions for the defense were:

First—That the plaintiff can recover the jury must believe from all the evidence that a contract was entered into between the plaintiff and defendant as husband and wife.

Second—If the jury find that statements were made in the presence of or to third persons, and the plaintiff was not to be married, and such statements were made pursuant to an understanding for the purpose of deceiving third persons, such statements are not to be taken as constituting or evidencing a contract.

Third—The burden of proof to establish the contract is upon the plaintiff.

Fourth—If before the contract the plaintiff was guilty of lewd or unchaste conduct with other men unknown to the defendant, he was not bound by the contract and may avail himself of such defense, whether the defendant refused he knew of the conduct or not.

Fifth—If the jury believe that the plaintiff was guilty of unchaste conduct with men unknown to the defendant, they must find for him, unless they believe that it did not come to him until after the refusal.

Sixth—The jury may in mitigation of damages consider that the plaintiff is a character and that if the same were bad, and if the plaintiff was not seduced by the defendant they may consider her want of virtue.

Mr. Carlisle's Plea.

Leaning on the witness box in a careless attitude, Attorney Carlisle then pleaded the jury that all were fellow citizens of the District engaged in the performance of a public duty, the parties in the case and to the community.

While some of the facts and the final catastrophe had happened in the District, the case was not a District case, but one in which the same congressional district as the defendant, who came to Washington merely as a temporary representative of that district, had permitted his friend to become an of bumble birth; the defendant, a man of national reputation. Later it would be the duty of the speaker to show that the community had a right to expect of the defendant and how greatly had it been to his interest to find everything he could against the character of the poor girl.

Mr. Carlisle, who has himself been the master of one of the leading Masonic lodges of the city, referred to the jury of the Masonic funeral of Mrs. Pollard. Colonel Breckinridge had known her father, and, according to his version of that first meeting on the train, had interceded for him, apologizing when he was told that the father had died.

The lawyer sketched the early life of Miss Pollard as disclosed by the testimony—a life free from slander or reproach until she had met the colonel.

His thought in the beginning was all first as last refer to the attempts which had been made to discredit the early life of Miss Pollard. Referring to Mrs. Miller, formerly Hattie Shinglehouse, with her hair cold that Mrs. Pollard was making free with men her, in 1877 and 1878, he thought he might have called the attention of the plaintiff to the woman on the ground of her own disclosures regarding her character, but that was unnecessary, since it had been conclusively proved by Dr. Cowan, of Petersburg, that Miss Pollard had been in his city instead of in Kentucky from 1876 to 1880.

The depositions of Hiram Kaufman and John Brandt might have been discredited on the same grounds of their own admissions concerning their character when they pretended to say that the plaintiff had been guilty of certain acts of misconduct in the house of an alleged Lena Sin*gleton in 1883, but this was not necessary* Not only had Miss Pollard's counsel described the manner of her life in these years, but two reputable witnesses from Lexington had told that no such woman or such house was at that part of Upper street. Doubtless the jury had formed an opinion of the character of Rankin Hosell, who made the last attack upon Miss Pollard—a man who had testified that in the open parlors of a female seminary he had held on his lap for an hour and a half the plaintiff, who was engaged to him at that time.

An Illustrated Point.

Then Attorney Carlisle drew from his pocket a tintype saying: "Gentlemen, here is the picture brought here by Mrs. Brown of the plaintiff, taken with her daughter in their summer of 1884—a girl with dress up to the tops of her shoes, a girl in mourning for her sister. That is the girl upon whom the defendant would place more than half the blame for this affair."

The jury took the tintype and were examining it closely while Mr. Carlisle continued, "Look at that girl, and then look at the plaintiff, remembering how little the testimony says she has changed since then."

The white haired Kentucky congressman sat facing the jury, so they had no trouble in seeing him as they lifted their faces although pulled by one string. Taking up their meeting in the train where first the lives of the two came together, and where their testimony began to differ, as they said, the lawyer remarked: "He has shown you that there was nothing improper then in her conduct—nothing to alarm him.

"He had borne, as he has phrased it, the burden of her confidence. He had been a lawyer 23 years, and an experienced lawyer; he has been tried by the fires of war; had such acquaintance in what had been and known as few men have who have arrived at the age of 47. As he tells you he had a happy home and was beloved by his wife and children, he confesses that no man ever had less excuse for what he did; that no man has had greater advantages; that no words could point the depth to which he fell. This is the woman who met the schoolgirl on the train."

From this point Mr. Carlisle turned back to James Rankin, who was dead, he said, and who could not be called. The letters from Madeline Pollard to him had been read and disclosed no hint of the relations which Mr. Preston had attempted to force upon the plaintiff between them. Moreover the description given by Mrs. Brown of his character and of his deference toward the young girl had been heard. It was "so extraordinary that she should feel alarmed if Rhodes attempted to compel her to carry out one alternative of her contract and marry him.

The lawyer laid stress upon the selection of a closed carriage for the ride from the seminary; compared the story of the colonel—had it without any preliminary encouragement he had thrown his arms around her—with her story of having repulsed his advances; spoke of his flattery and of "the tongue which had been accustomed to sway large audiences, *confined to an audi*ence of one girl in a Cincinnati hack."

Carlisle Scores the Colonel.

The counsel for the defendant Breckinridge, the congressman, coming to take Madeline Pollard, the daughter of a Kentucky soldier, and that was a compliment and flattery to her. From the time Colonel Breckinridge

HILL'S TARIFF VIEWS.

Thinks the Income Tax Will Kill the Bill.

INCIDENTALLY SCORED GRESHAM.

He Characterized the Income Tax Feature as an Unnecessary, Ill Timed, Un-Democratic and a Mischievous Scheme—Intimated That the President Had Blundered.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The proceedings in the senate from the opening to the closing of the session were full of interest. The first in point of time was the swearing in of Mr. Walsh as a senator from Georgia to serve out the term of the late Senator Colquitt.

Two resolutions intended to facilitate debate on the tariff bill were introduced—one by Senator Mills, providing for an amendment to the rules so as to permit of the previous question, and the other by Senator Allen, providing for the taking of the final vote on the bill on June 7 and allowing three days for debate under the five minute rule. Both went over without action.

The Walcott resolution looking to the coinage of Mexican dollars for the China trade was discussed, but action on it was deferred until today.

Senator Harris sought to reach some arrangement for the earlier meeting of the senate and for longer sessions for consideration of the tariff bill, but his efforts encountered such strenuous opposition that nothing was accomplished.

Senator Hill's Speech.

The chief interest of the day centered in Senator Hill's speech. That the tariff question has not lost all its fascination was shown by the large crowds drawn to the senate. The speech was mainly directed against the income tax, although Mr. Hill spoke of the "humiliation" of the Hawaiian question, which he attributed to the fact that the head of the state department was a Republican. He opposed a federal income tax, but had no objection to state income tax laws.

He intimated that the retention of the income tax feature in the tariff bill would result in the defeat of that bill, but if defeat met the whole bill the responsibilities must fall on those who favored the income tax. He was ready to vote for the Mills bill or any other Democratic measure, and predicted that the failure of the Democratic party to reform the tariff would result in the defeat, the demoralization and the annihilation of the Democratic party. The passage of the income tax, however, would lose every northern state to the Democrats, and the result would be that not only would they lose the house of representatives, but the presidency as well.

The senate galleries were packed when Mr. Hill began his address on the tariff, in which the usual arguments were advanced. The sensational portions of his address were his allusions to the president and Secretary Gresham.

In speaking of the foreign policy of the administration he said: "It is not denied that some mistakes have occurred. Our foreign policy, especially that relating to Hawaii, it must be admitted, hasn't met the expectations of the people. A sense of humiliation prevailed when the project for the restoration of a deposed monarchy was unfolded by the administration, and gratification ensued when its abandonment or failure was reluctantly announced, influenced, largely by an aroused public sentiment.

Hawaiian Policy a Blunder.

"That unfortunate contemplated policy was a blunder, and a blunder is sometimes worse than a crime. It was, however, the natural consequence which might well have been anticipated from that other mistake in placing the department of state in charge of a Republican, distinguished and estimable though he may be, whose public services have always been identified in opposition to the Democratic party, who was without sympathy for its traditions and purposes, and whose political convictions upon the disputed public questions of the day, if changed at all, are carefully concealed.

"It is to be regretted that the president should not have been able to find in his own party some safe and honorable statesman in whom he and his party could have placed confidence—one of Democratic instincts and training, whose management of foreign affairs would have reflected credit upon the country and would have avoided the promulgation of an un-American policy—a departure from Democratic precedents—which was sought to be forced upon an unwilling people."

He spoke of the repeal of the federal elections law as a fulfillment of the party's pledges and a triumph for the just doctrine of state rights and indorsed the repeal of the Sherman law.

No Time For Partisanship.

Coming then to the main question—tariff reform—he said that revision should be approached with circumspection and with a realizing sense of the changed condition of the country since 1857 and 1860.

An extreme reduction of tariff duties at a time when the treasury was swollen with a surplus of $100,000,000, when the country was reasonably prosperous, when all our industries were in motion and all our workingmen were employed, assumed a different aspect and presented a different question when proposed now, with a large and growing treasury deficit instead of a surplus staring us in the face, with our industries paralyzed, our manufactories closed, our workingmen idle, and following upon the heels of one of the most disastrous financial panics in our history.

What was safe and prudent and wise then it would be criminally folly to attempt now. The present was no time for partisanship, and Democrats and Republicans alike should unite to solve existing problems in a spirit of broad patriotism.

In the face of the prostration of private industries and in the presence of such a paralysis of general business as the current deficit attests and prolongs, this bill, as framed by its authors and as passed by the house, amounts to double the deficit by discarding customs revenue and to fill the void with an income tax.

The rest of his speech was given up to the income tax question, and his opening words defined his position in unequivocal and forceful language: "Against such a scheme—unnecessary, ill timed and mischievous, suddenly sprung upon the country in the hour of its distress, un-Democratic in its nature and socialistic in its tendencies—I enter the protest of the people of the state of New York. They utterly dissent from any proposal to get revenue for the general government by taxing incomes. Their dissent is practically unanimous and altogether implacable."

He intimated that the tariff bill was constructed on lines laid down by the administration; that it was an accurate statement of affairs when the president should be able to give congress information as to what had occurred in a committee of the house, and said that "in these latter days the distinctions between the functions and prerogatives of the executive department on the one hand and the legislative department on the other do not seem to be always observed.

"The truth is that the first information which congress had of the alleged details of the proposed bill was in the message itself. But the strangest part of this unprecedented proceeding was that in fact at the very date of the message, Dec. 4, 1893, neither the full committee of ways and means nor the Democratic members thereof had agreed upon any income tax or upon other internal taxation."

When Senator Hill concluded his speech, he was greeted by a burst of applause, which was quickly checked by the vice president. There was a sudden exodus of visitors from the floor of the senate chamber, and many left the galleries.

The house was depopulated. Three-fourths of the members were at the senate end and listening to Senator Hill's speech on the tariff. Those who remained were occupied with District of Columbia affairs, but little actual business was transacted. Most of the time was spent wrangling over two bills—one to extend the time allowed the Metropolitan Street railroad to change its motive power and the other to allow bookmakers to operate at the spring and fall meeting of the Washington Jockey club. Both, however, met with such opposition that they were withdrawn. Only one bill of any importance—that providing for $1 gas in the District—was passed.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate:

State—Edward H. Strobel of New York to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Ecuador; William Rockhill of Maryland, third assistant secretary of state, vice Edward H. Strobel, nominated minister to Ecuador.

Justice—To be attorneys of the United States: Lewis C. Vandegrift, district of Delaware; James F. O'Brien, district of North Dakota.

Postmasters—Jay Frederick, Allentown, Pa.; Robert G. Heverton, West Point, Va.

MADE TWO RAIDS.

Coke Strikers Drove the Men From Work at Two Plants.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 10.—All is comparatively quiet in the coke region, although there have been a few outbreaks. The renewal of hostilities has not begun in earnest yet, but the situation is growing more critical every hour. Despite the fact that the strikers had threatened to raid all the works in this end of the region which resumed, the following plants are in operation and have so far not been interfered with: Leith's, Brownfield's, Oliphant's, Redstone's, Wynn & Kyle's of the H. C. Frick Coke company, Martin & Fairchance's of the Fairchance Furnace company, Leisenring's Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and Trotter's of the Frick company. All these plants are guarded.

The only raids reported here were at the Youngstown works of the Frick company and at Lemont's of the McClure Coke company. Here 400 strikers assembled and prevented the work from starting.

They met at Lemont's and made the first raid. All the men were at work, but left the yards on the approach of the strikers and refused to go back to work for fear of serious trouble.

The strikers then marched to Youngstown armed with clubs and stones. They found a few men at work in the yards and a number in the pit and at once drove them off, warning them not to return. No property was destroyed, and no one was injured.

Mr. Purdy's Marvelous Escape.

NYACK, N. Y., April 10.—Smith Purdy, a well known resident of this county, stepped from a train at Haverstraw, and a moment later he was struck by the engine of a down train and thrown 30 feet into the air. When he came down he landed on the front of the locomotive and was carried 300 feet. He was taken off for dead, but was not seriously hurt. Mr. Purdy is over 70 years of age.

Corbett Sails For England.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Before sailing for Europe today Champion Corbett said: "I will fight Jackson any place in the world that he may name, but he must find the fighting ground. After this is done Jackson and I can get down to business. My fortest will have been deposited before I reach Europe, and then I will wait until the battleground has been selected."

The Wistar Millions.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—The will of Lewis Wistar, the eccentric millionaire who died in Atlantic City on Feb. 21, leaves his entire estate to his brother, Richard Wistar, who also died last Saturday. There is considerable speculation as to how the latter has disposed of his fortune, which is valued at from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Prospective Groom Killed Himself.

BURLINGTON, N. J., April 10.—Daniel Woolman, aged 30 years, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a 32 caliber revolver. Woolman was to have been married to Miss Jennie Allinson of Palmyra this week. No cause can be assigned for the act.

Tried to Wreck the Express.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., April 10.—An unsuccessful attempt was made to wreck the New York limited express on the Baltimore and Ohio at the Thirteenth avenue crossing in this city by turning a switch. John Boyle, a trackwalker, discovered it just in time.

Anarchists on an Island.

MADRID, April 10.—A dispatch from Manzanero on the island of Teneriffe, states that great excitement has been caused there by the explosion of a bomb in the residence of the municipal secretary. Nobody was hurt by the explosion.

Fears For the De Ruyter.

BOSTON, April 10.—Grave fears are now entertained for the safety of the overdue Belgian steamer De Ruyter, Captain Meyer, which sailed from Antwerp 29 days ago. She may have struck an iceberg and foundered.

Jilted Lover Commits Suicide.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 10.—William L. Taylor, 29 years old, has been missing since Friday, and his body was found on a pond near New Worcester. He had recently been jilted by a girl who lives in Leicester, R. I.

He Fought the British.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 10.—Captain Thomas Upson, the last survivor of the battle of Stonington, when the British fleet bombarded that town in 1814, died at his home there, aged 89 years.

Silk Weavers Win a Strike.

PATERSON, N. J., April 10.—The weavers at the silk mills of James Simpson & Co. and at those of Joseph Fairbourst returned to work. Their demands were granted.

NINE WERE KILLED.

Milwaukee's Theater Fire Resulted Fatally to Firemen.

MILWAUKEE, April 10.—Nine firemen are dead, six are seriously injured, and Milwaukee's leading theater—the Davidson—is in ruins as the result of a fire which mysteriously started in the roof of the building. The loss on the building, scenery and equipments of the Lilliputian company aggregates $200,000, on which there is an insurance of $80,000, of which $50,000 is carried by Rosefeld Brothers, owners of the Lilliputians. Their loss will be $75,000.

Twenty firemen were upon the roof of the building working under the direction of the chiefs, and it was thought that the blaze was under control, when the roof seemed to bulge under their feet, and in a moment every man was pitched into the auditorium of the theater, some falling into the parquet and others upon the balconies. Deeds of heroism were numerous. Michael Dunn, captain of one of the firetugs, slid down a rope, made it fast to several of the men who were not pinioned down by the debris and then climbed the rope hand over hand to the roof of the Davidson hotel, which escaped destruction.

The fire took a new start among the debris, and amid the groans and shouts of the imprisoned firemen the work of rescue began and was kept up until late at night, when the eighth body was taken out and the work abandoned until this morning, with only one corpse to remove—that of Third Assistant Chief Janssen, a brother of Chief of Police Janssen.

The following is a list of the dead: Third Assistant Chief August Janssen, 968 Eighth street; Frank McGurk, lieutenant of Truck Company No. 4 and acting captain of No. 14, 397 Park street; Fred Kronschmuer of the Pipeman Chemical Company No. 2; Captain Archie Campbell of the firehouse Foley, 71 Twenty-seventh street; Allie Rice, Company No. 3, killed by falling ladder; James C. Freeman, lieutenant of Company No. 6; Frank Wiese of Chemical Company No. 4, found in balcony of theater; Thomas Morgan of Engine Company No. 1; John Farrell of Chemical Company No. 2.

Many Blooded Horses Burned.

BALTIMORE, April 10.—Bernard Manahon's big livery stable on Eutaw street was destroyed by fire. The stable was located near the fashionable residential quarter and was patronized by many wealthy citizens. It was filled with valuable blooded stock and expensive equipages. The horses were stabled on the second floor, and the fire cut off access to them. A hundred and thirty-seven fine animals were, burned up or suffocated. The loss on building and contents will exceed $300,000. Among the horses destroyed was the famous racing mare Lottie Collins, owned by A. F. Spafford and valued at $1,000.

Shot Her Assailant Dead.

LEROY, N. Y., April 10.—Antonio Fratto, an Italian employed at the Lehigh salt shaft, near this village, was shot and killed by Mrs. George Domenick, whom he attempted to criminally assault. The woman claims that she was committed to the Batavia jail. Mrs. Domenick is a Pole and has three children. Her story is to the effect that while in her home Fratto called to get a drink of water and attempted to assault her. She resisted, and the Italian became enraged and drew a knife. She succeeded in getting away from him, and securing a revolver shot the Italian in the right cheek near the ear, and he fell dead.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 10.—An intimate friend of Dr. W. I. Brenizer says that disappointment in love was the cause of his suicide. He has bequeathed his brain to Cornell in the interest of science.

COTTOLENE IS MADE TO EAT

Made from clarified oil, expressed from Cotton Seed—as pure and golden as the Southern Sunshine which produces it.

For convenience in handling, there is added to this oil enough beef suet to make it a semi-solid.

The combination of these two pure natural products makes Cottolene, a shortening and cooking fat, with which in healthfulness, cleanliness, flavor and economy, nothing in the world can compare.

IMITATIONS are MADE TO SELL

To sell on the merits of the genuine. To sell by substitution; or by deception. To sell to the injury of the genuine, to the dissatisfaction of the consumer, to the detriment of the dealer, to the loss of all concerned—except the scheming counterfeiter himself.

If you wish the best food and the best health, you should insist that your cooking be done with genuine Cottolene. Refuse all counterfeits.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

Science Progress

AN ENTERTAINING EXPERIMENT.

Pouring Liquids One Upon the Other So That They Will Not Mix.

When fluids are placed one upon another in the order of their density, it is well known that the densest liquid falls to the bottom. This is illustrated by the scientific experiment of "the vial of the four elements," which is a plain, long and narrow bottle containing equal volumes of metallic mercury, salt water, alcohol and oil. These four liquids will lie one on the top of the other without mixing, even if shaken.

The equilibrium of superimposed fluids can be also entertainingly shown as an after dinner recreation. It being supposed that the necessary materials are there at hand. The object this time will be to place five fluids on the top of one another in the order of their density without the possibility of any one of them commingling with another.

First—At the bottom of your champagne glass pour in a little cold, sweet coffee.

Second—Make a cone of paper, whose point is turned at a right angle, and cut off the extremity so as to leave an aperture no larger than a broach pin. Pour in gently a little cold water, which will escape by the limb of the funnel, impinge on the side of the glass and take its due place on the surface of the coffee. Cease pouring when the height of your column of water equals that of the coffee.

Third—Through a second cone you pour a layer of strongly colored wine—any port, for instance.

Fourth—Through a third a layer of salad oil.

Fifth—And through a fourth a little of the spirits of wine that has served, we may suppose, to boil your coffee. Carefully poured in, it will swim upon the oil, as in turn each of the other liquids floats upon the one beneath it.

All these layers will appear distinct in coloring as follows: Brown, white, red, yellow, white.

Mysterious Sappers.

The teredos or ship worms, are mollusks or shellfish belonging to the same class as the oyster and mussel. These mollusks, apparently so peaceful and inoffensive, are, however, terrible agents of destruction.

They attack all submerged wood almost as the larvæ of certain insects attack wood exposed to the air. They hollow out complicated galleries entangled into each other and work style, making on the exterior showing their formidable undermining.

They put so much activity or fury into the work of destruction that in a few months—a few weeks even—thick, strong oaken planks apparently healthy and compact are found to be completely worm eaten.

Stockades, the timber work of piers or breakwaters, solidly constructed of the best material, have suddenly crumbled, undermined by these sappers, for nothing on the exterior indicated danger.

Ships invaded by the teredo have been known to be rent under the sailors' feet out at sea when trusting had given them the slightest warning of the danger that threatened them.

A piece of teredo eaten cedar has been sent by a Portland (Or.) correspondent to Popular Science News, from which this account is gleaned, as a fair sample of the damage done to woodwork.

How Peppermint Is Distilled.

The process, according to a distiller, is a very simple one. A boiler, a vat, tank and separator of the most primitive kind are all that are required to extract the precious drops of oil from the plant. One large still holds a ton of the dry herb. The peppermint is trodden down in the vat by men, and water is then poured upon the herb. This is heated by steam, and the contents of the vat are kept at boiling point until all the water is vaporized. The heat causes the little cells in the leaves and blossoms to burst and minute particles of oil to escape. These are carried by the steam to the top of the vat and through a coil of tin pipes (or a "worm") which run round and round a tank of cold water.

Gradually the steam is condensed, and the fluid, a mixture of oil and water, drops into a small separator. The oil floats on the top, and the water is drained off, though in order to secure every drop of oil the fluid is passed into three compartments of the separator. When pure, the essence of peppermint is almost colorless, but if the herbs are left in the vat from Saturday to Monday the oil will have a brownish tint, and if a larger quantity of water than is necessary be placed in the still the oil will be of a greenish color.

A Peculiar Placard.

In a railway station in Iowa is the following placard on the clock: "This is a clock; it is running; it is Chicago time; it is right; it is not every day at 10 o'clock. Now keep your mouths shut."

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Solomon and His Family.

Solomon was a large white rat, who lived in an artist's studio in New York. He received his name because of his wisdom and his numerous family.

Solomon was as trustworthy as a dog. He refrained from nibbling the curtains and rich stuffs that were scattered about the studio and was most particular not to take cheese or rich cake up on the sofa, where he was allowed to play and sleep when his paws were clean.

Now, it so happened that a friend of Solomon's mistress had some rats—a father and mother and seven children. One night a wicked cat found her way to their cozy and ate up the old rats. Perhaps she satisfied her appetite with them, or maybe she thought she would leave the little ones till they were bigger, and their bones would be better worth picking. At any rate the seven poor little things were left orphans.

Solomon's mistress agreed to adopt them, and the cage was taken into her rooms.

Solomon stared and then went cautiously up to the newcomers. He soon showed signs of joy at their arrival, and, to the astonishment of those who watched him, thinking that in spite of his former goodness he might be a cannibal at heart and would take advantage of the occasion, he immediately took the little rats under his protection. He called them to him and coaxed them to snuggle down by his side, as their mother would have done.

When they were allowed to run about, he watched them and taught them where they might go and where they might not go.

Only one of the seven orphans turned out a genius, but all of them became respectable rats and a great credit to Solomon.

The genius of the family one day came upon a guitar lying on the sofa, and running up to it made the strings sound. The music pleased him so much that after his mistress went out he frequently went in search of the instrument and scampered back and forth over the strings to his own great delight and to the amusement of all who saw him.—Margaret Compton in St. Louis Republic.

An Alphabet Party.

A children's party that was given for the first time in this country was arranged by the wife of one of the Central American ministers to the United States.

This party is called the "alphabet party" and was given in honor of the minister's second child.

Madam explained its meaning. In the country from which they hail the alphabet party is a regular institution in a child's life, and there is a gentle rivalry among friendly mothers as to the age at which their children are entitled to the right to the party.

As soon as a little boy or girl has mastered the alphabet thoroughly the party comes to celebrate the child's accomplishment. The table is decorated with pretty boxes and souvenirs for the little guests, which are always made at home. The little cakes have letters in frosting, or are made in the shape of A B C's, and the alphabet figures in all sorts of devices.

The little hero or heroine has to convince the guests that he is master of the letters, and then comes the interesting event of the occasion.

There is a little balloon at hand waiting. The little alphabet book out of which the tiny senor or senorita has learned the letters is shut up in the balloon, tied to it, and the balloon is then allowed to fly off, and if the alphabet is thoroughly mastered the balloon will bear the book far away, and that's the last the little man or daughter is supposed to need of it.—New York Advertiser.

He Had Queer Ideas.

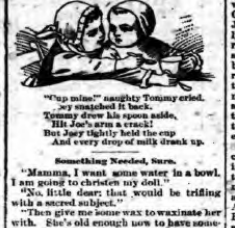
Don't you wonder how any boy could have such queer ideas as this little fellow had? He's not a little cheap now, but a big fellow, and he laughs when he tells of his childish fancies. He used to think that the sky was fastened to the tops of the highest houses, and he thought the moon was a hole for God to look through to see if little boys and girls were good.

One summer in the country, he tried to catch a darning needle, because he thought his mamma could use it to mend his stockings with. But, funniest of all, when he first heard that the world is round he somehow got the idea that we all lived on the inside, and for a long time he used to lie awake nights thinking how, when he grew up, he would find his way through to the outside and see what is looked like.

Mustn't he have been disappointed when he found that we are all outsiders? Maybe he made up his mind then to go to the center of the earth, like the people Jules Verne tells about in his book.—New York Recorder.

Who Joyed.

Joe and Tommy had a fight
Over cups of milk.
Joey's eyes as stars were bright,
Tommy's like silk.
But they squabbled for all that
Like the dog and pussy cat.



"Cup mine!" naughty Tommy cried,
Joy snatched it back.
Tommy drew his spoon aside,
Hit Joe's arm a crack!
But Joey tightly held the cup
And every drop of milk drank up.

Something Needed, Sure.

"Mamma, I want some water in a bowl. I am going to wash my doll."

"No, little dear; that would be trifling with a sacred subject."

"Then give me some wax to waxinate her with. She's old enough now to have something done to her."—Exchange.

THE ARMY REACHES UNIONTOWN.

Recruits to the Number of 1,200 Are Stalled at Ogden, With No Prospect of Getting Further East—Some Western Industrials Locked Up.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 10.—There are troublesome times ahead for the commonweal if the signs of the times point aright. Cyclone Kirkland, the astrologer, Jasper Johnson, the sable color bearer, and Wearly Iler, the commissary, were absolutely refused readmission into the army by reason of their having been exhibited in Pittsburg dime museums. The three men arrived in town and visited the camp, where they were cheered, and a demand was made by the men for reinstatement. Johnson and Kirkland made speeches in which they professed fealty to the cause. The tempers of the men were shown in their expressions and actions.

"The Unknown," who had charge of the camp, announced that he favored the reinstatement of the men, but would have to refer the case to his superiors. The meeting between the officers was spirited, and "The Unknown" was turned down. A special order was then issued by Carl Browne denouncing the presence in the army of any museum freaks and irretrievably deciding against the three men.

The exact action to be taken by the men cannot be ascertained, but Cyclone Kirkland asserts that he will organize a new commonweal, in which women may join.

The 12 mile tramp over the National pike was uneventful. In this city 5,000 visitors viewed the camp of the strays, and thousands of townspeople were interested spectators. Camp was pitched at Mountain View park, five miles from the city. The use of it was donated by John McCormick, who also contributed several hundred loaves of bread and several hundred pounds of beef.

The Industrials Sidetracked.

OMAHA, April 10.—So far as the Union Pacific is concerned that company will not furnish transportation for the industrial army, 1,200 strong, now corralled on the property of the Southern Pacific railway at Ogden. Superintendent Bancroft of the Wyoming division has been advised by the Union Pacific company not to allow the army of the commonweal to come east unless the unemployed are able to pay their transportation across the country from Ogden.

The injunction suit was decided in favor of the territory in the case of the Southern Pacific industrial army matter.

Western Commonwealers Arrested.

PUEBLO, Colo., April 10.—Bert Hamilton, captain of the Colorado division of Coxey's army, and 40 of his followers were arrested in the railroad yards here and spent the night in jail. They were released on condition that they leave town immediately.

Industrials to Concentrate.

RENO, Nev., April 10.—Captain Kelly of the industrial army, en route to Ogden, orders the acceptance of all recruits at Reno and to get them to Ogden as soon as possible. He says he would hold the main division there or at Salt Lake until their arrival.

Yale Men Cheer For Coxey.

NEW HAVEN, April 10.—Several of the large dormitories were plastered with immense printed posters calling upon Yale men to meet at the "fence" and be prepared to march to Washington and join Coxey's army. Hundreds met at the appointed time and place and marched about the campus. Bonfires were built, and Coxey was cheered loudly.

Ex-President Haughery Pleads Guilty.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 10.—Theodore P. Haughery, ex-president of the Indianapolis National bank, pleaded guilty on five counts. His bond of $10,000 was continued, and the judge will pass sentence when sufficient evidence is in.

CONFERENCE CLOSING.

LAST DAYS OF M. E. CONFERENCE AT NEWARK.

A Lively Time Over the Liquor Evil. —A Resolution that was Modified.— Other Things Besides Drink that Causes Man to Go Astray.

The session of the M. E. Conference at Newark, Monday afternoon, was very lively. The report of the committee on Prohibition was read by Rev. Mr. Church. It stated that New Jersey be made a prohibition State and wanted all the saloons closed every day in the week. A clause that caused considerable discussion was that the pastors should see to it that none of the official members of their churches should be any way connected with "this ungodly business."

The gentleman who read the report stated that that clause had been inserted because he knew of some men, who, while they pretended to be very much the friends of the Prohibitionists, were on the sly helping the rumsellers. He knew one man in particular who was very strong in his denunciation of the business, and yet it was known that he owned several stores that were occupied as saloons, and was at the present time engaged in building another store to be occupied as a saloon.

Rev. Mr. Barnes of Plainfield moved to change the wording of the resolution on the ground that it would be impossible to do anything of the kind in the way of carrying out the provisions. They could urge it upon their flocks to "do thus and so," but they could not command.

The working of some other clauses was also objected to, notably that in the clause in which it was resolved that the liquor traffic was the sole cause of all evil. It was contended that it was not the cause of all evil, as there were other things which caused him to go astray. This clause was at last changed as indicted.

At the last day's session of the conference yesterday morning, it was moved that speeches be limited to five minutes each on the reports of committees. The case of Peter F. Mead was brought up again, and it was moved that he be discontinued as a member of the conference.

The fourth question, "Who have been received on trial?" was taken up and the names announced were: Jere. H. Rhodes, James M. Cowins, Alfred Evans, William F. Fairchild, Frederick C. Mooney, Julius F. Maschmann, T. Stewart Mollinsaux, J. E. Appley, William C. O'Donnell, F. S. Willston, S. T. Jackson and E. B. Quimby. The young men were then before the conference and introduced. It was thought that this was too large a class to admit in one year and a motion was made that some of them be rejected. The vote was taken on the names, one at a time, and the following were withdrawn: James M. Corwine, William T. Fairchild, T. Stewart Mollinsaux, J. E. Appley, F. S. Willston, S. T. Jackson and E. Quimby.

The name of H. J. Johnston, was received on credentials from Canada. W. H. Beach, who had been appointed to go to Trenton and try to secure the passage of a law relative to temperance instruction in public schools, reported that the resolution had been presented before the House.

A new plan for examining candidates was proposed and a committee of five was appointed to consider the matter.

The following committees were appointed:

Memoirs—Jersey City, F. C. Baldwin; Newark, C. S. Cole, Richard VanHorne, George H. Whitney, N. A. Macnichol.

ROBBED OF $21.

A Roll of Bills Taken from Under Mrs. Smalley's Carpet.

Mrs. Smalley keeps a small store, where she sells dry goods and notions on Liberty street, next to Arnold's meat market. Last week she hid a roll of bills containing $25 under the carpet in a back room and then placed the bureau over the spot to insure its safety against robbers.

Last Friday afternoon $21, of the roll was stolen in a mysterious manner. A $4 bill was left behind.

Mrs. Smalley says the money must have been taken by someone who saw her hide it, as no one would think of looking in that particular spot for money.

After she missed the money she found one of the side windows open, and the only way that she can account for the money is that some of the loungers who hang around that locality must have seen her hide it, and at a time when he knew her to be busy in the store, climbed in the window and secured her savings.

NUPTIALS.

Dunn—Love.

Two well-known, and very popular young people of this city were quietly married by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at the parsonage last night. They were Miss M. Ella Dunn, daughter of Mounted Mail Carrier Edward T. Dunn, and Mr. J. Albert Love, a clerk in Mr. J. A. Smith's grocery store. The affair was made a very quiet one on account of sickness in both families. The newly married couple will reside at 210 West Fourth street, after a short honeymoon. They have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Their Third and Last Dance.

The Independent Fife and Drum Corps' third and last dance of the season was given at Hulett's Hall last night. In spite of the inclement weather, a large crowd was present, and fully 60 couples passed a very pleasant time in dancing to music furnished by Prof. Guttman.

The affair was in charge of David Bodine, general director; Frank Manchester, floor manager; H. C. Ackerman, assistant floor manager, and A. Wilson, A. Allen and John V. Beekman, reception committee. Guests were present from Plainfield, Elizabeth, Bound Brook and Cranford.

Whist at the Park Club.

A match game of whist between the members of the Park Club, who will be divided into sides for the purpose, will be played at the club house on Tuesday evening, April 17th, at eight o'clock. Members of the club, whether they have played in other match games or not, are requested to take part; and the ladies are specially urged to make the evening a success by joining in the game. Messrs. George T. Rogers and Leslie M. Daniel, are the Whist Committee.

Indians will Brave the Storm.

Howls of the Indians will be heard this evening when the Great Chiefs of this Reservation will visit this city for the purpose of instituting Pough Cough Naugh Sioque Tribe in Odd Fellows Hall. While this may appear to be a Winter's day, owing to the storm, Indians have no fear and can trail the forest in the severest storms, and the storm of pale faces that will meet the Great Chiefs to receive the Indian colors it is said will be beyond all precedent.

City Court.

Robert Alexander was arraigned in the City Court this morning charged with drunkenness. He plead guilty and sentence was suspended. Police Sergeant Kiely made the arrest.

Special Policeman "Nick" Meyers of Netherwood yesterday, took John Fillmore to the lockup for fighting with the Italians who are quartered near there. Fillmore was fined $5.

To Give a Dance to Those who Helped Them.

Plainfield Engine Company, No., 2 will give a dance on Friday night, April 27th, to the ladies who helped make their recent fair a success by their assistance in taking charge of tables, etc.

Struck His Head on the Curb.

This morning as Jeweller Caleb Dickinson of North avenue was hurrying across the street from Justice Mosher's office to his store, he slipped and fell, striking his head on the curb, inflicting a severe bruise.

Whirling Snow and a Gale.

A high, easterly gale, hand in hand with a whirling snowstorm, came to town last night, and has since held sway, and to-day Plainfield presents a Winter scene in every particular. This is undoubtedly an installment of Winter that had been thrown off the track. The green grass must feel heartily ashamed of itself, and should apologize for its ugly presence before Winter gives up the ghost.

Trees Blown Down.

The wind last night, blew down two trees on East Third street in front of Mr. Alpaugh's place. In falling the trees struck and lodged against the house.

12 DROWNED.

SCHOONER DRIVEN ASHORE AT MANASQUAN.

Went to Pieces in the Gale.—Wind 70 Miles an Hour.

New York, April 11.—A three-masted schooner was blown ashore at Squan, a point between Sandy Hook and the Highlands of the Navesink, this morning in the storm.

From the shore the men could make out that the schooner was pounding to pieces rapidly on the beach.

Twice were life lines shot out in her direction, but, each time, failed to reach her. The last time an observer stationed on shore reported that he could see the schooner going to pieces, and that none of the crew had been taken off.

The wind was then blowing at the rate of seventy miles an hour, and the rain was coming down in torrents.

At 11 o'clock a dispatch from the Highlands of the Navesink stated the crew of the schooner, consisting of twelve men, had been drowned.

One man went down with the mast and held on to a rope for nearly half an hour, then left go and sank.

There is terrible damage being done by the sea from a mile north at the bridge to Seabright.

At the Normandie Hotel there is a building in the sea going to pieces.

The whole beach from Seabright, for three miles north, is under water.

Ocean Tug Goes Down.

New York, April 11—At 11:30 o'clock this morning the ocean tug Underwriter, owned by the Boston Tug Company of Broad street, New York, sunk at Martin's Stores, at the foot of Furman street Brooklyn.

When the boat went down there were Capt. Everett Clifford and sixteen men aboard. They all escaped by jumping to another tug.

The boat had sprung aleak, it is thought by pounding against the dock in the storm.

Gave the Cannon to the Westfield Cemetery Association.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 78, G. A. R., at its meeting last night, decided to give the old one horn cannon, won by the Post at the firemen's fair, to the Westfield Cemetery Association to be mounted and placed in the Grand Army plot in the Westfield Cemetery. The plot was given to the Post by the Association.

The Post also accepted the invitation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to attend their entertainments in their rooms on Saturday night.

Ran Into a Telephone Pole.

A team of horses belonging to Mr. L. L. Manning became frightened by a trolley car on West Front street about five o'clock last night and started to run away. The driver guided the team into a pole, breaking the wagon to pieces and throwing the driver under the horse's feet. Two or three passengers jumped from the car and caught the team.

A Broken Telephone Wire.

One of the telephone wires on Somerset street broke over last night, and fell across the trolley wires. Mr. I. P. Allen grasped hold of one end of the broken wire as it hung across the trolley wires, but luckily for him the wire snapped in two the instant the two came together.

The piece of the wire that struck tripped one of Nicholas Van Winkle's horses a little later.

The Neighbors Aroused by Yells of "Murder! Police."

A resident of Park place, North Plainfield, aroused the neighborhood by opening the window and yelling "Murder! Police!" No police responded, however, as the disturbance was not in their vicinity at the time. Constable Stewart appeared upon the scene but he made no arrests.

Prof. Hicks on April Weather.

The following is weather prophet Hicks' prediction for April:

"The month will open warm, with showers. There will be storm periods beginning with very warm and ending with very cold weather. During the last period severe disturbances may be expected, with frost and light freezing. On the 12th and 13th, heavy showers, with hail, thunder and lightning, with very cold weather succeeding. The 17th to the 21st constitute the next regular period. The showery conditions usually existing all through April, will take on new power and occasion into storms of great extent and energy at this period, as well as all the dates of central disturbances. Very cool nights, with frost generally, may be expected between the storms of this period and the reactionary changes and storms due centrally on the 25th and 26th. Another cool change serves to bring frost in the north—will follow storms about these dates. The month will end with a growing warm wave and with storms advancing from western extremes of country.

Wants Money for its Centennial Celebration.

The committee who have in charge the Westfield centennial celebration, to be held July Fourth in connection with the National holiday, want a township appropriation of money to carry through the celebration. An effort will be made to have Assemblyman Codding work a bill through the Legislature that will make it possible to vote public money for such a purpose, and there is to hold a special election in Westfield to vote for the appropriation. The idea of taxing the township to pay for the celebration is raising strong opposition. Heretofore the expenses of Fourth of July celebrations have been met by subscription. Should the programme be carried out and the matter of public appropriation come to a vote it is doubtful if it can be carried.

SHORT JACKETS SHOWN NOW.

Bolero Fashion Has Changed From One Extreme to the Other.

To the Editor of The News:—

Fashion has entirely changed her mind on the subject of outside coats since last winter. Then the full skirt of the garment hung nearly to the knees, but now short jackets are already flaring jackets, but with out a great deal of material in them. They are close fitting in the back, but may be either tight or loose in front, although they are usually double breasted, and large revers are the almost invariable rule. Big carved buttons of colored pearl are used upon them, and bouffant sleeves give the fashionable breadth of shoulder. Thin velvet cloth is the favorite material and is newer than plain, glossy finished goods, although the latter are still worn.

The tan shades are less yellow than those worn last year, and browns, grays and heavier shades are well represented in addition to the standard black and navy blue. Some of the jackets are lined throughout with silk, but as that renders them too heavy and burdensome for general use the majority are unlined except in front. No trimming is used beyond the large buttons down the front, already mentioned, the large revers and the plain stitching employed as a finish giving the jacket a sufficiently jaunty effect. No full length coats and no wing sleeved garments have been displayed among the new importations.

For street costumes the round bodice still prevails. Sometimes there is a narrow ripple basque below the waist, but the plain belted corsage is the rule. Plain skirts are also the rule and so far greatly outnumber the double or draped ones, although fashion prophets declare that the latter are sure to conquer before long. The average skirt is more than four yards around the bottom at present, and contains, therefore, enough goods to give it an appreciable weight. If an ample second skirt be added to it, it will be no light burden to carry. The horizontal bands of trimming so much used last season are giving place to flounces, braid and other decoration arranged about the foot of the skirt, and many French models show the skirt left entirely plain.

A gown of biscuit silkline has a flaring skirt devoid of any trimming and a full round bodice gathered in under a belt of white satin ribbon. Over this is worn an Eton jacket of velvet of the same color, with narrow revers and wide sleeves. It is embroidered all over with fine jet beads and cabochons, and the lower part of the sleeves is decorated with immense jet buttons.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

LIGHT OPERA IN CRANFORD.

The Alcazar Society Closes Its Season with "The Doctor of Alcantara."

The Alcazar Society, an amateur dramatic organization of Cranford, presented in the Opera House last evening the comic opera, "The Doctor of Alcantara." As this was the last opera of the season, Prof. Charles H. Day, musical director, had taken particular pains to make it a fitting finale to the course of light operas which have been successfully given by this society the past Winter. In this effort he had the hearty co-operation of all the members, and the result last night fully all one expectations, as attested by the applause which greeted the performers. The audience was a large and fashionable one.

The cast was as follows: Dr. Paracelsus, William Holmes, (of Plainfield); Carles, G. W. Ring; Don Pompoco, H. F. Moore; Balthazar, H. F. Hilson; Forez, H. A. Van Sann; Sancho, W. S. Barnaby; Lucretia, Miss Sarah J. Brown; Inez, Miss Nettie Hellerman; Isabella, Miss Ethel Thompson. A full orchestra and a large chorus added greatly to the general effect.

RE-UNION OF VETERANS.

Annual Meeting of the Second New Jersey Brigade at Asbury Park.

The members of the Second New Jersey Brigade, numbering 200, held their seventh annual re-union in Asbury Park, Monday. The veterans, as they arrived on the morning trains, were escorted by a committee of 100 citizens to the headquarters of C. K. Hall Post G. A. R.

Among the notables present were, Ad. jutant General Stryker, Quartermaster General Donnelly and Chaplain Stewart of the Second Brigade. The Women's Relief Corps provided a light lunch for the veterans. After reports had been made, the brigades elected the following officers:

President, General James F. Rusling; vice-presidents, J. B. Hutchinson, Joseph C. Lee, J. F. Thompson, Samuel D. Gordon and John Schoonover; secretary, Captain U. B. Titus; treasurer, J. B. Clayton; chaplain, R. Stewart. This after noon a re-union was held at Edcutions' Hall.

NOT A ROMANCE.

Ex-Convict G. W. Curtiss Says Miss Gilbert Is Not His Affianced Wife.

George W. Curtiss, who formerly resided in Plainfield, and who was released from Sing Sing prison Monday, yesterday said:

"It is not true that Miss Essie Guilbert has ever engaged to marry me. She took no interest in my case, and through her efforts my sentence was commuted. That is the whole story. It is not probable that I shall ever see the lady again, and I would ask that she and her family may be spared the annoyance of further misrepresentation because of her action in my behalf, which was inspired by purely philanthropic motives. To a lesser degree I shall ask this favor on my own account; for the efforts which I now intend to make to redeem myself in life will not be aided by such misstatements as those referred to."

36 POLES DOWN.

Telegraph Wires Down Along the Lehigh Valley for 9 Miles.

Thirty-six telegraph poles along the line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad from South Plainfield to Perth Amboy were blown down by last night's gale and all communication cut off between these two places.

At Perth Amboy the tide is so high that the Lehigh Valley Railroad employees were driven from their offices.

A wreck occurred at Perth Amboy Junction in which several coal cars were smashed.

Edward Martin Establishes a Record.

Edward Martin, who is employed at the North avenue depot, performed a feat yesterday that should pass by unrecorded. As the 2.30 train, bound east, was about leaving the depot, a woman who had reached the car platform suddenly remembered that she had left her pocketbook in the waiting room. She called to Martin, who hurried after the purse with alacrity. When Martin re-appeared at the waiting room door the train had started. Then began a race between man and train. Martin with the speed of a race horse sped down the track like a cannon ball. He caught up with the train when near the Watchung avenue bridge, and while still on a run grasped the pocket-book in an out-stretched hand.

Plainfield Firemen Will be Invited.

A new hose carriage is to be ordered built and delivered at Lorgaine on May 30th. It will be named the J. C. Bender Hose, and will be a very handsome carriage. Over $200 has already been contributed. Invitations are being made to receive it. Visiting fire companies from Plainfield, Cranford and Elizabeth will participate in receiving it and a grand time is expected.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in The News, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a soldiers son who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

JERSEY'S ELECTIONS.

Republicans Won In Many Cities and Towns.

NEWARK LOST BY THE DEMOCRATS.

The Forth Amboy Coachman Who Wanted to Be Mayor Was Beaten—Orange Went Republican For the First Time In Many Years.

TRENTON, April 11.—Local elections were held in a number of the principal cities and towns of New Jersey and resulted generally in sweeping Republican victories. Perhaps the most noteworthy of these was in Newark, where Haynes, a Republican mayor for the first time in over 10 years.

The Republican victory in this city was most complete. The Republican candidate for comptroller has a large lead—about 2,000 majority. Fury, the Democratic candidate for alderman at large in the Fourth ward, is the only man on the Democratic ticket elected. The next council will stand: Republicans, 12; Democrats, 8.

PATERSON, April 11.—The results in this city are very much mixed. The Republicans elect 3 aldermen and the Democrats 2. An independent Republican and an independent Democrat are also chosen. The Board of Education have had a ticket in the field and elected one aldermen.

JERSEY CITY, April 11.—The municipal election in Jersey City was decisively for the Republicans. They elected five of the six aldermen chosen. The old board stood: Republicans, 7; Democrats, 6. The new board will have 9 Republicans and 4 Democrats. The total vote was 39,803. The city went Republican by 2,382.

PASSAIC, April 11.—The Republicans elected their ticket in three of the four wards of this city. The city is usually Republican. The Democrats did not make much of a fight.

Big Republican In Orange.

ORANGE, April 11.—The Republicans swept this city and elected every man on their ticket. Not a single Democrat obtained a majority. John Gill was elected mayor by about 600 majority. Louis D. Gillison was chosen councilman at large by about the same majority. On the ward tickets the Republicans elected all of the five aldermen. The normal Democratic majority in the city is 600. This is the first time in 20 years the Republicans have controlled all the branches of the city government at one time.

PERTH AMBOY, April 11.—The charter election here would have been devoid of excitement had it not been for Edward Crudden, the coachman, who was running for mayor. He was defeated. There were four tickets in the field. The Republicans had a ticket, as had the Democrats. The Prohibitionists were in the field, and Crudden's ticket made the fourth. Early in the morning Crudden, attired in a new suit, a tall hat and a light overcoat, drove through the streets in an open barouche that was drawn by four large gray horses. Crudden's carriage was followed by a band. Scott, a wealthy drydock owner, drove about and made speeches at different points in the street.

BLOOMFIELD, April 11.—The Democrats made but one nomination. This was in the Third ward, where Edward A. Raynor was nominated to oppose W. T. Owen, the Republican candidate. Mr. Raynor was snowed under.

ELIZABETH, April 11.—The Republicans elect Mayor Rankin by about 1,900 majority. On the aldermanic ticket the Democrats carry two wards and the Republicans four.

NEWARK, April 11.—Julius Lejkechner, the Republican candidate for mayor, carried the city by 5,000 majority.

Industrials In a Pickle.

OGDEN, U. T., April 11.—Governor Waite of Colorado wired the industrial army that if they would disband and return to Colorado, but Governor White of Utah notified them that they will be forced to return west if they refused to go of their own motion. Kelly telegraphed the matter to his men, who refused, with but one dissenting vote.

Called From a Wife's Bedside and Lynched.

GATESVILLE, Tex., April 11.—While Edward Cash, aged 31, was attending his wife, who was ill, he was called out of his house by armed men. His body was found hanging to a tree about 50 yards from his home the next morning riddled with bullets. The cause of the lynching is a mystery.

Photographing Rioters.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., April 11.—The Mount Washington glass works officials have engaged a professional photographer to take pictures of the men who follow the "knobsticks" to and from their work. The photographs, it is believed, will figure in court.

Miss Blaine's Wedding Day Set.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The marriage of Miss Mattie Blaine, daughter of the late James G. Blaine, to Truxton Beale, ex-minister to Persia and Greece, will take place on Monday, April 30, at the Blaine house on Lafayette square.

Western Will Return to Work.

PROVIDENCE, April 11.—The strike at the Riverside mills came to an end by a vote of the striking employees. It is understood that they have consented to operate under the two loom system.

Destructive Fire In New York.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Fire broke out in the building 109 to 116 Prince street early this morning. The building was occupied by the Johnston Straw board company. Loss, about $150,000.

Successful Bank Robbery.

FARNHAM, Que., April 11.—The Bank of St. Hyacinthe here was blown up and between $12,000 and $13,000 stolen. Three vaults doors were blown open by dynamite.

Storm's Fatal Work.

BATH, Pa., April 11.—A partially constructed frame building was blown down, instantly killing the contractor, Peter F. Snyder, and injuring several workmen.

Point Lookout Hotel Burned.

PEARSALL'S, N. Y., April 11.—The Point Lookout hotel at Long Beach and its contents were destroyed by fire.

Lockport's Spring Election.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., April 11.—James Atwater, the Republican candidate for mayor, was elected.

A Strayed Postmaster.

DANSVILLE, N. Y., April 11.—Postmaster John Fontain of Oneian, this county, is missing.

New Governor of La Plata.

BUENOS AYRES, April 11.—Senor Udaondo has been elected governor of La Plata.

Heart Palpitation

Hot Flashes, Indigestion, Vertigo

Rescued from Dangerous Condition by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. H. E. Vanderslect, Wilmington, Del.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I will tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I suffered from dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation and palpitation of the heart. For some years I was obliged to take a pill every night or I would suffer with a and cringing in my ears. The ears as I grew worse, I had fluttering of the heart and hot waves would go all over me, making my blood tingle in my finger ends. When these flashes would pass off, I was exceedingly weak. I began to fear that I had heart disease. Two physicians who examined me said it was nervousness. I was discouraged and indigestion. I was hardly able to walk. I was so bad that I could scarcely stand, and got so I was in a constant come over me as if I could scarcely move and

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS "M. QUAD"

COPYRIGHTED 1894 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

At that moment a colored girl appeared at the door and beckoned to mother and daughter in an excited way and whispered: "De sogers hev cum fur de Yankee, an dey's gwine to do sunthin awful to him! Dey wants he un to cum outdoahs right smart!"

"Soldiers? What soldiers?" asked Marian.

"Why, dem soldiers dat's paradin up an down an makin sich a fuss! Dar's ober a hundred of 'em aroun de house!"

"And they want Mr. Kenton?"

"Yes'm—want him right bad. I heard 'em talk 'bout tar and fedders!"

Whispering to her mother to entertain their caller, the girl excused herself and passed down the hall and out at the front door. Just as she opened it Steve Brayton was reaching out to ring the bell. Behind him were a dozen or more men.

"Well, what is wanted?" quietly asked Marian as Steve pulled off his hat and shifted about in a nervous way.

"N-nuthin, ma'am, nuthin 'tall!" he replied as he backed off. "That is, we just considered that we'd better call and—and"—

"Did you want to see any one here?"

"Why don't you an tell her?" exclaimed Ike Baxter as he pushed himself forward.

"Waal, ma'am, we nus cum yere to see somebody," continued Steve.

"Yes, we nus cum to see that Yankee!" added Ike.

"You mean Mr. Kenton?" queried Marian.

"That's it! They say he's a Yankee spy, and it's our dooty to hev a little talk with him!"

"Who says he's a Yankee spy?"

"Reckon it was Duke Wyle, ma'am, and he orter to know. He's goin to be first lootenant of our company, yo' know."

"And Mr. Wyle told you that Mr. Kenton was a Yankee spy, did he?" demanded Marian as her eyes flashed and her breath came quickly.

"Yes, ma'am."

"Steve Brayton, yo' un's a fool!" called a voice from the crowd—the voice of some one who knew that Wyle was a caller at the house.

"He dun told me so, and it's left fur us to find out!" continued Steve, who wanted to square himself.

"And you want to question him!" asked Marian.

"As a dooty, ma'am, as a dooty to Virginny. Can't hev no Yankee spy about yere, yo' know. We hain't got nuthin agin him as a man, but if he un's spyin on us that's different. Will yo' please call him out?"

"No! Three of you can come in and question him!"

Steve Brayton, Ike Baxter and Tom Henderson followed her into the house, while the others crowded up on the veranda to wait for what might happen.

"Mr. Kenton, some callers for to see you," said Marian as they entered the parlor, and he rose up, with a puzzled look on his face.

Steve Brayton had broken the ice and recovered from his embarrassment. He did not propose to do any talking. Kenton was either for or against. The quickest way to ascertain was to present the enlistment paper. He took it from his pocket, extended it to the young lawyer and said:

"Mr. Kenton, some folks around yere an' talkin that yo' un's a Yankee spy. Will yo' put yo'r name down on this paper?"

"I will, and I'll go with your company whenever it is ready to go!" was the prompt answer as he drew a pencil from his pocket and wrote his name, which was the fifty-third on the roll.

Twenty minutes later Steve Brayton and his companions appeared at the hotel, where Duke Wyle was impatiently waiting for news.

"Well, Steve, is it tar and feathers?" he asked as the crowd came up the steps.

"Does that look like tar and feathers?" replied Steve as he handed out the paper and pointed to the name of Royal Kenton.

"What, he volunteered in this company!"

"Exactly."

"Did you threaten him?"

"Not a threat! Reckon we'd better make him second lootenant, eh?"

But Duke Wyle did not answer. He sat and stared at the name and was dumb with amazement.

CHAPTER V.

It took three days more to enlist the men necessary to fill the ranks of the Shenandoah guards, as the company called itself, and while awaiting orders from Richmond an election of officers was held. Only a few of the volunteers were surprised at Royal Kenton's enlistment. They were men who had but one political belief—state rights. They were not looking beyond it to the southern confederacy, but had enlisted and were going to the front to fight for Virginia. Why shouldn't he fight for his adopted state? So argued the captain, so argued the rank and file and many citizens of the town, and, but for Duke Wyle, Kenton would have been elected second lieutenant of the company. When he saw how things were going, he called Steve Brayton aside and said:

"Look here, Steve, you fellows are as blind as young kittens. If that Yankee hadn't signed the roll, what would have happened to him?"

"Tar and feathers and a ride on a rail!" replied Steve.

"And he was sharp enough to realize it. He enlisted as a blind."

"Shoo! How kin he un bluff that way?"

"We are going to the front. The first chance he gets he will desert to his side. He's playing a Yankee trick on you, and you ain't sharp enough to see it."

"Doggone him, but yo' may be right, lootenant, yo' may be right!"

"Of course I'm right! You just move about right smart and give the boys the tip. Don't even elect him corporal. He's just one o' that sort that if he gets any office at all he'll want to run the whole company."

"And we don't propose to be run?"

"Of course not!"

Steve soon turned the tide against Kenton, and that without any one knowing exactly what was taking place. The citizens of the town were almost as much interested in the election as the members of the company. The old lawyer had left Kenton to settle the matter according to his own judgment. When he heard that the young man had enlisted, he was secretly pleased, and it was his influence which made a number of the rank and file decide on electing Kenton as third officer of the company.

"I am not in the least disappointed," replied Royal when the result of the voting was known and the office had gone to another. "I enlisted without thought of position and prefer the ranks to any place they could give me. Besides, I am a Yankee, you know, and it is only natural that there should be a little feeling in the matter."

There were two callers at the Percy mansion that evening. Duke Wyle came first. As previously stated, he had been a frequent caller for a year or more. Some people had even said that there was an engagement. That was a mistake, however. Try as hard as he could, he could remember little or nothing to encourage him in believing that he was a favored suitor. Neither had he the slightest reason for believing that Royal Kenton had any advantage in that respect. It was simply the fact that he was also a visitor at the house that roused the spirit of jealousy and the desire to work mischief. His reception was cordial by both mother and daughter, and both congratulated him on his election as one of the company officers. This paved the way for him to observe:

"I presume you have heard of the unblushing assurance of the Yankee, as all call him, in making every effort to get selected second lieutenant?"

"Do you refer to Mr. Kenton?" quickly answered Marian.

"Of course. He is the only Yankee I know of in this locality. The men saw through his scheme before it was too late, however."

"Did he have a scheme?" asked Mrs. Percy.

"Most certainly, ma'am—that is, the members of the company fully believed he had."

"What was it?" quietly asked Marian.

"Well, they all think he volunteered to hoodwink us, and that he will desert the first chance he gets."

"But you don't believe it?"

"Well, I—I—I can't say that I do, but he leans toward the north, you know."

"No, I did not know it. He is a Virginian by adoption. He owes her allegiance. He did not enlist until he felt it his duty to go with his state. You did not enlist for any other reason, did you, Mr. Wyle?"

"Of course not, but I'm a born Virginian, you know."

"Well, I think Mr. Kenton acted according to his conscience and best judgment, and that the guards would have had reason to be proud of him as an officer."

"Yes, I think so, too," replied the mother.

The lieutenant realized that he was walking on dangerous ground and let the subject drop, but in his own mind he decided that he had new cause for hating Royal Kenton and removing him from his path. During a moment of silence a plan flashed through his mind, and he presently said:

"It is an old saying, you know, that blood will tell. It may prove false in this case, and I hope it will, for Kenton is a fine young man. Suppose, however, he should actually desert to the Yankees and come back to fight against us?"

"Then I should be glad to hear of his being shot as a deserter and a traitor!" exclaimed the girl as her eyes flashed and her color deepened.

"He would deserve it," added the mother.

Duke Wyle had made his call intending to make every effort to discover just how he stood in Marian Percy's estimation. The presence of the mother acted as a restraint, and the demeanor of the daughter was not exactly what he had hoped for. In one sense he was disappointed and chagrined. In another he was encouraged and enthusiastic.

Duke makes a call.

"I can wait," he said to himself as he walked down street. "When the news comes back here that Kenton has deserted to the enemy, I shall have the field all to myself!"

The reception of Royal Kenton half an hour later may not have been more cordial, but his visit was more prolonged, and he appeared to glean more comfort from it. When the act of his non-election to position was incidentally referred to, he said:

"I did not seek for any position. Indeed, had it been left to me to accept or decline, I should have remained in the ranks."

"This is only the beginning," replied Marian. "Virginia has always been ready to honor those who honor her. Mother and I both feel a little disappointed, but we know it will come out right in the end."

"Your mind is fully made up?" queried Mrs. Percy, thinking of Duke Wyle's fling about desertion.

"Fully, ma'am," replied Kenton. "I stand or fall with Virginia."

Two days later the company left for the front. Every soul in the ancient village turned out to bid them godspeed and goodby. Marian Percy shook hands with many, with Royal Kenton and Duke Wyle among the number. People remarked that she was excited and enthusiastic, but if her lover was among those over whose heads waved the state flag of Virginia she gave no sign, not even to him.

The Shenandoah guards were made Company A of a Virginia regiment, which was among the first on the battlefield of Bull Run. When it was known that the Federals would attack, when they were observed marching out of Centerville on that July morning to find the Confederates and give battle, Lieutenant Wyle found opportunity to say to Steve Brayton, who had been made a sergeant in the company:

"Well, it seems that Yankee is with us yet."

"He un's right on hand, lootenant," was the reply.

"How has he behaved himself?"

"Right well, I take it. Hain't heard one o' the men find any fault."

"He's a deep one, Steve—deeper than I thought. He's been biding his time. If he gets a chance to-day, he'll go over to the Yankees. This is what he has been waiting for."

"Shoo! But yo' don't think so?"

"Of course I do. The captain wants you to make it your business to-day, in case the Yankee come out, to watch him. If he makes a break, shoot him in the back! Better tell the rest of the boys, so as to make sure of him."

"Reckon the Yanks will pitch in?"

"Pretty sure to."

"Goin to be a tyg'lar fout?"

"Looks like it."

"Waal, doggone my hide if I hain't feelin quite shaky in my legs already, and yo' don't look none too pearl, lootenant, but I reckon I kin keep an eye on the Yankee if the shootin don't get too heavy!"

"Shoot him right down if he makes a break!"

"Just so, unless I'm shot first. I've bin achin for a fout for the past three months, but durn my skin if I don't wish I was back in camp and the Yankees 50 miles off! What's the use in all this fussin anyhow? Why can't we all set down and hev a talk and fix things up?"

CHAPTER VI.

Only a small portion of the Confederate forces made pursuit of the retreating Federal army and that so slowly that there was no fighting. The regiment to which the Shenandoah guards was attached moved down from the plateau and went into camp. It had been broken and defeated, and yet it had rallied and won a reputation. Every one of the 10 companies had been more or less disorganized, but the guards perhaps worst of all. That this company should have been led back into the hottest of the fight by a private, and that it should have brought off the field one of the guns over which the fight had been so bloody, furnished occasion for remarks throughout the entire brigade.

Duke Wyle was no coward. There wasn't a taint of craven blood in his veins. It was so also with his fellow lieutenant. The fall of the captain and the rush of the Federals had stampeded officers as well as men. War was a new thing, and few had served an apprenticeship. Wyle followed the company back, but in the hurly burly became separated from it. He knew it was Royal Kenton carrying the flag and leading. He saw the gun brought off, and he saw General Jackson halt the coatless, hatless and powder begrimed men to question them.

"He's a brick even if he is a Yankee, and I'll shake hands with him!" said the lieutenant to himself as he advanced to rejoin his company.

That was Duke Wyle, the man. He hadn't taken 30 steps before Duke Wyle, the rival lover, cursed the luck which had given to another all the glory he had hoped to win, and he growled:

"I owe him another for this, and I can't pay him off any too soon!"

The first man of his company he encountered was Steve Brayton. If Steve had given way to the knees before the fight opened, he had pulled himself together in good shape as soon as he smelled powder. He had been the first man to turn and follow Kenton, and he had fought beside him to capture the gun.

"Waal, lootenant," grinned Steve as he awkwardly saluted, "I kept my eye on that Yankee all the time, but I didn't hev to shoot him!"

"Curse him, but what business had he to assume command of the company?" replied Wyle. "I was just about to halt and re-form when you fools all rushed off after him!"

"Yes, I see!" remarked Steve, "but I wouldn't find any fault if I was yo'. We nus is the only company in the regiment which captured a cannon, and the boys feel as peart as game chickens about it. Reckon I wouldn't say nuthin agin the Yankee either! It won't look exactly right, you know."

THE LEGISLATURE.

Bills Passed in the Senate and House.

TRENTON, April 13—Assemblyman Eisele of Newark, has introduced a bill authorizing the Governor to appoint a commission of six persons, three from each party, at a salary of $500 a year, to select a site and build a State reformatory thereon, the site, if possible, to be selected from any available property owned by the Sinking Fund Commissioners, to appoint architects, superintendents, &c., &c. The sum named for the purpose is $200,000. Upon completion of the reformatory, the Commissioners are constituted a Board of Managers, and shall organize and hold monthly meetings and elect a warden, who, with the advice and consent of the managers, shall appoint all subordinate officers, all officers to be equally divided, as near as possible, between the two parties.

The House passed these bills:

House 215—Authorizes Common Pleas president judge to certify cases to the Supreme Court. House 122—Provides that voters in all boroughs shall vote for a freeholder to represent the township in which the borough is situated. House 236—Provides that five commissioners of deeds shall be elected in each ward in second-class cities, including Trenton. House 254—Makes a member of relative of firemen's relief association of second-class cities. House 287—Provides that any railway granted the use of streets which has not been exercised within the past ten years may do so within the next year or forfeit its franchise.

House 255—Amends act relative to towns governed by boards of commissioners. House 238—Amends act providing for incorporation of social clubs. House 240—Authorizes township committees to contract for a sewerage system. House 238—Provides that street railways in villages must submit the plans of their proposed road to the governing boards thereof for approval. House 170—Grants the consent of the State for the construction of a bridge over the Delaware River between Camden and Philadelphia. House 291—Provides that townships having over 10,000 population shall establish all ordinances in a daily newspaper. House 226—Prescribes the duties of assistors in townships.

The House passed Mr. Storr's Orange Sewerage bill. It provides:

That the notes or other obligations of the city shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding 6 per cent. They shall not be sold for less than their par, or face value, and they shall not be issued to an amount exceeding at any time 15 per centum of the valuation of the taxable property in said city, as shown on its official books.

To-night, Assemblyman Eisele introduced a bill requiring a newspaper to have two years existence before it is eligible to publish the laws. Assemblyman McEwen introduced one making it necessary to take into account long service and record in making police promotions.

SENATE.

Senator Stokes has introduced a bill increasing the public school appropriation from $100,000 to $200,000.

The Senate passed the following: Senate 40 provides that first-class boroughs organized under the act of 1878 shall hereafter be separated from the township in all matters of local government. Senate joint resolution No. 1 appropriates $500 for improvements at State Street Cemetery at Fairmount, Newark; Senate 126 exempts incorporated religious societies from payment of fees to the Secretary of the State on the filing of certificate; House 168 annuls act relative to attaching goods of delinquent debtors; House 186 amends act relative to drainage in cities. Senate 78 and 72 provides for uniform assessment of taxes in Essex County.

$25,000 IN DELINQUENT TAXES.

Linden Township Should Have a Justice Nash for a few Years.

Linden Township is in considerable trouble over a delinquent tax list that amounts to $25,000, nearly enough, if paid in, to run the township for two years. The late W. A. Mulford, who was collector for many years, did not force the collections, and many property-owners took advantage of his age and good nature to disregard their tax obligations. Six thousand dollars of back taxes is owing to the township from one estate, and there are other amounts ranging from $50 to $500. The new collector, Mr. Tolmie, will have a difficult matter to straighten out. It is charged by some who claim to be in a position to know that the list of delinquent taxpayers has not been correctly published for several years. The Township Committee is considering the advisability of publishing a list of delinquents at the present time, but they are not sure that they have the right to do so. The law says that such list shall be published in connection with the annual township report. Several delinquents declare that should they be published now they will sue the committee for blackmail.

—Mr. C. A. Bates, the clever advertising writer, says, respecting business: Rent and clerk hire, light and heat and interest all go on just the same, whether you work night or day. It is advertising that brings in the money to pay all the other expenses. Advertising is business insurance.

Advertising what you haven't got, or what don't do is worse than not advertising at all. You can't be too careful about this. Make your "ads" strictly true in letter and in spirit. I believe that the majority of business men do this now, but as it is the most important thing about advertising, it will bear repeating and reiterating.

When merchants and laymen come to consider advertising in its legitimate character of "bringing news," it will pay better—pay the advertiser better and the advertisers too.

SPANGLES ARE EVERYWHERE.

No External Article of Apparel Is Free From Them This Season.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Spangles are decidedly the characteristic feature of the season. They have been used in other years as an occasional flare, or sparingly sprinkled upon evening gauzes, but now they have made the entire fashionable wardrobe their own, and no external article of apparel is free from their encroachment. They scintillate on bonnets and slipper, and re-enforced by steel, gold, silver and jet beads they flash on capes, coats and gowns. As only are the spangled laces and nets for sale in the shops, but there are also displayed gathered and plaited flounces and ruchings adorned with them and mounted on gimp or other headings, all ready to be sewed on the garment. The spangles come in black, steel and gold, but the black ones are most used.

Jet beads are also often mingled with black spangles to give a richer effect. Spangled galloon is to be found in various widths, consisting of bands of spangles overlapping like scales, and is much lighter in weight than the jet-beads that were formerly such a favorite trimming. Jet is still much worn nevertheless, especially in mourning, and will probably still remain popular after the present rage for spangles has subsided. The latter are pretty for a change and do not require to be arranged in fine and elaborate patterns in order to give an effective result. Besides the flounces and ruchings already mentioned, which are made of gauze, lace, net, grenadine and silk, thin spangled stuffs come by the yard for gowns, wide enough for the length of the skirt and embroidered with detached figures and a border or other suitable pattern.

These transparent materials form charmingly dainty evening costumes made up over silk or satin. They come in all colors, black showing off to particular advantage and brilliant gold. Spangled fans may be obtained to go with these gowns.

A sketch is given of an evening toilet of white tulle, embroidered with a fine pattern left in small silver spangles. It is made over sky blue satin and has a plain skirt and round bodice. A lace berthe surrounds the shoulders, and a white ribbon defines the waist. A knot of white ribbon adorns each shoulder. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Paterson Will Have Two Old Crescents.

The Paterson Baseball Club will probably open this season on April 29, with the Syracuse Club of the Eastern League. The Paterson will again be under the management of F. D. Ramsey. The games will be played at Willard Park. The team will be a strong one. Warner, who made such a success while on a recent trial with the Brooklyns, will catch, and Dunn the pitch. Touhey will cover first base, and Murray will guard second, Leo Smith, the old Crescent favorite, will play short stop, while Mooney, the ex-Eastern League player, will play at third. The outfield will be Sneeden, a former Crescent pitcher, Tierney and Shackleton. This club, it is understood, is anxious to make terms with the Crescent Wheelman, whereby they may play ball at the bicycle track diamond on Saturdays.

—On Wednesday, A. J. Dunster, proprietor of the Metropolitan Stables on North avenue, sold his pair of handsome gray horses to a man named Post, of Somerville.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" the people of the Virginia, and were the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

MUST VOTE OR BE FINED

Democrats In the House Propose to Adopt This Rule.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR REED'S RULE.

The New Plan to Choke Off Filibustering Not Popular With All Democrats—Senator Peffer Elaborates His Remarkable Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The Democratic managers of the house decided that the time had come when some effective method should be adopted to force the Republicans to participate in legislation. Throughout the last congress and during the present congress the Republicans have on frequent occasions deadlocked the house for days by refusing the answer to their names, thus breaking a quorum. As there was no rule compelling them to vote, and as it was against the rules to adopt Mr. Reed's expedient of counting a quorum without the authorization of a rule, the house was constantly at the mercy of the minority.

The question of the adoption of some method to compel the Republicans to vote was agitated during the last congress and at various times during the present session. Many different plans were offered by different Democrats, and there was no knowledge of a member of these who had ever had a rule which would empower the speaker or clerk to record as "present, but not voting," those Republicans who declined to respond to their names.

Reed Has Been a Thorn.

Mr. Reed himself has been constantly fighting to force the speaker to adopt the quorum counting device of which he was the author, but there was on the Democratic side a large and bitter opposition to this expedient. Several times the democratic caucus was held to consider the matter, but the exigency having passed when the caucus was held nothing came of it.

For the last few days, however, the Republicans have blocked business, and there is widespread belief on the Democratic side that this was in pursuance of a preconcerted arrangement with the Republicans at the senate end of the capitol to defeat all legislative business, with a view to postponing action on the tariff bill. It was intimated that a quorum would hereafter be demanded not only on partisan measures, but on the routine business of the house.

Under such a stress of circumstances Speaker Crisp, Mr. Catchings and Mr. Outhwaite, comprising the democratic end of the committee on rules, decided that the time had come to act. A resolution embodying a new rule designed to meet the exigency of refusing to count a quorum and thus prevent business was prepared and presented when the house met.

The Democrats were by no means unanimous in their approval of it. While the general sentiment of the house favored some modification of the rule to accomplish the end declared, a wide difference of opinion existed as to what that modification should be. Some of these, like Mr. Cockran, preferred an out and out quorum counting rule on the line of the amendment to the rules offered some time ago by Mr. Springer. Others preferred a rule to enforce attendance, and a third class, which provides for a deduction from the salaries of absentees for such days as they are absent except on account of sickness.

The latter proposed to revoke leaves of absence and compel the attendance of absentees. By a resort to every means known to parliamentary law the Republicans succeeded in preventing the adoption of this order for six hours and a half.

Today the struggle will be resumed. It may be that the Democratic opposition to the new rule as drawn will compel it to modification or possibly a complete substitution of some other method to prevent filibustering. But it is not doubted that when the present struggle is over the wings of the filibusters will be clipped, and a new order of things will be in vogue in the house of representatives.

Peffer Pleads For Cozey.

Senator Peffer occupied the entire time of the senate, and for four hours he continued the speech begun on Friday, the closing of the Wilson bill and the McKinley bill indiscriminately and to sound the praises of his own tariff bill which he proposes to offer. In this Populistic tariff bill everything which the farmer uses is to be free, or practically so, while the support of the government would rest entirely on the shoulders of the urban population.

Sugar is to be made free, with a bounty to the producer for the benefit of the best sugar growers of Kansas and Nebraska. Instead of a revenue of $30,000,000 from an income tax, this feature of his bill would produce $100,000,000.

Incidentally he defended the Coxey army of the common weal and outlined his plan for the amelioration of the condition of the people. Referring to Coxey and his army, he exclaimed in the language of Israel of old, "We are coming, Father Abraham!"

"The vanguard is snowbound, I understand," he said. He referred to the entrance into Washington last Saturday night of a band of 400 men, who were immediately arrested without committing any offense.

The day is not so much right to come here as the president of the New York Central railroad or any other citizen. As congress was not bound down to such restrictions, he continued, it appeared a wonderful congress passing a bill obliging the president to provide employment for all men and women of the country. It would not be the duty of the committee of ways and means thought that a special province of the states, but he would set them to work at building a straight double track railroad from the Atlantic to the Pacific and another from the great lakes to the gulf. Then the dark clouds would roll away and be dissipated as the morning mist.

FATAL FIRE IN BUFFALO

Workmen Penned In the Top of a Tall Factory.

MANY WENT DOWN IN THE RUINS.

Six Firemen Injured, an Unknown Number of Lives Lost, and $1,000,000 Damage Done by the Burning of the American Glucose Company's Works.

BUFFALO, April 13.—The plant of the American Glucose company was destroyed by fire. The loss will be about $1,000,000. The insurance is $350,000.

There were perhaps 125 men at work there when the fire broke out. It will not be known until a census of the employees is taken whether a single man or 50 were were cremated. It is known that some of the men escaped by the fire escapes, and some of those on the upper stories jumped into the canal.

A great many of the men at work on the upper floors were ignorant Poles and Germans. Those may have been burned, and they may not. It is impossible to tell now. The chances are, however, that several men were burned to death.

The works were situated on the Hamburg canal, Scott, Perry and East and West Market streets.

They consisted of an 11 story brick building, used for the manufacture of glucose and starch; an eight story brick building, used as a powerhouse and as a place for making the chemical feeding liquors, which is made from the corn after the glucose is extracted; an eight story brick building, used as a refinery, and an eight story storehouse.

Four Who Jumped Were Hurt.

The fire was discovered in the dynamo room of the main building by the engineer, who ran to the fire room. He gave the alarm, and he and his fireman rushed out. In 10 minutes the whole 11 floors were on fire, and flames were bursting through the windows and darting from the roof. The glucose company ordinarily employs a great number of men, but of late it has not been running at its full capacity, although it has been working day and night shifts. Four of the men who jumped were hurt. These are:

John Young, a workman; hurt about the head and face.

Two Poles who cannot speak English, names unknown; both severely injured; one with both legs broken.

John Stein, a workman; severely burned.

The fire spread with incredible swiftness. In 15 minutes the entire main building was a mass of flames. In 20 minutes the walls began to fall, and they fell at frequent intervals until inside of 45 minutes there was but one corner standing. The main building was connected with the power and feedhouse by an elevated bridge over the canal, but one corner connecting this and ignited the feedhouse. This burned more slowly than the main building, but for all that it was but a short time until the latter had complete control of the buildings.

Meanwhile the Buffalo city fish market, Lockman, preferred an out and out quorum counting rule on the line of the amendment to the rules offered some time ago by Mr. Springer. Others preferred a rule to enforce attendance, and a third class, which provides for a deduction from the salaries of absentees for such days as they are absent except on account of sickness.

After Pneumonia

Catarrh, Abscesses, and Dyspepsia

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gave Robust Health and Strength.

Mr. Wm. W. Otis

Is a well known blacksmith of Trenton, N. J. He writes illustrating the great building up, blood purifying powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla after serious illness:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I am pleased to make a statement of my experience with Hood's Sarsaparilla. I am a blacksmith and contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. After I got over the illness, two large abscesses gathered on my limbs. Different medicines failed to do me any good. Catarrh and dyspepsia.

Made Me Very Weak

and I lost flesh. I was advised to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before I had used a bottle I began to feel better. I continued and have taken five bottles and feel as well as I ever did. Hood's Sarsaparilla has done me a great deal of good and made me perfectly well. I now have a good appetite and weigh five pounds heavier than ever before. I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly." WM. W. OTIS, 228 Reading Street, Trenton, New Jersey.

MR. WILSON'S TURN NOW!

Quenching Butterworth's Eloquence With Cold Logic.

BRILLIANT PLEA OF THE MAJOR.

He Declared That He Was Not Defending Sin, but Was Pleading For a Higher Standard of Womanhood—Lies Told by Breckinridge Were Sanctified Lies.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The defense of Colonel Breckinridge which Ben Butterworth made is conceded even by his opponents to have been one of the greatest speeches ever made in a Washington court. It was effective as a masterpiece of oratory and was made such largely by the winning personality of the orator.

Mr. Butterworth was persuasive, was dramatic, was friendly, conciliatory and artful. Whether he was convincing remains to be seen when the 12 men who are to pass upon the case return their verdict on Saturday night, for it will be Saturday night when they are called upon to decide. Men are saying today that if the jury hangs fire, Colonel Breckinridge can thank the eloquence of his winning Quaker friend from Ohio. Particularly is this the opinion of the lawyers who heard the speech, and it was probably the finest compliment the ex-congressman could have received that so many of his professional colleagues were willing to stand all day to listen to his utterances.

For nearly nine hours Major Butterworth carried the speaking part in the great case. He conjured by the name of mother, the fireside and American womanhood most effectively, making it appear that all of these forces were enlisted on the side of his client.

Through all the speaking the white haired member of congress from Kentucky sat facing the jury, much of the time with his face shaded by his hand, occasionally nodding assents to the points scored by the speaker.

Judge Wilson's Style Different.

The slender plaintiff has heard none of the denunciations of herself, and her attorneys have sat smiling throughout the finest of the opposition. Judge Jere Wilson is a living sphinx, imperturbable as stone, and no one could guess how he was taking the assaults upon his client.

He did not care to begin after the close of the Butterworth speech, but commenced today and will consume the greater part of two days in his argument. His style is as different from Colonel Phil Thompson's or that of Mr. Butterworth as can be imagined—cold, lifeless, analytical and generally effective. That his style is different from Mr. Butterworth's is probably well for his cause, for he could hardly expect to overshadow that gentleman in his own particular field.

After the noon recess Mr. Butterworth recurred to the first meeting at the house of Sarah Cowan, stating the testimony of Miss Pollard that she thought that since she had successfully resisted Colonel Breckinridge twice she could do so again, and her later statement that she had deliberately waited there half an hour for her would be seducer to return and consummate his purpose. Out of these facts, urging the improbability and inconsistency of the two statements.

Advancing to the life of the pair in Washington, he represented that Colonel Breckinridge was one of the busiest men in congress, without time for the constant association with her which Miss Pollard had described. He thought that the attorneys for the plaintiff had been skillful in pushing to the front the few estimable characteristics they had to get into the case that they might obscure the background of the beginning of the relations.

Mrs. Blackburn was an estimable and cultured lady, but she had been imposed upon. She had been for two years a friend of Miss Pollard, moved by a generous impulse to protect a Kentucky girl, but no one pretended that Colonel Breckinridge had introduced Miss Pollard to the lady.

It was asked why Colonel Breckinridge had not led Miss Pollard away from her but he had no more power to lead her than the lawyer had to guide a cyclone by its tail. Mrs. Blackburn had naturally felt indignant at having been imposed upon, and she had confused some of the things said to her, because everybody knew that it was out of the range of possibility that those things could have been said under the circumstances. Miss Pollard had told Mrs. Blackburn that they were engaged and Colonel Breckinridge was obliged to go down with her and disentangle them from that net. A marriage was impossible under the circumstances. Miss Pollard knew it and had been told so. A marriage under the circumstances would have been impossible and infamous. The other lawyers had expressed horror because the pair had lied. The two were in the business of lying at that time.

Told Sanctified Lies.

"The course of those two was justified and sanctified because their deception injured no one and extricated a family from ruin," said Mr. Butterworth. "It was to rescue a home, to rescue a woman, to open to her a better life, and it was more than justified."

Beginning his conclusion, the lawyer told the jury that the inherent probability arising from the course of human nature were to be considered more deeply than the statements of witnesses. The question was not whether Willie C. F. Breckinridge had violated any ordinance, human or divine; had been guilty of moral turpitude—conduct which should bring upon him condemnation—but whether those two parties had agreed that he was to become her husband and she his wife.

To overthrow horror before the public they had been a tale that Colonel Breckinridge had led astray a guiltless little girl and had led her down the path of nine years of immorality to a marriage contract that was ruthlessly violated. The jury was to determine whether there had been any such guiltless little girl; whether she had not been a mature and knowing woman. He denied that the woman came to court to redress a great wrong. No wrong could be redressed in that way. She had she wanted the balm of money, for she had said there was none. Her motive did not rise to the quality of revenge nor even of hate, but sent abroad to exact terms of leaven she knew to be vile, the influence of which was measureless.

"For what motive does the desperate woman walk on any stage? You deliberately turned from everything that man or woman could desire and proclaimed her shame. This is a vestibule of a wider stage upon which she desires to enter. Is it the right of any individual to corrupt public morals by the excuse of seeking reparation for wrong. What is there of reparation for wrong but to go home to her mother's fireside—to him who alone can grant reparation for wrong?"

The Case Not Defending Sin.

Her early life was not what it should have been, he continued, but what her lot in future should be. It would be said, "Butterworth, you are defending sin;" but, no. He had a little family of his own—one son who had to fight the battle of life against fearful odds. No; he was defending the standard of womanhood, the virtue of city and country girls. No man could say that seduction was possible under the circumstances which had been portrayed here. He protested against such a standard being raised for virtue.

As for his client, no one knew through what mire that man had been dragged, and such was the penalty of sin. He did not want the jury carried away by the whisper floating in the air that a verdict for the defendant would be a ratification of his sin. He asked them also not to commend a woman who had borne herself as this plaintiff had; not to elevate her for the degradation of him. Such a verdict would mean to the girls that virtue was but as a cloak to be thrown off or put on. American womanhood should be vindicated by the standard to which wives and mothers must be held.

Here Major Butterworth finished. There was some consultation among the attorneys, and then Mr. Wilson, stating that he was hoarse, asked the court to adjourn, as the crowd dispersed, and several gentlemen pressed forward to congratulate the lawyer.

DANGER FOR COXEY'S MEN.

Surrounded by Threatening Mountaineers Full of Whisky.

ADDISON, Pa., April 13.—The tramp from Chalk Hill to this point was one of great suffering for the marchers of the commonweal. While the storm had abated in a measure, the depth of snow on the ground made walking a burden, and the stops for rest demanded by man and beast were frequent. The horses in wagons were unhitched at intervals.

There were many mountaineers down here to view the commonweal, and there was an ugly look abroad. Mountain dew flowed like water, and the men were in a proper state for conflict. The mountaineers were excited over the army and wanted to crush it out. Several clashes were averted.

The only licensed saloon in the place is near the camp, and the liquor was dispensed with a lavish hand. Such was the feeling that Marshal Browne called upon the army to carefully abstain from the use of liquor and avoid any possible conflict.

The next camp will be called "General Grant" and will be at Grantsville. Browne and "The Unknown" spoke, Mr. Coxey being absent in Cumberland arranging for the army's arrival there. Two times of pickets were placed at the camp, and no member was permitted to leave.

PITTSBURG, April 13.—General Coxey was in Pittsburg last night on what he said was an entirely private mission and had no reference to the movement of his army.

WILLIE WILDE WEDS.

Mrs. Frank Leslie's Divorced Husband Is Again Married.

LONDON, April 13.—Mr. Willie Wilde, formerly the husband of Mrs. Frank Leslie, was secretly married a few days ago to Miss Sophia Lees by special license. The bride is described as being young, beautiful, rich and of Irish parentage. She is the granddaughter of Baron Thomas Orde Lees of Merrion, near Dublin.

Mr. Wilde claims that prior to his marriage he consulted high legal authorities in America in regard to his right to again marry, and that finally he obtained the authority of a chief register regarding his position.

In an interview Mr. Wilde said that fortunately he did not take out citizenship papers during his residence in New York. He added, "The American courts have no jurisdiction over us. I allowed the action brought against me by Mrs. Leslie to go by default. The New York court said I would not be allowed to marry again, but I am advised that this decision is not binding. Possibly I might have trouble if I went back to New York state, but nowhere else in America. I have no present intention of going to the United States. No; Mrs. Leslie knows nothing about my marriage. She is still in frequent communication with my brother, Lord Wilde. I do not desire to say anything against Mrs. Leslie. We simply did not get on together. She is now in London, and I am living in London. Our interview was friendly, but we have not corresponded with each other.

"She wished to condemn me to a life of immoral celibacy as a punishment for my deeds in America. My marriage, which was solemnized on Jan. 11, was kept secret at the request of Mrs. Leslie, my family, the family of my wife and a few intimate friends were cognizant of the event. The arrangements for the marriage were superintended by my wife's mother, Lady Wilde and my brother Oscar."

Mr. Wilde concluded by saying, "As for the rumor that Mrs. Leslie stated that she was in London that she is still my wife—well, I am glad that that question has been logically and legally disposed of."

Steeple Stuck In the Ground.

NEW HAVEN, April 13.—At Litchfield, in this state, the gale blew over the steeple of St. Michael's Episcopal church. It is spot downward on the lawn in front of the church, and its point sank several feet into the ground. The spire broke off and stood upside down, its peak in the ground and its base in the air.

To Vaccinate Indiscriminately.

OMAHA, April 13.—The Omaha board of health made arrangements to quarantine General Kelly's army outside the city and vaccinate every man. Several cases of smallpox have been brought to Omaha by tramps in the last few days.

WINNOWED WIRINGS.

Colorado miners indorse the proposed national strike.

Wichita (Kan.) school officers are charged with levying bribes.

In the house of lords the Boring sea bill was read for the second time.

A female brigade of the industrial army is being raised in Oakland, Cal.

The British government will soon declare a protectorate over Uganda.

Kelly's industrial army captured a train at Evanston, Wy., and is riding east.

It is alleged that Newell B. Parsons, confidential bookkeeper of the Wells Stone company, Saginaw, Mich., stole $60,000 in bonds.

Highwaymen attempted to rob Henry C. Hamilton, a foreman in the Pennsylvania railroad shops in Jersey City, and one of them was captured.

The trustees of the estate of Lady Henry Somerset are petitioning the courts for an injunction to restrain her from closing all the saloons on her estates.

Mrs. Dominique Acquitted.

LEHIGH, N. Y., April 13.—Mrs. Veronica Dominique, the Polish woman who shot and killed the Italian Fiasto several days ago while he was attempting to assault her, was acquitted here by the coroner's jury.

Drowned In the Flood.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 13.—Joseph Heverin and Heverin Cotter of Dover, who were camping on the bay shore, have been drowned. Their shanty was swept several hundred feet by the flood.

MISTAKES OF WOMEN.

MRS. KIDDER OUTLINES THEM BEFORE A WOMAN'S LEAGUE.

She Thinks the Greatest Obstacle to Woman's Progress Is Woman Herself—Quoting Richter, Rousseau and Ruskin—Do Women Talk Too Much?

In an address upon "The Mistakes of Women," delivered before the Professional Woman's league of New York, Mrs. Kidder said:

Considering the title of my address, you might infer that it would be of short duration—for lack of material—for I know we all like to have it thought that we make no mistakes, or at least but few.

Women have the mistaken idea that men are opposed to their advancement. Now, really, they are not. In fact, I do not believe they think very much about it. They just go on calmly, and we make all the fuss about it. Women may come out and expand in the sunlight of her public progress, but I believe she loses just a little of the perfume of her womanhood, just as flowers grow more gorgeous in the sun, but lack the delicate perfume of those that bloom more in the shade. The shade for woman is in the path of quiet, intellectual progress.

Perhaps the greatest obstacle to the progress of woman is woman herself. Not that women want to be unjust or ungenerous, but they have for so long occupied themselves with petty things, have so long been content to run along on the well mapped intellectual trolley which man laid out for them years ago that it is hard for them to break from its restraining grasp. The best way to prove that we have our eyes open is to be thorough in what we do. How can we expect to compete with them unless we do our work as well as they? Tha women who do things in a slap and dash way, any-way-to-get-through-it style are the ones who stir up the snobs over which conceited workers often stumble. Another class of obstructors are those who appeal to the sympathy of their employers. We must be content to have our work stand or fall on its merits solely. How little can woman claim of equality with man when she fails so far short in every way of fulfilling solely her own special privileges! How little qualified, as a rule, is she for her highest and noblest province—motherhood!

People ask, Where are the men and women of the future? I answer, In the cradle of the present. Does not that appeal to us to be thoughtful in this matter? Every woman who marries should hope to be a mother some day. If I had a boy, I should want to vote, for every mother should be able to do that for her children can. It is a sad spectacle to see children better educated than their parents. It is a double-edged knife. There is an old saying that boys take after their mothers and girls after their fathers. Perhaps this is why women know so much. Another mistake women make is loving too much. Love is beautiful, divine, when deserved, but women take too much on trust. They put up at five and $10 in change for a $1 bill. They trust too much individually and not enough generally. With men it is the other way.

I have heard it said: "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic," but Richter, Rousseau and Ruskin, who placed womanhood as high.

Richter says: "The mother educates. Men govern and carry the glory, and the thousand-and-one fruitful nights and the sacrifices by which a mother purchases a poet or a hero for the state are forgotten, not once counted, for the mothers themselves do not count them."

Rousseau advises: "If you would have men great and virtuous, impress upon the minds of women what greatness and virtue are. Men will be what women make them." Ruskin says: "No man ever lived great that had not been chastened by a woman's love, strengthened by her counsel and guarded by her discretion."

The very best way for women to get any chance they seem to want is to go in and do as they always have done. They have made much good progress in this way, better than they can ever make by trying to change their dress and become mannish. We can't get away from man, and I for one rejoice heartily that such is the case. But we want to stand by his side as his recognized equal, not merely his equal. There is a difference in that. You remember "Looking Backward," Edward Bellamy did it—a man. Now, Let's wife did it, too, and we all know what happened to her. She was transformed into the very cheapest commodity in the market. If she had been turned into sugar, we might have appreciated the compliment to our sex. But even as it was we can take comfort in her humiliation in the knowledge that even in her abasement she was still absolutely indispensable.

Women make a mistake in not taking enough rest. The memory of duty they allow to murder their sleep. Another mistake is not eating as they should, and perhaps the greatest mistake is in worrying. They cannot wait for events to shape themselves. I always think of the old woman who said, "Yes, dear, I had awful lots of trouble—but most of it never happened."

Is it a mistake that we talk too much? It is said women talk—men act. Well, men have had the opportunity. When a woman has happened to drop into history, she has had to have her head cut off to do it. Yet remember that while silence is the mantle of the sage it is also the asylum of the idiot.

Woman should cultivate more her sense of humor. She makes a mistake in not being more cheerful. Cheerfulness is as contagious as yellow fever. I think we pay very little attention to our mental toilet. Cheerfulness springs from a respectful habit of the mind. It is not the things we do, but it is the things we are anxious to get at, that give us nervous prostration. We make a sad mistake in remembering past errors. We should cultivate the art of intelligent forgetting. Habit is a powerful factor in our lives. I believe that telling the truth is as much a matter of habit as a matter of morals. People who are mentally slovenly are harder to deal with and reform than those who are physically unkempt or unwashed.

I used to think that if I did what I should it made no difference what my thoughts were, but I see the fallacy of that belief now. We must think good thoughts, always and always. One bad mistake we make is to take offense, as we do, over little things done to us by our own sex. We cherish them and allow them to rankle. Men are not nearly so apt to remember trifling offences from one of themselves. But, everything considered, women have done remarkably well. It is hard to appear level when standing on crooked ground, and we will stand there until we gain civic rights—until we, like men, have "representation" as well as "taxation."

Rise Harraden's Career.

Miss Beatrice Harraden, author of "Ships That Pass In the Night," made her first public appearance in London as the librettist of certain slight vaudevilles, to which her sister, an accomplished violinist, wrote the music. Miss Harraden was born in London and as a young girl educated in Dresden. Then she passed to Girton college and afterward to Bedford, taking her degree of B. A. at London university in 1883, when she qualified as a classics and mathematics. Her principal recreation is music, and at first she was uncertain whether to devote her life to this or the literary profession. She got a few short stories accepted, and then Mrs. Linn Lynnston, who is always in sympathy with the beginner, encouraged her to believe in her literary talent. She showed a story, "The Umbrella Mender," to Mr. William Blackwood, who believed in it thoroughly, and her beginning seemed well made. But at this time Miss Harraden fell ill and it still more or less an invalid. She suffers from a weakness of the right hand through fullness of the ulnar nerve, and the position which follows as an attack amounts almost to paralysis. At present it is understood she is in California for her health.—Arthur Waugh in New York Critic.

What Constitutes a Home.

First of all, Miss Parlon urges young housekeepers not to make the great mistake of living beyond their means for the sake of "keeping up appearances." It destroys all the pleasure of home life, keeps the husband in a constant state of worry and irritation, dwarfs the better impulses and exhausts vitality. "No young woman," she declares, "has a right to dwarf her life for such a purpose. Let her make the most of the means at command, but let her never sacrifice her physical, moral and mental well being in a desire to make a display disproportionate to her circumstances, for that is not good housekeeping.

"My idea of good housekeeping," said Miss Parlon, "is where a woman keeps her home sweet and orderly; provides simple, well cooked meals; makes her home as restful and cheerful that all who come into it shall be the better for breathing the atmosphere of kindness and cheerfulness that pervades the place, and where the household machinery always runs smoothly because of the thoughtfulness of the mistress of the house. A place like this is truly a home."—Boston Transcript.

Order of the Eastern Star.

If a woman cannot be a Mason, she can be the next thing—almost a Mason—by joining the Order of the Eastern Star. This is a lodge to which, however, only mothers, sisters, wives or daughters of Masons are eligible. The noble aim of the Eastern Star is to advise its members in their troubles, to sympathize with them in their sorrows and also to aid them.

"I proclaim that the officers of the Eastern Star are regularly elected and installed for the ensuing year. I proclaim it from the south; I proclaim it from the west; I proclaim it from the east." Thus speaks the grand marshal of the order at the ceremony which takes place annually in the Egyptian room of the Masonic temple. It is only at such times that the uninitiated are allowed within the sacred precincts of a Masonic lodge. This order was formed not quite 20 years ago, but in New York city alone there is a membership of some 1,500. The names chosen for different chapters are very attractive—for instance, Laurel, Minerva, Crescent, Orient, Rose

Gen. Gordon's Mother.

Mrs. Gordon, mother of the late General Gordon, is living in Southsea, England, and is in her eighty-fifth year. She is a woman of remarkable character, and has been a great influence in the life of her son. She is a woman of deep religious feeling, and has written a number of books on religious subjects. She is also a poetess of no mean ability, and has published a volume of poems. She is a woman of strong will, and has always had a great influence over her son. She is very proud of him, and has a number of his letters in her possession, which she intends to publish.

TO-DAY'S FIRE.

The Roof Burnt Off of a House in the Borough.

Mr. S. F. Jennings' new house, at the corner of Grove street and Rockview avenue, was damaged considerably by fire this noon, that is the upper portion of it was.

It seems that there was a false flue built alongside the chimney from the first story to the roof, as is often the case in building similar style houses, to help the appearance of the rooms.

A Baltimore heater had been placed in one of the rooms on the side of the chimney where the false flue extended. There was no outlet of course for the smoke and heat, and this finally set fire to the rafters in the roof.

The prompt response of the firemen saved the house from destruction, as the dry timber in the roof was all ablaze when an alarm was given. Water was taken from a hydrant at the corner.

Chief Fairchild telephoned to Chief Deane at the Plainfield Fire Department for the Hook and Ladder truck, which was quickly at the blaze.

Much of the furniture was taken from the house to the yard.

The flames were kept confined to the region in which they originated.

Chief Deane complimented the thorough firemen for the excellent manner in which they had mastered the fire.

A Sociable at Mrs. Valiant's

The Ladies' Home Missionary Society of the Grace M. E. church, held a sociable at the home of Mrs. John Valiant, on Craig place, on Friday night. It was attended by about 80 people, who thoroughly enjoyed it.

The committee which had the affair in charge was composed of the following ladies: Mrs. Moor, chairman, Mrs Rudolph, Mrs. Winckler, Mrs. Vermeule, and Mrs. Vestal.

The programme was as follows:

Piano Solo.....Miss Bessie Valiant
Vocal Solo.....Mr. Stewart
Reading.....Mrs. Gerry
Vocal Solo.....Miss Alice Carroll
Dialogue—Miss Bertha Stewart, Miss May Conover, Sly, and Miss Lizzie Hoagland
Violin Solo.....Dyckman Winckler

The proceeds will be devoted to Home Missions.

Entertainment at Monroe Avenue Chapel.

An evening sociable was held in the Monroe avenue chapel last night. The chapel was crowded. The programme was composed of violin solos, by Master Hillman, and some illustrated books and proverbs. The proverbs furnished a great deal of amusement to all present. After the programme, refreshments were served.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

TOOK 11 FRAMES TO DECIDE IT.

A Most Exciting Contest Won by the Board of Trade.

One of the most exciting and closest games bowled in this city in a long while was that of last night between the Board of Trade team and the Westfield Club team. Each team having won two games last night's contest was the "rubber," and every inch of ground was contested.

Such "rooting" has seldom been heard in a friendly match, and each did his best to put the "other fellow" rattled.

It was "nip and tuck" from start to finish, first one team would forge ahead and then the other. At the tenth frame both clubs stood even with a score of 1562, and another frame was bowled to decide the contest.

The extra frame resulted as follows:

Board of Trade—Van Emburgh, 10; Littell, 17; Stephenson, 9; Buckle, 10; Petrie, 19; Maltby, 28; Barnes, 10; Teel, 10; Davis, 10; and Vail, 10. Total, 163.

Westfield Club—Baker, 19; Love, 20, Vought, 8; Chamberlain, 19; Mangan, 10; Ferris, 10; Marsh, 13; Godding, 10; Decker, 15; Van Winkle, 8. Total, 132.

The Board of Trade winning by 10 pins, which was due to Maltby's remarkable score of 28. The scores.

BOARD OF TRADE.		WESTFIELD CLUB.
Van Emburgh	174	Baker	127

FIRST SOCIABLE OF THE SEASON.

A Pleasant Gathering at Vincent Chapel.

Last evening a very pleasant company gathered in Vincent chapel in response to the Ladies' Aid Society. It was the first sociable of the season, and an extraordinarily enjoyable one. A delightful programme was arranged, consisting of vocal solos by Mrs. Edwin T. Douglas, recitations by Miss Anna Teale, and readings by Mr. James H. Joy. Each received hearty encores. Dr. Burnes, who was returned to the church as pastor, was called out, and responded with a speech, in which he spoke of the pleasure it afforded him to be with the church for another year's work.

The remainder of the evening was passed socially, and in partaking of the good things provided by the ladies. We predict for these sociables great popularity.

PERSONAL.

Miss Bessie Wells, of Newark, is spending the week in this city.

Mr. Edward Whiting of Morristown is visiting friends in Plainfield.

Mrs. L. G. Timpson of East Sixth street, who has been ill for a week past, is improving.

A little son was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bartlett of West Front street last night.

The Newark Conference recently held, the Rev. Mr. Munson was appointed for another year, at Monroe avenue chapel.

Mr. Geo. W. Moore of Elm place, who has been laid up with rheumatism, was able to walk out yesterday.

The Rev. D. W. Moorehouse of New York, will occupy the pulpit of All Soul's church, Park avenue, to-morrow morning.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will preach in the Presbyterian church at Bound Brook, Sunday morning.

The Rev. David Blow, formerly pastor of Christian church, of Waverly Station, Virginia, will preach in the First Church of Christ to-morrow morning.

The Rev. Mr. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church will exchange pulpits with the Rev. Mr. W. O. Weeden, of Upper Montclair, to-morrow.

Miss Laura Powers of Cranford, who for many years was in charge of a cloak department in Newark, has accepted a similar position in Plainfield.—Ex.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Mamie Hayes Carpenter, daughter of Aaron Carpenter, of East Front street and G. Edward Disbrough of Somerville.

Mr. William C. Baker of West Seventh street was best man at the marriage of Miss Susie Hilton of Elizabeth, to Mr. Willard A. Speakmese of Wilmington, Del., at Trinity church, Elizabeth, Thursday evening.

Mrs. Louise Engenhardt, who has been a resident of the borough for the past few years, has purchased the Townley house, on Grandview avenue. The purchase was made through the Mulford real estate agency.

Cozey's Army Beaten in the Series.

The second series of games between Cozey's Army and the Park Club were rolled last night with the following result:

COZEY'S ARMY.		PARK CLUB.
First Game	762	First Game	758
Second Game	782	Second Game	781
Third Game	827	Third Game	719

The teams were made up as follows: Cozey's Army—Lomax, Sandford, Worth, Thiers, Matthews.

Park Club—Reed, Chapman, Lenox, McCutcheon, Hegeman.

The Park Club won two games the last time, and one this time, making the best three out of five.

COLORED MEN IN A ROW.

It Ended in "Lover Joe" Stabbing John Peterson in the Back.

There was a row in "Jim" Babbitt's pool room, on East Front street, early last evening, in which one of the participants, John Peterson, received a severe cut in the back.

According to the story of the men, they were playing billiards when they got into a dispute and Randall (dubbed "Lover Joe" (Joseph Randall) drew his pen knife and stabbed Peterson in the back. The wound inflicted is over an inch long and the depth of an ordinary knife blade.

After Randall had done the stabbing he started to run. One of the other Petersons threw a billiard ball at him, but it missed Randall and went crashing through a window.

By this time Policeman Frederickson was upon the scene, and as Randall ran out he gave chase. The fleeing man ran into Mr. B. B. Force's store, on Park avenue, and out the back way into the rear of Mr. Hallock's hat store, where he was caught and taken to the lockup.

John, Lewis, and Thomas Peterson were also arrested.

"Lover Joe" and John Peterson were each fined $10.

The men testified that they had played "crap" in Babbitt's place.

Babbitt plead not guilty, but he was adjudged guilty and sentence deferred for a week.

A Shameful Falsehood Resented.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—An article appeared in The Courier last evening in a leading column headed "Not For Prizes but for Money." The article itself stated that a card party was held at the residence of the Misses Margaret and Edith Miles naming four others making a party of six in all; that games of cards were played not for prizes but for honors of the games. I think the maliciousness of the article is quite apparent. First, in the bold heading of the article; second, in making a particular mention of it when such news generally appears in Brevities, etc., or small news items; thirdly, in trying to cover the heading by the article itself, and by stating that supper was served at midnight and dancing was enjoyed after. The whole thing is malicious and untrue. The facts are as follows: Three young men called, also the daughter of a neighbor. No cards at all were played. No supper was served at midnight, and the parties all left before eleven o'clock. I do not know now any fair-minded or respectable person can fail to see the maliciousness of the article, or can encourage such a paper.

F. W. MILES.

Re-Sentenced to One Day in Jail.

The Court of Special Sessions convened at Elizabeth, yesterday morning, presided over by Judges McCormick and Ryan.

An application was made to the court in behalf of William Moffitt, who some time ago was sentenced to three months in jail for having discharged a shot gun at a farmer on whose farm he was trespassing at Westfield.

The applicants showed that Moffitt's wife and children, deprived of his support, were in destitute circumstance, and that Moffitt, if released, would get employment at once.

The Court ordered Moffitt to be brought from jail and in view of the facts set forth, annulled the former sentence and resentenced him to one day in jail.

City Court.

There was a number of cases in the city court this morning.

"Al." King was fined $5 for being drunk and disorderly.

"Tim." Calloway and James Corrigan were fined $5 for fighting.

For quarrelling and fighting William and Charles Frey were fined $10 each.

Michael Killian paid an $8 fine for abusing his landlady, Mrs. O'Rourke.

Narrowly Escaped Burning to Death.

Mrs. Steele, of Fanwood, came very near burning to death a few days ago, while burning brush. Her clothing caught fire and was with difficulty extinguished. She was all alone at the time.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Gen. Slocum is Dead.

New York, April 14—Gen. Henry W. Slocum of 695 Clinton avenue, Brooklyn, died unexpectedly this morning at his home. Death followed a severe attack of pneumonia; but, very strangely, the doctors thought they had conquered that disease, and twenty minutes before he died, pronounced him free from all danger. He breathed his last at 2 o'clock this morning.

News from the West End.

Harry Boubier and Thomas Muir spent yesterday in Amboy.

Mr. John James has returned from Jersey City, after a visit of several days.

The King's Daughters of Hope chapel will hold an entertainment on May 3d.

The wheelmen of this part of the town are talking of organizing a bicycle club.

Matthias Heltz, of West Front street, is rejoicing over the arrival of a young son.

There was a dance at the corner of Muhlenberg place and Second street last night.

Mrs. Alex. Gee, of Pamrapo, is visiting Mrs. Charles Westphal of South Second street.

Mrs Oliver Randolph of Spooner avenue, will spend Sunday with friends in Rahway.

Mr. Geo. W. Eddy's horse last Saturday on Second street, took fright and ran away, but was caught before any damage was done.

Mr. Andy Muher, the checker player, expects to go to Trenton soon to play a series of games with an "Unknown."

Mr. Fred Schoup, an employee of W. W. Wilson of West Third street, had his hand painfully injured while handling some large boxes. TUXEDO.

A Free Lecture Monday Night.

An illustrated lecture on Hampton Institute will be given in the Crescent avenue church, by the Rev. H. B. Turner, chaplain, on Monday evening, at 8 o'clock. The story of Hampton and its work will be told with the aid of the stereopticon. The pictures give views of the grounds, buildings, class-rooms, shops, etc., and also show something of the condition and circumstances of the students, and, then, in contrast, something of what they do and the influence they exert after graduating. There will, of course, be no admission fee. All are cordially invited.

This Wreck Benefitted the Farmers.

A coal train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, between South Plainfield and Roselle, broke in two at Aanwood, a station about three miles from this city, yesterday morning. When the sections came together several cars were demolished and the track torn up for several feet. Both tracks were blocked, and trains were run by way of Metuchen. Coal was sold to farmers for $5 a load to clear the tracks.

Fined for Contempt of Court.

Charles Perrine and his wife were arraigned in court this morning charged by Mrs. Hudler with using profane and indecent language to her. After hearing all the facts the Judge was about to suspend sentence upon them, when Mrs. Perrine persisted in talking and the result was that she was fined $5 for contempt of court.

New Lighting Machine.

A new dynamo with a capacity of 650 lights has been received at the freight house here, to be placed in the Greenbrook station of the Bound Brook Electric Light Co. When this machine is in operation the home company expects to show much better light than at present, as the current is now supplied from North Plainfield.—Chronicle.

Plainfield Choral Society.

The third concert of the Choral Society will be given on Tuesday evening, May 15th, (instead of May 10th, as previously announced,) at Music Hall, at which time the Society will sing the oratorio of "Elijah," assisted by Mademoiselle Montelh, soprano; Madame Carl Alves, contralto; Mr. W. H. Rieger, tenor; Mr. Ericsson Bushnell, bass; and a full orchestra.

Galbraith Paid a $10 Fine.

Daniel Galbraith was tried last night at 8 o'clock, before Justice Crossley, charged with disorderly conduct. He pleaded non vult, through his counsel, George DeMeza, and paid a ten dollar fine.

NOT A BIRD IN SIGHT.

The Latest Hats and Bonnets Are Devoid of the Sometime's Plumage.

To the Editor of The News:—

Hats look large and small and small-bonnets are worn this season. They are, as a rule, profusely trimmed, especially hats. Straws are shown in greater variety than for some time past and are often very beautiful. Not only is there the usual display of plain and lace straws, with leghorn and neapolitan braids, but a number of coarse fancy straws and chip are seen, picturesque in shape and attractive in texture. All shades of green, yellow, heliotrope and brown may be found, while red, blue and pure white are also to be had. Coarse woven straws come also in mixed colors, either made up or in piece braid, and are very effective when trimmed with jet, moss and velvet. A great deal of green foliage is used with the flower sprays, and green blossoms are also favorites, the nasturtiums being particularly pretty. Lilacs are not so much used as they were last year, but roses and violets retain their prestige. Sprays of semidouble yellow chrysanthemums are shown having large yellow middles, and buttercups and dandelions also figure among the popular yellow flowers.

Much lace in black, white and ecru is used. Sometimes it forms the entire frame of the hat, sometimes it is mingled with straw braid for that purpose, and sometimes it is used only in the trimming. Guipure, spangled net lace and the fine thread varieties are all employed. The latter is formed into frillings around the edge of the brim or full knife pleated ruchings.

Jet and spangles are seen everywhere. Jetted ostrich tips and quills are used in preference to plain ones, and separate jet crowns, brims and ornaments are for sale in great numbers. Buckles have not yet retired from fashionable favor and may be found in gold, silver, steel, jewels and jet. No birds are seen on the newest hats and bonnets. A large number of black hats are worn, especially in lace. They are elaborately made and trimmed and are usually relieved by the addition of a knot of carmine, heliotrope or bright green velvet, or a sprig of large red roses with leaves.

A sketch is given of a close bonnet composed of a fine wire frame covered plainly with silk net embroidered with a close pattern in black spangles and gold beads. The brim in front is slightly turned back on each side to form wings, which are covered with overlapping spangles. There is a narrow twist of black velvet around the edge of the bonnet, and the front is trimmed with a twisted knot of pinkish violet velvet, from the middle of which rises a gold wire aigret. The strings are of black velvet ribbon.

JUNE CHOLLEY.

Sent an Infernal Machine by Express.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., April 14.—Considerable excitement was caused in this city by the finding of an infernal machine in the store manufactory of Hathaway, Soule & Harrington. The machine was inclosed in a sandy box filled with sawdust and was sent from Castle, N. Y., by express. It was ascertained that the box had been sent by Julius Heedwell, 18 East Seventy-first street, New York, who claimed to have sent it by request of a friend named W. H. Rasenower.

operation of that law. The practice which began until the civil war period, when he was 60 years old.

Mr. Field was counsel for the shareholders when Gould, Fisk and Gould from the Erie railway. He also acted for the New York police in their controversy with Mayor Fernando Wood, which ultimately resulted in a local war. He appeared in the case of the state of Georgia against Grant and others.

Mr. Field's highest fame will rest upon his labors in the science of jurisprudence. While a young man he began to write upon the subject, for which purpose his association in the prevailing codes. His penal code was also adopted and is now in force. His civil code, which attempts to codify the common law, he considered his grandest monument. It twice passed the legislature, but was vetoed.

SOME BIG BONES FOUND.

Elizabeth Men of Science Think They Belonged to a Jersey Mastodon.

Workmen excavating for a cellar in Elizabeth yesterday afternoon found some very large bones. The largest weighed about fifty pounds. It resembles the bones of a femur of a huge mammoth antigal. Within a few feet a number of smaller ones were discovered, and it is conjectured that all formed a part of a mastodon's skeleton. One of them evidently is a huge molar from the animal's jaw. The bones are in the possession of J. P. Glasby, Jr., whose employees unearthed them. Local savants have not been able to classify the bones, and Prof. Voorhees of Rutger's College has been asked to view them.

The spot where the fossils were unearthed is the site of Gov. Carteret's old home, the famous "White House" of New Jersey. A few weeks ago the exact site of this famous residence and legislative meeting house was discovered by City Engineer Moore while he was laying the lines for the building in the cellar of which the fossils were found yesterday. The mansion was situated on Water street, now known as Elizabeth avenue, not far from Broad street, and its lawns bordered upon Elizabeth River. It was while digging eight feet below the floor of the cellar under the old house that the fossils were discovered in a bed of clay. Besides the bones there have been found by workmen the metal head of a pike and a number of coins, some dating as far back as 1660. They were nearly all so badly corroded as to make it impossible to determine whether they are English or Spanish.

THAT BIG TROLLEY SCHEME.

To Connect New York with Philadelphia by Slow-Transit Electrical Traction.

The Central Jersey Traction Company, a connecting link in the chain of corporations which will soon be in operation with trolley lines, has just been incorporated at Trenton, with a capital stock of $130,000 which may be increased to $10,638,000. The certificate was filed for Joseph H. Read of Bloomfield, who is at the head of the scheme to connect New York and Philadelphia by an electric railway, by his counsel, A. Q. Keasbey & Sons of Newark.

The incorporators named in the certificate are: Jephta H. Baldwin of Orange, John H. Tingley of Rahway and George G. Crosby of New York city. The following officers have been elected to control the company: Frank A. Magowan, Trenton, president; H. S. Wing, Newark, vice-president; J. H. Baldwin-Newark, secretary; J. H. Darrah, Trenton, treasurer; George G. Crosby, New York; John H. Tingley, Rahway, John McNaughton, Philadelphia, directors.

It is the project to make connections at Orange, Irvington, Elizabeth and Bloomfield on the north, and with the Consolidated Traction Company's lines extending between Newark and New York. Connections are also contemplated with all the trunk lines traversing the state.

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD DEAD.

The Great New York Jurist Suddenly Succumbs to Pneumonia.

NEW YORK, April 14.—After an illness of exactly 24 hours David Dudley Field, aged 89 years and 6 months, died at the residence of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dudley Field, 22 Gramercy park.

Mr. Field comes from a family noted for its vigor. He was born at Haddam, Conn., a town at the foot of the Berkshire hills, in 1805. He was the oldest of 18 children—the most noted of four famous Field brothers.

David Dudley attended Williams college from his seventeenth to his twenty-first year and began to study law at Albany. He was admitted to the New York city bar in 1828. New York had just cast off the institutions of slavery and became a haven of refuge for runaway negroes from the south. The runaway slave code was then in force, and Mr. Field first attracted attention in defending a negro against the

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a southern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and went the pace of the Confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

THE LABOR CONFERENCE.

Mr. Buchanan Talks of the Coming Big Meeting In Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Joseph R. Buchanan, who has been appointed in Shoatsheen in connection with the conference of labor men to be held in Philadelphia on April 26, was interviewed as to the objects of the proposed conference. He said:

"A dispatch from Pittsburg charged that the underlying motive for my call for the conference is to destroy the Knights of Labor. This is not true, as the object of the conference is to build up the Knights of Labor as well as all other labor organizations. The Pittsburg story was badly garbled, and several of the sentences are of a character which would give quite a different purport of the intent of the labor conference.

"The meeting at Philadelphia will not be held under the official sanction of any organization, but will be rather a spontaneous uprising, of earnest men who believe as individuals that there is an emergency in labor affairs which must be met with courage and intelligence.

"I am a member of the Knights myself, but am, for the present, not a delegate to any particular organization or organizations. We are not to have a star chamber conference, and it will not be a cabal of disgruntled or seceding labor men. No slate was made in extending invitations, but I asked the co-operation of all the earnest men whose addresses I had and who, I thought, would take an active interest. No one was intentionally slighted, and the doors of the conference on the 26th will be open to any man who is in good standing in his labor organization and who is willing to throw his coat off and work for the glorious aim we have in view. Already I have received favorable replies from a majority of those to whom the circular was sent, and I expect a fine meeting."

A STRIKERS' BOMB.

Found Hidden Under the Stoop of Manufacturer Strange's Home.

PATERSON, N. J., April 14.—While the gasfitter employed by William Strange of this city was making repairs on the stoop of his employee's mansion he found a bomb concealed under the doorsteps. He removed it very carefully and placed it in the hands of the police, who will have the dangerous looking object carefully examined. From all appearances it was placed under Mr. Strange's stoop with criminal intention, as the fuses on both ends of the bomb were burned and charred to within about an inch of the explosive, if such the bomb contains.

Mr. William Strange is the head of the Strange Silk Manufacturing company, which has recently figured prominently in the labor agitation being conducted here. When their weavers demanded an increase in their wages, the Strange Silk Manufacturing company refused to confer with determination, and the strike is still on. It is thought that the bomb was placed in its position by one of the strikers, who are believed to cherish anarchistic principles.

Strikers Terrorize the Coke Region.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 14.—To the people of the southern district of the Connellsville coke region Friday was the most exciting day since the strike of the coke workers was inaugurated. From daybreak until late at night a force of 1,500 strikers, marching in columns to martial music and flying the stars and stripes, traversed up and down the country. While no conflict occurred, the men forced a suspension of work on every plant they passed. So far as the south end of the region is concerned the strike is again a success.

Great Northern Tied Up.

SPOKANE, Wash., April 14.—The Great Northern road is tied up from Spokane to Great Falls. Most of the men on the Kalispell and Montana division and the Montana Central broke out on strike. West of Spokane the road is operated, trains moving as usual, and none of the men is out. Assistant General Superintendent Darrell expects no violence and that the trains will be running on the two divisions inside of three days.

An Emperor Eats a Simple Meal.

VIENNA, April 14.—Emperor William visited Prince Alexander of Battenberg and inspected the hussar regiment bearing his name. Later he accepted the invitation of the officers of that regiment to take supper with them at their mess. Only the most simple dishes peculiar to Austria and Hungary were served.

Alabama's Way.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 14.—The body of William Lewis (colored) was found hanging to a tree near Lamison. The corpse was riddled with bullets. Lewis is the man who recently murdered Robert Bailey, a planter, splitting his skull open with an ax.

The Newfoundland Crisis.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 14.—Both houses of the legislature passed an address to the governor declaring that in their opinion the legislature should be dissolved and the people given an opportunity to express their decision on the issues.

Thirsh Berthe Trust Issues.

BANGOR, Me., April 14.—Berthe Trust, the chief witness who mysteriously assaulted her uncle, E. P. Trust of Brooklyn, with an ax, has been arrested, and will be held for examination into her sanity.

Renew Wins the Championship.

BOSTON, April 14.—The billiard match for the championship of New England between Renew and Carter was concluded Renew was the winner.

A YANKEE IN GRAY.

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS "M. QUAD."

COPYRIGHTED 1894 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

"You and the Yankee have suddenly become bosom friends!" sneered the officer.

"Not exactly, lootenant, but I hain't got nuthin agin him no mo', If he un's a Yankee spy, we orter hev about 10,000 mo' ot 'em on our side!"

Late that evening after the stragglers had rejoined their commands and order had been brought out of confusion Lieutenant Wyle received an order to report at brigade headquarters. On his arrival he was admitted to the presence of General Jackson, who had that day won his famous sobriquet of "Stonewall."

"Lieutenant Wyle," said the general as he received him, "I am sorry to learn that your captain is so severely wounded that it will be months before he will be able to take the field again. I saw him in the field hospital two hours ago and congratulated him on the heroism displayed by his company. I wish also to congratulate you, and through you each and every man. That was a gallant rally made in the face of disaster. One of your men acted like a hero of old. If you will give me his name, I will see that he is promoted to the position he deserves. He is a private, is he not?"

"Y-yes, sir," stammered the lieutenant, confused and chagrined that his rival should be thus honored. "His name, sir, is Ike"—

It was on his tongue to rob Royal Kenton of his laurels and transfer them to Ike Baxter, but he could not do it.

"It was a private named Kenton, I believe," he said as he lifted his eyes to those of the general again.

"Thanks. He is a brave man, and you ought to be proud of him. You must not feel put out about it, lieutenant. All of us are new to war yet. Coolness will come with experience. I have no fault to find with any of the officers or men. That's all, sir."

The officer saluted and retired and made his way back to his company. But for one thing he would have sent for Royal Kenton and offered him his hand and his congratulations. Both loved the same maiden. Even if both had stood on the same footing in her estimation when the company left the valley days had occurred that day which would give his rival the lead.

The first thing Lieutenant Wyle did after reaching his lines was to send for Ike Baxter. He was much of the same mold as Steve Brayton—a small farmer, shiftless and uneducated and having a decided distaste for anything like hard work, but far more bigoted in his sectional feelings. He was not one of the handful Kenton had rallied and led back, but was forced up with others later on and had his musket been examined after the battle was over it would have been discovered that it had not been once discharged.

"Ah, I am glad to see you, my brave boy!" said the lieutenant as Ike came shuffling into his tent. "I want to compliment and congratulate you on the pluck and bravery you displayed in that battle. I had my eye on you most of the time, and I never saw a cooler man in the face of danger."

"Yo'—yo' doan' mean it, lootenant!" gasped Ike, who fully realized that his conduct was open to censure instead of praise.

"Mean it? Of course I do! I am proud to have such a brave man in the ranks of the company. As the captain is badly wounded I shall probably be promoted soon, and I will see that you are made corporal at least."

"Ah, I am glad to see you, my brave boy."

"I 'allowed to fight them dod durned Yankees, and I 'reckon I've 'em the best I knowed how," said Ike, who had recovered from his surprise and was now willing to take all the credit extended.

"Yes, you did a power to help drive 'em back," replied the officer, "and I'll see that you are properly rewarded. By the way, Ike, what are the men saying about that Yankee?"

"He un can't be no Yank."

"Why not?"

"Why, he un first dead agin 'em. They all is sayin that he's a scooter to fight. Reckon he'll get office."

"Look here, Ike, don't you be taken in and done for like the rest! Do you know why he enlisted?"

"On account of tar and feathers, I reckon."

"Exactly. You had him boxed up that night. He wasn't ready to skip, and he was afraid of being coated. He reckoned on deserting to his friends when we got down here."

"Then why didn't we uns fix 'em?"

"We had our eyes on him, but he was too sharp for us. He knew we were watching him, and he didn't dar' to bolt. He had a better plan than that. When he grabbed that flag and led you back—and I saw you were one of the first to follow—do you know what his plan was?"

"To git that cannon, I reckon."

"No, sir! No, sir! He fooled the whole pack of you! He intended to lead you into a trap and get you all captured."

"Yo' dead' say!"

"But I do! I know all about it. If I hadn't followed on with the rest of the company, not one of you would have got back alive."

"Then, dod rot his Yankee hide, why doan' we uns jump right onto him heavy?" shouted the excited Ike.

"Because we're no positive proofs, you see. He's been too deep and sly thus far. You see, he's even fooled almost every man in our company. You haven't no love fur Yankees, I take it!"

"Dod rot 'em, I reckon I killed about 20 of 'em down thar', but I wish it had been a hundred!"

"I wish this fellow was out of our company," mused Wyle. "So long as he is with us we have got to be on our guard against his Yankee tricks. He'd feel proud to take us all over to the Yankees."

"Why doan' yo' un git him out?" asked Ike after a moment's reflection.

"I'd like to, but how can I? I've just come from brigade headquarters, where General Jackson asked after him and as much as said he'd promote him. He'll probably give him the place I want you to have. He's fooled Jackson the same as he has the rest of us."

"And Jackson will make he un a corporal?" asked Ike.

"Sure to."

"Say, lootenant," whispered Ike as he drew a step nearer, "I reckon I know how to get that Yank outer this company!"

"How?"

"Shoot him out!"

"I—I don't understand!"

"If he un goes, do I git to be corporal?"

"Yes."

"Then yo' leave it to me! Mebbe it will take a week or two, but yo' bet yo'r last dollar he un's got to go!"

CHAPTER VII.

After Bull Run Federals and Confederates began making earnest preparations for war. The holiday was over. There was no longer talk of 60 or 90 day campaign, of soldiers returning to the farm in time to harvest the crops. While the Federals gathered on the plains of Arlington to learn the tactics of war the Confederates remained on the fields where their first victory had been won and prepared for what was to come. There was fighting in the west, armies were being raised and troops moved in every direction, but we follow only those which had confronted each other on that famous field.

Organization, drill, guard, drill, scout, reconnoissance, arm and equip. In the beginning the various companies had been allowed to select their own officers by ballot. After Bull Run all commissions came from the secretary of war; all noncommissioned officers were duly appointed. Duke Wyle was commissioned captain of the Shenandoah guards, the second lieutenant was advanced, and the orderly sergeant was promoted to a lieutenancy. Among those who secured brief furloughs were Captain Wyle and Steve Brayton. The latter reached home first. The story of the battle was known, but the story of the rally—the incident which had directed General Jackson's attention to Royal Kenton—was news to the people and a great surprise. Brayton had no need to exaggerate facts to compel cheers for the "Yankee," as Kenton was still called. He told the story over and over again, always to an interested audience, and he always wound up with the observation:

"I reckon yo' all know that I was agin him and kinder hoped to put on the tar and feathers, but I've changed my mind. Durn my hide if I don't wish he was captain of our company!"

One day as he passed the Percy mansion Marian was at the gate, seemingly waiting for him.

"I have read of the battle and heard a great deal of talk about it," she said, "but would you mind telling mother and I of the part taken by our own company? We are naturally more interested in them than any other participants."

Sitting on the veranda with mother and daughter for an audience and using a piece of chalk to draw a rude diagram on the boards, Steve Brayton kept them deeply interested for an hour.

"You were at first driven back?" queried Marian when he had finished.

"Driv' right back like a flock of sheep, and that' hain't no use to deny it," he replied.

"Where were your officers?"

"Runnin as fast as the rest of us."

"And Mr. Kenton rallied you?"

"He did, ma'am. Abner Jenkins was carryin our company flag, and he tumbled down and left it lyin on the ground. I was right behind him with Kenton, and the Yankee lifts it up, waves it about and yells for us to halt and rally."

"And did the officers rally, too?" persisted Marian.

"Well, yes, but they was purty slow about it. We had got the cannon and were drawin it off afore I saw any of 'em. Reckon they feel mightily cut up over it, for they allus said the Yankee wouldn't stand fire."

Steve Brayton was not a close observer, or he might have discovered a secret that afternoon. Both mother and daughter exhibited the greatest interest and asked him many questions, and when he took his departure he said to himself:

"Durn my hide if they wasn't more interested than half the men!"

Two or three days later Captain Wyle appeared, and Steve Brayton vanished. The captain expected to create a sensation, but was bitterly disappointed. Everybody was friendly, but Brayton had told the story of the rally and put the credit where it belonged. He had plenty of excuses to urge, and his story was quite different from Brayton's, but somehow it failed to go. While he was congratulated on his promotion, which was strong evidence in itself of his good standing with his superior officers, he had not rallied his flying company and led it back, and no one could be quite satisfied with his record. On the second evening of his arrival he called upon the Percys. His sole reason for returning home at that time was to make this call. The victory which he had helped to achieve, his promotion, the laudatory notices he had received in his home newspaper, all these things went to make him believe that he would be accorded a frank welcome by mother and daughter and that opportunity might be given him to plead his cause.

The captain's welcome was cordial enough, and after the first salutations conversation naturally turned to the war. He took an early opportunity to laughingly remark:

"Well, I suppose you have heard all about our Yankee?"

"To whom do you refer, captain?" stiffly inquired Marian.

WILL COUNT A QUORUM

Democrats Decide to Stop Further Filibustering.

HAD A LIVELY TIME IN CAUCUS.

A Committee Appointed to Prepare a Rule to Provide For the Recording of Members Present and Not Voting—Objections to "Sundries" Overruled.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—After a heated session of two hours and a half the Democratic caucus decided by a vote of 90 to 44 to instruct the committee on rules to report a new rule to ascertain and record the presence of a quorum whether voting or not.

This is the culmination of the long and bitter struggle that has been on in the Democratic house ever since the end of the fifty-first congress. When the committee on rules brought forward the proposition to punish members who declined to answer to their names on roll calls by the imposition of a $10 fine for each offense as the writer of the situation with which the house has been frequently confronted when it was deadlocked by the refusal of the Republicans to respond to their names, a great deal of opposition was manifested to it on the part of various Democrats.

Some of them did not believe that such a method would prove effective, and they insisted that the house should go further than the committee on rules seemed willing to do and adopt the quorum counting device invented by Mr. Reed in the fifty-first congress. Others were not disposed to go even so far as the rule framed on Thursday contemplated.

Discussed in Caucus.

The result was that when the Democrats found they were without a quorum on Friday it was decided to hold a caucus to discuss and agree upon some plan. Practically all the Democratic members of the house attended the caucus. As soon as it was called to order Mr. Bland presented a resolution directing the sergeant-at-arms to carry out the provisions of section 29, chapter 1, of the Revised Statutes, by which deductions from the salaries of members should be made for every day's absence except on account of sickness.

This was in accordance with the action of the judiciary committee earlier in the day. The committee had been charged with the duty of examining the various laws and ascertaining whether the law directing fines had been repealed, by implication. The report was to the effect that the law was in full force. Members of the judiciary committee stated to the caucus the practice under the law in earlier congresses and of the steps to amend and repeal it during the salary grab days. All these attempts had failed, and the law was now under full force, although it had not been executed for 20 years.

During the war, when there was necessarily a great deal of absenteeism by general consent rather than by any modification of the statutes, the old custom previously in force, which required each member to certify to the sergeant-at-arms the number of days he had been absent and the cause of such absence, had fallen into disuse.

This resolution of Mr. Bland had no direct bearing upon the question of adopting a rule to record the presence of non-voting members. It was offered as a supplementary step looking toward securing the attendance of members. It was aimed directly at the device of absenteeism. After the members of the judiciary committee had made their explanation the resolution was unanimously adopted.

The Vital Question.

Then followed the fight over the question of determining the method by which members who refused to answer to their names should be made to participate in the business of the house and counted as present. The resolution which contained the rule reported from the committee on rules on Thursday, however, was not one of these. By general consent it seemed to be regarded as cumbrous and, perhaps lacking in effectiveness, and there was no disposition on the part of the caucus to urge it as a solution of the problem.

Mr. Springer brought forward the rule which he introduced some time ago and framed on the lines of the old rule drawn some 12 years ago by J. Randolph Tucker of Virginia, when the same question was being agitated, which provided that members who declined to vote when their names were called should be brought to the bar of the house, and after being given the opportunity to vote upon the pending proposition in case of refusal should be recorded as "present but not voting."

Mr. Pendleton of West Virginia offered a resolution directing the committee on rules to formulate and present a rule to ascertain and record the presence of a quorum whether voting or not. Mr. Outhwaite suggested in the form of a resolution a different method of accomplishing the same purpose. His plan contemplated the appointment of tellers on every yea and nay vote, who should stand at the clerk's desk and record as present but not voting such members as declined to respond when their names were called.

The debate upon these various propositions continued for two hours and developed a wide difference of opinion. Speaker Crisp took the floor and made a vigorous speech, pointing out the deplorable position in which the house found itself on account of such a dilatory and persistent absenteeism. It left the house at the mercy of the minority whenever at a wink or nod from Mr. Reed the Republicans declined to answer to their names. He reviewed the legislative situation and the necessity for prompt disposal of business in the house, and in conclusion said something should be done to remedy the evil. Mr. Crisp was careful, however, to avoid pointing out any exact line of action, preferring to leave that to the judgment of the caucus, but he advised against any precipitous action. In conclusion the speaker stated that he believed whatever method the caucus decided upon could be made a part of the rules and enforced in the house.

Mr. Cockran of New York advocated a rule on the lines of the Springer resolution or for some other means which would permit the house to do business. Several others favored some sort of a quorum counting device. Quite a number of speeches were made in opposition to any and all rules looking to the counting of members who refused to vote.

Messrs. Kilgore of Texas, Bryan of Nebraska, McMillin of Tennessee, Wheeler of Alabama and Williams of Illinois led this opposition. During the course of a rather hot tempered speech from Mr. Kilgore on the subject Mr. Bland of Missouri shouted, with an expression of disgust, to the effect that if the Democratic house was forced to resort to Reedism it had better adjourn sine die and go home.

Mr. Bryan's speech was both forcible and eloquent. He reviewed the fight made by the Democrats in the fifty-first congress against Mr. Reed and his quorum counting device, and he asserted that the question of counting a quorum had been made an issue on every stump in the United States.

Denounced Recklessness.

Mr. Reed had been every where condemned, and the Democratic congress had been elected partly on that issue. He described the task that in many states of the Union confronted the Democratic party. He denounced as reckless any proposition looking to the repealing on this and the subsequent sessions. The first vote on Mr. McCreary's motion resulted in a tie—64 to 64. Mr. Holman, who was in the chair, voted for the resolution, thus breaking the tie and carrying the motion. The opposition, however, then demanded the yeas and nays, and on the roll call the decision of the first vote was reversed, and the motion was lost—59 to 65.

Mr. McCreary of Kentucky then moved to refer all the resolutions which have been presented to the committee on rules, with instructions to the committee to report their judgment to a caucus to be held next Monday evening. This motion precipitated the first test of strength. Speaker Crisp, Mr. Hutchings and Mr. Outhwaite, the Democratic members of the committee on rules, purposely refrained from voting on this and the subsequent resolutions. The first vote on Mr. McCreary's motion resulted in a tie—64 to 64. Mr. Holman, who was in the chair, voted for the resolution, thus breaking the tie and carrying the motion. The opposition, however, then demanded the yeas and nays, and on the roll call the decision of the first vote was reversed, and the motion was lost—59 to 65.

The vote was then taken on Mr. de Armond's resolution, and it carried by a two-thirds majority—90 to 44. This completed the work of the caucus.

The Democrats of the house had decided that the force members refused to vote to participate in legislation by their presence. It remains for the committee on rules to formulate a rule in accordance with the De Armond resolution. This they will probably do today, and the rule now before the house to fine members will be withdrawn and superseded by the quorum counting rule to be prepared.

In the Senate.

The urgent deficiency bill was considered in the regular business in the senate without any action being taken upon it. Then the tariff bill was taken up, and Mr. Peffer finished his speech, begun over a week ago. His conclusions were that if there was one thing worse than the McKinley bill it was the senate tariff bill. He wanted protection to the products of the farm if the products of the factory were protected, but if he could not get this protection he wanted free trade. He was nonconmittal as to his attitude on the bill when it should come to its final passage, maintaining that it would depend very largely on the changes made in the bill in the meantime. He was followed by Senator Mitchell of Oregon, who for nearly four hours discussed the subjects of wool, hops, hay, plums, prunes, agricultural products, fish, coal, lumber and other products in which Oregon was particularly interested.

Mr. Mitchell's attitude toward the bill may be briefly defined, and in his opinion it did not possess a single good point. It

Wilson Meets Butterworth's Arguments Point For Point.

BRECKINRIDGE ROUNDLY SCORED.

The Colonel Flinched Under the Fiery Arraignment—Sarcasm and Logic, Tipped With Denunciation and Peppered With Grievous Queries, Were Hurled at the Defendant.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The great speech of Major Ben Butterworth in the Pollard-Breckinridge case was surpassed by the greater argument of Judge Jere Wilson, who began the final summary for the plaintiff. Doubts had been current whether the impression left by the fervent oratory of the ex-congressman from Ohio could be eliminated by the matter of fact methods of the ex-congressman from Indiana. Judge Wilson, however, bears an enviable local reputation as a pleader of convincing power, and everybody was assured of an effort worthy of one of the most important causes for which he has ever appeared.

The audience which crowded in to hear him was in itself a compliment, and the attention which it gave him was notable history. Many of the most substantial members of the bar were glad to occupy standing room all day, and congressmen perched on the window sills or pressed their aching backs against the walls, willing to endure any discomforts for the sake of an opportunity to listen. The silence which prevailed all day was distinctly noticeable. Even the newspapers which have heretofore been constantly rustled during the proceedings were thrust aside unopened.

Retained Butterworth's Arrows.

There were some advantages in the situation for Mr. Wilson which he was most alert to grasp. He had been a playmate of Ben Butterworth in boyhood. Back in the Miami hills, in the country life which the Quaker politician had so effectively conjured with, and he was able to return the same ammunition which had been employed against him and to turn some of his opponent's weapons in damaging boomerangs. He disclaimed all intention of bad inventory, and yet he was able to use oratory of the most effectual kind.

"The defense of Adam" was what he called Colonel Breckinridge's position, and so the credit of humanity, he said, Adam had always been deemed a coward and a craven. He did not attempt to assert that his client was the paragon of virtue that just as far as she had strayed from the path of womanly virtue she had been led by the man.

To appreciate Judge Wilson's speech it would be necessary to know the man and his methods. He is tall, as slender as Senator Evarts, with a more massive than a woman's when his coat is buttoned around it; a face which is covered tight as parchment by a bronzed skin; an iron gray imperial and bushy hair of the same things. His voice is a bass and seems to come from his boots and is frequently broken by a hacking cough.

He talks slowly, deliberately. He has the facts in the testimony marvelously under command, and his ability as a straightforward logician is accompanied by great power. On two or three important points he drew logical deductions from the evidence which surprised even the lawyers. He has a long right arm, tipped with an accusing index finger, which serves to drive his deductions home. That long bony forefinger was several times leveled in denunciation of Colonel Breckinridge, which made the Kentucky orator shift uneasily in his chair.

It was a terrible arraignment to which he was subjected, and he would have been something more or less than human had he not shown the effect of it as he did. Judge Wilson will continue for an indefinite time, and then Judge Bradley will deliver his charge to the jury, and the trial will be ended when a verdict is announced.

Mr. Wilson's voice was low and impressive as he told the jury that it was his duty in reply to all the defendant had said as a witness and through his counsel.

It had been said that the woman in this case was a bawd, a wanton and a woman of the town, but he promised to show the jury before he finished that whatever this woman is the defendant was responsible for her and for the life she had led. Mr. Butterworth had spent seven hours arguing that the woman, who he said was 30 years old, had seduced the 47-year-old defendant, that she had dragged him from his family, his wife, his home, to the verge of this awful precipice. If it was not so serious, it would be ludicrous.

Called Reason a Liar.

Mr. Wilson had some sharp sparring with Attorney Stoll, and then he went on to speak of the testimony of Rankin Rossell. He might, he said, have passed by the testimony of this young famous lawyer who handled "a most unique liar" by simply dismissing him with, "May God have mercy on your soul."

He then characterized Rossell's testimony as "a black, a damnable lie—a lie nailed to the counter to be written up in letters of deepest black against this defense."

This disposed of all the aspersions upon the character of Madeline Pollard, Mr. Wilson thought, except the unsupported statement of the defendant that Madeline Pollard and James Rhodes had told him that they sustained illicit relations. He discussed the inherent probabilities of such confidence, saying that Colonel Breckinridge was the most agile man he had ever seen on a witness stand; that the colonel had not practiced law 40 years for nothing. He (Colonel Breckinridge) knew that if he had the chances made to him a professional communication the court would have sealed his mouth. The statement was the more improbable since all the testimony showed Rhodes to be an honorable, hard working man—a decent man.

Then Mr. Wilson proceeded to attack the credibility of the defendant fiercely. "He has come equally guilty with my client," declared the lawyer—"even more so, for he had taken a solemn vow to heaven, and she had not. He had broken that vow by his own confession before he ever met Madeline Pollard.

"He has admitted that he knew Sarah Grenes; knew the character of her house, and had been there before he went with Madeline Pollard. He has lived a lie for 30 years. His life has been that of faithlessness to the most sacred obligations of life. He has lived a life of duplicity, of hypocrisy, such as you can't coin words to express the length and breadth of. His own counsel has characterized him in a way such as I, although my heart is in this case for this poor, friendless, stricken, homeless girl, could hardly find it in my heart to say.

"When he comes and makes such a confession and then tells this story, how can he expect to find a man so credulous as to

AN ADDRESS.

FROM THE BOARD OF EDUCATION TO THE CITIZENS OF PLAINFIELD.

Replying to a Protest from a Committee of Citizens Against the Erection of a High School, and Increasing the Tax Rate.

GENTLEMEN:—A committee of citizens having presented to the Board of Education a protest against the erection of a new High School building, and this protest having been published in the papers, we feel that the answer should be made to you. This course seems the more necessary because they published figures in such a way as to give a very misleading impression of our school and contained inferences that reflect not only on this Board, but on the whole previous administration of the schools We accordingly answer the protest, point by point.

THE COST OF THE SCHOOLS.

Under this head we present the following letter and its answer:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 9, 1894.

Mr. H. M. Maxson, Superintendent of City Schools:

DEAR SIR:—At the desire of the Board of Education, I hereby request you, as our familiar with school statistics, to examine the figures contained in the protest addressed to the Board at its last meeting, and similar data for the State for the year 1893, and report to the Board any further information you may obtain bearing upon the question of school expenses.

Yours respectfully,
D. B. FRANCISCO,
President of the Board of Education.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 9, 1894.

Dr. J. B. Prohaso, President of the Board of Education:

DEAR SIR:—In according with your request, I present the following report:

THE CENTS PER CAPITA COST.

The percentage of per capita cost of education presented in the protest is found in a table on page 8 of the new annual report, issued in 1894.

The table as prepared by the State authorities gives the per capita of the cities and large boroughs; the table of the protest presents data from twelve cities and towns selected from the list.

The following page of the same report calls attention to the fact that Bordentown pays $21.36; Camden, $28.05; Woodbury, $26.76; Somerville, $27.84; Millville, $26.80; Plainfield, East Orange, $22.92; Bloomfield, $22.25, does 7 cents less than Plainfield; and Orange, $25.66, does 3 cents less than Plainfield; Bayonne, $26.80; Phillipsburg, $25.86; Newark, $ 1.20; Paterson, $25.18, all above Plainfield.

Summarized, the above has cities higher than Plainfield, by practically the sum of $6,000 more spent; but $94 less than your car rate would have been $27.20 and six with rates from four to eight per cent. less than ours.

If this page of the report had been also quoted, Plainfield would have appeared in a favorable light.

From 84 of the report shows that our expense per capita was almost a dollar (97 cents) less than the average for the whole of the county of Essex, and but 3 cents more than the average for the whole of Hudson county. I presented this with the cities of the protest with these omitted cities added, and also some additional data that will assist in making a sound comparison of our city with others.

Cities omitted by the protest are in Italics.

Included in the Plainfield per capita is an item of $2,000 for school books for library, none of which came from taxation, being obtained from subscription entertainments. If this had been omitted, as it should have been, the per capita would have been reduced to $26.17, and six cities would appear with a higher per capita than Plainfield.

TOTAL ANNUAL EXPENDITURE.

The protest calls attention to the fact that this total amount expended by the city of Plainfield was materially larger than that of all the other cities except Elizabeth. But we placed opposite the cities quoted in the protest the total expenditure for each (including bonds and interest). It will be seen at once that Plainfield is the only city that spent anything considerably, for the purpose, except Atlantic City, and that paid a little less than a third as much as Plainfield.

The $14,000 expended for our city assessment of $14,3.3, for the extension to the Bryant building is included in your $4,000 for bonds and interest. It is manifestly unfair to include these items in a comparison with cities that have built no new school houses, paid rental and bonds and interest in that year.

Omitting these items, to arrive at an equitable basis of comparison, it appears from the table of the protest that Plainfield is now of the 12 cities quoted, the regular expenses of seven more than in Plainfield.

It might be said, still further, that of the $60, 87 expended by Plainfield, $15,000 did not enter into the taxation of all that year being added to the debt, to be paid $,000 per year.

CAUSES FOR INCREASE IN PER CAPITA COST.

Where there is a difference in the comparative cost of education in two cities there are undoubtedly causes for the difference which may not be at once apparent from the statistics.

A few causes may be suggested by the columns in the second table. The average number of days' schooling during the year, the average enrollment per room, the average wages of daily teachers. The first column is the per capita cost based on the valuation. Where a citizen in a room of 60 would be small but if, in a room of 30 pupils, he would pay twice the expense for buildings and maintenance. Again, the ratio of pupils to teachers and a proportionate reduction in expense if a city has many two-thirds more pupils in a room and pays its teachers a little less than Plainfield does, or has two-thirds more pupils in a room and pays its teachers a little more than Plainfield does, the cost would be less than in Plainfield. North Amboy crowds more than twice as many into a room as we do, and pays its teachers two-thirds as much as Plainfield does.

The cost of tuition is largely affected by the manner of cases suggested. While it is conceded that the majority of cases are the average, and that the number in the room is the best for the greatest efficiency, it is frequently quoted, the condition is that the numbers in some of the cities may be better imagined than described.

It is impossible for us to condense and fully grasp without more data in the advancement of the pupils. One of the important causes of the great efficiency of the Plainfield schools is the fact that the rooms have not been allowed to become overcrowded, as is known to exist elsewhere.

The other means that cities with low rates have to reduce the per capita cost is to reduce the teachers' salaries. The wages of teachers, as

GROCER DEMAREST FAILS.

Unable to Make Collections he Makes an Assignment To-day.

Peter M. Demarest, the Park avenue grocer, has been compelled to give up the struggle to pay his creditors in full. Like many other merchants, his inability to collect what is due him has caused his failure. He made an arrangement today for the equal benefit of all of his creditors, making Mr. Craig A. Marsh the assignee.

PERSONAL.

Miss Messler of Rahway is visiting her cousin, Miss Laura Raddin of North avenue.

Mr. William Roe of North Plainfield started to-day for a two months' stay at the "St. Alma," Ocean Grove.

Mrs. William Chamberlain of West Sixth street has returned home from a visit with friends out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ackerman of North Plainfield have the sympathy of their friends in the loss, yesterday morning, of their eight-year-old son. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon.

To-night "Dick" Harding and D. J. Shay of this city will leave for California. Shay has been operator at the Postal Telegraph office here for a short time. His place will be taken by F. S. Bird, of Elizabeth. Shay has a position with the Santa Fe Railroad.

The funeral of the late James F. Martin, who died on Thursday, took place from the house, 147 Duer street, yesterday, and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which he was a member, turned out 112 strong, and escorted the body to Hillside. Rev. Mr. Richardson conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes. David Bodine read the funeral ritual and Dr. Yerkes consigned the body to the grave. Franklin Council presented a handsome floral pillow with the inscription "Our Brother."

News from the West End.

The Young Men's League of Hope chapel will hold its regular meeting tonight.

Messrs. Thomas Reid and Harry Turner of the Curtis Electric Co. spent Sunday with their friends on South Second street.

Mr Fred Schomp spent Sunday in New York city.

Mr. James Weston of Essex street has quite a curiosity. It is a chicken that has four legs.

TUXEDO.

Fell Into the Brook.

Yesterday afternoon, about two o'clock, several small boys were playing and gathering flowers along Stony brook near Wilson's stone crusher. One of the party while on the edge of the brook slipped and fell into the water, about four feet below. Fortunately the water was only about two feet deep, and before a thorough drenching, the boy was pulled out.

City Court.

Hugh Laing was sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or spend 10 days in the county jail for drunkenness. He was arrested by Policeman Giese.

Edward Vail, for being drunk and disorderly, and using profane language, was fined $2.

A bicycling, T. Henry Yarns, paid a $1 fine for riding his bicycle on North avenue without a light.

Employing Non-Union Men.

One Plainfield mason and contractor, who had all his men called from work on Friday last, by the local Masons' and Bricklayer's Union, because he had employed two non-union men, went to New York yesterday, and engaged ten non-union men. He says he has plenty of work, but he will not again employ men who belong to the Union.

Didn't Give it Time to Explode.

About eight o'clock Saturday night a lamp in David S. Dunavan's store, on East Front street, began to burn strangely, suggestive of explosions, and to avoid any danger Mr. Dunavan carried the lamp into the street and extinguished it.

Not Used to Steam Cars.

Saturday a team of horses belonging to William Johnson, a farmer, became frightened at the cars on Plainfield avenue and ran away. There was no driver in the wagon and the horses ran to Evans' place where a workman caught them.

RECEPTION TO G. A. R. MEN

TENDERED TO THEM BY THE W. C. T. U.

Members of Both Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, and Major Anderson Post, No. 109, Present—Entertainment and Refreshments.

DURING the existence of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in this city there has been an old standing committee in the Union known as the Committee on Soldiers and Sailors. The object of this committee was to prepare small canvas bags, in which were placed comb and brush, needle and thread, and numerous useful things. These bags were sent to sailors or old soldiers on duty. Recently this committee decided that it would be a good idea to get acquainted with the old soldiers in Plainfield, and subsequently an invitation was sent to both Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, and Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., to attend a reception in the W. C. T. U. Rooms. The proposition was met with a hearty response from the veterans and the members of Winfield Scott Post accepted it with pleasure and all expressed a desire to attend. As the commander of Major Anderson Post did not receive the invitation in time to present it before a regular meeting of the members, he issued a call in the local papers for them to meet at the rooms and attend the reception, and a goodly number responded.

After the visitors had assembled in the W. C. T. U. rooms, Mrs. Peck, the president of the Union, welcomed them in a few very appropriate remarks. Dr. Lewis then offered prayer, after which Mrs. Honeyman sang "Welcome Boys in Blue."

Dr. Lewis made the address of the evening, telling in a very interesting way of his visit to the old battlefields at Fredericksburg and Richmond, and also of his visit to Belle Isle, where many prisoners were confined during the war.

Miss Springer rendered a well executed piano solo, after which refreshments were served and then a general social time of hand shaking and greetings took place.

Afterwards Mr. W. C Smith sang "The Army Bean," and "Bob" Mattox recited. Mrs. Peck gave the veterans a cordial invitation to attend the W. C. T. U. meetings, and in return Comrade Reese of Winfield Scott Post, thanked the ladies for their kind reception, and he said he would urge the members to attend.

In conclusion a vote of thanks was extended to the W. C. T. U. for the excellent manner in which the Posts had been entertained.

Base Ball.

The West Ends of Pondville thinking that they could beat the Arlingtons, tried their hand at it on Saturday afternoon, but found out that they should have to play a little while longer to do it, for at the end of the ninth inning they found that they were defeated, the score being 16 to 15 in favor of the Arlingtons. The game was characterized by heavy batting and poor fielding on the part of both teams, and it was anybody's game up to the sixth inning, when the Arlingtons went to work and won the game.

Following is the score:

WHY DUNELLEN HAS VISITORS.

Mr. Martine Says that Liquor is Being Sold on Sunday.

Last night at a temperance meeting held in the Presbyterian church, at Dunellen, the Rev. Mr. Martine made an address mainly upon the violation of the law and the desecration of the Sabbath that is being carried on continually in Dunellen in the selling of liquor on Sunday.

Some immediate and strong action is to be taken to stop this unlawful business Mr. Martine said. Not only saloonsed places sell on Sunday, the reverend gentleman stated, but also others.

BREVITIES.

—Martin Lynch cut the top of one of his fingers off Thursday while cutting a strap.

—The Racing Committee of the Union county wheelmen will meet at Elizabeth to-night.

—Mr. C. T. Ross is having digging and curbing put down in front of his place on Plainfield avenue.

—The Exempt Firemen's Association will hold an important meeting to-night. Officers will be elected.

—Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum will give their social entertainment in Red Men's Hall to-night.

—The Gesang and Turn Verein will give an entertainment in their hall, on Somerset street, to-night.

—The Home Building and Loan Association will hold its annual meeting to-night. A new series of shares will be opened.

—A regular meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club will be held in the club rooms Tuesday evening, April 17th, at eight o'clock.

—Wide-awake Werner has $10 Spring suits which he will offer in our advertising columns to-morrow, guaranteeing them to be worth $15.

—Calvin Sutton has finished painting Mr. F. A. Barnaby's house on Plainfield avenue, and is working on the woodwork in Seely Edsall's new store in the Babcock building.

—Many Plainfielders were "April fooled" yesterday by going out to the parks, near Campbell's, to see the gypsies who were not there.

—The new management of the Crescent Riding Academy is expected to take charge some time this week. The new horses, which are said to be of very fine stock, are expected to-night.

—Hereafter all the fire apparatus will answer every call between seven a. m. and six p. m., according to the new orders issued by Chief Doane. At night the old orders will still be in vogue.

—Several wheelmen from out of town got into a wrangle over one of the party colliding with another, yesterday, on Park avenue. They discounted and after having a set-to in the street they went over into a field and settled the matter.

—The tickets for the "Gray Mare" which were to have been on sale this morning at Reynolds' and Leggett's pharmacies did not arrive until late this afternoon on account of a delay on the part of the printer. They will be on sale this evening.

—Chief Fairchild of the North Plainfield fire department has changed the order of the fire apparatus in the engine house, and hereafter the hose carriage will go out first. Since the hydrants have been in use the engine is not often used, and hose carriage can be taken out in a hurry now, not having to wait for the engine to leave the house first.

AN ADDRESS.

school." If character is a product of the school, improvement in every department of the building is necessary to meet honestly the demand for a higher character and a broader culture. Is it not a reproach to the Plainfield of to-day that so many children are compelled to go to such wretched quarters for their education? Property owners are entitled to a fair return for the use of their buildings, but the Plainfield teachers pay, and have to bear, many times more than a fair proportion thereof.

Below is a list of the column of wages will show that the cities that are against the front in education pay about the same rate as Plainfield does. Any material decrease in Oregon from the results of the census of 1890 in real taxation, and consequently cause a retrograde movement in wages.

THE TRUE COMPARISON.

But all such comparisons between town and town, without consideration of the population, are unscientific and misleading. The true method is to compare only communities that are similar in population and in the character of their work. Perhaps the communities in the State that most with these conditions are found in the list of the Most Orange. The following table shows our comparison with these cities:

CITIES.	Per Capita Expense.	Assessment Property.	Wages of Lady Teachers.	Value of School Prop'ty.	Debts.	Rate of Taxation.
East Orange	$7 00	$11,207 00	$350,000	$ 2,000	.34 pc
Bloomfield	12 00	11 00	10,000	40 00	110,000	1.40 pc
Plainfield	17 00	11 50	12	100,000	77,000	1.61

Montclair has just paid $50,000 for a High School lot, and $91,000 for a High School building. Orange has recently paid $15,000 for a lot and $40,000 for the building.

CONE OF SCHOOL HOUSEWORK.

In this connection it is pertinent of interest to you to know something of the cost of some good school systems elsewhere. I append a table showing the per capita cost of school in the principal cities. In Connecticut, Middletown $5.65, Portland, $5.44; Hartford, $6.44; Bridgeport, $6.44; Waterbury, $6.61; Bristol, $6.47; Stamford, $7.41. Rhode Island, Newport, $5.91; Providence, $6.25. Massachusetts, Boston, $8.37; Newton, $8.46; Worcester, $8.39; Springfield, $8.73; Holyoke, $7.66; Fall River, $7.66; Lowell, $7.46; Milton, $9.22.

INCREASING THE TAX-RATE.

As to increasing the burden in these hard times, we would say that even if the building were erected at once, there would be no increase for the tax-rate for a year to come, and that when taxation is affected by the new building, the increase will be only about 8 cents. It should be borne in mind that the cost is not all assessed at once, but that it is added to the debt and paid in small installments.

Furthermore, we are assured that by building in the present business depression we could save from 15 to 20 per cent. on the cost of the building, so that immediate construction would not only not have added to the tax burden in days of depression, but would have saved quite a sum to the city and have given employment to workmen at a time when it is greatly needed.

As to the tax-rate itself we would call to mind these facts:

First—We understand that in the small cities the tax rate for the school is usually larger than that of any other city department.

Second—That the people by direct vote gave this board power to assess up to 50 cents for current expenses, but that the Board has never taxed as high as that but once, and that was 10 years ago.

Third—That since 1888 the total school tax has decreased 14 cents.

Fourth—That in 1891 the school tax was reduced, but this Board was the only city department that reduced its rates.

NEED OF A NEW HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING.

This point opens up the whole question of the deficit of this School, the needs of the needs of the schools and it is wisdom in planning to meet them. We will state the case in question but simply present the needs and our decision.

The Board is confronted with the following conditions:

First—As the Bryant School, four of the ten rooms with sixty pupils each and the other rooms full.

Second—In the Franklin School two of the ten rooms with over fifty pupils each.

Third—At the Washington School, one room with over sixty pupils.

Fourth—A High School rapidly filling its quarters, with accomodations behind the times of a modern school and which it is utterly unable to do modern work in the subjects of most vital interest to the pupils not going to college.

Fifth—No room for an unused class room in either of the four buildings mentioned to permit growth.

Sixth—An increase of over 200 in the average attendance in the city schools this year.

Under these conditions the Board decided to call the following plan:—to erect a new building with modern equipments that should bring our High School up to the footing of other schools and States, and to provide for a move ing its pupils and provide for its growth, for years to come. The High School would then move into the present building and the Grammar Schools would then move into them from the Franklin School, leaving vacant rooms in that building, by a change of district lines and by transferring pupils to the Franklin School all the rooms in the various schools now crowded could be easily relieved, and room be given for future growth, thus the building would meet all of the six difficulties.

ENLARGING THE WASHINGTON SCHOOL BUILDING.

In opposition to the plan of the board the protest suggests that we build on land already owned by the city, and wherever the enlargement of the Washington School is recommended.

We have accordingly had a skilled architect make an examination of that building with a view to building an additional story. He reports that owing to the thinness of the walls, a steel frame would be necessary, and owing to insufficient trainess, the roof would be better torn off than raised and that these two facts would constitute so much reconstruction of the work as would cost nearly as much as a new building; that, furthermore, the plan of the present building is extremely ill suited for the present day having no ventilation but one fifth or one fourth the proper amount of light, and that poorly arranged; insufficient halls and no place to put stairs for additional stories.

We would say in addition that the location of this school is now exceedingly objectionable for the majority of parents to send their children to it; that that alteration or the erection of a new building would turn six class out of doors, and require the provision of new quarters and discussions and scatter them for a year, that when done it relieve only three districts reached within one block of the Franklin School, and the Bryant and Franklin Schools would be as crowded as ever, the enlargement of the Washington School building would, therefore, mean but one of the six needs that confronts the Board at this and that one of the least importance.

REGARDING THE IRVING SCHOOL.

We would say that nine rooms in this building are already occupied and the others probably will be in the near future. The crowding of noisy children into either of the other wards we deem impracticable.

ABOLISHING THE HIGH SCHOOL.

It is stated that excessive taxation should be avoided by curtailing or abolishing the High School. With the fact in mind that nearly half the cost of instruction in the High School is met by tuitions paid by out-of-town pupils so that it adds but a little more than 4 cents to the taxation of the city, we believe the question of "High School or no High School," needs to be discussed. We would emphasize the fact that the new building should not be looked at solely as a High School expense; the accommodation of the High school is but one of six needs to be met by its construction.

Finally, as to the protest itself: the Board would assure you that it has not been and is not now moving hastily in the matter, but slowly and with careful deliberation. It is not wedded to its own opinion, it has no pet project to carry out, it is not seeking to have its own way in spite of any number of citizens or one citizen; it is simply trying, with all the wisdom that it possesses, to conscientiously fulfil the duties that its oath of office binds it to in providing adequately for the growing needs of the schools.

Washington's Inauguration.

The memorial volume of the centennial of Washington's inauguration has just been presented to our Free Public Library by the Commissioners on the same. It is a large folio volume beautifully gotten up with many fine illustrations and portraits of Washington and various prominent men of his time, containing much that is of value relating to the book of the centennial as a fitting adjournment of the centennial celebration in April, 1889. As the work is of great value it will belong strictly to the reference department of the Library, and can be seen upon application to the attendant.

Salvation Army.

A commissioning of local officers, will take place in the Salvation Army hall, on West Second street, to-night. BEFORE JUSTICE NOLYDE.

Justice Nolyde, to-day adjourned the case of Roone vs. Fisher to April 19.

Dogs Must Wear a Licensed Collar.

According to a new law dogs must be registered in boroughs or townships, and wear a collar with license number on it. Failure to comply with this act brings fine to the owner or death to the dog. The bill originated in Monmouth county, and Assemblyman Denise, speaking for the bill, said: "The dog or the lamb has got to go. Why, the dog has more privileges in this State than a man has."

The Pool Tournament.

In the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum pool tournament Saturday night, Bot. Lyons beat Flynn and Gorman beat Owens. Under the rules the defeated player drops out.

GAGE—HUDSON—On Thursday April 12, 1894, by the Rev. John Sheridan, Matilda Eugenia, daughter of Caroline A. Hudson, to William Henry Gage.

MOURNING FOR VANCE.

Preparations Being Made for the Funeral in Asheville.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 16.—Senator Vance's death was a great shock to Asheville. The whole city is in mourning. All the flags are at half mast, and the public buildings are draped in black, and a large oil painting of the senator hangs on the outer wall of the building wreathed in white flowers. The announcement of his death was made in the churches of the city on Sunday. Special memorial services were held in the First Baptist church. The building which is the largest in the city, was crowded to the doors, and many prominent citizens of all parties delivered eulogies.

Committees were appointed to draft resolutions and to arrange for the funeral which is expected to be in this city. A monster memorial meeting for the whole state of western North Carolina has been arranged for and will probably occur on Friday. Senator Vance's first wife, his father and mother and one child are buried in Asheville.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Senator Vance of North Carolina who died at his home, 179 Massachusetts avenue, this city, had been suffering for some time from paralysis and a complication of diseases, but the end was sudden and unexpected, as he was regaining his health, and it was thought he was on the road to recovery.

He was compelled during the winter to leave the senate and go to Florida. Here he grew somewhat better, and in view of the struggle over the tariff he returned to Washington. He was a member of the committee on finance, but took little or no part in framing the present tariff bill.

Mr. Vance was born in Buncombe county, N. C., May 13, 1830, and after an education at Asheville, Washington college, Tennessee, and at the University of North Carolina he studied law. He was admitted to the bar in January, 1852, and his first public office came to him the same year, when he was elected county attorney for Buncombe county. Two years later he was sent to the state legislature, and then was returned to a seat in the thirty-fifth congress at the early age of 28 years. He was re-elected to the thirty-sixth congress. He was three times governor of his state.

KILLED AS SHE SANG.

One of a Group of Girls Shot Down by Care less Peter Duane.

HACKENSACK, N. J., April 16.—Sarah Plass of New York, aged 16, and Ella Duane and Belle Shields of Ridgefield Park 16 and 14 respectively, were standing in the parlor of Augustus Duane's residence in Ridgefield Park singing the hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." Peter Duane aged 18, was also present.

He stepped into the hall, where a breech loading gun stood, and taking up the weap on he pointed it playfully as a toy instrument of the centennial celebration in April, 1889. As the work is of great value it will belong strictly to the reference department of the Library, and can be seen upon application to the attendant.

He stepped into the hall, where a breech loading gun stood, and taking up the weap on he pointed it playfully as a toy instrument of the centennial celebration in April, 1889. As the muzzle came in range of the girls the gun was discharged, and Belle Shields fell to the floor.

She had just uttered the words, "Let me to thy bosom fly." The lad was not more than 12 feet from the girls, and the charge of birdshot tore away a portion of the top of her head, killing her instantly. Both her companions fainted. The elder Duane was away from home, and the lad, horrified at the result of his carelessness, ran more than a mile to the house of his eldest brother, John, who brought him to Hackensack and delivered him into the custody of the sheriff. The occurrence was purely accidental.

Depew Not a Candidate.

ST. LOUIS, April 16.—Messrs. Chauncey M. Depew and Cornelius Vanderbilt, who arrived in this city Saturday evening, left on their special train for Chicago. Before leaving Mr. Depew took occasion to say that he had been misunderstood as to his candidacy for United States presidency. What he had said was in a humorous sense and in connection with other matters. Instead of being a presidential candidate he was quite the reverse.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The following postmasters have been appointed:

New York—Ashton, H. C. Bush; Big Creek, D. D. Weld; Henrietta, J. E. Sweeney; Stanfordville, M. Harrison; Webster, J. Van Holmes.

Pennsylvania—Brookville, S. W. Caudell; Centre, E. H. Fritz; Dewart's Home, John McCarty; Moreland, S. P. Walker; Moscow, Rudolph Kaiser; Ralston, H. H. Hubbard; Sharon, E. G. Troutman; Sugar Creek, H. G. Flack, Pa.; Windham Summit, O. F. Dunham.

Freight and Express Collide.

HAZLETON, Pa., April 16.—A Pennsylvania railroad freight train collided with a Lehigh Valley express train near Silver Brook, on the Lehigh Valley railroad. Patrick Baker, Milton, Pa., was instantly killed, and 12 other passengers and train hands were slightly injured.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The plot is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is Written by M. Quad.

"THE UNKNOWN" SCORES GEN. COXEY

The Commonweal Forces Reach Cumberland, Md., Jones' Army Is In Delaware, and Kelly's Big Army Is Moving Good Time on a Special Freight Train.

CUMBERLAND, Md., April 16.—Marshal Carl Browne rode into Cumberland at the head of Coxey's army of the commonweal on a handsome stallion that has been his mount since leaving Massillon, O., on Easter Sunday. Browne is again on top. The revolution of Saturday has been quelled, and "Unknown" Smith has been deposed. He will go on a lecture tour.

Mr. Coxey says he now has deserted the cause of his father and goes with Smith. *It has been the frequent boast of Com*monweal Coxey that the army was an organization in which mutual rights prevailed. "Neither Marshal Browne nor I have any more rights here than the poorest soldier," has been quoted by him daily and reiterated by Browne, but the events of the past two days show that Coxey's word is law.

Mr. Coxey also now has deserted the cause of his father and goes with Smith. *It has been the frequent boast of Com*monweal Coxey that the army was an organization in which mutual rights prevailed. "Neither Marshal Browne nor I have any more rights here than the poorest soldier," has been quoted by him daily and reiterated by Browne, but the events of the past two days show that Coxey's word is law.

Browne had deposed Browne and took up Smith, who had organized the army and established a system of discipline heretofore unknown. Browne's methods of weary marches could not prevail. They made him their leader with great enthusiasm, but this was in Coxey's absence.

Coxey arrived at daybreak. "Smith must go," he said, and Smith went. Jesse Coxey, the general's son, tried to dissuade his father from this act. Several of my friends notice the result Smith's Browne, who has seem to be now talking it with good effect. Coxey will not be interfered with. "Unknown" Smith is dead. Long live Coxey!

Coxey's Son Deserts.

"Then you may go back home," said his father.

"I will go wherever I please," was the reply, and the young man went off. Smith before leaving made a speech to the army, bidding them hold together, obey orders and march to Washington. They cheered him, and there is no doubt he would have carried the men with him had he so desired. He told the newspaper men that he still wished to be called "The Unknown," that he had not been deposed, but had voluntarily withdrawn rather than acknowledge Browne as a superior officer.

"I am not going to lecture," he said it, "are going to lecture and will speak in Baltimore in a few days. If it goes there, I will try it on Washington and then on the country."

It is said on good authority that "The Unknown's" name, or at least the name he is known by in St. Louis, Frances, that he is a Swede and a patent medicine fakir who last summer gave medical lectures on South Parris Street, Chicago. He is president of the Swedish Relief Society for the Protection of Humanity. When Carl Browne had his row in Chicago with Mayor Carter Harrison, Princess gave Browne the use of the society's hall.

When the army reached Cumberland, it camped in the ball grounds, and 1,500 people paid 10 cents each to go in and see it. At night six bonfires were built, around which the men slept. They will start from here Tuesday morning and go down the canal in canal boats to Williamsport to avoid the mountains.

Kelly's Army Reaches Omaha.

OMAHA, April 16.—General Kelly and his 1,200 troops spent a beautiful Sabbath in the enjoyment of more luxuries than they have had for the last four hundred weeks ago. When the army reached the confines of Omaha, the train was halted at a short track just inside the city limits. Chief Seavy was there with two platoons of police. It had been the intention to disembark the army there in the woods and have breakfast. The authorities had provided 2,000 loaves of bread and 2,000 pounds of cooked beef, while a business firm had given 1,000 pies. All this provender was in two box cars attached to the Kelly train, and then the procession moved on.

"Pennsy," the only man in the army with a uniform, sat on the pilot of the engine holding a large American flag, while from the box cars were displayed the mess, cooks and bakers, similar to the army. Mottos of various kinds were also displayed. At the Union Pacific transfer yards in Council Bluffs there was a crowd of 1,500 or more.

Seven companies of militia were drawn up in line. When the train pulled in, a great cheer went up from the citizens and the Kellyites joined in making the depot sheds rattle with their yells, while the militia boys looked rather shame faced at each other as if they wondered why they were there.

In a moment the blankets and baggage were tumbled out of the cars in which the army had been riding from City Garys, and a camp was pitched on the ground about 100 yards from the depot. Breakfast was soon under way. City hydrants were opened and faces washed with a vigorous haste that denoted the zest and relish of cold water.

After breakfast there began a reception which lasted well into the evening. Fully 30,000 people visited the camp and mingled with the soldiers. Kelly's wonderful organization was never better shown. The discipline of the army is as perfect as that of well drilled regulars.

Boston's Contingent Delayed.

BOSTON, April 16.—The day for the starting of the Boston contingent of the commonweal army has been postponed from Tuesday to next Saturday on account of lack of funds to provide transportation and provender for the men. It was also stated that if the funds did not materialize and if they were obliged to walk they would arrive in Washington too late to join Coxey in his demand for justice. This announcement was made at the meeting of the unemployed on the Common before 2,500 people.

Jones' Division Numbers Twenty.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 16.—Division 9 of Coxey's army, under the command of Christopher Columbus Jones, camped at Newport all day Sunday and remained there last night. The division numbers less than 20 men. They were well fed by the villagers, and Jones made a speech.

Another Coxey Regiment En Route.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 16.—The Oklahoma contingent of Coxey's army, 300 strong, completed their commissary work, a railroad to carry them to Washington in box cars.

MADELINE NOT TO STAR

She Will Refuse Generous Offers From Theatrical Managers.

MISS POLLARD BREAKS DOWN.

She Is Now In a Hospital Suffering From Nervous Prostration—Women Organize and Demand That Breckinridge Shall Be Executed—Resolutions Passed.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Miss Madeline Pollard is the most talked of person in Washington today. Since the outcome of her long breach of promise suit against Congressman Breckinridge, as might have been expected with a woman of her temperament, the long strain of the trial culminated in a nervous collapse, and Miss Pollard is suffering from nervous prostration. She was taken to the Providence hospital, a Catholic institution in a quiet part of the city on Capitol hill, where she is attended by the Sisters of Charity. The attending physicians say that when she has recovered from the immediate effects of her collapse, following the high mental tension at which she has been kept for weeks, she will be able to leave the hospital. They do not anticipate any serious effects from her illness.

Sister Ellis of the Episcopal House of Refuge, who was the constant attendant of Miss Pollard during the trial and to whom Judge Wilson paid a beautiful tribute in his plea, was her companion part of the day. Her brother, Mr. J. D. Pollard of Lexington, Ky., was also with her.

Offers From Theatrical Managers.

The victor in the great case has been more than ever in demand to appear before the footlights since the verdict was rendered on Saturday. During the trial several communications came to Miss Pollard and to her lawyers from managers of theatrical and opera companies offering high salaries if she would appear in almost any capacity under their auspices. Acting under the advice of her lawyers, she has paid no attention to any of these communications.

Both Miss Pollard and her attorneys state that she has never sought newspaper notoriety. She has made but one newspaper statement, Judge Jere Wilson says, and that was when a representative of a New York paper came to her last summer with clippings from 100 papers giving details from Colonel Breckinridge and his friends of the truth of her charges. Then she determined to present to the public a circumstantial account of her first acquaintance with the silver tongued orator and did so.

Since the verdict was rendered Saturday afternoon the theatrical managers have redoubled their importunities, and several telegrams have come to Miss Pollard offering her astonishing sums to go upon the stage at once.

Her friends decline to give the names of the theatrical managers or to discuss their offers, saying that no attention will be paid to any of them.

A reporter called at the Providence hospital, and was told that Miss Pollard was unable to receive callers he sent to her a note inquiring about her plans for the future. The note was answered in person by her brother, Mr. J. D. Pollard, a young man of about 25 years.

"My sister has made no plans for the future," he said, "and cannot tell you what she intends to do. She is in a very nervous condition, but the physicians do not anticipate any serious illness. It is just the sort of case she ought to be in where she has been subjected. She asks me to say to you most emphatically that she never has entertained any intention of going on the stage. Nothing could be farther from her thoughts or intentions. It is absurd. It is true that telegrams on the subject have come to her, but nonattention will be paid to them. All she asks now is for rest and quiet."

"Will Miss Pollard continue to live in Washington or return to Kentucky?" the reporter inquired.

"That has not been decided yet," was the reply. "She will remain in Washington for a while, of course, but has no settled plans."

Judge Jere Wilson said that he was not surprised that his client had broken down after the trial. It was impossible for her to have sustained herself in the courtroom during the arguments, especially during the attacks made upon her character by the defendant's attorneys. He said, "No one can imagine the nervous strain to which she has been subjected."

Women Rally to Judge Wilson.

Judge Wilson's defense of the right of woman to an equal place with man in the professions was so appreciated by many of the Washington ladies that a coterie of them sent to him a magnificent bunch of La France roses. They were accompanied by a note stating that they were intended as an expression of appreciation for his championship of the cause of woman in the professions. One of the signers was Mrs. Daniel Waugh, wife of the Indiana congressman. Another was Miss Lottie Lowell, the stenographer who wrote Colonel Breckinridge's love letters while he was at the capital, and another was Miss Mary Desha, sister of Colonel Breckinridge's late wife.

Miss Desha is prominent in the organization of the Daughters of the Revolution and was one of the ladies who inspired the project of the Liberty bell recently cast at Troy, N. Y. The tribute of Miss Desha to Miss Pollard's lawyer is significant of the feeling of the relations of the late Mrs. Breckinridge toward the colonel.

Women's Rights Resolutions Passed.

Hardly had the verdict in the case been rendered when a meeting of prominent Washington women was called to take action regarding the case of Colonel Breckinridge. Representatives of several female organizations met at Willard's hotel, and after an interesting conference they adopted resolutions calling upon congress to consider the qualifications of Representative Breckinridge for membership in that body. Some of the organizations whose representatives took part in the meeting were the Woman's Suffrage association, the Woman's Christian Temperance union and the Pro Ra Nata. Mrs. Sarah le Fevre, the president of the local W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Ellen S. Mussey, who is one of the late General Mussey, who is herself a practicing lawyer and is prominent in movements for the advancement of women, were among the leading spirits of the meeting. The resolutions adopted were:

To the House of Representatives, Washington:

We, representatives of the women of Washington, standing forward for the betterment of a higher code of morals and against the unwise double standard which has caused society so long, declare that we do not believe ourselves ready to be a home for lawbreakers, but that, believing the marriage bond attacked by womanhood which sees demanded, one equally high shall be required for manhood; therefore

Resolved, That we must have chastity for manhood, the same as for womanhood, and we ask that the law in its application upon one and upon the other.

From this standpoint we ask congress to consider the case of W. C. P. Breckinridge of Kentucky regarding his conduct, so unbecoming a legislator. Be it further

Resolved, That we, daughters, wives and mothers of the commonwealth, express our boycott of that type of true manhood now to be found in congress.

Therefore we are in full confidence that the house of representatives shall join in the sentiment of personal honor, and by some definite action to insure the high character of our country's administration, and help the future national councils to present a clean and unchallenged body of legislators.

This meeting was the last of a series which prominent women of Washington have been holding since Good Friday and which crystallized into the formation of an organization called the Woman's Protective league. The object of the league will be to combat the enforcement of that text uttered on the witness stand by Colonel Breckinridge that social sins injure a man, but destroy a woman. The league will endeavor to secure equal rights for both sexes and to aid women who have been wronged. It is of course an outgrowth of the Pollard-Breckinridge trial. The ladies have invited Judge Jere Wilson to become the general counsel of the league, but the attorney has not yet responded to the invitation.

The resolutions given out have been sent to the house committee on judiciary for action. The women say that it is not right that Colonel Breckinridge should retain his seat in congress while Miss Pollard is ostracized, as she undoubtedly will be, from society.

Breckinridge to Go Campaigning.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 16.—Colonel Breckinridge's campaign managers said today that he will not resume his official duties in congress, but will settle up his private business in Washington and return to Kentucky in two weeks. He will open the campaign at Paris, where he will make his first speech.

BUFFALO FIRE VICTIMS.

Four Bodies Found and Possibly Eighteen More In the Ruins.

BUFFALO, April 16.—The work of searching the ruins of the works of the American Glucose company for bodies has been begun, and the remains of four bodies have been found. These were taken to the morgue, where they now are. Identification being impossible. The remains are simply chunks of charred flesh and bones, no one of which is more than two feet in length. The largest piece was a portion of a man's trunk, which was found outside the walls. The man had evidently jumped from a window and been caught by a falling wall and roasted outside the building.

The morgue was crowded all day with weeping Polish women—wives and relatives of the men burned. They made a great outcry when the charred remains were brought in, and some of the more demonstrative threw themselves on the blackened pieces and caressed them.

The morgue officials had no one force to get them away from the remains. Work was begun again on the ruins at daylight this morning, and it is thought that a number of other bodies will be found by night.

The exact number of men who were cremated cannot yet be definitely stated. To-day the glucose company will pay off all hands and make a final effort to check its payroll. It is absolutely certain that 12 men were killed in the explosion, and it is to fear that there were a number of others, and it is not improbable that there were 22 victims.

Their Majesties' Skulls In Danger.

VIENNA, April 16.—Emperor William and Emperor Francis Joseph had a narrow escape from injury when they were leaving the terminus of the Southern railway. Just as their majesties passed out of the door a large hammer dropped from the roof of the station and fell to the ground at their feet. How the hammer came to fall has not yet been discovered.

Fought to the Death After Sunday School.

CHATTANOOGA, April 16.—At Lebanon church, near Cleveland, Walter Scott shot and killed John Johnson and was himself shot through the thigh and his horse shot from under him. Scott had betrayed Johnson's sister, and the latter had sworn out a warrant for his arrest. The men met at the Sunday school, and a dispute arose, with the above result.

Striking Miners Will Make Trouble.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 16.—There is a possibility of considerable trouble in this district with striking miners. It is understood that the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company will today start their mines at Blue Creek with negro laborers.

In Memory of Lincoln.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Several hundred members of the Lincoln Memorial association had their annual meeting in the old house on Tenth street where President Lincoln died. Vice President Stevenson presided in the absence of Chief Justice Fuller.

Fates Escapes the Gallows.

NEWARK, N. J., April 16.—Robert Alden Fates, the boy murderer, whose sentence of death was commuted to imprisonment for life, slept as soundly as usual last night in the Newark jail. He will be taken to Trenton some time this week.

The Fight Against Wilson.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., April 16.—Messrs. Dayton and Mason agreed to withdraw from the congressional contest and give Mr. Sturgis a clear field for the Republican nomination. This is the beginning of a desperate fight to beat W. L. Wilson.

Could Not Live Without Her.

PROVIDENCE, April 16.—William Kahnke, a prominent Broadway dealer, committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas. He was to have been married next week, but the young lady to whom he was engaged died last Tuesday.

Lasker Conceding Steinitz.

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.—The ninth game of the series of chess matches between Steinitz and Lasker was won by Lasker. The score now stands: Lasker, 5; Steinitz, 2; drawn, 2.

Senator Morrill's Birthday.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Senator Justin S. Morrill of Vermont celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday. Senator Morrill is the oldest man in either branch of congress.

No More Sunday Baseball.

SAVANNAH, April 16.—The city authorities sat down on Sunday baseball. The mayor notified the chief of police not to permit Sunday games.

Died In the Street.

BOSTON, April 16.—Rev. Edward J. Gliddings dropped dead while walking up Bowdoin street.

NOT AFRAID OF TROU

A Mob In Ohio Bound to Lynch a Brutal Negro.

SCARED MILITIA WITH DYNAMITE

When the Lynchers Threatened to Blow Up the Prisoner, the Sheriff Beat the Troops and His Posse Home—Then the Lynching Took Place.

CLEVELAND, April 16.—Seymour Newlin a negro with a bad reputation, committed a criminal assault upon an aged woman named Mrs. Knowles, living at Rushsylvania, Logan county, O. He was captured but when the sheriff arrived from Bellefontaine to take charge of the prisoner a mob which had collected refused to give him up.

The sheriff summoned a posse, but still the mob would not yield. A call was then made upon the militia, and a company left Bellefontaine for the scene of the trouble. The crowd of infuriated citizens were apprised of the coming of the military and long before their arrival they were armed and massed around the calaboose to receive them.

When the company arrived at the building, a hundred voices warned them that the citizens were determined that blood would flow before the prisoner would be surrendered; that any effort at force would be useless, as dynamite bombs were under the building, and that the prisoner would be blown to atoms if a gun was fired.

Sheriff Sullivan then held a long parley with the leaders of the mob, and it was finally decided that if Sheriff Sullivan would order the militia to go to Bellefontaine the citizens would guard the prisoner until morning and give him a hearing in Rushsylvania, and that Sheriff Sullivan would make no further attempt to get the man until after the trial. The dynamite talk was supposed to be a bluff, but after the departure of the soldiers no less than six bombs were hauled from under the calaboose. It was generally believed that Newlin would be lynched.

After the troops and sheriff left the mob made a raid on the calaboose. The building was overturned and the struggling negro quickly taken from it. A rope had been provided. A noose was put about the neck of the trembling wretch, and he was dragged to a cottonwood tree about 100 yards distant.

Very little was said, and no opportunity was given to the prisoner to make a confession or statement. A dozen willing hands grasped the rope, and the negro was swung into the air. As he hung above the mob the air was rent with the shouts of the men and women who had assembled to witness the lynchings. As soon as the work was finished the mob dispersed, and quiet was restored.

The Great Northern Strike.

ST. PAUL, April 16.—The strike on the Great Northern railway is gradually working east. The strike was ordered by the American Railway union and is being more actively antagonized by the railroad employees' brotherhoods than by the railroad company itself.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 16.—The Great Northern strike extended over the Cascade division and the coast lines, and the whole system is tied up from Minot to Seattle and from Seattle to New Westminster. Hardly a wheel is turning or a telegraph instrument ticking over 2,000 miles of line.

Grand Master Sargent Will Run.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 16.—Grand Master Sargent of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen publicly announced that he would accept the Republican nomination for congress in this district if tendered him.

Fierce Fighting at Rio Grande City.

MONTEVIDEO, April 16.—The commander of the gunboat Beagle telegraphs that the Brazilian insurgents lost in the attack on the city of Rio Grande do Sul 350 men killed or wounded. The government loss was 100.

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE PROCESS OF DRY CLEANING WITH GASOLINE AT HOME.

The Woman Who Pores for You—Equality of the Sexes—A Charming Bedroom—How Big Sleeves Originated—A Feminine Inconsistency—Hud to Have a New Gown.

"Why, you will ruin it!" exclaimed a morning caller, coming in just as I dipped a delicate blue bengaline bodice into a bowl of gasoline.

"On the contrary, I shall have a new waist, or its equivalent, in a very few minutes," I answered.

"I know gasoline was excellent for cleaning, but I have always simply rubbed the spots and have frequently been disappointed in being unable to eradicate a sort o 'water mark' around the cleaned spot,' my friend remarked, watching with interest the dry cleaning process. Few know how genuinely practical is this method o dry cleaning at home.

I bought three gallons of gasoline at 1. cents a gallon. I had a fine organdie gown made quite elaborately over a foundation of light blue silk. It was very much soil ed, and I had thought of sending it to a cleaner, but determined to try gasoline although I had never seen it used upon such a fabric.

I used a large washbowl and put the dress to soak in the gasoline for about half an hour, then as I seemed it up and down the dirt dropped out. I hung the garment still dripping, upon the line—it is best no to wring clothes in the dry cleaning process—and in a few moments it was dry clean and fresh as ever.

Besides this gown and the blue silk bod ice mentioned, I cleaned with my three gallons of gasoline, a child's tan colored wool jacket and a navy blue jacket, a pair of light yellow suede gloves, a light gray broadcloth coat, a white silk bonnet, a stockinette cap in Roman colors, a bunch of light pink velvet flowers and white silk neckwear. When the garments were very dirty, I took fresh gasoline and also poured off the top after the dirt had settled to the bottom of the bowl.

Many garments are afraid to have gasoline in the house, and indeed it is better to use it, if possible, out of doors—never in a room where a fire is. The more delicately colored fabrics yield most readily, I find, to the gasoline treatment, and wool is easier to clean than silk.

It was a surprise to me and will be to others, I think, to find that mull or organdie could thus be cleaned. This is real by an important item when these thin fabrics are made up over unwashable silks or satins.—Minneapolis Housekeeper.

The Woman Who Pours Out Tea.

The woman who pours out tea is imbued with graceful tact. Her desire to appear well at an entertainment for "sweet charity's sake" is no less keen than the wish to be attractive at a purely social function. She knows how to discriminate too. Friends with their hands budged laden will not be apt to come arrayed in "purple and fine linen." Recognizing the true code of hospitality that one must not outshine one's guests, she will wear a stylishly made woolen gown of becoming shade, high to the throat and long to the wrists, a white embroidered apron tied about her waist. Such a picturesque gown means she generally leaves to the bud who dispenses the chocolate. The germ of tact is likewise here. The simple dress of heliotrope bengaline has the neck but slightly rounded and bordered with deep cream lace that falls almost to the waistline behind. That is encircled by a belt of chased silver. The delicate arms that reach forth the asiatic cuffs with their fragrant scalloped lace veiled beneath similar lace from the elbow's bend. She who puts the query, "Coffee—sugar and cream?" need not wave her tiara of her toilet from the full bloom scarlet roses strewn over the dusk sel cloth, even if her debut season does date a little back. Perhaps the succession of social triumphs has stolen a bit of the glow from her cheeks; the colors of her toilets may be chosen so as to repair the damage in part. For her may be suggested a bodice of poppy red chiffon worn over a skirt of black armure royal silk, trimmed elaborately with accordion plaiting of black chiffon. She should wear a coquettish apron of lace trimmed linen lawn, tied with scarlet bows, and a dainty lace cap, such as the chocolatieres of Paris affect, if such suits her type of beauty.—Table Talk.

The Equality of the Sexes.

No other country has reached such wide latitude, in the business world perhaps as American women, and we are prone to believe that the equality of the sexes can only be established by public contact in business matters. But there is a home phase of the question that suggests of common sense most profoundly. Rules of business conduct, upon which the financial prosperity of a nation depends, must be taught in small ways to boys and girls by mothers in the home to whom personal excellencies of character that will afterward influence public affairs.

While in many homes women are allowed full consideration in financial matters, others are subject to the humiliation of a dependent obliged to beg for every necessary dollar, while yet others are placed in the equally deteriorating atmosphere of lavish allowance without regard to where it comes from or whether the husband can afford it. Is it difficult to decide which of these two extremes is most disastrous to self respecting and worthy development of the character of the subject to such example in the home. Sons brought up to regard mothers as dependents will never have a well balanced sense of equity in other affairs of life. Daughters when left taught to regard woman as a creature whose whims must be gratified at the expense of justice and creditors will exercise doubtful business morality at all times when his vanity or affections are involved. —Jeaness Miller Monthly.

A Charming Bedroom.

A charming bedroom in pale olive and white has the wall hung with an olive silk faced covering on which there are white figures. The hanging is hung with a very little fullness on brass rods, so that it can be taken from the room and aired and brushed frequently. At the windows are plain white muslin curtains with frills of the same. The bed covering made without a lining matches the curtains. The floor is covered by a jointless matting that is figured in the weave, and which has a greenish cast in color, though not dyed. Over this is a large Japanese cotton rug in light olives and white. The furniture is of mahogany without a line of carving, but inlaid with gilt and mother of pearl traceries.

If one is buying matting, it is almost a waste of money to buy that which is cheap if it is to go into a room where it is to be exposed to wear. But the fine thick Japanese matting will give excellent service, and as it is jointless can be turned to suit the wear. It does not allow dust to sift through it, as do the cheaper kinds. It should be laid over a lining of carpet paper. If bought by the piece, this matting is considerably less than by the yard If soiled, wash it in tepid water containing a tablespoonful of salt.—New York Post.

How Big Sleeves Originated.

Rosa says, "Ugly women almost always introduce big sleeves, because only women are foolish enough to follow them. It is probably true that no fashion is introduced without some reason, and the reason is generally either the display of beauty or the concealment of a defect—of tener the latter. When the immense sleeves—then called gigot sleeves—came into fashion more than 50 years ago, they were evolved out of the shrewd consciousness of Frenchwomen that they would serve to diminish the apparent size of their large waists.

A French fashion writer of that period says: "When the sleeves called gigot first made their appearance, every one exclaimed against the bizarrerie of a fashion which not only concealed the shape of the arm, but made it appear larger than the waist, and the ladies who first wore these sleeves lined with buckram for the purpose of puffing them out, appeared as if each should be carried in a balloon. Still this singular style of sleeve became very general and no longer appeared ridiculous. Women's minds have undergone a change since even by those who first ridiculed it. We yielded to the authority of the greater number, and it would have been ridiculous not to follow a fashion almost universal."

A Curious Feminine Inconsistency.

It is a curious inconsistency of our nature that we esteem who appreciate highly the small happinesses of life when we get them should be so much slower than men to bestow them.

It is not true of us. It gives men a chance to say things we do not like to hear, but it is nevertheless a fact that few of us will be the little kind act for a single woman with the same alacrity that would be observed if a man were involved. Who ever heard of the clergyman's sister or mother's mother marrying? Not one letter of the little meaningless but pleasant attentions which are showered upon the married or sour!

It is delightful and gives one such a charming feeling of importance to be made the confidante of the troubles of some fascinating fellow. He is comforted, counseled and urged to come again. Excuses are made for him when he is in the dumps, and he is encouraged to dilate on the subject of his woes by the hour. Put a woman in his place, and where is our patience? She is considered a bore, is scolded, pitched off on somebody else to inject, held up as an example of what a nuisance a woman can make of herself, and finally dropped entirely.—Jessie M. Burgoyne in Donahoe's Magazine.

Had to Have a New Gown.

A funny story is told of a Murray Hill society woman who wished a new gown for her portrait which had been painted half a dozen years ago, and, oddly enough, the artist consented to furnish it "if never liked the dress anyway," explained the lively lady, who is nothing if not original, "and I have grown tired to death of it, so I told Mr. ——— that I would give after the price of a new Worth gown if he would turn me out in something new. At first he snapped and refused to do it, but I insisted and offered to pay his own price. I said that my portrait must absolutely have a new dress, and if he would not do it I would find some one else who would. This shamed him, and he finally consented, and now my portrait is wearing my latest put from Doucet."

"I suppose in a year or two you will want it done over again," laughed her friend.

"No, I don't think so. "You see, this is really becoming, and I feel quite content to show myself to posterity in a gown that I really like."—New York Tribune.

The Size In the Kitchen.

A handy thing in a kitchen is a good sized slate. So often things that are quite necessary are forgotten because they were not noted down, and serious annoyance is occasioned by their absence. A slate only costs 10 cents. It can be hung above the kitchen table by a long string, and the pencil can be attached by another. These need not be removed from the wall at any time, but can be hung on as to get out easily. As soon as something is discovered lacking it should be put down. Anything unusual that is to be done and yet might be forgotten can also be put on the slate. You will be surprised to find how many steps and "Oh, I forgots" it will save in a day. It is better than paper and pencil, because you can take your hands out of the dish water and write on the instant without waiting till you have finished.—Exchange.

Literary Women and Dress.

"One of the changes that have struck me forcibly in many years," remarked a publisher recently, "is that which exists in the literary woman of today and her predecessor of forty years ago. In the old days the New York woman who made her living by her pen was not a stylish creature. She had no lisk on her fingers, short hair and a very black costume is not strictly true, but she showed very little regard for the current fashions. It is very different today. Some of the best dressed women in this city are engaged in literary work. Perhaps this is due to the fact that they make more money than those to the earlier era, but I think, but whatever the cause may be there has been a great improvement in the outward appearance of brainy women."—New York World.

Literary Women.

It takes an intellectual type to dress some people and so much to dress others. I am alluding now to material and not money. I know a pretty and poor young girl who can pin a little bunch of violets on her last season's coat, and with a housemade hat tastefully trimmed attract more general and admiring attention on Broadway or Fifth avenue than the woman or girl who is decked out with the pelitry of a Parisian modiste. Yet my little beauty was not satisfied until she had obtained a full outfit of the latest fashionable cut—as near as her purse would compass it—and pranced out in it. She looked 50 per cent less attractive in it than in her plainer garb, but she's ever so much happier, for she's "in the fashion."—Polly Pry in New York Recorder.

Woman and Wages.

Many women work in the business ranks, though not compelled to do so. It is evident that these may successfully compete with women who are compelled to work, and it is certain that their competing has an effect on wages. Can there be any denying that it tends to reduce wages? Taking everything into account, there is an inadequacy in woman's wages. In the majority of occupations the average wages of a boy, a girl and a woman added together amount to those of a man. This is largely due to competition. Men have the advantage over women in working elsewhere. Many men are disabled by physical weakness, timidity or by liabilities to misconstruction, as women are.—American Journal of Politics.

French Mothers.

There is nothing more touching and noble in the life of a French woman than to see a French mother and daughter—the mother giving to her daughter all her time, all her thought, molding her with infinite devotion, living for her alone. She accompanies her to her lessons, directs her reading, watches day and night to guard that ideal purity which by a singular incongruence will be sacrificed, 90 chances out of 100, to a man whose life will have been quite the contrary. The mother cannot reform marriage as it exists in France, which is an institution full of defects—but she can teach to her daughter all the virtues to meet the serious trials almost certainly await her.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Sugar Scissors.

Sugar scissors are not new, but they are uncommon. They are like a wide nut cracker, with one sharp edged side and a strong lever attachment. With them a cube of sugar can be quickly cut, and on the tea or demitasse tray they are very useful. Silver bread and butter plates, which are small, round trays, with cut points carving the edge, and the latest plate, are beautiful novelties that will add to the glitter of the table and that cost $18 an office is wages. Can there be any denying that it tends to reduce wages? Taking Martha Washington.

Mrs. George Washington, although an heiress and a beauty and for many years the first lady of the land, was a model of the homely, honorable dutiesof housekeeping. She considered it a great privilege it took after her husband and regarded the "state days" as lost. In her home at Mount Vernon, as in all large southern mansions, a workroom was set apart, and there every morning Mrs. Washington could be found, surrounded by many of her servants, superintending and assisting in their work.—New York Ledger.

Mrs. Ballington Booth.

Mrs. Ballington Booth resides at Montclair, N. J. She is the mother of a sturdy little son of six years and a baby girl 18 months old. Although she is so much engaged in lecturing and other Salvation Army work, her home is well kept, and her children are healthy and sunny tempered. Mrs. Booth manages to make her trips short, with frequent returns home, where all her time, aside from her office work, is devoted to her children. "We have no good times without" she says.—Boston Woman's Journal.

Feminine Souls.

In his "War and Culture" Arthur Helps says: "In many things women are the superior of men, in many things inferior—in many equals. I hold with Coleridge that there are souls masculine and feminine. If I were suddenly asked to give a proof of the goodness of God to us, I think I should say it is most manifest in the exquisite difference he has made between the sous of women and men so as to create the possibility of the most comfortable and charming companionship that the mind of man can imagine."

Diet, Not Drugs.

Mrs. Borew, the princess of socks, hit the nail on the head and stunned half the audience when she said: "If you want your husband and children to be well and good, diet them. The age is suffering from stomach trouble. I firmly believe that if you will take out a bad stomach as a tonsil is removed, and the emancipated patient will live and be happy. Starve and don't weaken be the general cry. Get used to be dieted, and the medical profession know it too."

The Princess of Wales' Dogs.

The Princess of Wales is a great lover of animals and has so many dogs at Sandringham that she cannot keep count of them. "Every morning she goes to the kennels, and the dogs are let loose to welcome her. They are always wild with delight to see her, and jump upon her so frantically as to terrify the new groom. A special favorite with the princess is Venus, the pet dog of the Duke of Clarence.—London Queen.

Love.

The Galveston News says "love is an irresistible and aromatic cyclone," and the Chicago Record in denying the conclusion says "it's a microbe." Neither of them have been prescribed for the fact that it is a common sense arrangement in which a woman gives up her liberty in order to make a man happy.—Philadelphia Times.

Thoroughness.

A mother should teach her daughter to be thorough in whatever she undertakes, and later on she will find that one talent will gather many to itself. A smattering of anything is always dangerous, particularly in a girl. Learn less, but learn more thoroughly, should be the rule for a girl's education.—Exchange.

"Eve Against Alexandre Dumas, Jr." was the title of one of the late Mlle. Deralsme's books which took the third French republic by storm. Married on a small fortune, Mlle. Deralsmes was able to do a great deal of good among the poor and the unfortunate.

The wife of E. S. Willard, the English actor, is the author of several little plays that have been produced in London. Being a descendant of the founder of Pennsylvania, she uses the nom de plume of "Rachel Penn."

A fine effect is given a broad mirror hanging between two windows if it is bordered by a flat frame covered with plush or brocade, to match the material of the neighboring curtains.

Miss Julia Raymond Gingell, a Birmingham lady well known in English philanthropic circles, is the compiler of "Aphorisms From the Writings of Herbert Spencer."

Anything that adds to the neatness and beauty of the home and its belongings not only increases the owner's pleasure, but furthers refinement and real betterment of the household.

"George Egerton" is said to be the pen name of a young Irish lady, a Miss Dunne.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

CHARLES MILLER OF NEWBURGH, N. Y., MANGLED BY THE CARS.

He Attempted to Board a Moving Coal Train, But Slipped and Fell Underneath the Wheel.—Taken to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Charles Miller, whose home was in Newburg, N. Y., received injuries on the railroad yesterday which resulted in his death. He was 19 years of age.

Miller left home about three weeks ago for Pennsylvania. He was accompanied by three other young men, one of whom, it is said, is wanted for jail breaking in New York State. The men had stopped off near the Round Brook watertank and three of them attempted to board a west-bound coal train at about 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Two of them were successful but Miller slipped and fell with his left leg doubled up under the cars. The leg was crushed from his foot to the body into a jelly. The injured man was picked up and brought to Muhlenberg Hospital, in this city, where all medical aid possible was given to him, but he could not survive the terrible mangling and died at 8.30 o'clock last night.

A telegram was sent to his brother, Joseph Miller, of Hasbrouck street, Newburgh, who reached here just after the injured man had died. The body will be sent to Newburgh.

The brother says that Charles was of a roving disposition and that he would not stay home, although he had been offered a good position by his uncle.

BREVITIES.

—Several Plainfielders, it is said, are contemplating joining Coxey's Army.

—Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be tendered a reception to-night by the American Guards.

—R. W. Rice & Co., say they are better prepared than ever to serve the public with choice groceries at bottom prices. Give them a call.

—James W. Furgeson, of Cranford, has been appointed deputy grand supervising regent of the Royal Arcanum for the Westfield district.

—The teachers of the Sunday-school of Trinity church will hold a business meeting in the lecture room next Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

Michael Watson will be tried to-morrow afternoon, at two o'clock, for alleged selling of liquor without a license. Police Sergeant Kiely summoned a jury to-day.

—An invitation has been received by Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men to attend the first anniversary celebration of Omeme Tribe at Elizabeth, Monday night.

—Policeman Giese yesterday arrested a man from over the mountains for carting a keg from a freight car at the freight house, and made him take out a license.

—An adjourned meeting of Plainfield Engine Co., No. 2, will be held Thursday night. Invitations have been sent out by the firemen to their reception in Central Hall on the 27th.

—Garret P. Smith, who had two ribs fractured by falling into an opening near the Music Hall, some two weeks ago, was able to walk out yesterday for the first time since the accident.

—The several trains of loaded coal cars which have been standing on the east-bound freight and coal track, between Roselle and Cranford, were taken to their destination last night.

—The date for the annual May walk of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein has been fixed for May 13th. The members of the new Liederkranz will have a May walk later in the month on a date not yet announced.

—The Catholic Club of Jersey City will be the guests of the C. Y. M. I.'s of this city on May 3d, when there will be a bowling match and reception. The following committee has been appointed to prepare for the reception: W. J. Winn, T. Carty, M. Mack, M. Whalen and Frank McInerney.

—In order to get ready for the shipment of a Welsh press, to-day to Philadelphia, some of the employes at the Scott Press Works have been enlisted to start work at four o'clock in the morning, and others have been working until nine o'clock at night. Of course this does not affect the entire working force of the shop.

—At the last meeting of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., three new members were initiated, and five new applications were laid on the table for future consideration. The secretary reported a total membership of forty in good standing. Chief Ranger Allen has been ill for some two weeks, and his place has been filled by Past Chief Ranger Nuttall. The Chief Ranger has been paid his regular weekly allowance. A new examining physician is soon to be appointed.

—The Independent Turner Band held its quarterly meeting in Norwester Turn Hall, Brooklyn, on Sunday. Delegates representing eleven different societies were present, and Mr. Henry Haurand of the Plainfield Society, was made Secretary. Besides the usual routine business of the Turner Band, it was decided to give a three days' prize farming festival at Newark, some time in August, at which some of the Plainfield athletes will compete. A meeting of what is known as the "Technical Committee" will be held April 20.

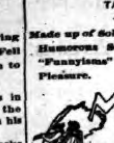
BY THE ROYAL ARCANUM

A PROGRAMME OF ROYAL ENTERTAINMENT.

Made up of Solos of Rare Excellence, Humorous Selections brimfull of "Funnyisms" and Replete with Pleasure.



EMBERS of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, and their friends were royally entertained last night in Anchor Lodge rooms by a very fine programme of musical specialties and recitations. The large lodge room was entirely filled, about 400 persons being present.

The name of Hugh J. Emmett appeared three times on the programme; but, the three times he did appear were prolonged into stays, and kept the audience much later than was expected. This, however, could not be helped, for Mr. Emmett's jokes and "funnyisms" were of the very latest, and strictly original. His feats with the violin were remarkable. While playing would change the position of the instriment, and even play it with the bow between his teeth. This performance he was forced to repeat. The last appearance of Mr. Emmett entitled "Original Irrational Ventriloquial Funnyisms," brought forth storms of applause.

Mrs. A. H. Mulford completely enraptured the audience by her excellent soprano solos, and each number was followed by an encore. The solo entitled "Angels' Serenade" was beautifully rendered, while the violin obligato, by Bro. M. A. Korff, made the singing still more delightful.

Miss Florence Smith also delighted the audience with a recitation in which the pathos and humor moved the audience at the speaker's will. The audience greatly appreciated the powers of the entertainer, and called for an encore, which was responded to.

Mr. Albert C. Plant delighted the audience with some very fine singing, a tenor solo, and a humorous recitation which were well received.

A humorous recitation by Mr. Chas. J. Ward was followed by an encore, entitled "McGinty's Horse," in which Mr. Ward gave a glowing account of the sad fate of that noble beast.

A baritone solo by Mr. F. J. Pope, was also received with much favor.

Mr. J. J. Riordon, D. D. G. R., N. Y. delivered an address entitled "The Royal Arcanum," which was well appreciated.

The Amphion orchestra rendered selections during the evening and brought the affair to a close.

Mr. Andrew C. Carpenter, Mr. A. H. Mulford and Prof. W. E. MacClymont were accompanists.

The committee from the lodge, and those who had the affair in charge were Mr. A. M. Rex, chairman, Mr. H. B. Ely and Mr. M. A. Korff.

PERSONAL.

Dr. F T. Clawson is to build a $6,000 house on West Seventh street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thomas of Netherwood have returned from California.

Mr. Daniel Hibbitts of West Fifth street has recovered from his recent illness.

Mrs. A. Wilcox, of Brooklyn, is the guest, for a short time, of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kaerth of East Second street.

The Rev. Dr. Parks preached one of his powerful sermons Sunday morning in the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

Mrs. Arthur T. Stryker and daughter of New street returned yesterday from a visit with Mrs. W. J. Chamberlain at Jersey City.

Mr. Wilford Emory has traded his property on Lafayette place with Mr. Charles Hand for a house and lot on Astor place, Dunellen.

Mrs. George Whiteley of 316 Arlington avenue, has been called to the bedside of her sister, Mrs. S. McIntyre, who is very ill at her home in Somerville.

Miss Mary Smith of New York City and Mrs. Chris. Kretzel, the efficient clerk in Casper's Hotel, East Front street will be united in marriage at the bride's home, West Sixty-seventh street, New York, on Sunday, April 22d, by the Rev. Mr. Schneider. The ceremony will take place at three p. m., and will be of a private nature. Mr. and Mrs. G. Rudolph, close friends of the bride and groom, will perform the duties of best man and bridesmaid, respectively. The couple will reside in a neatly furnished house on Somerset street.

Edward Rhodes, a Central Railroad engineer, was buried to-day in Greenville cemetery, Greenville. He died Saturday, after a short illness. Deceased was very popular with his fellow employees, and many friends in this city mourn his loss. He was for many years a fireman on the Central, after which he was promoted to the position of engineer. He held this position until the present business depression, when he was forced to take the position of fireman on engine 450, of which his father is the engineer. He held this position to the time of his death.

—A stage load of Plainfielders went to South Orange last night to attend a surprise party tendered to Mr. Charles Reveling.

—Lewis Bimble was fined $5 for drunkenness, this morning, by Justice Crossley.

STOLE A GOAT AND VEST.

A Boy Pretending that he Wanted to Buy a Hat Stole Other Goods.

Mr. Goldstein, who keeps a store on Somerset street, was robbed of a coat and vest by a boy yesterday afternoon. The boy walked into the store and said he wanted to buy a hat. While the clerk was showing him hats, the boy seized a coat and vest and ran out of the place. The clerk gave chase, but the thief proved too swift for him and escaped.

Later in the evening the boy's father returned the stolen goods. The boy will not be prosecuted as Mr. Goldstein says he would not push the charge as long as he got his goods back.

Plainfield Its Chief Place of Business.

The Hermance Havana Cigar Company has filed articles of incorporation in the office of County Clerk Oliver. The company's capital is $30,000, and its chief place of business will be Plainfield. The incorporators and stockholders are Ossie Hermance and Naume A. Hermance of Plainfield; Charles J. Keeley and Francisco E. Fonseca of New York city.

Runaway and Upset the Stage.

At Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon, a hackman ran into Allen's stage on the road from the Plains to Fanwood, causing the latter's horses to runaway. One passenger was in the stage at the time and he just jumped out as the stage upset. The horses stopped when the stage went over. No serious damage resulted.

The Rev. Mr. Braker Accepts.

The official acceptance of the Rev. J W. Braker of Philadelphia the new pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, was read Sunday. He will take charge next Sunday, April 22d. He is to move to Scotch Plains this week.

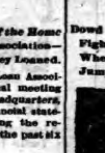
City Court.

Mrs. O'Rourke was arraigned in court this morning, charged with using abusive language. She pleaded not guilty and trial was set down for Saturday morning, at nine o'clock.

A CLEVER CAPTURE.

THOMAS DOWD OUTWITTED BY POLICEMAN ROBINSON.

Dowd is Wanted for Engaging in a Fight in the Borough Last Fall.—When Cornered Last Night He Jumped Into the Brook.



SPECIAL Policeman William Robinson captured Thomas Dowd last night. Dowd is wanted by the borough authorities for fighting in the borough last Fall with John Morecraft. The capture was a clever one and the policeman was aided greatly by the bright moonlight which prevailed early in the evening.

About eight o'clock Chief Grant received word that Dowd was on the Somerset street bridge. The Chief sent Mr. Robinson after Dowd. The idea being to take Dowd unaware, as it was thought that he did not recognize Robinson as an officer.

Just as Robinson had almost reached his man, Dowd commenced "peppering" him, and made a dive for Bimm's barn with Robinson in pursuit. Running into the shed back of Frank Hand's blacksmith shop Dowd tried to hide. Being unsuccessful in this, and finding the policeman close upon his heels he jumped through a hole in the floor into the brook below. This was a cunning move on Dowd's part, but the policeman was not to be outwitted and hurried around French's carriage factory in time to meet the fugitive, who had managed to walk up stream under the bridges and French's building. Determined not to let Dowd escape Mr. Robinson leaped into the brook after him. In attempting to get away Dowd fell down with Robinson on top of him. Both floundered around in the water until finally Dowd was secured and the "lumpers" placed upon his wrists. The prisoner was turned over to the borough marshals and placed in the lockup.

Dowd was tried this morning and sentenced to 35 days in the county jail. He is wanted on this side of the brook also.

A Meeting of Lawyers.

A majority of Plainfield's lawyers met in the office of Runyon & Moffats, last night, and took steps to form a Bar Association. Mr. Charles A. Reed was elected chair, man and Mr. Harry C. Runyon was chosen secretary.

Messrs. C. A. Reed, W. A. Coddington and J. P. Powers were appointed a committee to draft suitable by-laws and a constitution.

Mr. Charles A. Reed, chairman of the committee on resolutions, read resolutions upon the death of John H. Jackson, presented the resolutions, which were adopted and a copy ordered sent to the wife of the deceased. The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

Exempt Firemen's Officers.

The following officers were elected by the Exempt Firemen's Association last night:

President—Aug. Saltzman.
Vice-President—J. A. Hubbard.
Recording Secretary—G. Thorn.
Financial Secretary—S. J. Robinson.

THE LEGISLATURE.

EX-COMPTROLLER ANDERSON MADE STATE PRISON SUPERVISOR.

Political Board Appointments to be Abolished.—Physiology and the Effect of Alcohol and Narcotics to be Taught in Public Schools.

TRENTON, N. J. April 17.—Ex-Controller Anderson's appointment as supervisor of the State prison was confirmed to-day.

EX-COMPTROLLER ANDERSON.

Senator Kitchen has introduced a bill abolishing the Boards of Public Works in Newark and Jersey City, the Mayor of the two cities to appoint new Boards, composed of five members, not more than three of one party.

To-night the joint committee on partisan legislation decided to recommend that the State Board of Taxation, the Pilot Commissioners, and the Riparian Commissioners be re-organized and made non-partisan. The committee considered the proposition to abolish the Inland Judges in the various counties, but reached no conclusion. They decided to recommend to the joint Republican caucus that the Legislature take a recess of one week, from May 5. Gen. Sewell and Chairman Franklin Murphy decided last week that this should be done.

Gov. Werts appointed to-day Gen. William C. Heppenheimer, Gen. Edward F. Reddy, and Gen. Bird W. Spencer a court of inquiry to investigate the charges made against Gen. Plume in connection with the reorganization of the First Brigade of the National Guard.

Senator Skirm of Mercer introduced bills last night abolishing the Boards of Public Works in Paterson, Trenton, and Camden; providing for the vacation of the offices of Democratic officials in those cities, and the filling of the places by Republicans chosen for two-year terms by the Common Council or Board of Aldermen; and a third bill gives the Mercer and Passaic Senators in those three cities into wards, so as to perpetuate their control. These bills were agreed upon by the representatives of Passaic, Camden, and Mercer counties.

Senator Hetfield introduced a bill giving a pension to the widow of Jacob B. Lippincott, the prison official who was recently killed by a convict who was attempting to escape.

The House passed the bill adding to the number of study in the public schools the teaching of physiology, with special reference to the effects of alcohol and other narcotics on the human system. Assemblyman Steele of Essex was the only public speaker against the bill, and cast the only negative vote.

The bill will be pushed through the Senate by Senator Bradley. It has been before the Legislature annually for several years. Illinois and New Jersey, Senator Bradley says, are the only States in which this study is not required.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE.

A Lecture on this Institution—by Mr. H. B. Turner.

Mr. H. B. Turner's lecture on Hampton Institute, at the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, last night, was very interesting. He told in a very intelligent manner of the work being done in the Hampton Institute was founded 25 years ago by General Armstrong. It is located on historic ground, overlooking Hampton Roads, and marks the spot where the first negroes were landed from slavery.

The Institute was founded with fifteen students and two teachers. It has now 900 students.

Each student pays his own way through the college in the manner. Adjoining the college is a workshop where the scholars work 10 hours a day. They study two hours each night for the first year. In this way they pay their way and save money besides.

A student is only required to pay for his board and clothing, his tuition being contributed by the Institute. When advanced to the Normal school the students work only two days a week and study four.

On a sheet, was thrown a large number of fine stereopticon views illustrating the buildings at Hampton, some of its Negro and Indian students, and showing the contrast between their past and present conditions, and others also, setting before the audience with a power such as only pictures can do, the wonderful results attained on the students by their life at Hampton.

A quartette of colored men sang several plantation songs in that manner so peculiar to themselves.

FASHIONS FOR CHILDREN.

White Pique Baby Shoes Are One Very Pretty Spring Novelty.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

One piece gowns are still the favorite style for little girls and children. For very little people the fullness is usually allowed to fall from the shoulders, although many times the old fashioned baby waist is seen gathered into a belt, with the full skirt sewed on. In gowns for older girls the bodice, however fanciful it may be now and trimmed, is yet attached to the skirt in the same manner and buttons at the back. Full-sleeved or plaited bodices are preferred, with ribbon caught all the way round. For little boys not yet out of kilts pretty sailor suits are shown made of white or figured duck and trimmed with colored cambric or embroidery. The skirts are scant, while the blouses have wide turnover collars, with a big tie or a frill down the front. In thicker goods a neat suit was seen with a kilt of green and blue plaid heightened with a thread of yellow.

Fine lawns and nainsook is used for the most charming baby dresses of the year, and even long infant slips are shown in this material. They are trimmed sparingly with fine valenciennes lace and are very tasteful) made. A novelty is shown in the shape of white pique baby shoes, with a strap to fasten across the instep and a tiny rosette of lace or embroidery secured to the front of the shoe by a pearl button. These Cinderella slippers, with the little short socks that go with them, are fit only for hot weather wear and should be replaced on cooler days by kid shoes and longer stockings made of fine cashmere. Pique holds a prominent place among children's materials this season, being made not only into shoes, sunbonnets and hats, but into kilts, blouses and coats. In fine qualities, however, it is rather too thick and firm in texture to be a comfortable fabric for wear on warm days.

A sketch is given of a little girl's party dress. It is made of thin woolen crepon. The skirt is trimmed with four graduated flounces of the material, while the full blouse bodice, which is cut square around the neck, is trimmed with two ruffles. The puffed elbow sleeves are also finished with ruffles, and the fancies of the bodice and the skirt is concealed by a belt.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" an adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. The wonderful story is

WONDERS OF THE YOSEMITE.

Chimes of Nature Ringing in Cathedrals that Reach to the Skies.

How wonderful is America; not alone in the indefatigable industry, ambition and intelligence of its people, but likewise in the unparalleled scenery which distinguishes not one, but many sections of our country. How delightful, how heavenly like and dwarfed are the loftiest peaks of the Alps, how diminutive and disappointing the Rhine, the Black Forest, the lakes of Ireland, the highlands of Scotland, or any of the natural scenes of Europe, when brought into comparison with Colorado's Grand Canon, peaks of the Rockies, marvels of Yellowstone, lakes of the Sierras, bluffs of the Mississippi, shores of Superior, falls, forests and mountains of the Northwest. Do Americans appreciate their own country; are they desirous of knowing wherein its superiority lies; are they interested in and do they believe the descriptions given from time to time of the inspiring scenery of the United States and Canada. The "Glimpses of America" containing eighteen photographs, and the most charming descriptions that were ever written of Yosemite Valley and Park, its big trees, mountains, falls, fairy spiendors, its strange legends and Indian traditions, concluding his description of this wonderous region, Mr. Boel, author of "Glimpses of America," thus writes: "See everywhere, up and down the magic valley, whether viewed from the gorges that keep their bottoms in dark and mysterious abysses, or from amazing heights of walls thrust far into the skies, there is wonder piled upon wonder, grandeur overtopping rapture, dumbfounded admiration following fast upon the heels of inspiration, glorious realization gilding visions of imagination." As the gifted B. F. Taylor wrote:

"Yosemite awaited us without warning. Special white in the gleaming of the sun, the first thought was that the granite ledges of all the mountains had come to resurrection, and were standing pale and dumb before the Lord. I turned to it again, and began to see towers, the domes, the spires, the battlements, the arches, and the white clouds of solid granite, surging up into the air and come to everlasting anchor until the mountains shall be moved! You hasten on; you hear the winds intoning in the choral galleries a mile above your head; you hear the crash of waters as of cataracts in the sky; you trample upon broad shadows that have fallen thousands of feet, like the vast folds of garments of descending night."

If you want to know all about the scenery of our country, in pictures and descriptions, "Glimpses of America" will completely gratify your desires. The coupon cut from THE NEWS and ten cents will buy Part I of "Glimpses of America."

LAST TRIBUTE TO VANCE

The Nation Was Represented at His Funeral.

SERVICES IN THE SENATE CHAMBER

The President, With His Cabinet, Both Houses of Congress, the Chief Justice and Associates and Other High Officials, Attended.—Funeral Train Leaves.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The senate paid respect to the memory of the late Senator Vance of North Carolina. In his opening prayer the chaplain alluded to the deceased in words of touching sympathy and honor. Appropriate resolutions were adopted, and the senate recessed until the hour when the funeral services were conducted in the senate chamber.

The senate chamber presented an unusual appearance. The chairs of the senators had been crowded more closely together, and additional seating capacity was obtained by bringing in a large number of light folding chairs and placing them in every possible space. Large upholstered armchairs were placed in the semicircular space facing the vice president's desk, those for the family of the deceased statesman and invited guests being on his left and for the president and other officials on the right.

The Chamber Flower Decked.

On the clerk's desk was a massive floral piece representing a tall column, composed of the dark copper colored leaves of a North Carolina mountain plant, while at the foot of the shaft was the emblem of peace—the palm branch—and twined around it was a wreath of La France roses. This was the tribute from the deceased statesman's colleagues in the senate.

In the recess behind the vice president was a tall, waving palm, flanked on either side by North Carolina pines, placed in the corners of the chamber and at the foot of each pilaster were palms or firs. The galleries were crowded, and a distinguished audience long before the hour, ladies largely predominating. In the front bench of the ladies' gallery was Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris.

The casket was borne from the marble room by nine capitol policemen in uniform and laid before the vice president's rostrum. The lid was hidden by a mass of flowers, chiefly white roses tied with broad purple ribbons. Conspicuous by its beauty and size and by its solitary grandeur was a single American Beauty rose fastened to the head of the casket.

When the active pallbearers had deposited their burden a number of pines were brought in and grouped about the form of the dead senator. Everywhere was the pine, emblem of the hardy vigorous fragrance of the North Carolina mountains into the senate of the United States. A few minutes afterward the family of Senator Vance and other friends, and members of the committees of the senate and house appointed to attend the funeral entered. Those entering were escorted to seats which were seated at the side of the casket and facing the audience.

The President Arrives.

"The speaker and members of the house of representatives," announced the usher, and Speaker Crisp was escorted down the main aisle and took a seat beside the vice president's desk. Members of the house arranged themselves in the space in the rear of the hall. Then followed the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court, who were shown to their seats.

"The president of the United States and his cabinet," announced the usher, and the assembly arose and remained standing until the president, accompanied by all the members of the cabinet except Secretary Lamont, passed down the main aisle and were seated.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, was escorted to a seat next to the cabinet officers. Others distinguished guests were present, but not announced.

Rev. Dr. Moses D. Hoge of Richmond offered prayer. He also delivered the sermon.

The funeral escort left the capitol by the eastern door from the senate chamber. The casket was carried down the long flight of stone steps between the lines of senators and representatives who acted as honorary pallbearers. The funeral party was driven to the Baltimore depot, accompanied by a delegation of North Carolinians on foot. The remains were taken to Asheville, N. C., where the interment is to take place on Thursday, over the Richmond and Danville railroad.

The New Quorum Rule.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—After a session of two hours the Democratic members of the house committee on rules agreed upon the new quorum rule, and it was then upon sent for Messrs. Reed and Burrows, the Republican members of the committee. It is understood that the rule provides for ascertaining a quorum by counting members present, but not voting, and also for fining members who absent themselves from the house. The new rule will probably be presented in the house today. Representative Burrows joined the Democratic members of the rules committee to consider the new quorum rule. Mr. Reed left the house early and could not be found.

The proposed rule was submitted to Mr. Burrows, and an hour was spent in discussing it and examining precedents. No agreement was reached, owing to Mr. Reed's absence.

Breckinridge Will Try Again.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Representative Breckinridge and his counsel have prepared their formal motion for a new trial, which will be presented to Judge Bradley today. This motion is the last possibility in the way of an appeal to the district court of appeals, for no one entertains the slightest idea that the court below will reverse the jury and grant the motion. The docket of the court of appeals is so crowded that it is quite probable the appeal cannot be heard there before next September, when the court meets for its fall term. The cost of an appeal to this court is great.

An Important Decision.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—A constitutional opinion of great importance was rendered by Judge Nott of the court of claims in passing upon one of the cases arising out of the Weil and La Abra Mexican awards. The question presented was as to whether the president can legally approve a bill after the adjournment of congress. Judge Nott held that the president had that right, provided that it be exercised within the 10 days allowed him by the constitution.

First Baseball Accident.

BROOKLYN, April 17.—In the game between the Brooklyns and Springfields of the Eastern league Catcher Daniel Burke of the Massachusetts team broke his leg. He was run into by another player.

COMMONWEAL AFLOAT.

Admiral Coxey In Command of Two Canalboats.

SURE TO REACH WASHINGTON NOW.

Industrials Are Moving From All Points, but Coxey's Men Are the Only Ones Who Have Taken to the Water—Kelly's Army Invited to Move.

CUMBERLAND, Md., April 17.—Coxey has not yet backed out of his enterprise, but today he will take water. The road over the mountains between this point and Williamsport was too rough and steep to tempt the travelers, and, taking advantage of the inflow of large cash contributions that have been received during the stay in Cumberland, Coxey hired canal boats to take the party 95 miles down the canal to Williamsport.

Coxey will work his floaters in blocks or two—one barge for the men and the other for the horses and camp outfit. The canal company was not anxious to transport the party, but Coxey showed his abilities as a manager by telegraphing to Washington for the personal order of General Nicholson to pass the boats through the locks and so during a job lot freight rate at 32 cents a ton on all of his company—men, horses and lumber. This was 13 cents higher than the rate on coal, but will make three days of pleasant travel against the same amount of weary tramping.

"The Unknown" Was Outdone.

The company has been docility itself since the reappearance of Coxey in camp. Pizzaro, formerly known as "The Great Unknown," took out of sight and was forgotten in 12 hours after his expulsion from Camp Victory, which was the title bestowed on the Cumberland ball park by Browne in commemoration of his restoration to command.

Smith Pizzaro's last play for notoriety and favor was made last night and was neatly checkmated by Coxey. Smith advertised the appearance of himself, Jesse Coxey and the veiled lady at a 25 cent lecture in Cumberland. Coxey then sowed broadcast a flaming handbill announcing a free lecture by himself and Browne just across the street from Pizzaro's hall, adding to the announcement that Jesse Coxey would not appear at any meeting, contrary reports notwithstanding. Smith was outgeneraled.

Coxey's hall was crowded to the doors, and the audience applauded vigorously the odd stories and similes of Browne, who, in spite of his unpoath appearance and rough speech, is a great stump artist. But across the street the ex-patent medicine man leaned wearily on the rostrum. He had not a single auditor.

All looks like smooth sailing for the commonweal for a week to come, and there is little prospect of any other mutiny. Barring such an occurrence or the coming of phenomenally bad weather, there seems now no chance of the commonweal's breaking up before reaching Washington. The great crowd is expected to congregate during the march from Hagerstown to the national capital.

Kelly's Army Changes Cars.

OMAHA, April 17.—Smooth shaven and unburned, but with bright eyes and firm steps, General Kelly's troops marched out of Council Bluffs. At the head of the procession rode the general on a spirited horse that was loaned him for the occasion by a sympathizing citizen. Along the street the general was given an ovation, and several times he was stopped by citizens who demanded a speech and the privilege of shaking hands. By his side rode Sheriff Hazen, who went more as a pilot than a peace officer. Behind, with regular platoon formation, blankets rolled and bundles carried knapsack fashion, trudged the army, with step as firm as the muddy road would permit.

Sheriff Hazen had told General Kelly that his 24 hours of rest had ended and that he would have to move on. Kelly promised to start, and the army relinquished the train of Union Pacific box cars it had occupied since leaving Ogden and prepared for the march. In the meanwhile Kelly and Hazen had been looking up a route.

The general expressed a wish to cross the eastern boundary of Iowa at as near the south of Council Bluffs as possible. This made Davenport the chain of crossings on the Mississippi river and elected the Rock Island as the route to be followed. There was no probability of a train on the Northwestern being captured, as that company had abandoned Council Bluffs for the time. Parks Mills, the first station east on the Rock Island, five miles out, was chosen as the camping place for the night. Kelly hoped that a train of empty box cars would pass through during the night. It would then be captured.

About 180 joined the army on Sunday and rested. Twenty-four hours of rest had sufficed to revive the men. Several who deserted here and at Council Bluffs have been locked up. During the stay of the army in this vicinity there was no drinking in camp and absolutely no disorder. Many people went to the camp during the day and contributed cash and clothing to the military department. Kelly left with provisions enough to last two or three days and in possession of about $400 in money.

Frye's Army Splits Up.

HUNTSMAN, Ills., April 17.—General Frye and his commonweal arrived in this city, 250 strong, General Frye being in charge. They went into camp on the outskirts of the city and will remain until tomorrow to rest and clean up. The men are intelligent and well behaved. Major Arnold, in behalf of the city, has provided them with food. Last evening General Frye addressed an audience of 2,000 from the courthouse steps and was attentively listened to.

At Vandalia half of the army left the general command and will proceed to Washington along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. General Frye, with his command, will proceed from here along the old National road to Washington. The army seems to be losing strength and numbers because of the long and tiresome march. They are provided with tents, blankets and cooking utensils and depend upon the people for food, which is cheerfully given.

Still Another "General."

CINCINNATI, April 17.—Mr. John H. Grover, the republican candidate for mayor of Cincinnati, announces that he will take 3,000 of Cincinnati's unemployed and present them in a body at Washington "to the authors of their misfortune, where, without firearms or threats of any sort, they will ask the national government to give them work or give them rations." He says he will form no partnership with Coxey or any other man seeking notoriety, nor will he tramp his men. He proposes to pay $1,500 for transporting the men and have each man take three days' rations and two blankets. Negotiations with the government will be without co-operation with Coxey.

Sprague's Regiment Starts Out.

DENVER, April 17.—A detachment of Grayson's Colorado regiment, Coxey's army, seized a line of box cars in the Burlington and Missouri yards just north of here, and driving off the watchmen they intended to force the railroads to haul them east. This not being done, several empty cars were set on fire, but the fire was put out. Later the cars were again discovered burning, and 20 were destroyed. The plan now is for the regiment to march out a few miles along the Rock Island's tracks, where a train of empties will be found, seized and forced to go east.

Another Regiment Waiting.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 17.—Coxey's army here now numbers 300. Arrangements had been completed for box cars on the Santa Fe to Washington for 25 per head, providing the full 300 go. As yet only about half the army can raise the $5. When the start will be made is consequently indefinite.

Jones' Command Pushing On.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 17.—Jones' corps of Coxey's army, numbering 40 men, encamped at Ogletown last night. They will cross the Maryland line today.

Coxey Will Run For President.

BALTIMORE, April 17.—A special to The Sun from Cumberland, Md., says that Mr. Coxey will run for the Populist nomination for the presidency in 1896.

Call on Breckinridge to Retire.

LOUISVILLE, April 17.—The Post (Democratic), commenting editorially on the downfall of Breckinridge, says that "the one service he can now render to his friends and his party is to accept the verdict of the Washington jury as a verdict of eternal banishment from the public and from the public service and act accordingly. He should retire now and leave the Democrats of the Ashland district free to choose a representative who will bring new and better influences into politics. They should go to some man of worth and character in private station whose career has exhibited those virtues and devotions on which Anglo-Saxon civilization rests, and send him to Washington as Kentucky's reply to the accusations brought against her by her own sons."

BOSTON, April 17.—A man committed suicide by shooting himself through the right temple in the public garden in this city. At the undertaker's a letter was found in his clothing addressed to the coroner of Boston, which read as follows:

I have determined to end my life, which is full of disappointment and trouble. That is all there is to it. Ring down the curtain. Kindly notify my wife, May Knorr, 2015 South Halstead street, Chicago, and Philip Weisenbergen, 1101 Clark avenue, St. Louis. This latter place is my home. I thank you for doing the proper thing in your official capacity. Yours truly, LOUIS KNORR.

Bound to Have His Child.

LYNN, Mass., April 17.—Abner Porter of Boston took desperate measures to secure the custody of one of his children and succeeded. He and his wife have not lived together for the past three months, the wife having instituted proceedings for divorce and moved to Lynn with their two children. Porter called at the house and was refused admittance. He climbed in through a rear window, and seizing the oldest child, a boy, made his escape by the front door, despite the efforts of his wife.

Landslide Causes a Wreck.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 17.—A landslide occurred at Webber canyon, east of Ogden, on the Union Pacific road, causing an accident to a freight train. A huge mass of rock fell from a cliff 400 feet above the railroad track and demolished the roadbed for a distance of nearly 100 feet. The engineer and fireman of a freight train jumped just as the engine was about to crash into the mass of rock.

Movements of Ocean Steamships.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The following steamships are due today: Breconshire, Gibraltar; La Champagne, Havre; Weser, Naples; Denmark, London; Chicago, Antwerp; Derwent Holme, Gibraltar; Bonvenue, Gibraltar; Nomadic, Liverpool; Mobile, London; Altonower, Gibraltar. The following steamships sail today: Helvelins, Pernambuco; Spree, Bremen.

Two Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

SPRINGFIELD, O., April 17.—Breece's sawmill, near Bainbridge, was wrecked by the boiler exploding, and Engineer Nate Weatherby and Mr. Breece, brother of the proprietor, were instantly killed. Four other men were seriously and probably fatally injured.

Smallpox In Bridgeport.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 17.—James Moriarty, 34 years old, was found to be suffering from smallpox in a tenement with several families. He was removed to the Hospital For Contagious Diseases and the house quarantined.

Typhoid Raging In Mr. Evarts' House.

RUTLAND, Vt., April 17.—A serious epidemic of typhoid fever is prevailing at Windsor, the summer home of William M. Evarts. There have been 130 cases in the village, or one to every 14 of the population.

McKane's Case Advanced.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The supreme court has advanced the John T. McKane case to the first one on the docket for next Monday. If there are no leftover cases, the court will consider this early on Monday.

Shot Through the Heart.

GLOUCESTER, N. J., April 17.—While handling a revolver at the residence of John Reach, Hans Hanson, the bartender, accidentally shot John Gribel through the heart, killing him instantly.

A Whalebach Passenger Boat.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., April 17.—The steamer Whalebach, the only road to Washington. The army seems to be losing strength and numbers because of the long and tiresome march. They are provided with tents, blankets and cooking utensils and depend upon the people for food, which is cheerfully given.

No Flag but Old Glory.

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—Mayor Stuart sent a letter to the secretary of the Universal Peace union declining to allow that organization to float the flag over Independence hall in place of the national ensign on Wednesday, when it holds its celebration to commemorate the signing of the arbitration treaty.

Some Are Sleepers.

PITTSFIELD, Ills., April 17.—Mrs. Lou Plainemyer shot and instantly killed her stepson. She had ordered him to go and help her husband in the stable. This enraged young Plainemyer, and he advanced toward his stepmother with a knife, whereupon Mrs. Plainemyer secured a revolver and shot him.

Female City Treasurer Short In Accounts.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., April 17.—An expert investigation of the books of City Treasurer Mrs. E. Fullman of this city, the only female city treasurer in the state, makes it appear that she is $1,300 short in her accounts. She has been suspended pending further investigation.

Oyster War Wages Hot.

MILLVILLE, N. J., April 17.—A boatload of deputy sheriffs and constables, all heavily armed, left here on a Philadelphia tugboat bound for the oyster beds at Fortescue. They took with them warrants for the arrest of a large number of the dredgers.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Young Editor.

Percy Bishop Lovell, the youngest editor of a bicycle paper in the world, is but a youth in years, but a giant in intellect. He edits the monthly journal Loose Spokes, published in Moorestown, N. J. He was born in the state and has lived there nearly all his life.

He left school at 16 and went into his father's printing shop and learned every branch of the trade. He started Loose Spokes as a local four page paper. He located it when he pleased and distributed it free, in the interests of cycling. The paper works on the plan of an employee, who outlines that assistance should derive a certain profit from money spent with him. He has a novel way of proving circulation and carries his postoffice receipts with him. He has many friends in the trade whom he feels proud to own. He tried to get subscriptions and succeeded well enough to put the paper on a firm basis and begin its issue as a national journal. He is a great believer in advertising and takes his own medicine. He does all the work on his paper—edits, corresponds and sometimes sets the type and prints it.—New York Recorder.

Juvenile Stamp Collectors.

The stamp collecting children increase in number every year. Dealers say that they sell more and more albums every season, and the demand for their stamps is steady and growing. There is much sense in it that boys and girls fancy when, because some one of their companions is a collector, they also aspire to be a collector. Many bits of history are woven in with their stamps and as a help to the study of geography their collection is invaluable. The collection of postage stamps of this country makes a small picture gallery of famous Americans. Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Andrew Jackson, Jefferson, Hamilton, Commodore Perry, Zachary Taylor, Lincoln and Garfield are all shown in fine vignettes on the several stamps, the face of Lincoln on the red 6 cent stamp being a copy of Volk's famous bust. On some old and now not used stamps are the faces of Clay, Stanton and Scott, and these are especially sought after and valued from their rarity. The full set of the Columbian issue is a series of admirable views in miniature of important events in our history, and the size of the stamp, at which business men grumble, gives the picture added beauty.—New York Herald.

are seen lying at his feet in pictures are very gentle. They have the softest mouths in the world and will not harm any one. In fact, a Great Dane dog does not make the best watchman because he is so gentle. There are a few of these noble dogs in New York city, and they can be seen any pleasant day in Central park, playing with their young owners and surrounded by crowds of children, who find it very great fun to look at them.

One day, not long ago, a Great Dane owned by a young girl was crossing the park, when a laborer passed with a pail of beer. Instantly Bismarck, as the dog is named, ran after the man, and sticking his nose in the pail drank it almost dry with two or three laps of his big tongue. The laborer was so frightened that he dropped the pail and ran. Bismarck is as tall as a Shetland pony of small size and is a sort of drab in color. He is the prettiest Great Dane in this country.—New York Ledger.

His Answer.

Teacher (instructing a class in astronomy)—Johnnie, where would a star be if you could not see it?

Johnnie (hesitatingly)—Why, it would be out of sight.

Teacher (laughing)—True, indeed, but not quite the answer required.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Park.

The Dark comes with me up the stairs;
It follows me to bed;
It watches while I say my prayers
Till the last word is said.

I scramble in beneath the sheet—
Down in the orchard rows
The Wind gets out his trumpet sweet
And blows and blows and blows.

The Dark is in my chamber here,
The Wind out in the tree,
My mother says I need not fear,
They will do aught to me.

For far above the Wind, the Dark,
Site God, who made them all—
The grass, the star like a red spark,
The green bough by the wall.

My mother with her lamp comes in;
The Dark goes out the door;
The table legs throw shadows thin
Across the chamber floor.

The Wind from out the orchard slips;
Around the house he goes;
He sets his trumpet to his lips
And blows and blows and blows.

A Gymnastic Problem Difficult to Solve by the Uninitiated.

and then to pass his whole body underneath it within the space comprehended between the floor and his hands.

If he does not know the secret of the trick, he will stand with his face to the wall, and in endeavoring to pass under the stick will inevitably lose his balance and fall. If, on the other hand, he places himself with his back to the wall in such manner that his feet and the lower end of the stick form the lower angles of an isosceles triangle, he will Modern Explosives.

The invention of what are distinctly known as modern explosives began in 1833 with nitrocellulose or gun cotton. This consists simply of dried cotton waste or vegetable fiber, acted upon by strong nitric acid. The cotton consists of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen in combination. The effect of the action of the nitric acid is to oxidize a portion of the carbon, to substitute for it the elements of nitrogen and to substitute in their place certain other compound molecules of oxygen and nitrogen. The result of the chemical action is to introduce into the body an exceedingly unstable compound, which breaks up at the least increase of temperature. The whole body then becomes highly oxidized, and is reduced with instant suddenness from a solid to a gaseous state, with enormous increase of volume and great development of heat, the process, except as regards speed, being precisely the same as happens every day with the combustion or oxidation of coal in a grate.

Nitroglycerin, which was invented in 1847, has precisely the same chemical composition as nitrocellulose. It is made by spraying pure glycerin (also composed of carbon, oxygen and hydrogen) into a mixture of strong nitric and sulphuric acids, the latter serving merely to keep the nitric acid strong, as water is evolved in the process which has to be absorbed.

The history of nitroglycerin has been from the first a very disastrous one. It is such a ready explosive that a tap on the vessel containing it is almost enough to set it off, and had not Nobel almost simultaneously been thought of for soaking it up into a porous or spongy substance, so as to render it capable of being handled in a solid and less dangerous form, it could never have come into commercial use.

This, like gun cotton, is useful solely as a blasting agent. Its explosion is so rapid that no gun could stand it, and artillerists all over the world, while seeking in every possible direction for a smokeless explosive suitable to their guns, did not discover prior to 1888 that nitroglycerin could in any way assist them in their search. The discovery in 1888 of "ballistite," an explosive suitable for ballistic purposes, from the union of nitrocellulose and nitroglycerin, was partly due to accident, but was none the less a brilliant achievement.

Wasps and Bees Get Drunk.

According to Mr. Lawson Tait, wasps and bees get drunk; and they do it after the following fashion:

"I have been watching the wasps with great interest and have noticed the avidity with which, they attack certain fruit when fully ripe, rotting in fact, and I have also noticed some of the peculiar results of their doing so. The sugar in some fruits which are most attacked by wasps has a tendency to pass into a kind or kinds of alcohol in the ordinary process of rotting, a fact which is easily ascertained by the use of a still not large enough to attract the attention of the excise authorities.

"On such fruits, particularly grapes and certain plums, you will see wasps pushing and fighting in numbers much larger than can be accommodated, and you will see them get very drunk, crawl away in a semi-somnolent condition and repose in the grass for some time, till they get over the "bout," and then they will go at it again. It is while they are thus affected that they do their worst stinging, both in the virulent nature of the stroke and the utterly unprovoked assaults of which they are guilty. I was stung last year by a drunken wasp and suffered severely from symptoms of nerve poison for several days. In such drunken peculiarities they resemble their human contemporaries."

A custom which extends all over Japan is that of taking your "host," or "servant," with you when you go out to dine. He waits at the table and performs any needed service as if he belonged to the house.

WASHINGTON PUZZLED.

What Will Be Done With Coxeyites? Is the Question.

THE VANGUARD ALREADY THERE.

Unattached Tramps and Unemployed Men Are Arriving by Freight In Large Numbers—The Invasion Is Taken Seriously Now.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Washington authorities, civil and military, are beginning to take an active interest in the arrival of Coxey's army. As the commonweal approaches and the stories of detachments from various cities begin to be authenticated the outlook for a rather troublesome problem for the District authorities to solve becomes bright. The question is, What will be done with the Coxeyites after they disband? The individual members of the army will be without means to go out of the city, and General Coxey has disclaimed all intention of leading away the men he brings in. It begins to look as though the men might encamp in the District and practically say to the authorities, "Here we are, and what do you propose to do with us?"

The District commissioners have had prepared a list of the statutes under which Coxey and his men could be arrested and dealt with. There is no lack of laws—laws against vagrancy, against bringing paupers into the District, against assemblages on the capitol grounds or processions without a permit.

Commissioner Ross, the president of the board, says that the authorities do not think they will have trouble in dealing with the Coxey army, and that he considers the invasion chiefly dangerous because of the precedent it would establish. If disgruntled factions were to form the habit of marching upon the capitol in force to voice their demands, he thought it would be distracting to legislation and decidedly uncomfortable to the residents of the city.

Not Too Few to Stop Them.

There are 400 men on the local police force, but of course only a fraction of the body would be available to handle the Coxeyites, and the probabilities are that it would be necessary to call upon the militia for assistance. There are 1,600 troops so well drilled that they could be massed in marching order on two hours' notice from General Albert Ordway, their commander. The District militia is under the direction of the president. They can be called upon in case of riot, insurrection or menaces of riot or insurrection.

If Coxey's men are dealt with by the police courts there would be no opportunity for labor organizations to appeal their case to a higher court with the hope of establishing a precedent. By a curious defect in the organization of the District courts the authority of the police court is absolute. There is no appeal from its sentences, and this anomaly proves a dampener on the ardor of the people who may be disposed to make martyrs of Coxey's men.

A petition under discussion by the militia officers is to corral the Coxey army on the edge of the city line, hard it into camp and confine it there until the local authorities or congress shall decide what course to take. If Coxey's army was met at the edge of the District by the police or militia and forbidden to enter, the men probably would skirt around in small detachments and enter the city by night, inaugurating a reign of terror among women and children, unless the militia were kept patrolling the border. Unattached tramps or workingmen out of jobs are entering the city in unusually large numbers every day. Nearly every freight train brings them in, and the undesired traffic of one line has increased so grossly that the trainmen have all been armed with revolvers.

An Ice Cathedral at Sea.

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—The master of the British steamer Manitoban, from Glasgow to this port, reports that on April 8 and again on the 10th she passed a large iceberg on Bollard bank, off Newfoundland. The latter was apparently aground, being stationary and resembling a huge cathedral, with spires, turrets and pinnacles.

Whipped With Blacksnakes.

RICHMOND, Ky., April 17.—A band of white caps went to the home of Alex Johnson, a negro, took him to a point near the fair grounds and tied him to a tree. His clothes were removed, and he was whipped with blacksnake whips until he was raw and almost hideless. He grossly insulted a lady Saturday night.

A Hindoo White Cap Sign Perhaps.

CALCUTTA, April 17.—Much excitement has been caused in North Bahar by the mysterious smearing of all the mango trees with a mixture of mud and hair. Wild rumors are afloat, and it is feared that the outrage portends a renewal of the trouble between the Hindoos and the Mohammedans.

DUPLICATE WHIST.

A Series of Games Begun at the Park Club Last Night.

The first of the series of games of duplicate whist were played at the Park Club last evening. Eight tables were used. Four players, two ladies and two gentlemen were at each table. The players sitting on the north and south sides of the tables played against those sitting on the east and west sides. The north and south players won by 27 points.

The players were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. S. St. J. McCutchen, Mr. and Mrs G. P. Dupee, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lyman, Mr. and Mrs J. P. Northrup, Miss Daniels, Miss Murphy, Miss Mosgrave, Miss Sandford, Mrs. Geo. Rogers, Mrs. Lincoln, Miss Gertrude Daniels, Miss Lee, and Messrs. Elston M. French, Leslie Daniels, Percy Sandford, Clarence Murphy, Chas. E. Horn, Peter Matthews, C. H. Smith, Jos Leonard, Charles Reed and Augustus Van Deventer.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. T. Horn has rented the house No. 313 Central avenue.

Mr. J. S. Truell has moved with his family from 313 Central avenue to 615 Central avenue.

Mrs. J. C. Dyer has moved from Craig place to Somerset street. Mr. Dyer has rented his house, 61 Craig place, to Mr. J. H. Potter of Brooklyn.

Thursday evening, at 7:30 o'clock, Miss Jean Erickson, daughter of Councilman E. N. Erickson of West Eighth street, will be married to Mr. James H. Halloed. The ceremony will be performed in Grace church.

Mr. Joseph Darby and Miss Ida May Schuck will be married at Grace M. E. church to-morrow afternoon. Miss Margaret Schuck, a sister of the prospective bride, will act as bridesmaid, and Mr. Walter Darby will be best man.

Mrs. Sarah O. Dorne, aged 73 years, died at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, after an illness extending from the date of her husband's death, three years ago. She was a sufferer from heart trouble. She lived with her daughter, Mrs. S P. Craig of East Fourth street. She leaves four sons and two daughters. The sons are Thaddeus, chief of the fire department, John, a shoe merchant, Charles, a builder, and J. Horace, a joiner. The daughters are Mrs. T. T. Barrett of Rockview Farm, near Dunellen, and Mrs. Craig. The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon.

Mr. Fred. Casper of East Front street, celebrated his 35th birthday last evening, by giving a reception to a number of his friends and the members of the new Leiderkranz. Some forty were present, and they were most hospitably entertained until early this morning. The party was held in the latter parlors, and during the evening there was singing by the Leiderkranz, violin and piano accompaniment by Mr. and Mrs Korf, and addresses by Prof. Stein and Mr. M. Heubner. At ten o'clock supper was served, after which the time was spent in dancing and other diversities. An amusing feature was a leger-demain operation, performed by Prof Stein and President Korf in the so-called taking off of Miss Lena Weber's arm and re-joining it. Some of those present were: Prof. Stein and family, President Korf and family, Mr. and Mrs W. Beiter, Mr. Fuddermeyer and family, Charles Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bintz, Mr. H. Reubner and family, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ulrich, Mrs. H. Weigmann and daughters Misses Charles Maas, John Richter, H. Haursnd, M. Weber and Miss Lena Weber, Mr. F. Linder, L. Leichtentritt, Mr. Geo. Feller and Miss Leitenberger.

Might Have Ended Seriously.

Last evening, Mrs. T. A. McCarthy drove to St. Mary's church to attend the mission that is held there, accompanied by her mother and two sisters. While they were attending the services some one unfastened part of the harness so that when they started to drive home the wagon ran up on the horse's heels. The horse became unmanageable, but fortunately got its hind leg over the cross bar of the shafts which stopped the animal until help came. There is a bad lot of boys in that vicinity and they frequently play such pranks. This time it might have been a serious affair.

A Narrow Escape.

A pleasant party, consisting of a man, two ladies and three children, while crossing the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks at New Market, Sunday, did not notice an approaching express train, and narrowly escaped being struck by the engine.

The horse, one obtained from a New Brunswick liveryman, became frightened, and nearly upset the wagon by backing it upon the sidewalk. The harness was badly broken.

Jumped Off the Train and Fell Into the Mud.

As the 4:09 train from New York was leaving the North avenue station last night, a well dressed man, evidently a stranger, ran out on the back platform of the last car. As the train neared the water tank, just west of the station, he jumped off and fell into the mud and water around tank. He was uninjured, but his clothes were covered with mud.

—The May term of the Union county court will open Tuesday, May 1.

FOR AND AGAINST IT.

PLAINFIELDERS GIVEN A HEARING ON THE BOARD OF EDUCATION BILL.

By the Committee on Education of the New Jersey Senate.—Col. Tyler and Messrs. Lovell and Finch Speak Against the Measure, and Mayor Gilbert and Mr. Whiton for It.

The Committee on Education of the New Jersey Senate gave a public hearing last night at Trenton, upon the bill so much talked of, which had been introduced by Senator Voorhees, and is aimed at the Plainfield Board of Education.

Mr. Stokes of Cumberland county, is chairman of the committee and the other members are Messrs. Bradley and Perkins. About fifteen Plainfielders were present at the hearing, among them being Mayor Gilbert and Dr. J. B. Probasco, president of the Board of Education.

Col. Mason W. Tyler spoke against the bill, as did also Mr. Leander N. Lovell and E. L. Finch, the two latter being members of the Board of Education. Mayor Gilbert and Mr. John M. Whiton spoke in favor of the measure.

An act concerning the power of Boards of Education to borrow money, issue bonds or incur indebtedness for the purchase of lands or the erection of school buildings.

The proposed bill is as follows:

Be it Enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. That it shall not be lawful for any Board of Education in any city of this State to borrow money, issue bonds, or incur indebtedness in excess of five thousand dollars for the purpose of purchasing lands or erecting any school building, without the consent and approval first obtained of the Common Council, Board of Aldermen or governing body of said city.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general or special, so far as they are inconsistent with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this shall take effect immediately.

BREVITIES.

—Iona Council, Degree of Pocahontas, will hold a meeting to-night.

—The Climax Gun Club is holding its monthly "shoot" to-day, on the South avenue grounds.

—The Exempt Firemen of New Jersey will hold their State Convention at Rahway on May 16th.

—The annual meeting of the Congregational church will be held in the church this evening.

—Mrs. Hyde will conduct the mothers' meeting at the W. C. T. U. rooms, Thursday afternoon, at 3:30.

—Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., will celebrate its 76th anniversary on Thursday evening, April 26.

—To-night, the Dunellen Bowling Club will try conclusions with the Knights of the Pin of Elizabeth, on the Dunellen alleys.

—Proprietor Joseph Bintz denies the story in another paper to the effect that he had sold his liquor business on Somerset street.

—Mr. Venino's new book, "Pedal Method for the Piano," is now in the Free Public Library. It is a present from the author.

—The Board of Directors of the Plainfield Street Railway will hold a meeting at the office of the company, on West Fourth street, on Friday.

—Don't fail to obtain Part I of "Glimpses of America." This book contains 36 pages of fine illustrations and reading matter, and is printed on fine plate paper. Send in your order now to this office, as Part II will soon be on hand.

—Those who heard Judge Magee's charge, at Somerville, yesterday, "say that he did not charge the Grand Jurors that there was illegal liquor selling in North Plainfield. An item in another paper saying that he did is pronounced false.

—Customers say there is always something new to be seen at White's department store. The latest is a new department for the sale of ladies' wrappers and house dresses, of which they have put on sale a very extensive assortment, and they also say that the prices are in keeping with the reputation of the house of selling the best goods for the least money. Miss Powers, who has charge of the department, has had a number of years' experience with one of the leading houses of Newark and will be pleased to show all visitors through the department.

Grandview Avenue Surprise.

A pleasant surprise party was given Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Helick at their residence on Grandview avenue last evening. The party danced until midnight to the music of Prof. Frazee, after which refreshments were partaken of. Among those present were: Mr and Mrs. J. P. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Wooleton, Mr. and Mrs. Winkler, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Steiner, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lutkins, the Misses Chandler, Miss Addie Lewis, Miss M. Humble, Miss Jessie Cubbington, Miss Ada Simpson, Miss Fobby Emmons, Miss Ada Wooleton, and Messrs. David and Louis Donavan, Chas. Hummer, George Chandler, Herbert and Louis Schutz, Frank Dodge, Howard Wooleton, William Kitchen, Harry Coddington, Bert. Steiner and Dyckman Winkler.

UNEARTHED SKELETONS.

Remains of Bodies Found on West Second Street.

SOME workmen, under the direction of Daniel Carty, while digging a cellar on West Second street this morning, came across what they thought to be the remains of an old coffin. Upon closer examination they found some bones of a human being. The body was evidently that of a man about six feet in height.

All the bones were found, just as they had been placed years ago.

The place where this skeleton was taken from was used some years ago for a graveyard. Two more skeletons were found during the day.

BRUISED HER BACK.

One School Girl Pushes Another One Down Upon a Curb Stone.

School girls greatly enjoy jumping the rope, and the girls of the Washington school are no exception to the rule. This practice nearly caused a serious accident yesterday afternoon.

Little Annie Hunnes was returning home from school, and was running and jumping the rope, when a colored girl named Ida Mitchell, who is about 12 years of age, came up behind Annie and tried to take away her rope, saying that it belonged to her. Annie resisted, whereupon, her parents say, the Mitchell girl pushed her down.

In falling Annie landed squarely on her back on the edge of the curb stone. Some people, who were passing, ran to her assistance and found her unconscious. She was carried into a grocery store nearby and her parents sent for. The little girl was placed in a wagon and taken to her home on West Second street, where Dr. Simpson called to bring her back to consciousness. After an hour's time he succeeded.

Upon examination the doctor found that her back was severely bruised, but he could not, on account of the pain it would cause, proceed with a closer examination, but it is certain that no bones were broken.

MEETING OF THE PRESBYTERY.

The Annual Meeting of the Presbyterians in the Elizabeth District.

The Elizabeth Presbytery began its annual session at Dunellen yesterday. The Rev. Wm. Blauvelt of Roselle, was elected moderator.

The vacancy caused by the removal of the Rev Dr. K. P. Ketcham was filled by the appointment of the Rev. G. E. Herring.

Board of Trade Still Winning.

The first game of a series between the Board of Trade and the C. Y. M. L.'s was rolled on the Board of Trade alleys last night and resulted in a victory for the former by the following score:

"AMERICAN GUARDS" ENTERTAIN.

A Most Pleasing Programme Rendered in Red Men's Hall.

A most pleasing entertainment was given by the "American Guards" to members of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., in Red Men's Hall, last night. There were about 400 persons present.

An excellent programme was rendered in which the Young Men's League took a prominent part, and received well-earned applause. The dialogue entitled "The Egyptian Mummy" was especially good and many were heard to remark that the participants took their parts as well as some professionals. The league is composed of young men from the Order.

Mr. J. T. Viegard, who is known as the "man with 1,000 faces," delighted the audience with a very laughable recitation entitled, "Humpty, Dumpty on a Velocipede," which kept everyone in convulsions of laughter, and an encore followed.

The following is the programme:

Overture.....Prof. Guttmann's Orchestra.
Recitation—"Humpty Dumpty on a Velocipede,"
.....By the man with 1,000 faces, Bro. J. T. Viegard.

THE LEGISLATURE.

YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS IN DETAIL.

The Confirmation of Ex-Comptroller Anderson's Nomination Delayed.—Bills to Reduce Ferry Fares, Legislating Freeholders Out of Office, Redistricting, Etc.

TRENTON, N. J., April 17.—Ex-Comptroller Anderson's nomination as Prison Supervisor was not confirmed yesterday as reported, but it was expected to be to-day, all the Republicans and Democrats favoring him, with the reported possible exception of Senator Skirm.

Senator Ketcham introduced the new Freeholder bill for Hudson and Essex counties, legislating the present Boards out of office on May 7, and providing that the Mayor of Jersey City and Newark appoint one member of the new Board from each ward in their cities; in second-class cities the Mayor is to appoint two Freeholders; in townships of over 12,000 population, two members are to be appointed by the Township Committee, and in other townships one, and one is to be chosen from each incorporated town. In each case the appointee is to be chosen from the party which cast the largest vote in the ward, city, or township at the last election, and they are to hold office until next April, and receive $200 a year salary.

Senator Bradley said that, as the Freeholders as now elected him held the balance of power in Monmouth county, he would vote for every temperance measure which came up, even if he cost a solitary vote. This declaration was called forth by the attempt of several Senators to amend and defeat the bill, which gives the governing body of borough the licensing power. None of the Republicans spoke for the bill to defeat it, but they voted with Bradley to prevent amending, as they will need his vote for the many partisan schemes they have on foot.

The Congressional redistricting to wipe out the Democratic gerrymander of two years ago, which the Republicans are considering, makes no change in the lines of the First, Second and Third districts. Hunterdon, Warren, Sussex and Morris counties make the Fourth district; Passaic and Bergen counties the Fifth; Newark and East Orange the Sixth; all of Hudson county, except Bayonne, the Seventh; Union county, the city of Bayonne in Hudson county, and all the townships of Essex county except East Orange make the Eighth district. A number of the Essex county people object to the division of that county, and are trying to have some changes made by which they can control two Congressmen.

Bills were passed by the House legislating out of office Robert Davis, the jailer of Hudson county, and giving the control and custody of the jail and the prisoners therein to Sheriff Toffey. Davis is the Democratic leader of Hudson county, and Toffey is a member of the Republican State Committee. Bills were also passed appropriating $980,000 for an armory at Paterson and repealing the law authorizing Jersey City to pay gas bills unlawfully contracted.

Short Talks on Advertising.

More things enter into advertising than are generally so considered. In fact, everything which connects a name and a business in people's mind, is advertising.

Membership in churches and clubs, and societies, the giving of social entertainments, public charity—all these and more, are advertising, but greater and broader, and better and easier than all these is newspaper advertising. You may think of that without thinking of the other plans, but no scheme of publicity is complete without a newspaper.

Advertising is business news. It tells of things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where she can get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual, than are all the travels of Sinbad and Alnaska.

The news should be news. It should not be allowed to grow stale with repetition in the same old way.

Merely publishing your name, address and business is not enough—it is good, but there's a better way. Be different from the others in your lines. Find some point in which you excel and harp on that. Give prices and specialties. Try to make the advertisement interesting and readable. Make them characteristic of your store, and, above all things, make them true, in letter and in spirit.

Don't say that you haven't the time to attend to your advertising properly. Really you haven't time to do anything else. Advertising is the most important thing about any business. It is the vital spark. What good does it do you to have the very best thing or the very greatest bargain on earth if people do not know it?

First get the right sort of goods, in the right location, at the right prices and "then make a fuss about it." The trade will follow.

THE LINEN DUSTER'S DAY DONE.

The Passing of a Fright and the Coming of Pretty Dust Cloaks.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

The linen duster of 25 years ago has entirely disappeared. It was a strictly utilitarian garment, supposing oversuits, intended exclusively for use, not only carried no pretensions to style, but actually covered and protected the gown, but concealed every good point of the wearer, emphasizing the bad ones if there were any. A more unbecoming article of apparel could not be devised, and how women ever persuaded themselves to appear in such attire is a marvel. But we have changed all that. The linen duster is obsolete, and in its place we have dust cloaks made of surah, gloria silk or thin worsted goods, fashionably cut, carefully made, becomingly trimmed and well fitting. Buttons, stitching, braid, passementerie and guipure may be used as a garniture, although all heavy trimming should be avoided, as these dust cloaks are strictly hot weather garments, and lightness is a desideratum. They not only protect the dress from dust and cinders, but as the costume is completely covered it is possible to wear on hot days the thinnest sort of muslin gown under the cloak without the fact being apparent.

There is an unwritten law, which no well bred woman ever infringes, against wearing in the street a bodice thin enough to allow the arms and neck to appear through the stuff, but a loose coat of thin silk conceals the diaphanous gown and adds little to the warmth of the wearer. These cloaks are becomingly made, with a snugly fitting back and straight front confined by a loose girdle, or they may have a gulpure covered yoke and a full front. The sleeves are usually loose and often made in bishop fashion. As to material, surahs and thin cloths are used in all the duller shades.

A sketch is given of a dust cloak in thin silver gray cloth trimmed with silver buttons. It is close fitting in the back, while the front hangs straight from the shoulders. The large revers, extending below the waist and sharply hollowed out at the top, are fastened back by buttons. The pockets, placed high on the hips, are also adorned with buttons, as are the close cuffs of the bouffant sleeves. The plain standing collar is surrounded by a daring ornamental collar lined with silk. The black straw hat which accompanies the cloak is trimmed with black ostrich tips.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

The Sons of Temperance.

On Wednesday, the 25th instant, a quarterly session of the Grand Division, Sons of Temperance of the State, will be held in Elizabeth, in the hall of Lincoln Division, No. 9. W. H. Stephen of Somerville, who was elected at the January session, will preside, and read his quarterly report. The session is expected to be a large and important one. The Grand Division has held its several sessions in Elizabeth within the past few years, the first time being in 1886, which occasion was made memorable by the presentation of a handsome gold watch to Henry B. Bowell of Trenton for valuable services rendered.

Free Organ Concerts in New York.

Mr. William C. Carl, the distinguished concert organist, will give his annual series of Spring free concerts, at the First Presbyterian church, Fifth avenue and 12th street, New York, on Friday evenings, April 27th and May 4th, at eight o'clock, which will be free to the public.

A number of important novelties for the organ will be played for the first time in America at the first concert, and the second will be a Handel festival concert, distinguished soloists will assist Mr. Carl at both of the recitals.

Literary Note

In addition to a review of the Cleveland Administration by ex-Governor Russell (Dem.) of Massachusetts and Senator Cullom (Rep.) of Illinois, the May Forum will contain a discussion of unusual opportuneness and point at a time when Congress is borrowing or searching Washington—of the question whether the State should give aid to the unemployed, by Dr. Stanton Coit of New York, who favors State aid and by Mr. D. McGregor of Boston, who argues that State aid means socialism.

Mr. Manning Maxwell Moore at Washington.

The Orange Herald's Washington correspondent, T. F. L., says:

Mr. Manning Maxwell Moore, of the Pond Tool Works of Plainfield, visited Washington on Monday last to hear Senator Hill's tariff speech, and join in the acclaim with which the Republicans hailed the New York Senator as their new Moses.

Base Ball!

A very exciting game of base ball was played between "Young Stars" and "Cranks" Monday afternoon, in North Plainfield. The game was won by the "Stars," the score being 36 to 13. The chief features of the game were the batting of Taylor and Motley of the "Stars," and the pitching of Conway of the "Cranks."

Ten Bodies Recovered.

BUFFALO, April 18.—Ten shelves in the lookout at the morgue have on them portions of human bodies found in the ruins of the Southern gilgrow vessels. The shocking of the payroll is correct, there are but two more bodies in the ruins. Some money and jewelry were also found.

Cyclone Visits Oklahoma.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 18.—A cyclone passed over the country 30 miles east of here, doing great damage. In Lincoln county four houses are reported demolished and many people injured, and over the line in Pottawatomie county a dozen houses were wrecked and two persons killed.

Two Miles a Minute.

BALTIMORE, April 18.—Tests of the World's fair Baldwin locomotive Columbia on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad are proving very satisfactory. Spurts have been made of two miles a minute, rivaling the famous New York Central's No. 999.

Negro Lynched.

LEWISBURG, Tenn., April 18.—Henry Montgomery, the negro murderer of well-known men one mile north of here, Montgomery had just served a term for larceny and had threatened to burn the homes of several white men.

Sovereigns Speaks In Boston.

BOSTON, April 18.—The Knights of Labor of this city held a demonstration in Faneuil hall. General Master Workman Sovereign of Iowa spoke for two hours.

Baltabower Reports For Duty.

CARLISLE, Pa., April 18.—Congressman Baltabower left his home for the first time since his recent severe illness and went at once to Washington.

Harrison Returning to Indiana.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—Ex-President Harrison, who has finished his law lectures at Stanford university, has left for Indianapolis.

Congressman Simpson Better.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Congressman Jerry Simpson is reported much better today.

SUNK BY TORPEDOES.

The Aquidaban, Formerly Mello's Flagship, Goes Down.

PEIXOTO'S FLEET CAUGHT HER.

It Required but Three Torpedoes to Send the Big Cruiser to the Bottom, and Then the Entire Insurgent Force at Desterro Surrendered.

MONTEVIDEO, April 18.—The officials of the Brazilian legation in this city have received a dispatch saying that the rebel warship Aquidaban, formerly the flagship of Admiral de Mello, has been sunk off the island of Santa Catharina. It was previously announced that the government fleet sent south by President Peixoto had captured the Aquidaban in a disabled and abandoned condition.

According to the dispatches made public by the Brazilian legation, there was an engagement off Santa Catharina, and the Aquidaban was sunk by an attack upon the part of several of the Brazilian torpedo boats.

The Aquidaban was built of steel, was sheathed with wood and metal and possessed all modern improvements in construction and equipment.

She was a conspicuous figure among the foreign warships anchored in the North river during the great naval parade at New York in October, 1892.

The Aquidaban was flagship, though the Brazil commander was not aboard at the outbreak of the rebellion.

LONDON, April 18.—The Times this morning publishes a dispatch from Montevideo, stating that Admiral de Mello and what is left of the crews manning his squadron, 1,200 men all told, yielded themselves up to the Argentine authorities yesterday. The only condition that they imposed was that they should receive asylum as political refugees. Officers of the fleet state that a lack of ammunition and an exceedingly short coal supply compelled the adoption of this course.

The correspondent adds that there is no definite news regarding General Saraiva, one of the rebel commanders, but a report is current that he is marching to Rio Grande.

Three Torpedoes Did the Work.

RIO JANEIRO, April 18.—Official dispatches received here from Desterro, where the rebels set up their provisional government, assert that Admiral de Mello's flagship, the Aquidaban, was sunk at daybreak by one of President Peixoto's torpedo boats, the Gustavo Sampaio, formerly called, the Aurora. The Sampaio accomplished this result with three Whitehead torpedoes.

President Peixoto's fleet made a concerted attack upon Desterro, and the insurgent forces there at first offered a stout resistance with their land batteries and the guns of the Aquidaban, but after the Sampaio had sunk the Aquidaban to the bottom they gave up the fight and surrendered to the government forces.

Immediately after Admiral de Mello's request for protection to the squadron he has taken into Buenos Ayres harbor, this would be regarded with disfavor by Brazil, as the naval insurgents have been formally declared to be pirates.

HENRY S. IVES DEAD.

He Was Known as "The Napoleon of Finance."

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 18.—Henry S. Ives, "The Napoleon of Finance," died here. Mr. Ives reached Asheville about two months ago for Florida in an almost dying condition and has hardly left his bed since. He leased a splendid residence in the suburbs and lived quietly with his wife and a few servants. The cause of death was consumption.

H. S. Ives began business with nothing in 1886 and failed in 1887 for $20,000,000. He was then a week clerk's stool to a railroad president's chair is less than five years. He was little more than 30 years old when he first startled Wall street by his daring operations in Richmond Terminal, Hilton and Dayton, by which he ultimately obtained control of the road. Having got the C., H. and D. in his grip, he manipulated the stock to suit himself. He talked millions as if they were common talked dimes. He next turned his attention to the Baltimore and Ohio and then to Richmond Terminal and Richmond and Danville.

For months he was the bright, particular financial star, worrying men who were trying to be men in their dealings. The first was Henry S. Ives & Co. when it went under. He was indicted, and a lot of civil suits were filed against him. On the civil suit he has been for $25,000 bail and was confined in Ludlow Street jail for several months. In the end the civil suits were settled, and he escaped punishment on the criminal charges.

He was a lavish spender of money and gave princely entertainments in his home in Brooklyn and on his steam yacht Tillie. In 1886 he was married to Miss Helen Gertrude Sears, the daughter of Roland Sears.

Egged a Preacher In Church.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., April 18.—The Rev. Samuel Rothermel of Monument City has sworn out warrants for the arrest of nine young men whom he alleges disturbed his meetings. He has a temperance church, and it seems that some of the people do not like him. Sunday evening he was conducting a meeting when a noisy crowd appeared and began raising a disturbance. The preacher called them down, and in return he received a big volley of rotten eggs that broke and splashed all over him and several other persons.

Yale Students Arrested.

NEW HAVEN, April 18.—Harry Durant, now president of the State Baseball league, was arrested for aiding and abetting 4 prize fights which was attended by a number of Yale students on Feb. 17 in this city. Several of the students who were there were bound over to the superior court, among them being Sanford, Yale's well known athlete.

No Bee In Depew's Bonnet.

NIAGARA FALLS, April 18.—While Chauncey M. Depew and his party were in this city Mr. Depew was interviewed in regard to his presidential aspirations. "That was a St. Louis joke," said he. "Do you see anything in that?" at the same time taking off his hat and showing the lining to prove no presidential bee lurked there.

Beyond Description

The Misery Before Taking AND The Happiness After Taking HOOD'S.

Mr. E. M. Bishop
Hammonton, N. J.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Dear Sirs: I have been in poor health for 20 or 25 years, and have been taking doctors' medicine or less of the time, for I did not get much relief. My blood was in a bad shape and my system was all run down. I thought I must die, but noticing several testimonials in the papers in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla I bought three bottles and found that it did me so much good that I continued taking it. I was induced to try it on account of my wife's having a headache most all the time. In fact I cannot say enough in favor of it. After using a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla I found it was doing me much good and now I cannot praise the medicine too much for what it has done for me. I have used about 9 bottles of it and am satisfied with many ailments, including kidney trouble, and kidney stone taking a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla I passed the stone and in fact I think Hood's Sarsaparilla saved my life. A YANKEE IN GRAY.

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS "M. QUAD."

COPYRIGHTED 1894 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

"Why, to Kenton, of course. I believe you both knew him? I had no idea that he could be induced to enlist, and I am surprised that he did not desert to his friends before the battle opened."

"Mr. Kenton believed it his duty as a citizen of Virginia to take up arms in her cause," replied the mother.

"And instead of deserting he seems to have led your company to victory," quietly added Marian.

"He was simply in the rear as we faced about and was carried along with the rush," explained the captain. "Nevertheless he is a brave man, and I hope he is in earnest."

"Why shouldn't he be?" asked the girl.

"Blood will tell' is an old saying. I shan't be surprised to wake up some morning and find that he has deserted to the enemy."

"You do Mr. Kenton gross injustice!" exclaimed Marian as her color came and went, and her eyes looked brighter than he had ever seen them before. "I have seen nothing in him to lead me to believe that he would countenance anything dishonorable, and brave men are never reared as deserters."

If the captain had planned to make her betray her true feelings toward Royal Kenton, he had succeeded. Her looks and demeanor, added to the words she uttered with such spirit, satisfied him that his own cause, unless something unforeseen should arise, was hopeless. While he was a man of hot temper he had a great self control, and when he left the house neither mother nor daughter suspected his bitterness of feeling.

"It's no use to deceive myself!" he muttered as he walked slowly down the street. "If the Yankee doesn't desert, and if he is not killed in battle or otherwise, he will return to wed her. With him removed my path is clear. It will be my fault if something doesn't happen to him very soon!"

Something did happen—two or three somethings—before the captain's return to camp. Ike Baxter thoroughly understood what Captain Wyle desired, and he was eager for an opportunity to carry out his wishes. One night when both were on guard about the camp he wheeled in his beat, drew up his musket and deliberately fired to kill. Kenton was hardly 20 feet distant, face turned away and completely at his mercy. The beat fell limply between his arm and side and sped across the camp and killed a poor sergeant as he lay sleeping on his bed. The would be assassin pleaded accident, and it was natural to believe that it was such. Kenton was one of the first to express him, and not the slightest suspicion of the soldier's murderous intentions found lodgment in his mind.

Another incident, and one with far more pleasant surroundings, occurred the very next day. A message came to the commanding officer of the guards from Stonewall Jackson to send Private Kenton to his headquarters. The general looked at the young man before him for half a minute before saying:

"You headed the detachment which captured the gun in a hand to hand fight. You did nobly. Who is captain of your company?"

"Captain Wyle, sir."

"Ah, yes. Captain Truesdale was wounded and crippled for life. I see. And you are still a private?"

"Yes, sir."

"H'm! I ought to have remembered you, but I have been busy—very busy. Is your captain with his company?"

"No, sir. He left several days ago on furlough."

"H'm! And haven't you asked for a furlough too?"

"I have not."

"Well, we'll see about it later on. Tomorrow I shall be away. The day after at 10 o'clock in the morning I wish you to report here to me. Say! I will write an order to that effect, which will be your authority for leaving camp. Show it to your commanding officer."

And when Kenton returned to the guards and related his interview and exhibited the order all congratulated him—all except Ike Baxter. That individual felt himself greatly wronged, and his mutterings took the form of words:

"Strat that durned Yankee, but he's just gwine to hoss this hull army if the captain doan' dun hurry back to camp!"

CHAPTER VIII.

As with the Federals at Arlington, so with the Confederates on the fields and meadows to the south. Battles were fought on the eastern coast and on the western rivers—battles which made history were fought in North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri, but the Army of Virginia remained in its camps. Its leaders realized from the beginning that Virginia would be the real battleground of the war, and that the Army of Virginia would be called upon to render heroic defense. Every hour gained was an advantage, every day a gain of men and material and experience.

When Royal Kenton reported to General Jackson as per order, he was asked if he knew the country to the north of the Confederate outposts. He was forced to reply that he was entirely ignorant of it.

"This is a disadvantage, but one you can overcome," said the general. "We are in need of a few more brave men at the front to act as scouts. Would you have any objection to serving in that capacity?"

"I should not like to act the part of a spy," stammered Kenton in much confusion.

"Nor would I ask you to. A spy is generally a brave man and often moved solely by patriotism, but few of them are soldiers, and the profession is under a stigma. As a scout you go in your uniform, secure such information as you can in a legitimate way, and if captured you are treated as a prisoner of war. You can take a comrade with you or go alone, as you elect. Do not be afraid to state your objections if you have any."

"I will go and go alone," replied Kenton after a moment's thought.

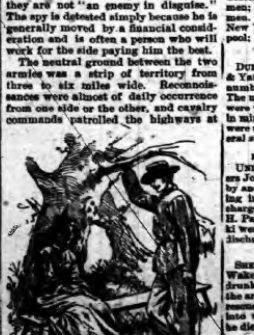
"Very well, I am glad to hear it. You can now return to your company, and during the day I will send the proper order to your captain. Upon your return report to me direct, and I have no doubt you will bring information of value."

That afternoon Captain Wyle returned to his company, and when he received the order detailing Private Kenton for temporary duty at headquarters and learning the object he was almost tempted to congratulate him. As between captain and private or between man and man, he would have done so with great heartiness, but as a rival lover he could not. When Ike Baxter had related the story of the attempted "removal," as he called it, he expected words of praise, but they were not uttered. On the contrary, his action was severely criticised, and he went away to sulk and growl.

"Understand me," said the captain as Ike betrayed his disappointment by word and look, "I don't want murder or assassination. I hate him because he's a Yankee and because he is an enemy among us. I want to drive him out—force him to desert to his own side. I want the news to go back home that he has deserted and is a traitor to us. Bring that about, and I'll do anything I can to reward you, but don't shoot him down in cold blood. Now that General Jackson has taken him under his wing we must be more careful than ever."

Armed with a pass that would take him through the Confederate lines and pickets, Royal Kenton made his way toward Washington. When he reached the last outpost, the officer in command gave him the lay of the country along that front, the position of the Federal videttes so far as known, and named many farmers who sympathized with the Confederate cause and would give him shelter. It was about 10 o'clock in the forenoon when Kenton left the last post behind him and disappeared in the woods. He knew in a general way what was required of him. It was, first, to push as near the Federal lines as possible, and then to estimate the strength of camps or marching columns, locate forts and earthworks and seek to discover the strength of positions. Spies go in disguise and often remain in a camp for days. Scouts are saved from the halter when caught only because they are not "an enemy in disguise." The spy is detested simply because he is generally moved by a financial consideration and is often a person who will work for the side paying him the best.

The neutral ground between the two armies was a strip of territory from three to six miles wide. Reconnoissances were almost of daily occurrence from one side or the other, and cavalry commands patrolled the highways at frequent intervals.



The first foot he saw was that of Marian Percy.

The sentiment of the Virginia farmers was overwhelmingly Confederate, and whenever Kenton identified himself he was given all information at hand. During the first two days he had several narrow escapes from Federal cavalry patrols, and on the third day he was treated to a double surprise. The farmer with whom he had remained over night had recommended him to one much nearer the Federal outposts to secure additional information. He reached this place about 11 o'clock in the forenoon, and the first face he saw was that of Marian Percy, the next that of her mother. The meeting appeared to be as pleasant to all as it was unexpected. The Percys had arrived only two days before in hopes to remove the farmer's wife, who was a relative, to their home in the valley. The woman was ill—too ill to stand the journey, and they would wait for a few days in hopes of an improvement. The house had been visited daily by parties from both armies, but thus far no violence had been offered nor had anything been taken from the farm.

A ROYAL WEDDING.

Queen Victoria Goes to See Two of Her Grandchildren Married.

COBURG, April 18.—The city is en fete for the wedding of Princess Victoria Melita to Ernest Louis, grand duke of Hesse. The principal streets of the city are spanned by many triumphal arches, interspersed with Venetian masts. The Schloss plats and the wide thoroughfares in the vicinity of the ducal palace are particularly noticeable for the artistic taste of their decorations. At an early hour in the morning enormous crowds began to pour into the city, drawn by curiosity to witness the royal and aristocratic guests who have been bidden to witness the nuptial ceremony.

This wedding is the first great state function that has occurred since the reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha took over the government of the duchies, and there is a lavish display of princely hospitality.

The bridegroom-elect is the only surviving son of the late Grand Duke Ludwig IV by his wife, Princess Alice of Great Britain, who died Dec. 14, 1878. He was born at Darmstadt on Nov. 25, 1868, and succeeded his father in 1892.

Princess Victoria is the second daughter of the Duke of Edinburgh, second son of Queen Victoria, who, by the death of his uncle, Duke Ernest II, became a ruling prince. She was born on the island of Malta on Nov. 25, 1876. Thus it is that both the princess and the grand duke are grandchildren of the queen of Great Britain, who arrived here yesterday from Florence. Her majesty was received in great state by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and his wife, the Duchess Marie, who is the only sister of the czar. There were also present at her reception all the royal personages who had already arrived. When Victoria was driven to the ducal palace, where a grand military reception was held. As her majesty passed through the streets the church bells throughout the city were pealed in her honor. She was received in the throne room of the palace by all the members of the imperial and royal families present. Special preparations were made at the palace for the reception of the queen. A handsome suit of rooms on the second floor of the palace was set aside for her use. The sitting room of her apartments is splendidly decorated and hung with tapestries.

The Prince of Wales arrived later. He had requested that no formal reception be tendered him, and consequently he drove to the palace in little or no state. He attended a theater, which was filled to the doors as soon as it became noised about that the prince was present.

SHOT A LAWYER.

Exciting Scene In Ex-President Harrison's Law Office.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 18.—Addison G. Harris, a lawyer, and William H. Bruning of New York, formerly of Madison, were shot in the law offices of Miller, Winter & Elam by William M. Copeland of Madison, a brother-in-law of Bruning. Neither victim is fatally hurt. Copeland is under arrest, charged with attempted murder. The shooting occurred in the room formerly occupied by ex-President Harrison, who was a member of the firm of lawyers occupying the apartments.

Ex-Attorney General W. H. H. Miller and his partner, Ferdinand Winter, prevented further shooting by a desperate personal encounter with the man who used the pistol. Mr. Harris was not an intended victim, but was hit in the indiscriminate firing by Copeland, who was trying to kill Bruning.

A family quarrel is responsible for the differences leading up to the shooting, and all of the persons concerned had gone to the law office for consultation with the attorneys.

Vanguard of the Coal Strikers.

DUBOIS, Pa., April 18.—The Bell, Lewis & Yates company's miners employed here, numbering about 1,000, have quit work. The men came to the conclusion that they were working against their own interests in mining more coal to be used while they were striking for higher wages in the general strike to begin about April 21.

Labor Leaders Held For Murder.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 18.—Labor Leaders John McGoy, L. R. Davis, Daniel Darby and Frank Simkoski were given a hearing in court on a writ of habeas corpus, charged with the murder of Engineer J. H. Patterson. Davis, McGoy and Simkoski were held without bail, and Darby was discharged.

Filled Full of Strychnine.

SHELBYVILLE, Ky., April 18.—Douglass Wakefield, a colored farmhand, who has drunk, shot Mr. Thomas, his employer, in the arm. Thomas' son came to his father's rescue and emptied two loads of birdshot into the negro, from the effects of which he died.

Fast Jones Will Lose His Wager.

DANBURY, Conn., April 18.—Paul Jones, who several weeks ago started out of Danbury on a wager of making a circuit of the globe on a $5,000 wager, is in this city, and it is probable that Jones will not continue his trip. Jones is in bad straits financially.

Oldest Inhabitant Dead.

REED'S RULES ADOPTED

House Will Not Be Bothered by Lack of a Quorum Now.

AN OVATION FOR THE EX-SPEAKER.

Senators Arrange a Programme For Continuing the Tariff Debate—Mr. Smith of New Jersey Attacks the Income Tax. Hitt Scores the Administration.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The house by an overwhelming vote decided to adopt a quorum counting rule which for all practical purposes is the same as that which ex-Speaker Reed of Maine inaugurated during the fifty-first congress and which won for him a worldwide reputation.

Neither undue excitement nor tumultuous scenes marked the crushing of the old legislative barrier. Mr. Reed and the Republicans generally were in a delightful humor over the victory they had achieved. Those who expected that Mr. Reed would taunt or gibe his political adversaries with their alleged inconsistency were disappointed.

Only 15 minutes on a side were allowed for debate, and Mr. Reed, instead of consuming that with an arraignment of the Democrats, good naturedly distributed most of it to Democrats who desired to oppose the new rule, and when his time was exhausted he jocularly asked for more time to dole out among his friends on the other side. Messrs. Bynum, Cummings, Wheeler, Kilgore and Russell being the Democrats who were thus given an opportunity to protest against the adoption of the rule.

When the vote was taken, 67 Democrats voted against it, but it secured every Republican vote and was carried by a vote of 213 to 47. The Populists did not vote on the proposition.

The adoption of this rule, taken in conjunction with the decision to enforce the old law of 1856 docking salaries of members absent, save on account of sickness, will, it is thought, put an end forever to parliamentary obstruction.

The enforcement of that law will keep members at their post of duty, and the rule will prevent them from refusing to participate in legislation when present.

Cheers For Reed.

Upon the announcement of the vote the Republicans cheered. The galleries joined in the demonstration. While there was more or less applause on the Democratic side, it was not of the character which marked the applause on the Republican side.

Mr. Reed was immediately surrounded by his party friends and given an ovation. Some of the Democrats got up a counter demonstration over Mr. Catchings. A large bunch of La Frances roses was carried up the aisle and placed on Mr. Reed's desk. Another Republican outburst followed. The flowers were sent with the compliments of Representative Apsley of Massachusetts.

In order to force a recording of members as present, but not voting, in accordance with the provisions of the new rule, the Republicans declined to vote on the first roll call.

At its conclusion Mr. Livingston made the point of order that under the new rule there was no second call of the house, but as new members not the list of names reported by the tellers as present but not voting should be called. The speaker, however, stated that the new rule did not contemplate any interference with roll call, and that the roll call, under rules of the house, included a second call of those who had failed to respond on the first call. He overruled the point of order, and the roll call proceeded. Finding that a quorum had voted on the first call, the Republicans changed their tactics on the second call and answered to their names.

The speaker's table was then cleared. Various executive documents which had accumulated there were laid before the house, and several unimportant conference reports were agreed to. Saturday, April 21, after 2 o'clock, was by special order set aside for the delivery of eulogies to the memory of the late Senator Gibson of Louisiana.

A regular gorge of committee reports, blocked by the filibustering of the past week, was presented under the call of the committees. The house then, on motion of Mr. McCreary, went into committee of the whole to consider the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill.

Mr. Hitt made a strong speech, arraigning the foreign policy of the administration, in the course of which he severely scored the president for appointing Van Alen as minister to Italy as a reward for his $50,000 political contribution.

Senator Hunton to Continue.

The early hours of the senate session were devoted to a skillful parliamentary struggle between those for and against the tariff bill. It resulted in an agreement to continue the arrangement of last week for debate until Tuesday of next week, when the bill will be taken up and rediscussed by paragraphs.

Very little change has been effected by this agreement, as speeches may be made by senators after the first paragraph is read until they are ready to have it acted upon. The Republicans were anxious to make certain that nothing by any ambiguous wording might be construed as limiting the length of speeches or the debate on any paragraph or amendment. Senator Hill would not consent to the agreement until it was made plain that he would not be deprived of making a motion to consider the free list first. Senator Harris, in charge of the bill, believing that a majority of the senate would not consent to turn the bill around, did not object to this understanding.

Two speeches were made on the tariff bill, Senator McLaurin of Mississippi favoring the bill, and especially the income tax, and Senator Smith of New Jersey making a vigorous onslaught upon the income tax features. Both are Democrats, and each represented his particular section of the country in his remarks and showed the different views of the party in the senate on the pending bill. It was expected that the Gibson treaty would be considered, but in an early executive session the senate postponed the consideration until May 2.

Senator Smith's Speech.

Mr. Smith said in opening:

I oppose the income tax for reasons which I shall endeavor to make plain to the senators who are here or may by chance arrive during the next hour. I oppose it and shall do everything in my power to defeat it, first, because it is unnecessary; second, because it is unjust; third, because it is unequal; fourth, because it is unpopular; fifth, because it is undemocratic; sixth, because it is un-American; seventh, in his remarks and showed the different views of the party in the senate on the pending bill. It was expected that the Gibson treaty would be considered, but in an early executive session the senate postponed the consideration until May 2.

I oppose it and shall do everything in my power to defeat it, first, because it is unnecessary; second, because it is unjust; third, because it is unequal; fourth, because it is unpopular; fifth, because it is undemocratic; sixth, because it is un-American; seventh, because it is unwise, and finally, on general principles, because it is unworthy of an intelligent government supposed to represent a free and enlightened people.

Mr. Smith stated his opposition to the income tax at length under each one of these heads and closed by saying:

The Democratic party is under a distinct obligation to confer the boon of tariff reform upon the American people. We cannot hope to overcome the present dissensions and fulfill this obligation unless we at least show all attempts to create discord within the ranks and strive earnestly for party harmony.

With unity of action we shall succeed. Without it we must fail. We cannot perform our duty as Democrats by maligning each other or by making wanton attacks upon a Democratic administration.

Our duty is plain. The country demands and is entitled to prompt and decisive action. The time is ripe for quick and permanent recovery from business depression. Industry and prosperity wait upon the acts of this body. Now, if ever, we should meet the situation with candor and courage and ask ourselves whether this bill, as it stands today, can be passed by Democratic votes. It is a time for plain speaking, and I do not hesitate to express my own conviction that this is impossible.

We cannot enact a Democratic measure until we return to Democratic principles. Eliminate the socialistic income tax, reform the schedules to conform with the doctrine of a tariff for revenue, grant to our industries sufficient protection to guarantee their maintenance on the American standard, and before this month shall have ended tariff reform will cease to be the will o' the wisp it is today and will be enacted by the united votes of 44 Democratic senators into the law of the land. Refuse to do that—then God save the Democratic party!

An Ovation to Mr. Reed.

WASHINGTON, April 18. — Ex-Speaker Reed was the recipient of a very extraordinary and unusual compliment as he entered the National theater last night, when the Dunlap company was producing Oscar Wilde's play, "A Woman of No Importance." As he walked down the center aisle during the first act he was recognized. Some one started to applaud. In an instant the demonstration spread in all directions, and before he had reached his seat the whole house was wildly joining in the ovation. It was a most unusual occurrence in a Washington theater. Mr. Reed bowed his acknowledgments.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The president sent the following nominations of postmasters to the senate today:

New Jersey—George D. Wetherill, Burlington; John S. Rinter, Newton.

Pennsylvania—Thomas M. Hatton, Bristol; Martin J. Ryan, Susquehanna.

Virginia—Hugh R. Smith, Petersburg.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

New Jersey—Plainville, C. W. Wyckoff.

New York—East Guilford, George Hyatt; Moscow, Jane Dubois; North Fenton, Mrs. Belle Miller.

Pennsylvania—Milltown, S. L. Dicks; Parkerford, J. F. Keller.

GREAT NORTHERN TIED UP.

Wheels Running on Only Two Hundred of Five Thousand Miles.

ST. PAUL, April 18.—The fifth day since the American Railway union declared a strike on the Great Northern finds the strike extended over all the lines of the company except a short distance from this city, and of the 4,500 miles of the system not to exceed 200 miles are in operation today. This has been accomplished thus far without any threatening of bloodshed, and the men say there is no danger of any trouble.

They are determined, however, and will allow no trains to be made up or to be moved. The last part of the system to be affected by the strike is eastern Minnesota.

The men on this branch line are restless and want to strike. The company officials think it likely that they will not run today because of trouble along the line, and in that way this branch is affected.

There is an unconfirmed report that the company has made overtures to the men looking to a confession for settling the trouble, but the officials deny such a report.

A Helena (Mon.) special says: A telegram from General Manager Case of the Great Northern asks the men to send representatives to St. Paul, with full authority to settle matters under the laws of the American Railway union. The men replied that Eugene Debs and George Howard, now in St. Paul, are authorized to act for the union.

At St. Cloud the excitement is growing rapidly, as also is the American union membership. Contrary to expectation, a train from the west was cut by the strikers, but under protection the brakesmen promptly recoupled the cars, and the train went through to the yards without further disturbance.

This experience, however, made the strikers very bitter, and they decided not to let it occur again, so that when the Willmar train arrived from St. Paul the strikers made no attempt to touch it at the depot, but when it got to the switch which was turned, and the train ran on a siding already occupied by some box cars, narrowly escaping a collision. The strikers then broke the trains in and scattered the cars around the yards, the passengers being returned to the station. The mail and baggage cars were untouched.

The dispatchers in the office here have joined the strike. It is reported that the engineers, firemen and conductors will also go out. Another report and a government protection will be placed on the night train. There is some little talk of the possibility of bloodshed.

EDSALL'S

COXEY MEANS BUSINESS

Will Stay In Washington Until Congress Promises Work.

A PEACEFUL DAY ON CAMALBOATS.

The New England Contingent of the Commonweal Arranges to Leave Boston on Saturday—Recruits From New York State Will Go by Train.

GREEN SPRING, W. Va., April 18.—One long day of floating through the beautifully picturesque mountains of northeastern Maryland was all that the Coxey navy had to chronicle in its logbook. The two barges secured by Coxey for the canal trip from Cumberland to Williamsport moved out fully loaded from the head of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal basin at noon, with Coxey in command of the first, and Carl Browne commanding the other from the forward deck.

It was like a floating picture of Victor Hugo, the ragged forms swarming like rats over every foot of the craft, and rough, wild looking faces, framed in shaggy hair, peering through the cabin windows like the victims of the old French galleys. But they were self appointed martyrs and were now, to use their own term, "playing in luck," for they walked the most of the day, an hour carried them nearer the goal of their hopes—their "White City"—where the government printed money. Like full grown, and where they expected to help in making the printing presses revolve more rapidly.

Crusaders Enjoy Siestas.

The trip was uneventful. On the West Virginia side of the river the blue, hazy ridges of the Alleghanis loomed up, through which fainter ridges were seen beyond, and close at hand the north bank of the canal rose in an almost continuous rocky bluff, sometimes 150 feet high and clothed with pines, through which the warm sun filtered down on the weary floaters, taking sensible effect in the form of their weeks of battling with winter in crossing the mountains. Pennsylvania had been their Valley Forge; Maryland was proving their Monmouth, while near land of promise in the District of Columbia just beyond.

The newspaper men followed the commonwealers in a boat of their own, passing the army when the latter hauled up 16 miles east of Cumberland for dinner, which was cooked on the bank, and being repassed late at night, when the press boat laid to at this place to transmit dispatches across the Potomac. At all locks and settlements Browne stopped to distribute his pamphlets, but there was no meeting of importance, and the chief meeting of the trip is expected at Hancock on Thursday night.

Detectives In Coxey's Crew.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—While the police authorities of Washington are not making known their plans in connection with the coming active preparations to receive General Coxey and his commonweal army. Two members of the detective branch of the police—officers Aulain and Boyd—each sent to join the army at Cumberland and are doubtless sailing the canal enlisted under the banner of "Death in Defense of Bonds." Their business will be to make the acquaintance of any criminals who may be enlisted in the ranks and to learn the true inwardness of the movement if it conceals any sinister designs.

Colonel Ecstone, the local agent of the commonweal, visited police headquarters to labor with Inspector Hollinberger and convince him that the purposes of the movement are beneficent. He represented that the crusaders are all law abiding men and declared that they would remain in town but a few hours. The inspector declined to take stock in reincarnation and denounced the army.

Kelly's Army Drenched.

OMAHA, April 18.—Did Probabilities did what neither militia nor courts could do—scattered Kelly's army. Bare boughs offered but little shelter from a Missouri valley rainstorm. During the entire day the men clung to their camp in the timber near Park's mill. Rain fell in torrents for a time. The militia occupied the only buildings in the vicinity and would not allow a Kellyite to enter. As a result the entire command was soon drenched. When the shower ended, the sun came out warm and bright, and the army gathered again, mud besmeared and bedraggled, and something of a feeling of desperation developed. General Kelly was in Omaha, where he had been all day, and his return to the camp at nightfall was anxiously awaited by the men.

When Kelly went back to camp, he took $100 in cash and three wagons loaded with provisions that were provided by the citizens of Omaha. Shortly after Kelly's return the rain began falling steadily.

The Montana Commune Delayed.

BUTTE, Mon., April 18.—The Butte contingent of the commonweal army, which styles itself the Montana commune, did not start for Washington as per arrangements, Marshal Hogan concluding to wait for the Coeur d'Alene division, which numbers 500 and which will reach Butte today or tomorrow. The Montana commune numbers over 500 and is fairly well equipped and provisioned. Committees from local labor organizations raised by subscription about $600 in cash and $600 worth of flour and bacon. The commune intended to take the northern route, but the Great Northern strike has caused them to abandon that idea, and they will now travel via the Union Pacific.

Twenty Carloads Start East.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—The second regiment of the industrial army started east in 20 Southern Pacific box cars for Mojave, where they are to be turned over to the Atlantic and Pacific. The total cost of the transportation per car is $100. The army is largely made up of mechanics, and care has been taken in selecting the quota of 250, the police taking paing that the vicious and professionally unemployed element was eliminated as far as possible. The city pays the expenses to the east upon representations that the men were attracted here by false hopes of obtaining work and have no means of returning home.

The New England Army.

BOSTON, April 18.—General M. I. Swift and Commander-in-chief Fitzgerald of the New England army of the commonweal have not decided on the route the army will take, but Swift says it will probably go by way of Fall River. The start will be made on Saturday at 1 o'clock from Faneuil hall.

Coxey Talks of His Plans.

BALTIMORE, April 18.—A special to The Sun from on board the canalboat near Green Spring, W. Va., has an interview with General Coxey outlining his intentions at Washington. The purport is that the army will not disband, but will permanently encamp at Washington and be maintained there until congress either passes the legislation he desires or adjourns. He is making ample preparations to stay all summer if necessary.

Buffalo Will Send a Company.

BUFFALO, April 18.—Buffalo will have a delegation at Washington when Coxey's commonweal gets there, but it will not be made up of men who have walked. There is a movement on foot here to organize a company of those who are in sympathy with the avowed objects of Coxey's army. These men will be joined by a company from Rochester and will go to the capital by train in time to join in the protest against interest bearing bonds and the other things Coxey considers obnoxious. A man is in Rochester now recruiting the company there. The first meeting of the promoters was held last night. A number of local Knights of Labor are at the head of the movement, and they say there will be a big delegation from the two cities.

A Regiment of Tailors.

BALTIMORE, April 18.—The Bohemian commune of the army of the commonweal has been organized here. Sixty-four residents of northeast Baltimore joined, each one paying 10 cents for the privilege. Joseph Runge was the organizer and stated that the army would leave for Washington on Sunday next. The men are mostly tailors and will be called upon to pay their own expenses.

Connecticut Commonwealers Waiting.

HARTFORD, April 18.—John J. Joyce and John E. Reilly have received word from J. J. Bennis of Boston, one of the leaders of the New England industrial column, to raise a contingent in this city, and they expect to have a company of 50 men to join the column when it passes through Hartford. Another addition will be made in New Britain.

Anderson Will Be Confirmed.

TRENTON, April 18.—Nothing was done in the Anderson matter, but his confirmation as supervisor of the state prison is a foregone conclusion. The Mercer county Republicans are now trying to induce Senator Skirm to withdraw his opposition. Should they succeed, the confirmation will be unanimous, and it looks as if this would be the result.

WATSON FOUND GUILTY.

ON THE CHARGE OF ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING.

The Jury Only Deliberated a Few Minutes.—Watson Sentenced to Pay a Fine of $100 and be Committed to the County Jail for Sixty Days.

Michael F. Watson was tried yesterday afternoon on the charge of selling liquor without a license. Watson keeps a grocery store on Grant avenue and in a rear room is where the alleged selling took place.

Corporation Counsel Marsh conducted the prosecution and Lawyer Hatfield appeared for the defense.

Mr. John M. Fruden of Elizabeth, revenue collector for the government for this district, was the first witness for the prosecution. He testified that Mr. Watson paid revenue taxes for selling liquor retail at a place on Grant avenue and he produced his books to show that the assessment had paid the tax in June, 1893, for one year, from July 1, 1893, to July 1, 1894.

Laurence Green was sworn and stated that he had bought, on March 10th, last, a pint of whisky at Watson's. He was afterwards arrested and locked up for being disorderly. The whiskey was produced in court as it had been taken from him by Chief Grant, at the lockup.

The next witness was Chief Grant, and his testimony was to the effect that he had seen Green come out of Watson's place and had followed him down Front street.

Mr. Marsh then rested his case, and the defense was taken up.

The first witness called was Mr. Watson in his own defense. He testified that Green had come into his place on March 10th, and had asked for a drink of whiskey to which Watson said he replied:

"No Sir; I have no whiskey in the house and even if I had I would not sell any to you in the condition you're in."

Watson said he then told Green to get out; that he didn't want him in his store. Inside of ten minutes, however, Green sat down by the stove and began to sing, at the same time pounding on the stove. After awhile he went out.

Watson said he had no liquor in his store, but under a sharp cross examination by Mr. Marsh he admitted that he had a keg of Jamaica rum in the cellar, for his own use and also a barrel of home brewed ale. The latter he said he made himself and kept to treat "the boys." Watson said that he had no bottles in his place, but he finally contradicted himself and admitted that he did have a few bottles on a shelf.

Watson's story about the night that Green came in his store was corroborated by "Mike" Walsh, Charles Elliot, John James, and James Canary, who were in the store at the time. They all remembered having heard Green ask for liquor and also Watson's answer, but none of them could tell what Green was singing or whether he sang bass, tenor or alto. Their memory was only good on the one point and that was what Watson said.

The jury, after only a few minutes deliberation brought in a verdict of guilty.

Judge Coddington did not sentence Watson until this morning and then he sentenced him to pay a fine of $100 and spend 60 days in jail.

Mr. Hatfield, Mr. Watson's counsel, gave notice of appeal, and filed the appeal bond. This will carry the case to Elizabeth.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Paul, formerly of this city, but now of Philadelphia, is in town on a visit.

Miss N. Barrett of Brooklyn is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kaerth of East Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman of West Seventh street have returned from California.

Mrs. Rowland Cox of West Seventh street has recovered from an illness of three weeks.

Dr. F. C. Bird has leased the house No. 518 Watchung avenue, and has moved his office to that number.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Richards of Westervelt avenue were made happy last night by the birth of a baby girl.

Messrs. Sylvester Kiernan and F. J. Newburger of Elizabeth were guests of friends on Columbia avenue, North Plainfield, Tuesday.

Mr. R. W. Rice of North Plainfield yesterday shipped a car load of furniture, wagons and horses to Rice Bros' Foster Place Stock Farm, Near Wilkesbarre, Pa., Mr. Rice and family will spend the Summer.

Miss Alice B. Sonnenberg, district secretary of the State Union of Christian Endeavor Societies, will give an address to the Y. P. S. of C. E., of the German Reformed church, on Friday evening, at eight o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in Christian Endeavor work.

Mr. J. C. Trainor, a member of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum, is to be married to-night, at Middletown, N. Y., to a charming belle of that place. Mr. Matthew Cashin of this city will act as best man. While a reception is being held at Middletown this evening, the members will be wishing the happy groom much joy and enjoying a supper at the C. Y. M. L. club at his expense. This is a custom of members who get married out of town, and was also done by Mr McNamee when he joined the army of benedicts.

—Neaf Apear and Charles Smith expect to take part in a sweepstake "shoot" at Elizabeth to-day.

AN EXCITING CHASE.

CONSTABLE VANDERHOFF LOSES A PRISONER AFTER A LONG RUN.

Charles Browning, Arrested on Complaint of a New Brunswick Woman, Escapes from Custody.

Yesterday afternoon a young woman living in New Brunswick swore out a warrant before Justice Nash against Charles Browning, of North Plainfield. The charge was seduction, under promise of marriage. The complainant formerly was in the employ of a family in Plainfield.

The warrant was given to Constable Vanderhoff to serve. He served it upon Browning but his man escaped from him.

About six o'clock the constable went to Mr. T. B. Fenton's, on Rockview avenue, where Browning was employed as coachman. Browning was eating his supper. He was called out and the paper served. He then got into the wagon with the constable and drove around town endeavoring to get bail. Being unsuccessful in this he asked Vanderhoff to take him back to Mr. Fenton's to see if he would become bondsman for him.

Browning was allowed to go into the house while Mr. Fenton stood talking to the constable. Shortly when Vanderhoff went in the house after his prisoner he was gone. Mr. Fenton assisted the officer to search for Browning in the cellar and in the barn but he could not be found.

After searching for an hour he was given up and Constable Vanderhoff returned to his store and over to the depot to see if Browning boarded any trains. About two o'clock this morning he and Marshal Wilson returned to Mr. Fenton's and hid near the barn. At daylight this morning the watchers were rewarded for their vigilence by hearing the stable door open, and in another instant the barn doors were thrown open and a horse attached to a buggy, in which were seated Browning and another employee of Mr. Fenton. The horse, as he left the barn was lashed into a run.

Upon being confronted by Vanderhoff and Wilson the driver pulled the horse so quickly to one side that the buggy was upset and broken and both men were thrown out. The horse stopped when the buggy went over.

Browning took to his heels and started on a run with Vanderhoff after him. Wilson and Vanderhoff each shot three times but not at the man. They thought to scare him.

Browning jumped into the brook, with Vanderhoff after him. Crossing the field he ran up Rockview terrace and through Myrtle avenue to Girard avenue and down through the field again to Grant avenue, and so on across to the ice house near the railroad, where Vanderhoff lost sight of him.

In the chase Vanderhoff lost part of his trousers in jumping over a wire fence. Vanderhoff was also handicapped in the race by a lame hip and leg.

NUPTIALS.

Worth—Brown.

Mr. George F. Brown and Miss Nettie D. Worth, daughter of the late Mr. Thomas Worth, were united in marriage at the bride's home on Grove street, at 7:30 o'clock last evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The affair was a very quiet one and only the members of the family were present. The bride and couple left early in the evening for a honeymoon in the South.

BREVITIES.

—Andrew Love, Jr., is arranging for a fishing expedition to Glenside on Friday night. A full list of the anglers has not yet been announced.

—Henry Wickham and George Demler have been granted licenses to keep hotels in North Plainfield.

—At the present term of the Somerset court the Supreme Court case of Aaron D. Thompson vs. Cyrus C. Morrow will be tried. Mr. C. A. Reed will represent Mr. Thompson.

—Yesterday afternoon Undertaker Casey shipped the body of Charles Miller, the young man who was fatally injured on the railroad, on Monday night, and who died later at the Hospital, to Newburgh, N. Y.

—Crescent Division, No. 15, U. R. K. of P. last evening assisted Unity Lodge in working the third degree. Crescent Division will also assist Perseverance Lodge in working the third degree on three members Friday night.

—Contractor M. Undal is pushing the work of grading the Hildreth property on Somerset street, and, weather permitting, he will have the new Coddington avenue completed within the next two weeks. Already there are several houses going up on the new thoroughfare.

Adams' Sentence Revoked.

Yesterday morning, the Court of Special Sessions, convened at Elizabeth.

William Adams of Fanwood who was sentenced for assaulting Mrs. English of this city, was serving a long term. His mother, who is dependent on him for support, is in destitute circumstances, and made application for his discharge. Adams promised reformation, and the Court, on account of his mother's distress, revoked the former sentence. Adams was recommitted for one day.

CORRESPONDENCE.

RELICS OF OLD TIMES.

Mr. Bullman's Theory of the Relics Found at Elizabeth.

The News of Saturday last told of the finding at Elizabeth of what was supposed to have been the bones of a mastodon. It has been decided that the relics were not bones, but coral.

The Journal of that place says that the question of whether the coral grew in the place where it was found interested Mr. Charles Bullman of Plainfield, who is a well-known mining engineer, and who is deeply interested in such matters. Mr. Bullman made a personal inspection of the place where the relics were found and directed some excavations about the spot. Mr. Bullman paid three visits to the excavation, and as the result of his researches has written the following letter to Mr. Glasby:

Mr. J. P. Glasby:

DEAR SIR:—In answer to your inquiry requesting my opinion upon the nature of certain substances found by your workmen while engaged in excavating a cellar on Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, and which were erroneously said to be part of the skeleton of a mastodon, I would state as follows:

With but three exceptions, the pieces found consist of coral. Among these some twenty in number, it was easy to identify a large specimen of the Meandrina or basin coral, and several varieties of the Madrepora, or branch coral.

Three pieces of bone were found, which are not, however, at all fossilized, and which are evidently beef bones.

As I understand that these bones were found at a higher level than the coral, within the area of a formerly existing cellar, it is more than probable that the coral was placed in the position found years before the bones.

In regard to the supposition that the coral grew in the place where found, there is not the slightest particle of evidence, nor can there be, for no fossils of the Rodists have ever yet be found in the Triassic shales of the Atlantic seaboard; the conditions under which the shales were deposited, namely, from fresh or brackish water, being distinctly unfavorable to their growth.

These corals in all probability came from the West Indies, but whether they came as ballast, or as curiosities to be given to Gov. Carteret, whose mansion formerly stood about one hundred feet both from where they were found, cannot be told.

It is, however, certain that they have lain in their present position over one hundred years. The slight excavations made under my supervision indicate that there formerly existed a small rivulet or wash from Elizabeth avenue to Elizabeth creek, and that this was filled in prior to the building in or about 1790 of the two houses, formerly occupying the site where they now are, now building. This filling in may have been done by Gov. Carteret in 1680 when he built his house, but of this there is no proof, and the question must rest a matter of conjecture. Very truly yours,

CHARLES BULLMAN.

The Boys' Club has Visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, Miss Tibetts, and Superintendent Ackert, of the New Brunswick Boys' Club, visited the Boys' Club in this city last night. They inspected with great interest the workings of the manual training department, there being nothing of the kind connected with the New Brunswick club. The superintendent reports a membership of 450 in his club, with an attendance of 75 every night.

"Tom, the Peeper."

"Tom, the Peeper," has again appeared in this city. Last evening, a stranger, evidently a tramp, was seen peering into windows of houses on Westervelt avenue. At one place the fellow was detected by a passer-by and summarily bounced from the premises. The man said he was trying to sell a load of dirt, but he was hurried away, just the same.

Snow Three Feet Deep on April 16.

On Monday last Mr. and Mrs. John H. French of this city, while on their way to Hackettstown, drove through snow fully three feet deep on Schooley's mountain. The road had not been "broken" and if Mr. French had not had a good team he wouldn't have gotten through without digging the road open

THE LEGISLATURE.

WHAT NEW JERSEY STATESMEN DID FOR THE PEOPLE YESTERDAY.

To Help Widows.—Care for State Property.—Reduce Court Expenses.—Increase Mayors' Powers.—Kill Diseased Cattle.—About the Referendum.

TO HELP THE WIDOW.

In the Senate at Trenton yesterday Senator Winton's bill amending the Real Estate act so that the wife and indirect heirs of a decedent might have the full benefit accruing from his possessions instead of any of his property going to the State by escheat was passed after a brief debate.

The weight of opinion among the Senators was that it was not fair when a man died without issue that his wife and heirs should only have her dower rights while the State on her death got the rest.

Senator Winton said the bill was for the benefit of a woman who lives in the wilds of the Palisades.

It seemed to Senator Voorhees that the widow ought to be helped because the State's rights by descent were fixed by the constitution and could not be altered, and the State was too good and too rich to rob a poor widow.

STATE CAPITAL SUPERINTENDENTS.

Senator Skirm introduced a bill providing that the custody of the State Capitol and grounds shall rest with the State Comptroller and State Treasurer, who shall employ a Superintendent at a salary of $2,000 and an assistant at $1,200.

The two places are to go to J. H. Bonnell of Newark and John Wright of Trenton.

REDUCING COURT EXPENSES.

Bills were passed repealing the law under which the Governor appoints three Police Justices for Newark and Jersey City; repealing the law creating three Police Courts in those cities, and creating two Police Courts in each city and giving the Mayor the power to appoint.

GIVING POWER TO MAYORS, ETC.

Two weeks ago a bill was put through giving the Mayors in first-class cities power to make certain appointments. It was discovered that by its provisions Mayor Haynes of Newark could appoint a Tax Commissioner and Excise Commissioners. To-day a bill was put through in the House preventing any Mayor from making appointments after his successor has been elected. Another bill was passed giving the Mayor of Newark authority to appoint a committee of three Republicans and two Democrats to redistrict the wards so that the Republicans may control the Board of Aldermen.

TO KILL DISEASED CATTLE.

The only non-partisan bill of importance passed was one authorizing the appointment by the President of the State Board of Agriculture of five persons to examine and order slaughtered all cattle having tuberculosis, and appropriating $10,000 to pay for the cattle so killed.

ABOUT THE REFERENDUM.

Attorney-General Stockton sent to the House an opinion as to the constitutionality of the proposed referendum amendment to the State Constitution. The Attorney-General says that the proposed amendment is inconsistent with the present State Constitution and the existing form of government. Whether it is also inconsistent with the United States Constitution and the existing form of government. Whether it is also inconsistent with the United States Constitution is a political question, he says, and not a judicial one.

SUING FOR SUGAR STOCK.

George F. Wiechers Wants Collateral Involved in the Failure of Edwin M. Field's Firm.

An unusually intricate suit was begun yesterday before Justice Truax in Part II. of the Supreme Court, New York, by George F. Wiechers, of Porta Rico, who seeks to recover from the Central Trust Company fourteen certificates of the American Sugar Refining Company's stock. The certificates represent 1,400 shares, and they, with the interest, are alleged to be worth $202,500.

The plaintiff is the father of John F. Wiechers, formerly of the firm of Field, Lindley, Wiechers & Co. John F. Wiechers resides in this city on the corner of Grant avenue and Eighth street, and is a member of the Union County Club. He was ruined by his partnership with Field. The plaintiff charges that he was swindled out of the 1,400 shares through forgery, and it was strongly insinuated that Edward M. Field was directly or indirectly responsible for the whole trouble.

The grist of the case, as developed yesterday, is that Wiechers put his son into the firm of which Field was the leading member, and in consideration thereof advanced money to the firm. Afterward other financial transactions resulted in the elder Wiechers giving as collateral for loans made to him by Field or the firm twenty-eight certificates of Sugar Trust stock. Of these ten were indorsed over to Field and eighteen were not indorsed.

The reorganization plan of the Sugar Trust provided that holders of old certificates should deposit them with the Central Trust Company and the latter would issue receipts. When a majority should be so deposited the Central Trust Company would issue to each holder of the old shares an equal number of the new, one-half being preferred stock and one-half common. Besides this a five per cent. cash dividend was declared.

The plaintiff swears that he received such cash dividend in checks from Mr. Field of $5,000 and $4,000 respectively. He further alleges that he ordered Mr. Field to sell the 1,400 shares of common stock, and not to dispose of any of the 1,400 preferred shares.

Fires Along the Lehigh Valley.

Considerable damage was done Tuesday along the line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad in Middlesex county by fires which were started by sparks from the engines. The fire ran through many acres of woods and killed much valuable young timber.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE TOWN, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is Pushkin Is Sensible at Least In the Matter of House Rowing.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Although the pretty flowered challies in delicate natural tints have great attractions, there is something about the close persian patterns, in two or three shades of one color on a light ground, the general effect being a medium tint, that is more satisfactory for house and tea gowns. Of course persian designs are much too old for children and young girls, who should wear only flowered or fancy figured goods. These oriental patterns are well represented in red, purple and rose on a cream background, but as the ground is almost completely covered the general color effect is not light.

The usual assortment of china silk gowns is shown in yellow, turquoise, nile green and rose. They are usually trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion, which are light enough to combine well with this silk. Valenciennes is, in fact, favorably looked upon this season, although it is rather delicate for underwear, as it does not well bear the frequent laundering necessary.

HELIOTROPE HOUSE GOWN.

It cannot be said that the empire fashions are really unpopular, since they are often used for indoor costumes. While the entire empire effect is not desired, the ordinary long waisted, close fitting back is made with a full front gathered close under the bosom, with perhaps the additional restraint of a loose girdle of metal or heavy cord dropping from the waist line. As far as house gowns are concerned, one may do as one chooses and may range from accurately classical drapery to gowns of so thoroughly a nineteenth century character that they can be worn only by the ultra small waisted species of woman. A word to the wise is sufficient, however—and most women are wise about clothes, having a natural artistic tendency. Since fashion permits, say encourages, loose house dresses, take advantage of the fact and allow yourself breathing room.

A sketch is given for a Paris model of a house gown in heliotrope glace silk and velvet, with trimmings of heliotrope velvet and pearl passementerie of an oriental pattern. The princess body of the gown is of silk, while the loose part is of crepon. This part is gathered into a narrow low necked yoke of velvet, cut in three scallops and bordered with passementerie. A piece of velvet, scalloped and trimmed to correspond, falls over the top of the sleeves and joins the yoke. These narrow velvet straps, sewed with cabochons and terminated with pearl passementerie pieces, fall from the yoke. Velvet bands, studded with cabochons, fasten the crepon part to the body of the gown. The back and front sleeves of crepon is surmounted by a short silk sleeve embroidered with pearls. A double puffing of silk trims the bottom of the gown. JUNIC CROLLET.

CRACKERS AND CHEESE

This Was All Cozey Had to Give to His Men.

TRAITORS TRAVELLING IN THE VAN.

"The Unknown" and Two Companions Had Been There Before—Kelly's Big Army Is Sure Good Luck—Wagonloads of Provisions and Some Luxuries Taken to Camp.

HANCOCK, Md., April 19.—Cozey's navy sailed into barren seas when it reached Hancock. A run of 30 miles was made between breakfast and sunset, the flotilla drawing up under the Hancock bridge for a late and hearty supper at dusk, but the supper had to come out of the commissary wagon. The town authorities refused to vote either provisions or provisions to the army, so that crackers and cheese were the best they could get out of their own resources.

But a greater reverse than this greeted the leaders. Private charity that might have gone to them had been drained by two traitors in the camp. "Unknown" Smith, who had promised to go ahead and pave the way for the army, had done so with a vengeance. He, the veiled lady and "Chuck" Conley, the young man who had been the army's advance agent from Massillon, had come to town the previous day, and holding a public meeting had raised a sum of money which, what it could not be learned—on the strength of credentials from Cozey in Childs' possession.

Brown a Reformed Fakir.

Brown and Cozey at once published an open letter to Mayor Charles Hubert denouncing the men as impostors and asking their arrest for obtaining money under false pretenses. The three fakirs had flown for Williamsport, the next stopping place of the army, and messages were sent ahead asking their detention.

Browne was himself the subject of an unpleasant revelation, Burgess Ditto of the town council identifying him as an Indian medicine man who had visited the town three years ago with a patent blood purifier.

The Cozey men practically took possession of Hancock after dark. There being no stipulation, as in Cumberland, to hold them outside of the town, they swarmed up from the wharf and filled the saloons on the main street, drinking freely and talking theosophy and politics with what natives would engage in discussion, though the most of the citizens stayed indoors, leaving the newcomers to their own devices. There were a great many visitors in town, many of the guests from Berkeley Springs driving over the mountains to see the strange pilgrims. There were also rumors that a crowd of roughs from the neighborhood had organized to join the Cozey forces a pitched battle, but no actual violence occurred.

Kelly's Men In Clover.

OMAHA, April 19.—Kelly's army camped in the Chautauqua grounds. As Kelly himself expected, the rain came down in a cloud had come. There was a decided revulsion of feeling among the people. Indignation supplanted indifference, and the citizens of Omaha, Council Bluffs and South Omaha set about vigorously to ameliorate the condition of the unfortunates.

The Chautauqua meeting was called in Council Bluffs, and a committee was appointed to call on Governor Jackson to remove the militia from the Chautauqua grounds. Governor Jackson adopted denouncing the governor for calling out the militia and censuring the men who were responsible for the exclusion of the men from the Chautauqua pavilion during the storm. Governor Jackson was found in Attorney General Stone's office, and a formal interview ensued.

Sheriff Hazen was called in, and he and the governor had a pretty warm time trying to fix the responsibility for the presence of the state militia. The militia was agreed to withdraw the troops, and the grounds were abandoned by the militia.

It was then given out that the army would move today and would camp next at Weston. During the day the camp was visited by thousands of sympathizers. Food, money, clothing, medicine, bedding, pipes, tobacco and everything needed for the comfort of the army was furnished in abundance. Kelly is now in possession of upward of $1,000 in cash and has provisions enough to last a week and luxuries to last a month. During the evening meetings were held in the three different halls in Omaha the large hall provided was inadequate, and an overflow meeting was held on Jefferson square. Upward of 8,000 people gathered at the different meeting and were addressed by the leaders of the army.

During the afternoon 250 Union Pacific employees, loaded with provisions, marched to the camp and addressed. Kelly said there had been a plan arranged by which he would land his troops in Chicago soon.

In Support of Cozey.

PITTSBURG, April 19.—District Assembly No. 3, Knights of Labor—one of the very largest districts in the order, with a membership of 17,000—at its quarterly meeting adopted the following manifesto, which will be sent to every district assembly in the United States and by them sent to their respective congressmen:

The senate and house are ever prompt to concede the demands of the leaders of Europe and America for relief, but when the industrious who made this country what it is today present petitions, signed by thousands of their citizens, they are thrown into the wastebasket. Citizens of the United States have the right to assemble peaceably and petition for redress of grievances, and these petitions are entitled to be heard.

The representatives of money leaders of Europe and America in palace cars and lobby in their interest. The industrious go on foot for the same purpose.

The former are American bankers and representatives of European money lenders, and the latter are American citizens and the powerful natives of the production of national legislation during the last 32 years.

Mr. Coxey and his followers represent the John Brown movement, without arms, to liberate wage slaves. Don't refuse to hear and consider them because there are too many of them, as nine out of ten of the industrials of the country are in sympathy with Mr. Coxey's object. Neither would it be well to call organizations are called riots; large uprisings are called revolutions, and if successful, the instigators are called the patriotic.

Frye's Army on the Ohio Line.

SEYMOUR, Ind., April 19.—Captain Galvin, with 235 members of Frye's industrial army, arrived here. Citizens provisioned them with half a slaughtered hallock, and pounds of bacon, 300 loaves of bread, a bag of coffee, potatoes and cabbage. At Aurora, Ind., just outside the Ohio state line, the army left the cars and camped in the railway machine shops. They will march into Ohio to relieve the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern strikers, looking for bringing organists into the state.

FREE AND EASY DEBATE

The Wits of the House Indulge in Repartee.

DISCUSSION TOOK A WIDE RANGE

From the Van Alen Appointment to the Originator of the Quorum Counting Rule.

The Debate on the Tariff Goes Solemnly on in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The house debated the entire day to debate on the general and diplomatic appropriation bill. It touched a wide variety of subjects and at times was brimful of interesting personalities. The Hawaiian policy of the present administration came in for a good share of attention. The appointment of Mr. Van Alen as minister to Italy provoked a very extended discussion. It was held up to ridicule by the Republicans, who intimated that it was a direct reward for his $50,000 contribution to the Democratic campaign fund. The Democrats, in defending the appointment, tried to counter on the Harrison administration by detailing the history of the $400,000 campaign fund raised by ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker.

Later in the day Mr. Wise took up the authorship of quorum counting as a parliamentary antilitisetting expedient and quoted from The Record to show that the first proposition in this line had been offered by J. Randolph Tucker, a Virginia Democrat, in 1890, when it had been vigorously opposed by Mr. Reed. Mr. Walker of Massachusetts met this attack on the ex-speaker's record by sketching out before the house the record of the Democratic opposition to the quorum counting rule in the fifty-first congress, Speaker Crisp leading to the opposition.

Mr. Quigg In a Controversy.

Mr. Quigg of New York, who took the floor in the course of some general remarks criticising the Van Alen appointment, got into a verbal duel with Mr. Enloe of Tennessee. He had, in reply to a question from Mr. Enloe, asserted that he was elected to congress last January because a chance had been afforded the Fourteenth New York congressional district, with its 10,000 Democratic majority, to record a yea and nay vote on the Wilson bill.

"Did you accomplish what you came here for?" asked Mr. Enloe. "Did you kill the Wilson bill, as you said you would in your campaign?"

"I did not say I would," replied Mr. Quigg. "I said the election of a Republican in a Democratic district would do much toward defeating the Wilson bill, and I think the Wilson bill today is smashed."

"Perhaps you are the author of the speech against the Wilson bill delivered the other day by Senator Hill," suggested Mr. Enloe sarcastically.

"I had not that honor," replied Mr. Quigg. "Senator Hill needs know that he is able to take care of himself. He has done so frequently, to our dismay and discomfort, and, I thought, to your satisfaction."

During the discussion of the Van Alen incident Mr. Reed said:

"Quorum counting has been developed by this debate—first, that Whitney is a good man; second, that Cleveland is a good man, and, third, that Van Alen was not appointed because he contributed $50,000 to the Democratic campaign fund. Now, why was he appointed?"

"If he had been appointed because of his contribution," said Mr. Enloe, "that would be the best and strongest reason for his appointment from a Republican standpoint. I know nothing of the facts, but I will say this in his defense: He has had the decency not to insult the American people by accepting office as did John Wanamaker."

Mr. Cannon of Illinois, who followed Mr. Enloe, waxed sarcastic. "I would not say anything," he said, "against that great and good man, Grover Cleveland. If I dipped my tongue in gall, I could not say anything half as mean against him as the Democratic press is saying." He created great amusement by telling how the Democratic national convention had prepared a platform, and how afterward that "great and good man" had written a letter modifying it.

"Turning to the Democratic side," he asked: "Who is your prophet? Is it Grover? Is it Walter Q.? Is it Hoke Smith? Is it David B.?"

"Give it up," ejaculated Mr. Burrows amid great laughter.

Mr. Cannon struck right and left. He referred to Mr. Bland as the wild eyed son of destiny from Missouri, and he wanted to know why the Democrats, in choosing men for the most responsible offices in the gift of their administration, were obliged to draft renegade Republicans or mugwumps.

In the Senate.

The proceedings in the senate were void of any incident of special interest. Good progress was made in the discussion of the tariff bill, speeches being made against it by Senators Morrill, Cameron and Quay, and for it by Senator Turpie.

In the morning hour Senator Caffery called attention to an article in a New York evening paper in which he, together with several other senators, was accused of being an obstructionist to the tariff bill. Not only was this untrue, he said, but he was in favor of the bill in its present shape and would do all in his power to hasten its passage.

The announcement of Senator Mills that he would speak on the tariff bill on Tuesday, following the statement of Senator Harris that he wanted time for one Democratic senator to close the debate next Tuesday and reply to what had been said against the bill before the bill is taken up by paragraphs, is taken to mean that Senator Mills has been selected by the majority to make the closing argument, and that he is likely to be Senator Vance's successor on the finance committee.

Very little interest was manifested in the last installment of Senator Quay's speech. He announced that he had concluded that branch of his speech relating to iron and steel manufactures.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

Connecticut—West Woodstock, M. S. Frost.

New York—Aldertown, L. A. Tuttle; Auburndale, William Whitsell; South Millbrook, John Pumpkins; Thompson Ridge, J. E. Ward.

Pennsylvania—Ralfry, N. B. Mayer; Forty Fort, A. W. Weaver; Iron Spring, J. A. Peters.

Forest Fire In New Jersey.

CAPE MAY, April 19.—A forest fire about a mile wide has been raging at Court House, a village near here. The fire started near Price's mill, and with an easterly wind it has been driven toward the Delaware bay. Besides burning some valuable timber a large lot of cordwood has been destroyed.

RIOTOUS POLES.

Two Shot Dead and Many Wounded by a Sheriff's Posse.

DETROIT, April 19.—Wayne county's sheriff lies in a precarious condition, his body lacerated by the shovels of enraged rioters. Two Polish laborers are dead, and the number injured is not yet definitely known. These unfortunate conditions are the result of a conflict which occurred between some 600 Poles and Sheriff Collins and five of his deputies.

The riot was brought about by differences of opinion over the wages to be paid laborers by the city water commissioners for digging trenches for pipe laying in Grosse Point township, just east of the city limits. No actual outbreak was anticipated, but as a precaution Sheriff Collins and five deputies went to the scene to protect those who wished to work. Work progressed on a small scale during the morning, but Engineer Williams, becoming alarmed at the aspect of things, consulted some of the commissioners shortly before noon and was instructed to quit work for the time being.

Before he returned, however, rioting began. Sheriff Collins and Deputy Stayskal, after telephoning for re-enforcements, began to address the mob to pacify them. One of the Poles began an opposition harangue. The crowd thereupon started to annihilate the officers and the handful of laborers at work.

At the advance the officers drew revolvers and fired over the strikers' heads, but the mob came on, and the next volley was directed into the crowd. Then the officers retreated slowly, firing as they went. Still the mob followed, one man dealing the sheriff a vicious blow on the head with his shovel. The other officers, the workers and an Evening News reporter escaped, all being more or less pounded with shovels, but the hapless sheriff was brutally attacked. The mob then scattered, leaving the sheriff unconscious on the field. Two of the Poles were found dead—John Pielat and a comrade, name unknown.

THE COBURG WEDDING.

A Great Gathering of Royalty at the Nuptials—A Magnificent Display.

COBURG, April 19.—The wedding of Princess Victoria Melita to Ernest Louis, grand duke of Hesse, occurred today with great ceremony and magnificent display. Emperor William, Queen Victoria of Great Britain, who is the grandmother of the bride and groom; the Prince of Wales, the czarowitz of Russia and ex-Empress Frederick, besides many lesser royal persons, were present.

The Schloss platz, the great open space in front of the ducal palace, was packed last night with humanity to witness an enormous torchlight procession given in honor of the betrothed couple. The heights to the right of the platz were brilliantly illuminated with Bengal lights, which threw weird, fantastic shadows among the old trees and shrubbery of Herzog park, which lies back of the heights.

The whole center of the platz was a mass of dazzling torches and lanterns of every conceivable color. Those taking part in the procession executed a series of figures under the windows of the palace. They were headed by the Coburg Bicycle club, the members of which carried lanterns showing the colors of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and of Hesse. Then followed hundreds of the townsfolk and students bearing balloon lanterns and torches. The scene was a fairy like one.

As a mark of recognition of the loyalty and good wishes of his subjects and also to commemorate his marriage the Grand Duke of Hesse gave 1,000 marks each to 20 deserving betrothed couples in his grand duchy.

Miss Glendinning Married.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.—Miss Elizabeth Butcher Glendinning was married at St. James' church on Mr. Clayton Potterall McMichael. Miss Glendinning is the daughter of the late Robert Glendinning of this city. Mr. McMichael is one of the publishers and proprietors of The North American, the oldest daily newspaper in the country.

A Pike County Incident.

ABOUT THE PEARL.

Its Peculiar Charm Is Not Selfishness, but Select Association.

It is always exciting to hear of the great individual diamond or ruby or emerald then has, or well might have, a name of its own. But not so with the great individual pearls, one of which, worth $600,000 is, we are told, in the treasury of the sultan, and other, worth about half as much and for three centuries famous, is a Russian jewel case. These "star pearls" are unmatched. They miss that "other grace of the pearl, which is not solitariness, but select association. Size is no beauty in the pearl. A large part of her charm is that she is matched, equally and numerously matched, so that every one of her beauties is repeated. Her preciousness is multiplied by her company, for one of a necklace of 60 pearls is of less value than the sixtieth part that seems to be her price. So she depends upon her competitors, but these are only the perfect. She has never been conspicuous because she has never been set among common things. The ruby is unique, but the pearl is one of the elect.

Young pearls must be kept for years before they lose the yellowish tinge, and time even also to the making of a really fine necklace. From year to year a more perfect match may be discovered, and the row is unstrung to make place for the rounder or whiter pearl or the pearl of more lustrous skin. With all these beauties pearls are so delicately moderate that every charm is a suggestion and not to be overdone—another peculiarity that sets pearls quite apart from the great precious stones. The diamond attracts especially more attention than anything that imitates it. But the Roman bead can easily be made glossier, more faultlessly round and more absolutely equal than the pearl.

The pearl is the more lovely for being free of blemish, but if she had not the possibility of blemish she were not the pearl. One thing she gives, hands cannot give, and that is the feeling of pearls as they run between the fingers—strong, hard, heavy, smooth and cool. And that is why they touch each other is that of seashells, not of glass. Cleopatra dissolved a specimen pearl, a unique pearl, and drank to posterity. She could hardly have been forgiven had she sacrificed a necklace, or even so many as three pearls matching, unlessing one another, perfect and indistinguishable.

How Celluloid Is Made.

Celluloid is prepared from dry gun cotton treated with a solution of camphor in the least possible quantity of alcohol. Popular Science News says: A layer is placed on layer of the gun cotton the solution is sprinkled upon it until finally it sinks into transparent lumps. These are first worked between cold iron rollers and then rollers heated by steam, forming layers that are finally subjected to hydraulic pressure. After thorough drying of the resulting plates they are molded while warm, cut and turned into any desired form. The imitation of amber, coral and the like is accomplished by coloring the lumps of celluloid as first formed and pressing various colors together in the proportions and patterns desired. Noncombustible celluloid has not yet been made.

He Knows the Gorilla In Private Life.

It's a proud man that Professor R. T. Garner must be. He has seen more of the gorilla in private life than any white man on record. He went and sat in a cage in the midst of a family of gorillas. "At home" with gorillas. With his foot on his native bush, we are given to understand, the gorilla is a most genial companion. In a way, too, he is affable; only inarticulate. It is not always easy to catch what he says, still the professor believes that he has discovered enough to keep in captivity. A really fine gorilla phrases which he has translated for the benefit of mankind.

Prices of Wild Animals.

A hippopotamus is worth $4,000. A rhinoceros with a single horn costs $2,000. Another horn adds just $1,000 to his value. Lions range from $800 to $1,200. A Horned costs $1,000, and tigers are quoted at $1,000. Grizzly bears are becoming scarce and are hard to keep in captivity. A really fine specimen is worth $1,000, and they range from that down to $500. Polar bears come at $1,000. Silver bears range from $50 to $200. A camel with one hump is worth $250, and two humps bring the market value up to $400. Ostriches are valued at $800 apiece.

Shadows From Steam.

Steam is composed of vapor of different degrees of intensity, intermingled usually with some air, so that the rays of light reflecting it are not uniformly refracted, and therefore interfere with and neutralize each other to a considerable degree. This accounts for the fact that shadows are cast by steam. Water does not cast a shadow for the reason that when it is in a state of rest it is of almost uniform density, and the rays of light, although they may be refracted, pass through it equally impeded in parallel lines.

How to Find Due South.

Due south can be readily ascertained if one possesses a fairly correct watch and the position of the sun is distinguishable. Point the hour hand to the sun, and the south is exactly half way between the hour and the figure XII on the watch dial. For instance, suppose that it is 4 o'clock. Point the hand indicating 4 to the sun, and 2 on the watch is exactly south. Suppose that it is 6 o'clock. Point to the sun the hand indicating 8, and the figure X on the watch is due south, says an exchange.

So Called "Sea Grapes."

"Cuttlefish lay large black eggs in groups or bundles on aquatic plants. Fishermen call them "sea grapes." If we open the eggs when they are matured, we shall see very small cuttlefish coming out, and they will begin to swim as soon as they are placed in a little water. I have even seen one of these abortions throw ink at me because I teased it too much," says a scientific writer.

Mrs. Wood's Novels.

Mrs. Henry Wood's "East Lynne" is actually in its two hundred and seventy-fifth thousand, and her "Channings" is in its one hundred and thousand. Her other books taper down the list from the sixtieth thousand to nothing less than 10,000. What does the unsuccessful novelist say to that?

Discovery of Coal In America.

It is generally believed that coal was first discovered in America, in Illinois, by the early French explorers some time between the years of 1673 and 1680. On a map published by Father Hennepin in 1698 a coal mine is located in the bluff of the Illinois river near Ottawa.

SLOOP VIGILANT SOLD.

George J. Gould Buys the Famous Cup Defender.

HE PROBABLY MEANS TO RACE HER.

The Millionaire's Offer of $85,000 For the Fastest Sloop Afloat Accepted by the Syndicate, Whom She Cost Four Times as Much—Mr. Bennett's Offer Withdrawn.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Mr. George J. Gould has purchased the Vigilant. The gentleman who had the yacht's built last season to defend the America's cup against the Valkyrie met and decided to accept the terms offered by Mr. Gould. Mr. Gould is to pay $85,000 for the boat. This will be a big surprise to yachtsmen, as Mr. Gould's name was never thought of in connection with the famous cup defender.

Mr. James Gordon Bennett's offer for the boat was $80,000, and the members of the syndicate were naturally anxious to get all they could for the yacht that had cost them so much. Mr. Bennett's offer, though, was contingent on being able to arrange a series of races satisfactorily with the Prince of Wales or Sir Britannia.

This he has been unable to do. The Prince of Wales and Mr. Bennett could not agree as to the courses over which the yachts were to sail, so the offer of $80,000 for the boat was withdrawn.

It is probable that Mr. Gould agreed to buy the yacht on her passing a survey by a naval architect, and as soon as she has been examined and found to be all right she will be formally transferred.

The Vigilant was built by the Herreshoffs for a syndicate composed of Commodore E. D. Morgan, Mr. C. Oliver Iselin, Mr. Archibald Iselin, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. August Belmont, Mr. O. H. P. Belmont, Mr. Perry Belmont, Mr. Charles R. Flint, Dr. W. Barton Hopkins and three or four Englishmen.

The members of the syndicate subscribed $100,000 when it was formed, and later in the season another $25,000 was subscribed. The Herreshoffs charged $60,000 to build the boat, and several thousand dollars more was spent for new sails, spars and changes that were made in her. It is probable that the boat cost $85,000, and the balance of the money was spent in running her during the season.

Will Probably Race Her.

If Mr. Gould wants the boat to race, $25,000 is a cheap price. If she is to be used for cruising, a considerable sum of money will have to be spent to cut down her spars and sails and fit her out comfortably.

It is probable that Mr. Gould intends to race her. He is a member of the New York Yacht club and owns the big schooner Hildegarde, formerly owned by the Prince of Wales, in which he and Mrs. Gould cruise every summer.

He also owns the big steam yacht Atalanta, in which he can cruise all over the world if he wants to. Mr. Gould and his wife are both very fond of the water, and it is probable that Mr. Gould wishes to have some racing and is ambitious to own the fastest sloop afloat, and for that reason he has made the offer for the Vigilant. Some years ago he owned the 46 foot sloop Fanita, which he raced considerably in the yachting near this city, but gave up the sport because he could not devote the time to the sport that yacht racing requires.

PAUL REVERE'S RIDE.

Boston and the Surrounding Towns Celebrate a New Holiday.

BOSTON, April 19.—Thousands of patriotic citizens crowded the thoroughfares adjoining the old North church when the chime bells in the tower of that historic edifice were rung for the first time in half a century. Lanterns were hung exactly as history says they were hung by Sexton Newman 178 years ago to warn Paul Revere that the soldiers of King George were attempting a landing. The houses in the vicinity were hung with Chinese lanterns and bunting.

The patriotic small boy was on hand with cannon, cracker and fuse, and all the features of a glorious Fourth of July seemed to have been concentrated in the north end for the time being. The old edifice itself was clothed in American colors, and lucky were those who gained admission. The most imposing feature of the service came last, when the great congregation rose and joined in singing "America."

The historic ride of the famous Paul Revere on April 19, 1775, from Charlestown to Lexington was reproduced by Robert W. Sise of Medford, clad in an historical costume similar to that worn by Revere and mounted on a black charger. Sise went over the exact route of the original ride, and as far as could be gathered from history he carried out every movement of the ride of a century ago.

Following history, no stop was made until he reached Old or Royall house, Medford, where a mock drum corps was aroused into activity. They started for old Medford, crossed College bridge, and with hooting and howling and beating of drums were supposed to arouse the residents as Paul did in days of yore. The corps then galloped to the Craddock house, the oldest structure in the country, and aroused a counterfeit General Braddock, who, with his make believe minutemen, turned out and joined in the excitement.

At the Hancock house, Lexington, the terminus was made, and after a consultation with the counterfeit Dorothy Quincy, who was supposed to warn Dr. Warren and John Hancock, the ride was ended. The town "all along the route celebrated in true patriotic style worthy of the days of the revolution.

CONDEMNS BRECKINRIDGE.

The Social Purity League Urges His Immediate Ostracism.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The following statement was issued by the National Christian League For the Promotion of Social Purity:

In view of Mr. Breckinridge's elevated rank of statesmanship, his high position in the church, an expounder of morals in schools, honored in society at home and abroad as the respected head of a family, who has been declared to the eyes of the whole nation as a hypocrite in the church, prominent deceiver in his high official position as a statesman and a violator of every sacred relation in the home and family during the past decade, and

Whereas, The National Christian League For the Promotion of Social Purity, believing that the safety of the nation, as far as it is in the home and the integrity of the state depend upon individual purity, and that the standard should be the same for man as for the woman, and earnestly striving by organized effort to establish such a standard, thereby accomplish that which is for the best interests of the race: now be it

Resolved, That the National Christian League For the Promotion of Social Purity appeals hereby to the manhood and womanhood of the nation to, recognize in W. C. P. Breckinridge the common enemy of the church, of the home, of the state and of society at large, and that they be urged as an imperative duty, as well as an opportunity, both by concerted action and by individual effort, to teach the lesson that "the way of the transgressor is hard," and thus to make his life stand out as an example and a warning, lest condonation lead to corruption, and corruption sap the vitality of the church, and of society, imperil the home and destroy the nation.

Paterson Strikers Again Ugly.

PATERSON, N. J., April 19.—The Paterson strikers are again making demonstrations of violence. At Vermerel's dye works they assaulted the workmen when they left the factory. The police, who were present for a riotous outbreak, had surrounded the workmen to escort them home. The strikers attempted to break the police line, but the ringleaders were at once arrested. The remaining strikers then attempted to rescue their comrades, but they were beaten off by the police.

Big Fire In Montreal.

MONTREAL, April 19. — About $60,000 worth of property was destroyed by a big fire starting in the works of the Imperial Waterproof company. Two firemen were partially suffocated, and a fire brigade horse attached to a hose cart was killed by a collision with an electric car.

A Schoolboy's Suicide.

HARTFORD, April 19.—Harry Hayes, son of William Hayes, a farmer living in West Hartford, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. The boy was a bright little fellow, 12 years old, of a very sensitive nature and had been severely reproved and punished at school.

Colonel Drexel's New Yacht Arrives.

SIX HEARTS THAT BEAT AS THREE.

Weddings in Both Grace P. E. and Grace M. E. Churches.—Another Plainfielder Takes a Bride from Out of Town.

Hallock—Erickson.

There was a large and representative attendance of Plainfield's best society people at beautiful Grace Protestant Episcopal church, last evening, to witness the wedding ceremony of Miss Jean B. Erickson, daughter of Councilman Eric N. Erickson to Mr. James Hildreth Hallock. It was one of the prettiest weddings that has taken place in this city this season. The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. E. M. Rodman.

The church decorations were very elaborate and beautiful, consisting of palms, potted plants and flowers.

The bride wore a becoming gown of white satin brocade, trimmed with duchesse lace, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lillies of the valley. Miss Annie B. Murray was the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Knowles and Miss Macy of New York and Miss Murray and Miss Kirkner of this city. They wore white gowns, and carried bouquets of white roses and maiden-hair fern. Willard Parker Hallock was the best man, and the ushers were Jules E. Erickson, Fletcher D. Hallock, Lee Ashley Grace, and Roger W. Erickson. A reception to the relatives and intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom was held at the home of the bride's parents, 424 West Eighth street.

The groom is a brother of Mr. George D. Hallock, the hatter, of West Front street, and is engaged in the Methodist Book Publishing Concern, New York.

The bridal couple have gone to Washington on a honeymoon trip.

Darby—Schuck.

The Rev. Herbert F. Randolph, pastor of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, performed his first marriage ceremony in that church yesterday afternoon, when Miss Ida May Schuck, daughter of Mr. Frank Schuck of Vine street, and Mr. Joseph H. Darby, a well-known and popular young man of Alton, and son of Mr. John Darby, one of the best known and most prosperous farmers of that section of the country, were made man and wife.

Miss Margaret M. Schuck, a sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and the best man was Mr. Walter Darby, a brother of the groom.

The bride was prettily attired in white brocaded silk, trimmed with Duchesse lace. At her throat was a beautiful diamond pin, the gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses.

The bridesmaid was attired in pink silk, with satin ribbon trimmings, and carried pink roses.

The church decorations, consisting of palms, roses and carnations, were very pretty.

Messrs. Herbert Randolph and William N. Force were the ushers.

After the ceremony had been performed a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride and groom received congratulations from their many friends. They left on the 8:17 train for Philadelphia.

That both were popular young people is evidenced by the large number of handsome presents received, including many useful articles. Among the floral gifts was a beautiful horse shoe.

Trainor—Mahoney.

Mr. John J. Trainor of this city and Miss Kate Mahoney of Middletown, N. Y., were united in marriage at the Catholic church of the latter place at 5.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Father McCluney officiated.

Mr. Matthew Cashin of this city was best man, and Miss Mary Mahoney, a sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid.

A reception was held afterwards at the home of the bride.

The bridal couple returned to Plainfield last night. They will reside at 410 Liberty street in a house the groom has furnished for his bride.

Death in Washington Valley.

Mrs. R. W. Anderson, of Washington Valley, died at her home last night of the grip. She had been sick for the past two or three weeks, but it was thought by that her illness was nothing serious. Mrs. Anderson was accustomed to driving to Plainfield every morning with her husband, who did business in New York. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn her loss.

For a New Tribe at Westfield.

A delegation comprising Past Sachem Seaman, Past Sachem Westphal and Chief of Records Newcorn went to Westfield last night and attended the preliminary meeting of a New Tribe of Red Men at that place. A dispensation to institute the new tribe was sent for to-day.

A Thief in the Cellar.

An attempt was made to rob a house on Westervelt avenue last night. Between ten and eleven o'clock a man was heard to enter the cellar, but he managed to escape on being detected.

THE COACHING HORSES HERE.

The First Coach to Pass Through Here To-morrow.

Two horses for the new coaching route, from New York to Philadelphia, reached here to-day and are stabled at Adam Blair's stables on West Sixth street. They are all fine looking animals. Four horses will be used each way and two will be kept in reserve. The first trip will be made to-morrow morning, passing through here between eleven and twelve o'clock. Sixth street will be the route used.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Jesse Walker of Westfield was in town last evening.

Charles Bock of East Second street will leave shortly for a trip to Germany.

Mrs. William L. Smalley of Craig place is visiting relatives at Liberty Corner.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Jackson of Crescent avenue left to-day for Atlantic City.

Mrs. George P. McGinnis of Somerset street is confined to her home on account of illness.

A boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doane of West Fifth street last night.

Mr. J. Walker of New Brunswick visited friends in this city yesterday. He returned home last night.

Mr. Warren Rice yesterday invested in a new bicycle. It is a pneumatic tire "scorcher" and is a beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cuthbert of New York, formerly of this city, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bass of Eighth street.

Miss Florence Dodge, of Manning avenue, is visiting relatives in New York, where she expects to remain indefinitely.

Miss Jennie Tingley of Dunellen has returned home after a pleasant visit with Mrs. Elmer D. Ganun of Jackson avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mattison of Linden avenue are happy over the advent of a baby boy. The little one was born last night.

Mr. Richard Warnick, who was recently married to a Cranford young lady, to-day received a pretty lamp stand from his mother in Germany.

"Christ Coming to the World Through You" will be the theme of Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis' discourse at the Seventh-Day Baptist church to-morrow morning.

At the session of the Congregational Association of New Jersey in Trinity Church, East Orange, Wednesday, the Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church of this city, was elected a member of the Committee on Benevolence.

Entertainment at Monroe Avenue Chapel.

An entertainment was given at the Monroe avenue chapel last night, under the auspices of the Epworth League. The chapel was comfortably filled and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves.

An admission of five cents was charged and the proceeds will be devoted to the church work.

The recitations of Miss Donnell received hearty applause. The one entitled "The Ride of Jennie McNeal" was very well rendered.

The Messrs Tallamy delighted the audience with some exceptionally fine singing.

New Brunswickers Visit Plainfield.

A party consisting of about 14 persons came to Plainfield last evening, by stage, from New Brunswick. They arrived in this city about half past nine, and made their stopping place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Nomer of La Grande avenue. After spending a pleasant evening in dancing which lasted until nearly three o'clock, during which time refreshments were served, the party started homeward.

Kelly Arrested for Aiding Boohan to Escape.

Last evening Constable Vanderhoff swore out a warrant for the arrest of Charles Kelly, whom he charges with aiding Thomas Boohan, Mr. Penton's coachman, to escape from him. Marshal Pingborn arrested Kelly at about nine o'clock and took him before Justice Crossley who placed him under $200 bonds to appear for trial to-night, at eight o'clock.

Lunch Box Sociable.

A lunch box sociable was held in Hope chapel last night. The feature of the entertainment was the selling of the lunch boxes which occupied the best part of the evening. The proceeds will be devoted to the chapel.

Another entertainment will be given in the chapel the third of May.

GEN. NEGLEY'S BONDS.

A VALISE FULL OF STOLEN SECURITIES AND PAPERS FOUND.

Fifty-$1,000 Railroad Bonds Among Them, One of which a Dishonest Servant Had Offered as a Fee in an Intelligence Office.

[From To-day's New York Sun.]

The police of the West Thirtieth street station stumbled across a valise last evening containing valuable papers and railway bonds with evidence that they were stolen. The police know the name of the man who had the valise, but as he has not been caught they withhold it.

It seems that on Tuesday a woman who lives on Madison avenue called at the station house and made complaint that her man servant had disappeared, taking with him a valuable gold watch. She said the man was recommended to her through a sixth avenue intelligence office.

Detectives Kash and Jerolomon went to the intelligence office, but were unable to get much information about the man. They learned that he had no money, but he had offered a bond of the Newcastle Northern Railway Company of the face value of $1,000 issued on July 1, 1883, and maturing on July 1, 1923. He offered this bond to the manager of the intelligen office to-day in lieu of the fee generally charged. The manager accepted the bond, and it was understood that the man was going to redeem it as soon as he got his first month's pay. The detectives were also told that there was a large valise in the man's room in the Madison avenue house.

They went there and found the valise stuffed full of papers, books, pamphlets, and bonds. The valise was taken to the station house and Captain Schmittberger made an inventory of its contents. When he discovered what there was in it he sent word to Inspector McLoughlin. After a conference last evening they decided to make public just the fact of the finding of the valise.

The papers and bonds haJ evidently been stolen from Gen. and ex-Congressman James S. Negley of Plainfield; but how, when, or where they were taken is only a matter of conjecture. There were fifty-five 5 per cent. bonds of the Newcastle Northern Railway of Pennsylvania, made out in the name of James S. Negley, who is named as the President of the company.

There was also a bunch of annual passes on every railroad in the country made out to Mr. Negley a Major-General of Volunteers, and signed by President Lincoln and Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, and dated Nov. 29, 1862.

The bonds were neatly done up in seven packages, and there were also a number of books relating to military tactics. A life insurance policy for $1,000 on the Ætna Company of Hartford in the name of James S. Negley, Jr., was also among the papers. Mr. Negley, Jr., is manager of the D. V. S. Home at Pittsburgh.

The Chief of Police at Plainfield was notified of the find, and the Tenderloin detectives and Central office men are hunting high and low for the dishonest servant.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 19.—A man came to Gen. Negley's New York office the first of March and applied for a place as coachman. He said he was Michael Coleman of Twelfth street, New York.

Gen. Negley hired him, and he worked at odd jobs about the General's place on West Seventh street, this city, until March 30, when he was discharged.

The General first learned that the man had been dishonest when a private memorandum book of his employer was found in the man's room. Then it was discovered that saws, chisels, other tools and articles of no great value, missing from their place and hid in an outbuilding used as a workshop and storage room. The General suspected that Coleman was the thief. He did not report the matter to the police, but quietly investigated with the idea that the man had been pawnbrokers in Plainfield who received the stolen goods as he stole them. Then the valise containing $50,000 in New Castle and Northern Railroad bonds and private papers of value was missed.

A few days afterward, Gen. Negley knew that the thief was in New York, as a bank notified him that the bonds had been offered to it.

WILL PROSECUTE THE INFRINGER.

The H. O. Company to Wage War on Fraudulent Methods.

[From the Mail and Express, April 12th.]

It was announced this morning, that the H. O. (Hornby's Oatmeal) Company had determined to push a trial suit against J. J. McCluskey (who has been legally restrained from putting on packboard Jones an imitation of the company's wording and trade-mark) instead of resting on the evidence already gathered before Justice Ingraham in New York and Justice Gaynor in Brooklyn.

The decision in each of these actions is of the greatest importance to all manufacturers who depend upon a distinctive ludicrous to identify, advertise and protect their products. It is generally understood that all articles of merit are subject to imitation and infringement, and that "substitution" is one of the most disagreeable annoyances to which the manufacturer is exposed; but it has remained for a printer to become a party to an attempt to deceive, which has been characterized by Justice Ingraham as a fraud which he intended to stamp out. According to the evidence in the cases for the plaintiff, it was shown that the defendant had printed on pasteboard boxes the capital letters H. O. C. O. H. O. R. O., M. B. V. O., O. K. and Sweet Home, with Trade Mark Registered. Besides this he had appropriated the language used on the boxes of the H. O. Company, which differed only in its punctuation that the plagiarism was instantly discernible.

The boxes were sold to not over-scrupulous grocers for three-quarters of a cent each, and the grocers filled them with whatever they pleased—oatmeal, or cut-nails, or saw-dust if they wanted to. Of course that would not do because of any scruples, but because there might be unpleasant consequences. As a matter of fact there were few who did not hesitate to fill the packages with an inferior grade of common oatmeal, not infrequently of poor quality, and sell them at from 5 to 10 cents each. When the stuff was cooked for the table, it was not agreeable or unpalatable, and the H. O. Company came for a share of censure and criticism, which, as a rule, was not confined to the family first deceived. It didn't take long for the news to spread about that H. O. not good, and what it was claimed to be, and the natural consequence followed—sales fell off at a fearful rate. In April, 1893, in the piece "The Forge in the Forest," the drummer plays 10 different instruments.

The H. O. Company at once started in with characteristic energy to get at the bottom of the trouble. It soon developed when they brought Printer McClusky up with a round turn. He found the grocers on Richmond place, at the corner of Second street. Mr. R. V. Simms was given the contract for the carpenter work.

The Company did not stop with New York; first and last it has put a heavy force of Kemper Brothers, which has three stores in Brooklyn and one in New York, now employed in the pasting Hornby boxes. They were given fair notice to cease, but refused. Suit was entered in the Supreme Court before Justice William J. Gaynor, and the H. O. Company was awarded damages, and the cost of the action was saddled on the defendants.

"We are determined to put a stop to this at any cost," said Mr. Rose this morning, "not only for our protection, but for the protection of our customers. If they want our goods, and are willing to pay for them, they are entitled to receive what they think they are buying. If they are deceived, they may justly hold us responsible, and injure our well earned reputation. Our policy, henceforth, will be vigorously aggressive, and we will prosecute

A ROYAL HONEYMOON.

Duke and Duchess of Hesse Leave Coburg in Advance of Him.

COBURG, April 20.—The Duke of Hesse and his bride are today on their honeymoon trip. The bride and bridegroom were accompanied to the carriage by all the members of the imperial and royal families present and were bidden most affectionate farewells. Showers of rice were thrown at the young Duke and Duchess of Hesse, prominent among the rice throwers being Emperor William, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught, but the emperor was the most persistent of all the rice throwers. In a flower bedecked carriage they departed for the railroad station amid the tumultuous "hochs" of the multitude assembled on the plats. Just after the carriage started four photographers rushed to the center of the courtyard in spite of the police and began a frantic signaling to the wedding guests, imploring them to remain stationary and so enable the photographers to "take" the group.

The imperial and royal personages laughingly complied and stood still while several negatives were taken of the assemblage. The train left Coburg for Darmstadt in the midst of general cheering and waving of hats and handkerchiefs, and the band played a Hessian march. It was originally intended that the bride and bridegroom should go to Rosenau, the lovely hunting seat on the borders of the Thuringian forest, about four miles from this city, but it was decided later that they should go to Darmstadt, though their public entry into that place is not to be made until Sunday according to the programme.

Welcott Knocks Out Tracey.

BOSTON, April 20.—Joe Welcott, the colored wonder of this city, defeated Tom Tracey of Australia in the sixteenth round after one of the cleanest battles ever seen in Boston. The last round was short and sweet. Welcott forced the Australian into a corner, and down went Tracey to the floor. He was up within the prescribed 10 seconds, but went down again. He was game and staggered to his feet once more, only to go to the floor again, this time for good, and amid the cheers of the spectators the colored boy was declared the winner of the battle and the $1,000 purse.

Jarvis to Succeed Vance.

RALEIGH, April 20.—T. J. Jarvis has been appointed and has accepted the United States senatorship to succeed the late Senator Vance. Mr. Jarvis was speaker of the house in 1872 and lieutenant governor in 1876. He succeeded Mr. Vance as governor on Jan. 1, 1877, was re-elected governor in 1880 and was unanimously recommended to President Cleveland for a cabinet position by the legislature in 1884, but was appointed minister to Brazil by President Cleveland.

Bloodless Battle With Burglars.

AURORA, Ills., April 20.—Safeblowers operated in the office of the Standard Oil company and were caught in the act by Frank Wolfe, a driver, who lived near the office and heard the noise of the explosion. Wolfe opened fire on the burglars, who exchanged shots, and an exciting battle ensued, but no one was injured. The robbers fled without the cash they were after. Wolfe's house and the office were riddled with bullets.

Mother and Child Fatally Burned.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—Several children were playing in the yard of George Welgess, at Hanover Station, when one of them set fire to the clothing of the "goose" infant. Mrs. Welgess was badly burned in extinguishing the fire. The infant died in three minutes, and the mother will probably die.

Highwaymen In Pennsylvania.

ASHLAND, Pa., April 20.—Two highwaymen, dressed as railroad brakemen, held up the Adams Express company's driver on the mountain road near Mahanoy City and robbed him of a package of money containing $925, which they knew he had in his possession. Officers were sent in pursuit.

Norwalk Will Celebrate.

NORWALK, Conn., April 20.—The Norwalk chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Sons of the American Revolution have made elaborate arrangements for celebrating the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Norwalk.

Another Pole Dead.

DETROIT, April 20.—Andrew Harnack, who was terribly scalded in Wednesday's fire, died of his injuries. He had been in a stupor ever since the five bullets passed through his body. Two other Poles are in a critical condition and may die at any time.

A Giant From Monkeyland.

THE ARMY AFOOT AGAIN

Coxey's Men Leave the Canal and Take to the Turnpike.

SUPPED ON PORK AND HARDTACK.

Commonweal on Time, and Washington Only Seventy Miles Away—The Western Industrials Are Pushing Eastward Fast. The Industrials at Other Points.

WILLIAMSPORT, Md., April 20.—The Coxey army camped in the rain. The canalists that brought the party from Cumberland had hastily deposited their passengers when a drizzle set in that lasted into the afternoon. There was but one tent, and the men sought shelter under wagons as best they could. Later the rain ceased, and Browne and Coxey on horseback headed a procession of the army through the principal streets, returning in about an hour to a supper of boiled pork and hardtack, after which there was a large public meeting addressed by the leaders.

The crowd was not very enthusiastic, but cheered Browne's well worn stories that they had apparently never heard before. Coxey talked on his noninterest bearing bond bill and held the attention of the crowd, some talk of sympathy with the movement being heard among the audience. The only thing about the army that seemed to shock the townspeople was the array of repulsive religious caricatures on the banners.

Flowers For Coxey.

Coxey was busy all day making arrangements to secure the fair grounds at Hagerstown for the next camp.

He and Browne also had a great many visitors, the most of them curiosity seekers, but one party of women from Martinsburg came with an address of welcome and numerous presents, one of them pinning a bunch of flowers on Coxey's coat and begging him to accept the gold pin with which it was fastened as a mark of admiration from the party.

Coxey accompanied the army to Hagerstown this morning, but leaves today to attend a horse sale in New York, at which he will dispose of some of the stock of his Dixiana farm at Lexington. He will rejoin the army on Tuesday, when, according to schedule, the men should have reached Damascus. The army is on time to the day so far, and it has ample time before it in which to cover the remaining 70 miles by pike to Washington. Childs, Smith and the veiled lady played another trick on the commonweal at Hagerstown, speaking twice without molestation from the authorities and leaving Coxey and Browne in a rage at the other end of six miles of telephone wire when they found they could not stop them. The army spent an uncomfortable night in a wet camp.

Knights Will Aid Kelly.

OMAHA, April 20.—Under the auspices of the Knights of Labor a largely attended mass meeting of workingmen was held to discuss means of helping Kelly's army. J. B. Shoupe of the Central Labor union presided.

Much indignation was expressed against Governor Jackson, Judge Hubbard and Sheriff Hazen for the treatment of Kelly's army at their hands. It soon developed that the men were willing to go to extreme lengths if necessary to save Kelly's army from further outrages, and when it was suggested that Omaha workingmen go en masse to Kelly's camp to aid in capturing a train or resisting force there were a number of cries of "Let's go tonight!" Some one said, "Will the railway companies tear up their tracks?"

The reply was, "What's the matter with our tearing up the tracks for them?"

The meeting then named a number of prominent citizens to go to the Bluffs to plead with the railroads to give Kelly a train.

It was understood that Omaha workingmen should march to the Bluffs today to give the army whatever physical assistance it might need in case it was not left. The signal for meeting was to be the blowing of the whistle at the Union Pacific shops. It is expected several thousands will go.

Colonel Galven's Division.

CINCINNATI, April 20.—The latest news from Colonel Galven's division of General Frye's army is that it is resting in camp at Cochran, Ind., 20 miles west of here. Colonel Galven's men express some indignation at the police preparations to receive them in this city. The soldiers say they will march all the way through this city. Chief of Police Dietsch says he will be escorted by the police, or will keep them moving. It is probable that they will be taken through by train without stopping. They will move Monday.

Train Captured by Coxeyites.

BUTTE, Mon., April 20.—The Butte contingent of the Coxey army, 500 strong, has started on its march to Washington. A mile east of the city it captured an east bound Northern Pacific freight train consisting of five cars and a caboose. The engineer had orders to run the train back to the yards in case the army attempted to capture it, but was rushed by the order. When the train reached the yard, Sheriff Reynolds and a crowd of deputies took the engine from the control of the Coxeyites.

Denver's Army Starts.

BRIGHTON, Colo., April 20.—The Denver contingent of Kelly's army encamped in the fair grounds. The mayor and council met them and promised to send food once if they would not leave the grounds. The army will try to get out of town on a freight train and asked the mayor to assist in procuring three box cars. Captain Gwynn has received a telegram from Governor Waite offering $130 toward paying for box cars.

General Frye's Army.

CASEY, Ills., April 20.—General Frye's industrial will pass through 108 men here. The advance agent had secured money and provisions. They are in camp within the city limits, and all seemingly are in the best of spirits. General Frye has gone to Terre Haute with the intention of securing transportation for his men from that point, where they will camp over Sunday.

Fire Station Burned.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., April 20.—Fire destroyed the fire engine station in North Attleboro. The horses and ladder truck were saved.

Vaccinating Convicts.

AUBURN, N. Y., April 20.—The work of vaccinating inmates of the state prison was commenced, and the physicians have been kept busy.

SHOULDERS ON THE SLANT.

The Newest Fads Are Innocent of Guiles at the Top.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

It is evident that sloping shoulders are to be the fashion for some time to come. Sleeves began to come down from their lofty position over a year ago, and this season marks another stage in their descent. The newest puffs are cut in circular form, so that while they are full around the elbow they are quite innocent of gathers at the top. A style of sleeve is now shown in which the upper part is laid in flat tucks and is sufficiently elongated to extend completely over the shoulder and up to the collar. This gives the slanting effect with a vengeance, and if it were not a fashionable novelty it would be considered ugly, but no doubt we shall soon become used to it. It is a suitable mode for the woman with broad, square shoulders, who, so long the accepted mold of form, finds herself suddenly bereft of her prestige and under the necessity of simulating the slenderer type. Many puffed sleeves are caught up with embroidered straps extending from the shoulder to the bottom of the puff, and usually a bertha or epaulet falls over the top. It is not unsafe to predict a gradual return of the sheet to fashionable favor unless present tendencies are abruptly and unexpectedly checked. The new jacket sleeves are full at the top, it is true, but the fullness is laid in a double or triple box plait on the top of the shoulder, which keeps it flat there while allowing a bouffant spread below that point.

Capes are usually cut in circular form, which causes them to lie flat over the shoulders, although they fall in ample folds over the back and arms. Very often a breadth of extra fullness is inserted behind, notably in a thin black cloth cape, which had a gathered panel of moire let into the back. These capes are scarcely as attractive as those made entirely of moire, however. The latter are often chequered in appearance by a trimming of white lace, but when black is used the effect is very good. This is also favorable for general wear, of course, and therefore a number of cloth capes are shown, mainly in black. A sketch is given of one which was made to match a navy blue walking costume. It is composed of three graduated circular capes very flaring and plainly finished with stitching. The garment has a high, close collar. JUDIC CROLLET.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

THE BIG MINERS' STRIKE

Estimated That Two Hundred Thousand Men Will Quit.

THOUSANDS ARE ALREADY OUT

Eastern Railroads Have Been Stocking Up With Coal and Claim to Have Enough to Last For Two Months—None In the Coke Regions Ugly Again.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 20.—The strike is again the talk of the Connellsville coke region, and those who thought it dead now concede that it is very much alive. That next Monday will see a general shut down is in compliance with the orders of the national organization is now admitted on all sides, and it is now known that during the past week there has been going on a secret organization among the employees of every company for the purpose of securing an all around suspension next Monday morning. The statements made are sustained by the members of the executive board of the local organization. A circular was issued to the workmen in the coke region announcing the fact that the national organization had called for a general strike throughout the United States on Saturday, April 21, and notifying every plant in the district to send delegates to a convention to be held in Scottdale on the 23d to ratify the order. A convention held at Mount Pleasant, with 400 delegates present, voted solidly for the general strike.

The situation at the Oliver works last night was decidedly critical. A hundred men had been at work all day under the protection of 20 armed deputies. The Huns lingered about the grounds making all manner of threats. At night about 400 Huns were congregated about the plant and threatened to blow up the houses of workmen with dynamite. Another call for deputies was made, and the sheriff has doubled the force on guard.

Over Four Thousand Already Out.

ROCHESTER, April 20.—The coal miners' strike in the mines of Bell, Lewis & Yates has spread to the other mines of the company and also to those owned by the Rochester and Pittsburg Coal and Iron company. The strike promises to be one of the greatest that has occurred in many years east of the Mississippi river.

The men employed in the big mine at Reynoldsville, Pa., owned by Bell, Lewis & Yates, numbering about 1,500, and the men employed in the Adrian and Walston mines, owned by the Rochester and Pittsburg company, quit work.

The men at the Elnora, Beech Tree and Helvetia mines announced their intention of not returning today. This puts at least 4,000 men out of work as a forerunner of the big strike which goes into effect Saturday next, when it is estimated that fully 200,000 men will quit work.

It is claimed that when the 200,000 men go out double that number will be affected in associated industries. The organization controls all the labor engaged in bituminous coal mining in the United States and covers the states of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Colorado.

A prominent coal operator told your correspondent today that he had received advices that the miners in the Pocahontas and Cumberland districts would not go out. He also understood that the operators in the West Virginia and Pittsburg districts had the men so completely under their control that the United Mine Workers of America did not control them, and that these two fields will stand as a rock against the proposed general suspension which will go into effect Saturday.

If this is so, it is predicted that the striking miners will be worsted without any trouble, as the coal from these districts can be got to tidewater over the Baltimore and Ohio, the Roanoke and Norfolk and the Chesapeake Bay railroads.

Supplies of Coal Laid In.

At the convention of miners a resolution was adopted in which they stated that they regretted the circumstances which led to a suspension being necessary, but they were ready to meet with the owners and operators of the mines of each competing district for the purpose of adjusting mining rates upon a living basis and entering into annual agreements that will give stability to their trade and assure peace and tranquility between employers and employees in all mining communities.

The strike will especially affect the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg, whose principal business is the running of coal trains. This company handles over 300 cars a day at the mines. This coal is transported by rail to the connecting lines and is used principally for railroad locomotives. The Rochester delivers to the New York Central daily from eight to ten trains, which are sent to the various yards along the road, and for the past week the railroad has been laying in an extra large supply in anticipation of any trouble. All of the bunkers are filled, and there are hundreds of loaded cars in all of the yards. Their coal supply for the Lyons trestle comes over the Fall Brook, which will be tied up.

The Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg and the Western New York and Pennsylvania will be practically tied up by next Monday night, as at that time all of the coal trains will have been moved to the connecting roads, and there will be nothing for the crews to do, so they will be laid off. On the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg 25 freight crews will be out of work and an equal number of engines.

Eastern roads report to the various coal companies that they have sufficient coal on hand to prolong the strike for from 60 to 90 days. It is thought that in that time the miners can be forced to come to terms.

The Great Northern Strike.

ST. PAUL, April 20.—President Hill of the Great Northern has agreed to a conference with the general officers and local committeemen of the strikers, and this conference will be held as soon as the committeemen all arrive, which will be inside of 48 hours. This refers only to the territory in Minnesota and North Dakota. In the meantime affairs will remain as at present, the road being tied up. Chief Arthur says that the brotherhood cannot indorse the strike, but that individually they hope for its success.

ST. CROIX, Minn., April 20.—Excitement here is more feverish than at any time since the strike began. Train No. 1 arrived here, with the mail car in the rear. Arriving at the station, the strikers immediately uncoupled the train, regardless of the officials, ties accompanying it, no resistance being made on their part. The coaches were switched out and the mail car put back into the baggage car. Then the strikers told the conductor and engineer to proceed with the mail. Trouble is looked for, as the men are getting ugly and, contrary to the advice of the president of the local union, are taking matters into their own hands.

THE AQUIDABAN'S FATE.

The Big Brazilian Insurgent Warship May Be Recovered.

BUENOS AYRES, April 20.—Advices which reached here from Montevideo say the effect that the Aquidaban was in shallow water when the torpedoes exploded that sunk her. The vessel is only partly submerged, and it will probably be a comparatively easy task to float her. No examination has as yet been made of the hull, and it is therefore impossible to state the extent of the damage she sustained.

A telegram from Montevideo states that the Brazilian refugees on board the Portuguese warships there are still in that they are ill treated by the officers of the vessels. All the men belonging to the five vessels of the late insurgent Brazilian fleet commanded by Admiral de Mello have been transferred to the lazaretto. These vessels arrived here on Monday night last and were surrendered to the Argentine government on the condition that their officers and crews be afforded asylum as political refugees.

Argentine crews have been placed on board the vessels pending the arrival of the Brazilian government squadron, to the commander of which the five vessels will be turned over. They will then be manned by Brazilian crews and taken back, probably to Rio Janeiro.

Advices received here confirm the statements to the effect that the insurrection in southern Brazil has completely collapsed. The government forces are complete masters of the situation in Parana and at Desterro, and it is believed that the very few remaining rebels still under arms will shortly, if they have not already made them, make overtures to the government for amnesty, which will, owing to the good offices of the United States, undoubtedly be granted to them.

Hanging Dead In a Row.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., April 20.—At Nolbe, on the northern edge of Wood county, Floyd Baldaugh, an industrious and well to do citizen, while his wife was absent on a visit, took his two children, aged 8 years and 18 months, hung them on rafters in the barn, wrote a note to his wife telling what he had done and hanged himself beside the children. When Mrs. Baldaugh came home, she found the note and her husband and children hanging dead in a row in the barn.

A Magdalen Mobbed.

DEMILLER, O., April 20.—A mob of infuriated men, women and children nearly killed Florence Stevenson, who had been living with Newton Kelm, a prominent business man. Kelm's wife led the mob, and the Stevenson woman was held under the spout of a railway water tank until she was nearly drowned. She was then put on a train and sent out of town. Kelm barely escaped hanging and was stoned out of town.

Dalton's Gang Reported Wiped Out.

PERRY, O. T., April 20.—A dust covered and worn out courier arrived here with the report that a battle to the death had occurred between United States marshals and six members of the famous Dalton gang, headed by Bill Dalton. The fight is reported to have taken place 68 miles south east of here near a town called Ingalls, near the line dividing the Creek Indian reservation from Oklahoma.

The New York's Defects.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The official report of Captain John Philip, commanding the crack United States cruiser New York and relating to the deficiencies found in her by the Admiral Belknap board of inspection during her trial trip, has just been received by the navy department. The report alleges that there are grave defects in the equipments of the vessel.

Dr. Lee Again Acquitted.

NEW HAVEN, April 20.—After deliberating one hour the jury in the case of the state against Dr. J. Edward Lee, charged with murder in the second degree, returned a verdict of not guilty. The doctor was charged with having caused the death of Mrs. George Miller by a criminal operation.

Shot by Robbers.

TROY, N. Y., April 20.—David Ritchie, a wealthy coal dealer, was mortally shot in his office by two young and well dressed men, who demanded money at the point of a revolver. Mr. Ritchie refused, and one of the strangers fired, the ball penetrating his lungs. The assassins escaped.

A Spectacular Suicide.

UNION HILL, N. J., April 20.—Adaline Eravatoski, aged 32 years, committed suicide by jumping from a second story window after having saturated her clothes with oil and then setting fire to them. She was removed to St. Mary's hospital, where she subsequently died.

Harvard Students Give a Play.

BOSTON, April 20.—"The Phormio of Terence" was given its first public performance in America at Sanders theater, Cambridge, by Harvard students. It was a complete success.

GLIMPSES OF AMERICA.

No other publication can equal it for splendor of illustration, in half-tones and colored plates, while every scene pictured is graphically described, not by brief and uninteresting foot notes, but by running text, occupying as much space as the pictures. It is a work admirably planned, charmingly arranged, and satisfactorily completed, the series constituting a book of unparalled magnificence, that both illustrates and exhaustively describes all the matchless scenery of the United States and Canada.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

A KITTEN'S ADVENTURES.

The History Up to Date of Naughty as Related by Himself.

I was born in a stable at the same time as my brother. As regards color, I was what human beings call tortoise shell, and my brother was black and white. The first incident in my life worth mentioning was when my mother came in early one morning and said she was going to make us get our own living, as food was scarce. When she had licked us well, especially our eyes, she told us to follow her. First she had to get over a wall, then across a garden and then over another wall, when we found ourselves on a stable roof. "There," said our mother, "you may stop till some human being takes pity on you." Then, without saying goodby, she jumped over the wall, and we saw her no more.

MOTHER CAME IN EARLY ONE MORNING.

Turning to my brother, I said to him, "It is to be hoped some one takes to us soon," as we were both hungry, and she had not given us any breakfast. After running about the roof for a bit I looked toward a house and saw on a window the face of a human being, who called to me, but I was frightened and ran to hide myself. After a little while a saucer of milk and a piece of something were placed on the roof. I and my little brother ran to see what it was, and it turned out to be a piece of meat. We first drank the milk, which was so nice, and then had a fight over the meat.

After living on the roof for a couple of days we tried to find our way back to our old home, but we were in the wrong way and came upon some dogs, who chased us about till one of them got my little brother and killed him. I was now left alone in the world and knew not what to do, but at last I thought of the milk and the roof, so I left the saucer of milk, but it was a high wall, and I had great difficulty in getting over again. For a week from this time nothing special happened, but at the end of the week I managed to get into the house. The people living here very soon took to me, especially a boy and his aunt, who love me and feed me well. From that day till now I have done nothing but sing for joy.

Who Says It's Apeth?

"I," said Miss Daffydowndilly. "March is too old to sit longer in my mother's lap."

Birds know it and tell it, for April's the month when their summer cottages are raised.

"I," babbled the brook, for it knew all too well that in June its bed would be lost in clover.

Frogs croak out "Yes," "Perhaps" and "I guess," not waiting for the sun to go out of sight.

"We," said the grass blades. "We're tired of that white blanket that's covered us all winter long."

"We," said the marbles. "We've laid in the streets till agates and pewees cry out, 'Fair' and 'No jibes!'"

"I," screams the winter bonnet. "Bring a bandbox and hide me away out of sight of these giddy spring hats."

"I," echoed the dandelion. "The humans are calling for greens; but, pick who you will, I've more yellow hats than any milliner in town."

"Give us back our covers," murmur the open rivers. "We miss the skaters, the jagot fires, the swift horses and cutters, the merry laugh and shout."

And the showers confirmed all the speakers by coming whenever they happened and swelling the brooks, spoiling pretty new hats, wetting Daffydowndilly, making grass blades to grow, turning farmers into fishermen and otherwise proclaiming the month that precedes May flowers.—Good House keeping.

That Little Girl.

I often hear folks talking, a-laughing and a-joking,
About a little girl who "lives not very far from here."
One who's "extremely mussy"
And "meddlesome" and "fussy,"
Who "loves to wander through the house and gets things out of gear."
I'm glad I'm not so mussy
And meddlesome and fussy.
I cannot see why any girl can be so very queer.

I've just heard mother joking, a-scolding and a-joking,
About a little girl who "does not live a mile away."
She says she is "a midget
Made up of mostly fidget,"
And "from Monday until Sunday she does nothing else but play."
I'm glad I'm not "a midget
Made up of mostly fidget."
I'm glad I'm not so little that I cannot quiet stay.

I once heard papa hinting, a-talking and a-hinting,
About a little girl who "doesn't live up in the moon."
He says she's "very silly,
And her first name isn't Billy;"
That she "talks the blessed morning, if she doesn't sleep till noon."
I'm glad I'm not silly,
Though my first name isn't Billy,
And I hardly ever talk at all and always "get up soon."

I've heard some folks complaining, a-sighing and complaining,
About a little girl who "lives next door to folks ther know."
They say she's "very lazy,"
She "almost acts them crazy;"
That she's "always doing nothing and does it very slow."
I'm glad I am not lazy.
I never set folks crazy,
And I work so very, very much I've hardly time to grow.

GOOD HEALTH

HOW TO TREAT SPRAINS.

Valuable Information to Athletes by a Professional "Strong Man."

Athletes in all branches of sport are more or less liable to suffer from overexertion, producing severe sprains of the ends and sinews. Unless properly attended to at once these injuries often cause weeks and months of pain and suffering and sometimes result in permanent injury. People generally do not know that the simplest treatment in these cases is the best. But this is the conclusion arrived at by a New York Herald reporter after an interview with Professor Attila, the "strong man," who has had a personal experience with sprains during his professional career of 20 years.

An accident once happened while Attila and Sandow were performing together. It resulted in the breaking of a number of cords of the biceps and the severe straining of others, causing the entire arm to turn black and producing great pain. There was no outward wound, and the eminent physicians and surgeons of the continent were puzzled over the proper course of treatment to pursue.

Finally Attila left the professors in despair, and at his own suggestion the injured part was wound about with a firm, soft cloth. The first day after the cloth was put on he was able to lift with the injured arm a two pound dumbbell. The second day he raised a three pound weight. He kept increasing the weight daily until he could raise the 50 pound bell. Then he knew he had mastered the injury. In a comparatively short time the wound had healed, and Attila, strange to say, was stronger than ever in this arm.

In cases of strains of cords in the wrist Attila says the injured part should be tightly bandaged and twice a day held under a faucet, allowing cold water to fall on it from a height of two or threefeet. This treatment he claims is natural, very beneficial. In a short time an improvement is noticed under this course of treatment.

Where the tissues of the muscles of the leg are strained the only treatment necessary is very simple. Bandage the injured part tightly and exercise it daily, a little at first. If allowed to remain inactive, the injury grows worse in all cases. The straining of the muscles of the back is best treated by applications of liniment and judicious use of electric treatment.

The More Germs the More Influenza.

It is stated that statistics by the state board of health of Michigan have demonstrated the law that generally influenzas (la grippe) is quantitatively related to the atmospheric ozone—the more ozone the more influenza, and the law that remittent fever is inversely related—the more ozone the less remittent fever.

ETIQUETTE

THE CHRISTENING PARTY.

Modern Customs and Time Honored Traditions of the Occasion.

"Fashion, the fickle mistress of ceremonies, has of late revived the candle party, and to the present generation it has the attraction of novelty.

"Babies who have the good taste to come in the springtime are more generally distinguished for their honor. Nature herself gives the little one a warmer welcome than she could have done earlier in the season and scatters blossoms broadcast," says Harper's Bazar in presenting as follows some of the etiquette of the occasion.

"The time chosen for a christening party is usually when the child is 5 or 6 weeks old. The ceremony is oftenest performed in church, and friends are invited afterward to the house, as in the case of a wedding, but many hesitate to expose the wee, frail treasure to the possible inclemency of the weather and request the clergyman to baptize the child at its own home.

The rooms should be decked with flowers as profusely as possible. In the cities florists will loan daisy plants, lilies, palms and ferns, and in the country nothing more daintily exquisite for decoration can be imagined than sprays and small branches of apple blossom and lilies of the valley.

The infant's toilet is the next consideration, and the "sports behind" will fill calmly. The long and elaborate christening robe is a thing of the past. The supreme question uppermost in the mamma's mind—"whether the baby will be good" during the ordeal of being taken awkwardly in hand by those unaccustomed to such offices is best solved by making the child comfortable. Long, at ease on a pretty lace trimmed pillow, the little limbs are slipped into a sort of pocket formed by a daintily ornamented oval attached to the pillow on three sides. A wide satin ribbon is tied around the precious bundle, its ends meeting in a bow at the child's waist. A "posy" may be placed in the hands of the infant if the baptismal toilet and is tucked in at the little waistband.

A pretty tea gown is worn by the mamma, while the guests come in visiting dress.

After the ceremony a few moments are allowed for congratulation to the parents and admiration of the baby, when a little music generally follows.

Some beautiful and famous lullaby is suitable to such an occasion.

If nothing appropriate to babyhood be selected, the music should be of a religious character.

Candle is served after the music—to those who like it. It is a very thin oatmeal porridge, boiled to a jelly with wine, spices and raisins, after which it is thinned, sweetened and served hot in cups. As it is not palatable to every one, it may be better to substitute for it such light refreshments as are usually offered at an afternoon tea.

All the cakes, bonbons, etc., should be white, and each guest may be presented with a tiny white bonbonniere upon which the baby's name is traced in silver or gold. The boxes may contain bonbons, according to taste, but the top layer at least should be of small, smooth sugar almonds known as "dragees de bapteme," if one would be faithful to time honored traditions.

EDSALL'S

SENATORS ARE ALARMED

Nervous About the Coming Industrial Invasion.

SAY THE PRESIDENT SHOULD ACT

Peffer Wants a Committee Appointed to Hear Grievances—The House Cannot Get Away From the Hawaiian Controversy Boutelle Scores Gresham Again.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The house is making slow progress with the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. Almost the entire day was devoted to thrashing over the old straw in the Hawaiian controversy. The text used as a basis for the debate—a motion to cut off the salary of the Hawaiian minister—was defeated when the vote was taken without division.

During the debate Mr. Boutelle held Secretary Gresham up to public scorn in his usual vehement and impulsive manner. Secretary Gresham, said he, in the Hawaiian matter had been guilty of the most prodigious diplomatic blunder in our history, and to show that this opinion was shared by distinguished Democrats he read from Senator Hill's recent speech the last letter of Secretary Gresham to him.

"What government is Willis accredited to?" he asked, addressing Mr. McCreary.

"The de facto government," replied Mr. McCreary.

"I thank the chairman of the foreign affairs committee for this ray of light," said Mr. Boutelle. "I am glad to learn that the administration has at last recognized the government which John L. Stevens recognized when the revolution occurred." [Republican applause.]

Boutelle Is Sarcastic.

"Does the gentleman not know that ministers are always accredited to the de facto governments?" asked Mr. McCreary.

"Presumably so," retorted Mr. Boutelle "but if I understand the English language in this case Mr. Willis was instructed by Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Gresham to sing sweet songs in the ear of the de facto government, but to secretly recognize her majesty Queen Lil." [Laughter and applause.] The vote was then taken on the Lacey amendment, and it was lost without division.

Mr. Stockdale moved to limit the indefinite appropriation for the payment of ministers and consuls while receiving instructions to $60,000. It was defeated.

About 4 o'clock half the membership of the house suddenly faded away to attend the opening ball game of the season, and when the act was observed Mr. Cannon carried the committee of the whole to a vote on an amendment to prevent the increase of the salary of the Mexican secretary of legation. The Democrats were unable to produce a quorum, and after roll call the house adjourned.

In the Senate.

The day in the senate was almost entirely consumed by a speech against the pending tariff bill by Senator Perkins of California. The speech was mainly devoted to a discussion of the articles in the bill, which directly affected California—wool, fruits, quicksilver, beet sugar, etc.—although he considered other provisions in the bill in which his state was not interested, but which were opposed to Republican principles and which he accordingly arraigned.

But little business was transacted in the morning hour, the agreement of the senate to the report of the conference committee on the urgent deficiency bill being the most important. The Peffer resolution for the appointment of a committee on communications for the purpose of hearing the grievances of Coxey's army was debated by Senators Peffer and Allen, both of whom favored it, but it went over without action by the expiration of the morning hour. Eulogies were pronounced on the late Representative W. H. Enochs of Ohio, after which the senate adjourned.

The Coxey Questions.

Inquiry concerning the proceedings of the executive session of the senate develops the fact that senators take a more serious view of the prospective gathering of Coxeyites and others here than the first report would have seemed to indicate. They do not entertain so much apprehension concerning the humorless followers of Coxey as they do on account of the large number of other organizations reported to be headed toward the city, and they think it possible that the large cities of the eastern seaboard may furnish large contingents if it should become apparent that there will be a sufficient assemblage otherwise to make a cloak for pickpockets and thieves. It has also occurred to some of them that the crowd will necessarily contain an unusual percentage of professional agitators, who, being reckless of consequences, may incite the crowd to riot.

Senators who sat quietly in open session while the Republican senators were discussing the proper method of dealing with the Coxeyites expressed themselves quite freely in executive session to the effect that immediate measures should be taken by the executive department to meet any of the exigencies which may arise.

The fact was not realized that when it looked as if there would be trouble at the inauguration of President Lincoln, General Scott's honeycombed the city with troops, and the announced purpose of General Grant to do the same thing on the occasion of President Hayes' inauguration was also cited.

The opinion is expressed by senators who participated in the executive proceedings that in view of these precedents and the emergency likely to arise President Cleveland would be justified in issuing a proclamation warning the men now on their way to the city in connection with Coxey's movement that the authorities will be prepared to require the strictest observance of order.

The opinion is also freely expressed in the senate and was advanced in executive session that congress cannot afford to and should not do anything looking toward the assistance of the Coxey army while here. It is expected that if a large body of men should assemble, as is now regarded as probable, they will soon find themselves more anxious to secure food to sustain life than money to build roads and will be clamorous for an appropriation to that end.

Effect of the Killing of the Dispensary Law in Charleston.

CHARLESTON, April 20.—One hour after the news of the handing down of the dispensary law decision by the state supreme court upward of 300 blind tigers had miraculously recovered their eyesight and were in full blast. Many of them hung out signs inviting the passersby to "Walk in and have one with the house," and people were by no means slow to accept the invitation. There was no lack of stimulants in the city, as a very immense stock had been laid in when the dispensary constabulary were engaged in the Darlington riot.

The general impression here is that Governor Tillman will call an extra session of the general assembly to pass a new law and then take it up to the state supreme court, which on July 1 will be Tillmanite in politics by the qualification of Justice E. B. Gary.

What will happen in the meantime, however, is difficult to say. Since the Darlington episode the whisky constabulary have been comparatively inactive. No raids of either stores or private residences have been attempted anywhere in the state.

The force of constabulary in this city, formerly numbering from 15 to 20 men, all armed with revolvers and winchester rifles, has been reduced to three men, who confine their attentions to the railroad depots. The town is very quiet, although whisky may be had at any saloon in the city.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 20.—John Gary Evans, a candidate for governor and Governor Tillman's right hand man, declared that the dead-lock in the political camp was ended. It is believed that the Tillman administration will meet the result on this line. The only hope of the administration is said to be to secure the whisky constabulary have been comparatively inactive. No raids of either stores or private residences have been attempted anywhere in the state.

Man Hunt In Pennsylvania.

HARLETON, Pa., April 20.—Angelo Mata, who escaped from the sheriff two days ago while being taken to the penitentiary, and his companion, Rosario Nicholas, an ex-convict, wanted by the local and government authorities, appeared in Freedland and were chased to the mountains by a deputy sheriff and his posse. The fugitives drew revolvers, and after holding their pursuers at bay for half an hour they escaped. Twenty armed Italians, under the leadership of Joseph Ferri, who is on Mata's bond, are in pursuit.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN THIS MORNING, NEAR THE BERCKMAN STREET BRIDGE.

Taken to Muhlenburg Hospital where he Died at Noon.—Unconscious from the Time of the Accident to the End.

The 8.31 train struck a man near the Berckman street bridge this morning knocking him off the track. The man fell as if dead and word was at once sent to Undertaker Casey to go for the remains.

The crew on engine 209 picked up the man when they found that he was still alive.

Instead of taking him to the undertakers he was taken to Muhlenburg Hospital, where every effort was made to save his life.

It was found that he had attained a fracture of the skull. His injuries proved fatal and he died this noon.

As he was unconscious from the time of the accident to his death his name and where he lived, remain a mystery. There was nothing in his pockets by which he could be indentified.

BREVITIES.

—See Ebell's announcement in another column.

—The Rev. Dr. Barnes will address the Young Men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, to-morrow, at 4.15 p. m. The meeting will be preceded by a fifteen minute service of song.

—On Monday night, April 30th, the Social Committee of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church go to Dunellen to repeat "Lord Ulsen's Daughter," which was given so successfully recently in Vincent Chapel.

—Don't fail to obtain Part I of "Glimpses of America." This book contains 96 pages of fine illustrations and reading matter, and is printed on fine plate paper. Send in your order now to this office, as Part II will soon be on hand.

—A full choral vesper will be sung in Grace Church, Seventh and Sycamore streets, Sunday evening, at 7 30. Sermon by Rev. George H. E. Westphal, D. D., of General Theological Seminary, New York. The change in the hour of service is made from 7.45 to 7.30 to allow Mr. Walpole to catch a train for home.

—With an experience of 37 years Mr. H. N. Spencer, of 76 and 78 Somerset street, feels confident that he is able to supply the wants of all who are in need of field, garden and flower seeds,—fresh from the grower, also a full line of vegetable plants in season, and that his prices are as low as first-class goods can be sold.

—The postponed annual meeting of the New Jersey Division of American League of Amateur Photographers will be held in the rooms of the Newark Camera Club, 898 Broad street, Wednesday evening, April 25, at eight o'clock. All interested in the New Jersey Division are especially invited to be present. This is an important meeting, and a full attendance is desired.

MEETING OF THE RAILWAY DIRECTORS.

They Decide to Ask for a Franchise to Netherwood.

The directors of the Plainfield Street Railway Company met yesterday afternoon. All the directors were present except Messrs. Hatfield and Biker. The regular business was transacted. The affairs of the company were found to be going very satisfactorily.

The Dunellen extension matter was not taken up, but the extension to Netherwood was discussed and it was decided to apply to the Common Council for a franchise as soon as the consent of the property owners is secured.

After the meeting, Mr. Nevius, the President, and Mr. Biker, a Director, accompanied Mr. John H. French over the Somerset street line and in a carriage to see about extending the line to Washingtonville, and along the Valley road back of the mountain, according to the particulars published in THE NEWS of Monday, April 9th.

Sociable at Vincent Chapel.

A sociable was given in Vincent chapel last night under the auspices of the Literary Committee of the Epworth League. On account of the inclement weather the attendance was much smaller than had been anticipated. The programme consisted of a recitation, entitled "Sue," by Miss Herbert; a recitation by Miss Locker; vocal solo by Miss Fillmore; and reading by Mr. J. R. Jay.

Refreshments were served by the Social Committee, and consisted of coffee and doughnuts.

The members of the committee are: Miss Trenham, Miss Minnie Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Clark, Clifford McGee and Louis M. Dunavan.

Cottage Prayer Meeting.

There will be cottage prayer meetings of the First Church of Christ on Monday night at the home of Mrs. Wilson, No. 222 Grove street.

Also on Tuesday night at the home of Mr. H. Frayer's, 220 Richmond street. All are welcome to the meetings each night at eight o'clock.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

Clerk Vetterlein's Term Declared Expired and Mr. James K. Arnold Elected Clerk for Two Years—Police Protected—Special Marshals Appointed—No Appropriation Made for the Grand Army Posts—Other Matters.

The Borough Council met in adjourned session last night. All the members were present. Mayor Needham presided. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A communication was received from Mr. C. C. Bolce stating that he had purchased the old Heyniger building before election and the rent of a portion of the building for a polling place should be paid to him. The matter was referred to the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections.

Property-owners on Girard and Myrtle avenues complained of the bad condition of those streets. The same gentlemen also petitioned for crosswalks on Girard, Myrtle and Sycamore avenues. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Messrs. A. D. Thompson and others requested Council to accept the two new hydrants placed on Fairview avenue and to also accept the new streets in Watchung Park, and to have crosswalks laid at the several crossings. Referred to the Street Committee.

Mr. Reed, the borough counsel, was requested to read his opinion in reference to the borough clerkship, as to whether or not Mr. Vetterlein had another year to serve. The opinion is printed in full in another column.

As the office was declared vacant, on resolution, Mr. James K. Arnold was appointed borough clerk for two years.

A report was read from Mr. B. E. Gavin giving a statement of the money received by him for dirt sold during the year. According to the report he had received the sum of $43.75. The report was received and referred to the Street Committee.

Mr. N. B. Smalley's bid for crushed stone was read, he agreeing to furnish stone at the following rates: Dust, 25 cents; Nos. 1 and 1½, 30 cents; No. 2½, 35 cents per ton. The bid was referred to the Street Committee.

Mr. J. H. Cooley petitioned Council to accept Jackson avenue from Westervelt Avenue to Franklin avenue. Referred to the Street Committee.

The Committee on License and Marshals reported that there was no ventilation to the cells of the lockup. The committee recommended that holes be cut in the top of the cells and covered with wire. The committee was empowered to carry out their recommendation at a cost not to exceed $30.

As Patrick Kellegher declined to serve as janitor of the engine house any longer, Mr. Peck offered a resolution appointing him engineer at a salary of $60 per annum. The resolution was adopted, as was also another resolution authorizing Council to appoint a janitor at a yearly salary of $70.

Borough Magistrate Thomas R. Crossley was reappointed at his usual salary, upon Mr. Valiant's resolution.

As the borough ordinances had not been printed in pamphlet form since 1888, the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections was empowered, on resolution of Mr. Valiant, to have the ordinances that had been adopted since that time, printed.

On resolution of Mr. Lounsbury the dog tax was fixed at $2.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution appropriating $25 to the Grand Army Posts to be used in the celebration of Decoration Day.

Mr. Howell said he thought there was a question of whether or not the Council had the right to make such an appropriation.

Mr. Reed's opinion was asked in regard to the matter. Mr. Reed said that according to the Constitution of the State of New Jersey no appropriations, gifts, or pledge of public money to any individual or corporation could be made by governing bodies of municipalities. Therefore, the Council had no legal right to make such an appropriation. Mr. Reed said he wished, for the sake of the Posts, that it was otherwise as Grand Army Posts had his greatest sympathy, he's father having been a Grand Army man and a Post having been named after him.

The following special marshals were appointed: Israel Jones, John Stine, Peter Strain, James Stewart, Jacob Kellegher, Samuel Moore, Richard MacDonald, William Conroy, Henry Bodenheimer, Horace D. Pangborn, Peter Doolinger, Israel Compton, Charles Debele, and Francis M. Whitely.

By resolution the Mayor and Clerk were authorized to negotiate loans of $1,000 for the light account and $1,000 for the borough account.

It was suggested that the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps make an investigation of the floors in the back part of the engine house and ascertain what steps would be necessary to put the floor in proper condition to bear the weight of the engine as the engine had been placed in the back part and the hose carriage in the front to improve better fire service. Mr. Lounsbury said that he had examined the floor and beams and that he did not think it safe in its present condition. The matter was left in the hands of the committee.

Mr. Valiant asked if the Auditing Committee had compared the reports with the treasurer's books, in accordance with the resolution adopted at the last meeting. As the comparison had not been made it was again ordered done, as it is very important to see that there is money in the bank corresponding with the balances shown in the reports.

The following bills were ordered paid:

M. Farrow	$ 2.00
J. S. Stahl	16.97

S. G. Taynor	2.70
W. D. Hubbard	2.00
J. H. Schenck	2.00
G. B. Stewart	1.70
A. M. Griffin	24.00

It was suggested that the clerk would see that bills are in the hands of the different committees before the meeting the claims could be paid much prompter.

Mr. Howell moved that the Chairman of the Street Committee be instructed to notify Mr. T. B. Fenton of Rockview avenue to remove, at once, certain ends of pickets that had been driven into the ground on the outer edge of the sidewalk in front of his place, said pickets being about six inches high and three inches wide and sharpened to a point, being a menace to life and limb, and if they are not removed at once the Street Commissioner shall be empowered to remove them."

Mr. Howell said that in his opinion the pickets had been placed there out of "pure cussedness."

The matter of mendamusing Prospect place from Grove street to Washington avenue was brought up and discussed, but was laid over until the next meeting. Council adjourned.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Courtesies Exchanged.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—My attention has been called to a statement made by a Councilman at the Borough meeting last evening, respecting certain tickets which my gardener put down to try and protect the grass on the edging of my curq between the trees until it has a chance to grow. I wish to say that I was not aware of the same being dangerous to any one who used the sidewalk, as the pickets are two feet from the sidewalk, and I would have had my gardener remove the same if even the thought of danger had occurred to me.

I wish to add that the Councilman's expression that I did such a thing from "pure cussedness" is entirely gratuitous, and scarcely the language of a gentleman, and it certainly does no credit to his constituents to have such a "Reuben" as a representative.

A Boy Badly Bitten.

Yesterday, a boy belonging to "Red Pat" attacked Walter Brokaw, a son of Wm. H. Brokaw, of Dunellen, and badly injured him, by tearing his side and limbs. It was with difficulty that the dog was driven off by a man attracted by the screams of the boy. The father had constable Warden shoot the dog last night as frequent complaints have been made against it. Dr. Brakely cauterized the boy's wounds.

First Coach Due Here at 8.45.

The first coach to make the trip from Philadelphia to New York is scheduled to pass through here at 8.45 this afternoon. It left Philadelphia at eight this morning. South street has been chosen as the route through Plainfield.

A VIOLET TEA.

IN GRACE M. E. CHURCH FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE PIANO FUND.

The Prouty Church Made Prettier Still by the Beautiful Decorations Under the Skillful Arrangement of the Young Ladies.

A violet tea was held in Grace M. E. church last night, under the auspices of the Epworth League. It was held for the benefit of the piano fund and was attended by a large number of people during the evening who liberally bought of the many pretty and handsome articles on sale at the tables. The tables upon which these articles were displayed, were tastefully arranged around the room, while festoons of flowers with their balmy fragrance filling the room, added much beauty to the scene.

The brilliant electric lights were veiled in pretty sitting caps of violet tissue paper, which had a very pleasing and charming effect.

Long streamers of violet and white interwoven and hung from the ceiling in graceful curves. Violet streamers were twined about the posts and pillars in a very pretty way, and were arranged by the young ladies of the church.

The chief refreshments were warm and lemonade and ice cream were in constant demand.

Those who had charge of the different tables were:

Supper Table—Mrs. Lunger, Mrs. Rost, Mrs. Chas. Hummer and Mrs. Taft.

Waitresses—Miss Stafford, Miss McDonald, the Misses Georgie and Cora Van Arsdale, Miss May Conroy, Miss Mattie Van Ness Rose, Miss Randolph and Miss Emma Stevens.

Lemonade—Miss Griffen and Miss Randolph.

Ice Cream—Miss Lunger and Miss Smalley.

Candy Table—Miss Alice Loomis, the Misses Alice and Grace Carroll and Miss Clara Steiner.

Apron Table—Miss Della Voehl, Miss Winckler and Miss Minnie Force.

Kelley Placed Under $400 Bonds.

Charles Kelly, Mr. Fenton's gardener, who was arrested on the charge of stoning Thomas Rooban to escape from Constable Vanderhoef the other night, was tried last night before Justice Crossley. Kelly's defense was that he was merely protecting his employer's property by going with Booban to bring the horse back.

Justice Crossley adjudged him guilty and placed him under $400 bonds for the Grand Jury. In default of bail Kelly spent last night in jail. He secured bail to-day and was released.

That New Atlas of Plainfield.

Mr. B. C. Smith is pushing a canvas in the city and borough for the atlas which is being prepared by City Engineer F. A. Dunham. The atlas will be sold only by subscription and the proofs will be returned to the engraver in the course of a few days. It is, therefore, important that everyone desiring a copy of the valuable work shall have his name on the subscription list at once in order that it may be known how large an edition will be required.

A Series of Sermons at All Souls'.

The evening service will be resumed at All Souls' church, Park avenue, to-morrow, and by request, the pastor, the Rev. Hobart Chatfield, will begin a series of sermons to-morrow night upon "Unitarian Christianity," as follows:

"Its Faith," "Its Freedom," "Its Fellowship," and "Its End and Aim."

Stolen Property Recovered.

The horse and wagon stolen from Mr. Thomas Thoms yesterday was recovered to-day by Chief Grant, who received a telegram from Newark that it had been found there on the streets, the horse wandering about without a driver.

THE way to let the people know you have something for sale is to put that fact right under this head.

Two Ways of Making Money

I. Get a job in the United States mint.

II. Attend the great sale that is now on at White's. You will find it the surest and most pleasant way. We have been busy during the past month buying goods from manufacturers who wanted cash and were willing to sell at one price, and we will offer the entire lot of goods at remarkably low figures.

HERE'S { THE GOODS. THE PRICES.

DRESS GOODS—The profit cut off of every piece of Dress Goods in the store. The largest purchase of Dress Goods we ever made at one time we made last week. Over two hundred pieces of fine imported dress fabrics, not one piece costing less than 60c. per yard, and some 75 and 80c. We put them all on one table at the remarkably low price of 39c. per yard. All on table No. 1.

HOUSE FURNISHING DEPT.—Our regular annual sale of granite iron ware takes place this week. We put on sale over two hundred cases of this ware. Will be sold at the same prices you pay for tinware.

Granite iron plates	Our price	Regular price
" " saucepans	12c.	25c.
" " "	16c.	35c.
" " stew "	23c.	50c.
" " tea kettles	39c.	60c.
" " coffee pots	45c.	1.00
" " "	67c.	1.50
" " "	87c.	2.00
	49c	90c.

SPRING COATS AND CAPES—The entire line of one of the leading coat and cape manufacturers of New York city. We cleared out the entire line one third off and they will be sold the same way. Every garment is made of the best material, handsomely trimmed and made in the latest style. In addition to coats and capes, you will find in this department and elegant line of house wrappers and street dresses. Fine cambric wrappers, ready made, 89c. This is a new department, and in bring it before the people we have made prices [very attractive.

MATTINGS—At the recent trade sale in New York, we bought over two hundred rolls of the finest matting made at lower prices than matting ever sold for before. We offer a good heavy matting for 10c. per yard. Extra heavy seamless fancy matting, 14c. Extra heavy seamless white matting. A great bargain, 14c. Worth, 20c. Linen warp seamless matting, 25c. Regular value 40c.

The above goods and prices are just a few of the many bargains the house will offer during the sale. Every Department is overcrowded with the best of everything and you can rest assured that the prices are the lowest.

WHITE, of Plainfield.

Grand Concert and Ball of the P. C. B. Club, at MUSIC HALL, Wednesday, April 25, '94.

"JIM" BABITT SENTENCED.

He was Given the Choice o Paying $50 or Going to Jail for 30 Days.

"Jim" Babbitt, who was found guilty last Saturday of keeping a place on East Front street, where gambling is carried on, was arraigned this morning, by City Judge Coddington to pay a fine of $50 or spend 30 days in jail.

In sentencing Babbitt Judge Coddington said he was determined to break up gambling in Plainfield and the fact that Babbitt had allowed the playing of "crap" in his place, and furnished the wherewithal to play it with, made him as guilty as though he saw the "shoot crap."

Babbitt's defense had been that the men "shot crap" when he was away from the pool room.

In the City Court.

John King, charged with being disorderly, was released and sentence suspended.

For violating the hack or Jitneys Henry Hadden was arraigned. He pleaded nonsuit, and sentence was suspended.

The case of Michael Killian and Mary O'Rourke vs. each and vs. the city, was tried. Mrs. O'Rourke made a complaint against Killian and Killian made a complaint against Mrs. O'Rourke. Both were adjuged guilty and sentence suspended. Killian's fine of $6 was remitted.

FLOWERED GOODS THE THING.

They Will Be Quite Popular In the Country and by the Sea.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Flowered goods are "the thing" this summer, both with woven and stamped figures. Satin princesse comes in all the delicate evening shades brocaded with small flowers in their natural, brilliant colors. Gingham nurses are also shown with damasse floral effects, and black moires with tapestry flower designs. Striped chintz patterns are reproduced in silk weaves, the stripes being in satin of delicate tones mingled with tiny sprays or bouquets. Then comes the vast array of taffetas and surahs, having self colored florals and clusters of flowers and leaves in a woven pattern. These are also shown in a variety of changeable tints, and in that case the figure has a different tone from that of the ground. In addition to these appear the usual printed India and china silks—oval, pretty and inexpensive—for summer gowns, and yet wearing very well.

FIG. RED INDIA SILK GOWN.

Besides the flowered silks mentioned there are many others prettily sprinkled with floral designs, and, daintiest of all, French organdies in white and delicate tints, embroidered with dots and spots, and with nosegays or detached blossoms. These, combined with lace, make charming summer gowns. Of course the popularity of these filmy fabrics has produced styles suited to them, involving puffs, ruffles, panniers, draperies and shirrings of all sorts. As usual, these special fashions favor the slender woman rather than the plump one, but the latter can always fall back on the tailor made styles, which are here particularly, and which are not only neat, but simple. Novices often proclaim that plain styles are more difficult to make than complicated ones, but this is not nevertheless a fact that a much trimmed gown badly made looks worse than a simple one equally badly made, for it has the additional disadvantage of pretentiousness.

A sketch is given of a gown of printed India silk, the skirt of which is plain in front, but shirred and gathered at the back. The round bodice is gathered in at the waist and has a square lace yoke outlined with a silk ruffle. The sleeves, which have been gathered at the elbow, are tight below it and have lace cuffs. A velvet ribbon belt surrounds the waist from which depend two long ends. Four velvet ruches trim the bottom of the front of the skirt.

FRANCES CRESSINI.

Caught Fire from a Lamp.

The fire department was called out last night by an alarm from box 12, caused by a lamp setting fire to the woodwork in Babbitt's pool room. The flames were easily extinguished and the damage by fire was slight, but it was considerable loss to the city through the amount of hose which was suddenly burst in a manner somewhat strange. There are ugly rumors about in connection with the matter.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

MR. REED'S OPINION.

The Law Governing the Office of Clerks in Boroughs.

To the Honorable the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—Pursuant to your resolution referring to me for an opinion the question of whether or not there is a vacancy in the office of borough clerk, I have carefully investigated the subject.

The Act under which the Borough of North Plainfield was originated was approved April 8th, 1873, and section five, as, thereof, provided that upon the organization of the first Council elected after the creation of the borough, should be appointed clerk, who, in the words of the statute, "shall hold his office at the pleasure of the Council."

Supplement Revised Statutes p. 42—Sec. 5.

That course was adopted in North Plainfield and has been followed down to this time, the resolution appointing the clerk having always stated that the officer was appointed "to serve" at the pleasure of the Mayor and Council for a term not to exceed one year," or words to that effect.

It is now asserted that the law governing the subject has been changed to the extent that the power of fixing the term of office of the clerk has been taken from the Council and the term has been fixed by the legislature at two years.

Upon examination I find that such is unquestionably the fact.

An Act approved April 14th, 1891, provided that in all boroughs the term of office of every clerk thereafter elected or appointed should be two years.

Laws of 1891—p. 417.

Such law was passed until after our clerk had been elected in April, 1891, and consequently did not effect the term that year.

On March 24th, 1892, that act was amended in so far as it related to certain townships (namely all those townships which are governed by a special charter) but re-enacted the provision that the term of borough clerks thereafter appointed should be two years.

Laws of 1892—p. 405.

That Act went into effect March 26th, 1892, and still remains in force.

It cannot be successfully contended that the Council can by any resolution alter the statute law.

In April, 1893, the Council had the power to appoint the clerk, and it did so, but the statute fixed the term of office at two years.

The clerk chosen in April, 1893, was to see expiration of two years, and it follows that unless there occurred some event which created a vacancy in position or removal from office, he remained clerk until April, 1894.

The clerk appointed in April, 1893, was Mr. Brokaw. Both himself and the Council understood that the appointment was for but one year, and Mr. Brokaw, acting upon that understanding, voluntarily surrendered the office in April, 1893, and made no claim upon it nor attempted to exercise it after that date. I am clear that in view of the said circumstances surrounding that incident were such, as to create a vacancy in the office. As effecting the legality of the formality required and the resignation had been formally accepted.

Such being the situation Mr. Vetterlein was appointed in April, 1893, by resolution the form of which I do not specify.

What was the effect of that resolution?

The answer is to be found in the statute governing the filling of vacancies in such offices.

The statute provides as follows:

"That in case of vacancy in any such office caused by death, resignation, inability, disqualification, removal from, or neglect or refusal to enter upon the office, it shall be lawful for the said board (council) to appoint others in their stead to fill such office for the unexpired term thereof."

Even if no such provision were made in the statute the appointment must have been considered to be for the unexpired term.

That is the way the case where the term is fixed by law.

It follows that the appointment of Mr. Vetterlein in April, 1893, was in law to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Brokaw and that term has now expired. As I have stated, the office is vacant and should be filled by appointment which by law will be for two years terminating April, 1895.

This makes it unnecessary to go into the question whether or not Mr. Vetterlein would not be stopped, by reason of accepting the position under the resolution by which he was appointed, from claiming the office beyond the period expressed in the resolution.

In the case of the assessor, to which reference has been made, the resolution appointing him was held to be an attempt to limit the term, but declared that he was appointed to serve "for the term provided by law."

Date, April 20th, 1894.

GEN. NEGLEY'S BONDS LEVIED ON.

An Alert Creditor Read of Their Recovery.—The Thief Not Caught.

Michael Coleman, the young man who stole from Gen. James S. Negley of this city a valise full of railway bonds and other papers, has not been arrested yet by the police, although detectives were on the hunt for him in New York all day yesterday. As told in yesterday's News the young man had worked for Gen. Negley for considerable time and left in March. He did not quit, and upon his discharge he carried off the valise and its contents. Gen. Negley did not notify the police, but he has been on the lookout for the thief ever since. He went yesterday to the Weehawken police station and identified the valise, the bonds, and the other papers, as his property.

The bonds were fifty-five 6 per cent. bonds of the New Castle Northern Railway Company, of which Gen. Negley declined to give a further description of them, and said that he could not fix a value on them. The bonds were the record of the New Castle Northern Railway in Poor's Railway Manual. The bonds are to run fifty years. Gen. Negley became one of them as security for $3. However, Deputy Sheriff Carraher arrived upon them yesterday under an execution from an old claim in favor of the Fifth National Bank of Pittsburg, obtained years ago against Gen. Negley on March 26, 1885, for $2,695. Carraher saw Capt. Schmittberger and presented the execution. Under the rules of the Police Department the bonds go to Property Clerk Merritt, and the claim of the deputy sheriff that he would need the latter's receipt for the bonds did not hold them subject to the Sheriff's orders.

Besides the bonds mentioned as being found in the valise were several checks payable to the General's order, each of which bore two signatures. The checks were for $120,000 and $100,000 respectively. There was also found in the bag a great signed by Jesse Pretorts, Jr., Capt. Schmittberger thinks concerned timber lands in Canada. There were also some coal mining stock certificates made out to the General.

MR. REED'S OPINION.

The Law Governing the Office of Clerks in Boroughs.

To the Honorable the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

WILD SCENES IN OMAHA

Remarkable Outbreak of Sympathy For Kelly's Men.

THE MOB SEIZES A TRAIN FOR HIM.

The Leader of the Army Refused to Accept It Because It Was Stolen and Starts To-day to March His Men East—Railroads Flatly Refuse Transportation.

OMAHA, April 21.—General Kelly is all the good words hitherto said of him, and more. He displayed the rarest judgment and facility for war. He declined to put his men on board a train stolen at Council Bluffs—stolen by the engineers and firemen of the Union Pacific. It was a Union Pacific engine, with Union Pacific cars, on the Rock Island track. Kelly declined it because he said he had not yet broken any law and did not intend to start in here.

There was great excitement here all day, and it was intensified at nightfall by the news that a train had been captured to relieve Kelly.

Crowds thronged the streets, and an immense open air meeting was held. Rumors of the calling out of federal troops and state troops, of deaths in Kelly's camp and of every conceivable nature kept the crowd on a tension hard to withstand. But no actual disorder occurred, and as if by a miracle the calm that seemed inevitable was avoided, and Kelly's men slept at Weston. At daybreak they marched to Council Bluffs, and at noon a start will be made on foot. Quiet was restored in the city.

Appealing to the Railroads.

While the committees were at work in Council Bluffs other committees were besieging the different telegraph offices with messages to the presidents of the Iowa trunk lines. The following was sent:

To Marvin Hughitt, President Chicago and Northwestern Railway; R. R. Cable, President Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway; Roswell Miller, President Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, Chicago.

Kelly's army is at Weston exposed to the elements, with provisions for two days; are suffering, but patient. United in their determination to go through; have thus far committed no trespass whatever; are orderly and obedient to all requests of their leader and are being furnished with provisions by the charity of the people of Iowa. We have thrown the responsibility upon our shoulders for the gravity of the situation. Can you not, gentlemen, for the great organizations you represent, assume to do in the interests of humanity what you would not be justified in doing except in this great emergency?

HON. W. H. M. PUSEY, Chairman.

This was at once followed by this one:

From the government building we are receiving a crowd of 30,000 citizens of Omaha. We understand they have come over to demand with force of numbers that something be done to prevent the marching of Kelly's army. The citizens are now headed toward the Milwaukee tracks. If you were here, you would realize that something must be done at once. We appeal to you to help relieve this communitary from the impending danger and threatens and relieve the suffering of these men.

H. E. DENNER, Judge District Court.
F. E. MCDONALD, Clerk District Court.
J. J. SPEDMAN, Clerk Federal Court.
THOMAS BOWMAN, Postmaster.

Soon after 4 o'clock this afternoon a detachment of Union Pacific shopmen was on the way across the bridge, and a Council Bluffs escort went down to meet them. They formed a line, with red flags, flags waving and blue ribbons, the badges of the army, in nearly every buttonhole.

To the thundering of bass drums they marched up to Broadway and went to Bayliss park. The streets of Council Bluffs by this time were black with a yelling, cheering crowd. Travel in every direction was almost suspended. Flags were fluttering from numberless windows, and on every corner crowds were grouped to listen to the labor orations.

The advance guards of the shopmen were armed with loaves of bread borne on the end of flagstaffs, and the line appeared to be endless. Above all the din of the men already arrived and awaited the result of the conference then in progress.

Railroad Officials Refuse.

Replies were finally received from the messages to the railway presidents denying the request, and then the conference between the citizens' committee and the railroad officials ended. The information that no train would be furnished was conveyed to the waiting thousands, who had congregated in the park, and a halt awaited the coming of Chairman Tichenor. Reaching the grounds, he elbowed his way through the crowd and ascended the courthouse steps.

When he announced the result of the conference, it was greeted with roars of howls, fierce yells and cries. Making a short address he stated that the committee had decided to wait two hours, when, if no train was furnished, one would be taken by force and the men would march his men would be loaded on and started on their eastward journey. He spoke in the name of the police force and mentioned the men against any destruction of property. After the meeting on the courthouse square, led by a band and with thousands of flags, the men formed in line and marched to Bayliss park.

While the committee of Omaha men was interviewing the governor in Attorney General Stone's office a somewhat similar and yet decidedly different scene was being enacted in the law office of Wright & Baldwin, in Council Bluffs. In response to a call issued during the early morning, had collected at Dohanny's Opera House, and under the leadership of Mrs. Fred Herman they went to see Mr. Baldwin.

The ladies had formed a procession among themselves that Baldwin was an ogre who ate small babies for breakfast, and they were consequently prepared to use force in getting him to subscribe to the idea of furnishing transportation for the Kellyites forthwith.

One group of women tackled Baldwin, and another appealed to Wright. The latter succumbed to the storm, assigning to others and profitable to up one. Mr. Baldwin explained that it was impossible for him to act contrary to the desires of the railway officials, to whose orders he was subject. He referred the ladies to the governor.

The ladies succeeded in adding to the general tumult, but obtained little satisfaction from the governor. Mrs. Herman and she had just completed an organization of the ladies of Council Bluffs, and that if other means to aid Kelly in his onward march failed she and her followers would take possession of a train, seeing that it reached Chicago. This lady is working in conjunction with and is backed up by the entire committee.

For almost the first time since he had known her Royal Kenton was left alone with Marian Percy for an hour. They sat under the apple trees, and he told her the details of the battle of Bull Run as far as he had gathered them, of the interviews with Jackson, the object of his scout, his hopes and fears of the future.

"You enlisted to serve your state," she said when opportunity came. "This is no longer a question of what a state may or may not do. It is no longer Virginia, but a southern confederacy. Do you feel the same obligation?"

"Does the same obligation exist?" he queried in reply.

"Certainly not. I have dared to so assert and have almost been called a traitor for my language. One does not need to be a politician or the daughter of a politician to realize that the success of the newborn confederacy means the downfall of the republic. And yet Virginians cannot return to their homes and lay aside their weapons of war."

"Thus far I have cast my fortunes with Virginia," replied Kenton, "and it is too late to retreat now, even if I so desired. What the end will be no man can predict."

They talked of other things as they sat on the rude bench Farmer Hastings had constructed that he might smoke his pipe in the shade and still look out over the dusty highway which ran past his door. There was no declaration of love by word of mouth, but I think that some conclusion was arrived at just the same, and that both were happy over it in a silent way.

Dinner had just been eaten when one of the colored servants announced the approach of a body of Federal cavalry from the direction of Washington. Kenton counted them while they were yet half a mile away and made the number to be 20. It was a patrol, and it might stop or pass on.

"You see the situation," said Marian as she approached Kenton, who was carefully examining his revolver. "You could not beat them off single handed, and if you are discovered here you will be taken prisoner and the rest of us subjected to annoyance and insult. You must go at once."

"And leave you unprotected?"

"Our people have an idea that the Yankees have horns and hoofs," she laughed, "but I have lived among them for years, as you know. They will not make war on old men and defenseless women. Go! There is no time to lose! They are surely going to stop here!"

Kenton retreated through the orchard to the cover of a stone wall 200 feet in rear of the house. He was scarcely sheltered when the troopers filed into the yard through the gate and surrounded the house. The captain in command dismounted and was about to rap on the wide open front door when Marian appeared.

"Well?" she queried as he looked at her in the greatest surprise for half a minute.

"Ah, excuse me!" he stammered. "I am looking for some one—a man—a man who is supposed to be a Confederate scout or spy."

"There is only one white man here—the old farmer himself. We have seen no stranger. You are at liberty to search."

"Oh, no, no! The word of a lady is amply sufficient. Perhaps he took the other road. Sergeant, re-form the men in the highway."

CHAPTER IX.

When the troop had disappeared up the dusty highway, Kenton returned to the house to say goodby to its inmates, and half an hour later he had turned his face southward, satisfied that he had secured all information possible for a scout to pick up. The farmer posted him as to where he would likely strike the Confederate outposts and warned him what highways to avoid, but on that very day McClellan was pushing his cavalry forward and seizing new territory. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon as Kenton, who had been traveling in the fields and under cover of the forest, was about to cross a highway he heard the click, click of a carbine, and a voice called to him:

"Halt where you are, or you are a dead man!"

It was a Federal vidette, dismounted and posted among the bushes which fringed the highway. Kenton looked up to find himself covered by a carbine. Both were on the same side of the road. He had approached the vidette in rear, and had he exercised more vigilance would have detected his presence in time to avoid him. The men were not over 20 feet apart when Kenton got the summons to halt.

Many of the Federal troops were still dressed in the gray uniforms supplied by their respective states, while the Confederates had a variety of uniforms, and it was difficult to detect one side from the other. The vidette had done his duty in halting the prowler, but he was not sure what sort of game he had bagged.

"Throw up your hands!" he commanded as he advanced.

Kenton obeyed. He was armed only with a revolver, and as that was hidden from sight he appeared defenseless.

"Now, then, who are you?" asked the Federal as he came to a halt scarce six feet away.

"I might ask you the same question," replied the scout, making a great effort to appear cool and indifferent.

"I know you might, but I guess you won't! Answer my question!"

"I have information to give."

"What is it?"

"Which side are you on?"

"Oh, it makes a difference, does it? Well, I'm a Confederate. What's your news?"

Kenton looked about him in an uneasy manner as if he had fallen into a trap and contemplated making a bolt to escape.

"Say, you look like a reb, but act like a Yank," laughed the man as he lowered his carbine. "I guess you've got news, and I guess you want to go to headquarters."

"Will you kindly tell me which way to go to strike headquarters?"

"I'll do better'n that—I'll go with you to the picket post and see that you are passed along. Have you been scouting?"

"Yes."

"Seen any rebs?"

"Plenty of them."

"Well, come along, and I'll ride down the road with you to the post. We are posted along here in hopes to catch a reb scout who's been sneaking along our front for two or three days. What did you say your name was?"

"Kenton."

"And mine is Fisher. Hear anything about when we are going to move?"

"Not a word, though the army seems to be all ready."

"It is ready, and why McClellan doesn't push down and walk all over the

"Throw up your hands!" he commanded as he advanced.

Confederate army is a puzzle to me. Seems as if he was waiting to let them get a good ready. Everybody is giving him ball Columbia, but I suppose he knows what he's about. What command do you belong to?"

The pair had been slowly walking side by side down to where the cavalryman's horse was hitched to the limb of a tree. The Federal had quite accepted Kenton as belonging to his side and was planning to do him a good turn by guiding him to the reserve. Kenton must avoid that. He had hoped to do it by stratagem, and he had excuses already on his tongue when asked for his command. Answer he must, but as he did not know the exact location of a single Federal regiment his answer would probably betray him. He was hesitating when the trooper repeated:

"What regiment do you belong to, and where is it stationed?"

"I'm independent," replied the scout as he suddenly snatched at the carbine and twisted it out of the other's grasp. "Now throw up your hands! Up higher! I see you have a revolver, but if you drop your hands by so much as an inch I shall fire on you! Forward! March into the woods!"

"By George, but you don't tell me you are a rebel!" exclaimed the astonished and bewildered cavalryman.

"I don't know yet whether I am or not," replied Kenton. "I'm a Virginian and in the Confederate army, and whether we are rebels or patriots is a question I haven't settled. Keep to the left."

"And you may be the very rebel scout we were hoping to capture!"

"You are pretty near right about that. Keep right on—I'm coming! Now halt and keep your hands still up!"

"What are you going to do with me?" asked the man as he was disarmed and permitted to face about.

"How far is it to the nearest Confederate outpost?"

"About two miles down this road."

"How many videttes between us and the post?"

"Three or four. You are not going to kill me out here in cold blood?"

"You may rest easy on that score," replied Kenton. "A year hence war will mean devastation, destruction, murder and assassination, but men's hearts are not brutalized yet. I must reach the Confederate outpost, but I can't do it by the road."

"I don't think you could fool all the others as you did me," said the cavalryman, with a sickly smile.

"The question is what to do with you? If I set you at liberty, you'll raise an alarm."

"Guess I would—in fact, I know I would."

SCORED THE MINISTER.

Denunciation for the Man Who Married a Little Girl to a Tramp.

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—William Eanswood, who has the appearance of a Coxey army recruit, with his stubby beard and dilapidated appearance, appeared in the dock before Judge Gordon to answer to charges growing out of his recent marriage in Camden. The prosecutrix was his 15-year-old bride, Dora Hart, a dark haired girl, with childish, innocent face and short skirts, whom he had inveigled by means of intimidation to the house of Rev. Dr. Burrell, where they were married.

In charging the jury Judge Gordon said: "There is one feature of this case which is probably the most abhorrent of all its incidents, and that is the facility with which this marriage was procured. It appears that this full grown man of degraded appearance took by threats this 15-year-old girl in short dresses, with her hair hanging girlishly down her back, to the house of this man called a minister of God, who promptly performed a marriage ceremony uniting these two man and wife.

"If this minister was within this jurisdiction and amenable to our laws, I would not hesitate a moment as to my duty, but would place him in the dock with this defendant, where he rightly belongs. No language can adequately characterize the baseness of his conduct. It was by his act that this crime you are now trying to consummated, and no house in Camden could have been deceived as to the youth of this girl."

He Killed a Green Goods Man.

BROOKLYN, April 21.—In the trial of Joseph Hoerner, alias Joseph Hall, for murder in the first degree in the killing of George Phillips, the notorious green goods man, the jury returned with a verdict of not guilty. Hall, with his brother, Robert, came from Steelton, Pa., on May 13, 1893, in response to a circular.

McLeaan Knocked Out.

HARTFORD, April 21.—After an exciting series of bouts between several good boxers at the athletic entertainment by the Hartford Wheel club James D. Caffney of New London, champion welterweight of New England, met Jack McLeaan of Holyoke. McLeaan was knocked out in the third round.

"Seen any rebs?"

"Plenty of them."

"Well, come along, and I'll ride down the road with you to the post. We are posted along here in hopes to catch a reb scout who's been sneaking along our front for two or three days. What did you say your name was?"

"Kenton."

"And mine is Fisher. Hear anything about when we are going to move?"

"Not a word, though the army seems to be all ready."

"It is ready, and why McClellan doesn't push down and walk all over the

"Throw up your hands!" he commanded as he advanced.

Confederate army is a puzzle to me. Seems as if he was waiting to let them get a good ready. Everybody is giving him hail Columbia, but I suppose he knows what he's about. What command do you belong to?"

The pair had been slowly walking side by side down to where the cavalryman's horse was hitched to the limb of a tree. The Federal had quite accepted Kenton as belonging to his side and was planning to do him a good turn by guiding him to the reserve. Kenton must avoid that. He had hoped to do it by strategem, and he had excuses already on his tongue when asked for his command. Answer he must, but as he did not know the exact location of a single Federal regiment his answer would probably betray him. He was hesitating when the trooper repeated:

"What regiment do you belong to, and where is it stationed?"

"I'm independent," replied the scout as he suddenly snatched at the carbine and twisted it out of the other's grasp. "Now throw up your hands! Up higher! I see you have a revolver, but if you drop your hands by so much as an inch I shall fire on you! Forward! March into the woods!"

"By George, but you don't tell me you are a rebel!" exclaimed the astonished and bewildered cavalryman.

"I don't know yet whether I am or not," replied Kenton. "I'm a Virginian and in the Confederate army, and whether we are rebels or patriots is a question I haven't settled. Keep to the left."

"And you may be the very rebel scout we were hoping to capture!"

"You are pretty near right about that. Keep right on—I'm coming! Now halt and keep your hands still up!"

"What are you going to do with me?" asked the man as he was disarmed and permitted to face about.

"How far is it to the nearest Confederate outpost?"

"About two miles down this road."

"How many videttes between us and the post?"

"Three or four. You are not going to kill me out here in cold blood?"

"You may rest easy on that score," replied Kenton. "A year hence war will mean devastation, destruction, murder and assassination, but men's hearts are not brutalized yet. I must reach the Confederate outpost, but I can't do it by the road."

"I don't think you could fool all the others as you did me," said the cavalryman, with a sickly smile.

"The question is what to do with you? If I set you at liberty, you'll raise an alarm."

"Guess I would—in fact, I know I would."

SCORED THE MINISTER.

Indignant Jew Who Married a Little Girl to a Tramp.

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—William Eamwood, who has the appearance of a Coxey army recruit, with his stubby beard and dilapidated appearance, appeared in the dock before Judge Gordon to answer two charges growing out of his recent marriage in Camden. The prosecutrix was his 12-year-old bride, Dora Hart, a dark-haired girl, with childish, innocent face and short skirts, whom he had inveigled by means of intimidation to the house of Rev. Dr. Burrell, where they were married.

In charging the jury Judge Gordon said: "There is one feature of this case which is probably the most abhorrent of all its incidents, and that is the facility with which this marriage was procured. It appears that this full grown man of degraded appearance took by threats this 15-year-old girl in short dresses, with her hair hanging girlishly down her back, to the house of this man called a minister of God, who promptly performed a marriage ceremony uniting them as man and wife.

"If this minister was within this jurisdiction and amenable to our laws, I would not hesitate a moment as to my duty, but would place him in the dock with this defendant, where he rightly belongs. No language can adequately characterize the baseness of his conduct. It was by his act that this crime you are now trying was consummated, and no honest man could have been deceived as to the youth of this girl."

He Killed a Green Goods Man.

BROOKLYN, April 21.—In the trial of Joseph Hoemer, alias Joseph Hall, for murder in the first degree in the killing of Georges Phillips, the notorious green goods man, the jury returned with a verdict of not guilty. Hall, with his brother, Robert, came from Scranton, Pa., on May 12, 1893, in response to a circular.

McLeaco Knocked Out.

HARTFORD, April 21.—After an exciting series of bouts between several good boxers at the athletic entertainment by the Hartford Wheel club James D. Caffrey of New London, champion welterweight of New England, met Jack McLeaco of Holyoke. McLeaco was knocked out in the third round.

HAWLEY SCORED ALLEN

Called the Nebraska Senator's Speech Anarchistic.

SPICY EXCHANGE OF TARIFF VIEWS

Senator McPherson Denies That Democrats Are Blocking the Bill — Three Tariff Speeches Made—Mr. Vorhee Has to Be Cautioned.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The senate proceedings were enriched with events of interest, the first being the reply of Senator Hawley to the speech of Senator Allen on Coxey's army of the commonweal. Senator Hawley was vigorous in his remarks and took occasion to defend the dignity of the senate and asserted that the speech made by Senator Allen was more fitted to a meeting of anarchists than the senate of the United States. Mr. Hawley was listened to with attention, and the Nebraska senator was evidently anxious to reply, but was cool off at the moment of time.

Senator Hawley said that it was a matter of common sense that the behavior of multitudes around the capital should be carefully guarded by laws and rules and by a sufficient number of police; and in cases of necessity by the military, to the end that the constitution and laws and rules of the senate should be observed in every inch of ground and every second of time.

Hawley Replies to Allen.

He was also pained to hear the senator from Nebraska (Mr. Allen) refer to the organized militia of the District of Columbia in the terms of contempt which he did. The militia was a credit to the government, and it was thought wise that instead of being dependent on the regular military he have troops of citizens.

Senator Allen had also referred to "a person named Ordway." Senator Hawley said he took great pleasure in handing testimony to the gallantry, courage and high personal character of General Ordway, commander of the District militia. It was quite right also to represent the people of the organization as unemployed over the head or thrusting the bayonets through them. He ventured to say that General Ordway has given more study to the question than the senator from Nebraska, and not one step would be taken by him except at the command of the civil power.

These men who were cursing here did not represent the general views of the American people. They were not coming with the intention of prejudging themselves at the feet of congress, but to impress them by their presence.

In conclusion Mr. Hawley said: there were many other things in the remarkable speech of Mr. Allen which should be refuted, but he did not propose to do it. "I am sorry to say," he said, "but I feel bound to say in the spirit of that the senator from Nebraska was such as would be received with applause by a gang of anarchists and it would not require a microscope to discover in it the microbes and bacilli of anarchism."

A Tariff Colloquy.

Senator McPherson of New Jersey replied to the charges that have been made against certain Democratic senators that they were obstructing the tariff bill and insisted that he was doing nothing of the kind.

The tariff speeches were by Senators Gallinger of New Hampshire, McMillan of Michigan and Dolph of Oregon. The latter did not finish his speech and will probably conclude today. During Senator Gallinger's speech there was a spicy colloquy between Senators Gray, Aldrich and himself, in which the Wilson bill and its result on recent elections were discussed.

Senator Frye interrupted Senator Gallinger to remark that he had understood that the recent election had destroyed the Democratic party in New England, but that he did not know it had destroyed it in the United States. Just then Senators Gray and Walsh, Democrats, entered the chamber and joined in the laugh which Mr. Frye had started.

Senator Gallinger then went on with his speech, and referring sarcastically to the good old Democratic days, "when the Walker tariff was in force," he read the testimony of a well known manufacturer, which contradicted the claim of prosperity.

He was interrupted by Senator Gray, who wanted to know whether the manufacturer had said anything about the hard times under the McKinley act, which act had been marked by an unprecedented number of strikes and riots, in which a great many men had been killed. Senator Aldrich replied and said that the people were sick of the tariff bill, as was shown by the reversal the Democrats were receiving at recent elections.

Senator Gray retorted that the people were not sick of tariff reform, as shown by the mandate given by an overwhelming majority in 1892. Since then the tariff had not entered into the elections.

Senator Aldrich denied that he had said that the people were sick of tariff reform. He had said and meant to affirm that the people objected with great unanimity to the kind of tariff reform now before congress. It was the sundecrypt measure, which was neither protection nor free trade, that the people were disgusted with. In his part of the country there was not a Democrat of any kind who did not denounce the present legislation.

No Test Wanted Now.

Senator Gray replied that he did not care to pose as a political prophet, and was only sorry to see the question one by a popular vote, when Senator Gallinger suggested the advisability of postponing further action on the pending bill until it could be referred to the people in November and asked Senator Gray if he would agree to this.

"I would not dare to go home," replied Mr. Gray, "if I did agree."

"I shall be very much surprised," said Senator Aldrich, "if a great many senators on the opposite side do not soon come to the conclusion that the income tax is a very important feature of the tariff bill."

"Is the senator opposed to the income tax?" asked Mr. Gray.

"I am opposed to the income tax and every other feature of the tariff bill before the senate," replied Mr. Aldrich.

Senator Gray proposed an amendment to the rules designed to stop the practice of senators from reading their speeches and to prevent the reading of long extracts from books, papers and pamphlets as part of speeches. The object is to put an end to the consumption of time. A long debate can be precipitated upon the proposed rule if the committee should ever report it to the senate, as it was the case when a proposition for closure was brought into the senate during the consideration of the election bill of the fifty-first congress.

The reconciliary in the house were very unsteering. Practically no business was transacted. Under the rules, it being Friday, the day was devoted to business on the private calendar. Three small unimportant bills were passed, and the rest of the session was taken up in the fruitless discussion of a bill to settle some Tennessee war claims against the government amounting to $20,000. It was finally ended when Mr. Snider made the point of no quorum and a motion to recommit the bill. The evening session was devoted to pension business.

DALTONS FOUGHT BRAVELY.

Posse In Pursuit of the Surviving Members of the Gang.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 21.—The report received of a battle between the Dalton gang and deputy marshals near Ingalls, 55 miles from this city, is confirmed. The fight occurred at the house of Bruce Miller, one of the outlaws. The officers surrounded the house, all of them armed with winchesters, just before daylight. The Daltons were inside. No shots were fired until one of the desperadoes came out just about daylight to feed the horses. He was held up and told to take a look around the grounds, and then return to the house and tell the bandits to come out one at a time, unarmed, and surrender, or hostilities would be commenced.

He started to the field and finding in shooting distance of the house 20 men well armed, the outlaw returned to his companions. Fully a half hour's consultation was held between the bandits before a stir was made by either party, and then the officers in command of the party ordered his men to begin firing.

The house is a simple weatherboarded structure and not plastered, and the shots from the winchesters quickly perforated the sides of it. The caged bandits returned the fire and poured a rattling fire on the officers through the windows and crevices of the outlaws. Mrs. Miller, who had been wounded, left the house and crawled to where 10 marshals were located behind a tree. She had received a flesh wound and begged that she might be permitted to ride to Ingalls for a doctor to attend herself and also her baby and hired man, who were both wounded. The woman was permitted to saddle a horse and leave. She would not state how many outlaws were killed, but admitted that Bill Dalton and Bill Doolan had been seriously if not fatally wounded. The fight was kept up all day during Wednesday. Volley after volley was fired into the house by officers, and the constant crack of the bandits' winchesters told of their determination to hold out and refuse to surrender.

Shortly after nightfall, during a lull in the firing, the bandits made a break from the house and fled, pursued by the deputies. They went in the direction of the Creek Indian country.

The messenger who brought the news did not learn whether or not Dalton and Doolan had been killed, but was told that three fe-

New York Fashionable Bonnet and Hats Made in Plainfield.

New York fashionable Bonnets and Hats are now being made in Plainfield, and ladies are no longer obliged to go to New York for these articles, greatly to their delight and convenience. Edsall's three New York Milliners are having a big run, although working under great disadvantages in their present quarters for want of room. They have now in a short time to be removed to the Babcock Building, where greater facilities will be offered. Those who have patronized the Department are well pleased, both as to prices and styles, and success in the new enterprise is assured from the start. The patrons of Edsall's Millinery Department can rest assured that their neighbor's bonnet will not resemble theirs, for his milliners do not make two bonnets or hats alike. They are competent to create styles, and do not copy.

BROWNE IN COMMAND.

General Coxey Takes a Four Days' Furlough.

WANTS TO ARRANGE EXCURSIONS.

Intends to Have a Big Crowd Witness His Demonstration In Washington—Feast of Loaves and Fishes Repeated With Variations In Hagerstown.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., April 21.—General Coxey left his army at this town for a four days' absence in New York, during which time he will stop at the Hotel Imperial and will attend the sale of some of his Kentucky thoroughbreds. Besides this he will try to arrange with the railroads for excursion rates to Washington for the demonstration on May 1. It is from this arrangement that he hopes to get the greater part of his crowd in the city. Should this plan succeed, he and Browne declare that there will be no trouble in getting 50,000 people to the capital besides those on the road.

To prevent any conflict of authority between Jesse Coxey and Browne in his absence Mr. Coxey invested Browne with the power of attorney to act for him. Young Coxey left with the good terms with Browne since the attempted uprising of Smith, and there is a probability of a collation between the two as soon as Coxey is gone.

A Feast on Fish.

Browne's general order for the day was more than usually unique. It was as follows:

"COMRADES OF THE COMMONWEAL—This town has surely been weighed, for the expected opposition of bankers and business men, as forecast in my general order of yesterday, has been happily disapated. Upon our entrance into this city Mayor Keely met us, stating that we were welcome to camp upon grounds within the city limits and bearing other comfortable information. Other citizens is caring for our stock, so this has been our best day of tourney, and now we have won the second Corawallis sword. Shortly after the establishment of the camp J. D. Simmons, a prominent farmer, came with 120 loaves of bread. Following him came Robert Warner and brought with him 300 pounds of fish. Our army being fed by a modern miracle. John W. Ritter brought three dozen pairs of socks and several shirts, and there is no doubt but there will be many other contributions from the generous citizens.

In spite of the favorable comment on Hagerstown in the order the army had to buy its own firewood to cook supper on Logan hill, and as the town authorities refused to allow the army to draw on the hydrants of the town the camp was without water until the railroad company gave the use of a plug in the railroad yards. Later in the evening, when a severe thunderstorm arose, Mr. H. C. Kohler, the agent of the Western Maryland road, again came to the rescue, giving the tramps the use of an empty warehouse after a farmer named Ballantine had refused them shelter in an empty barn near by. Certificates of merit were issued to all of the tramps who had made the passage of the mountains, the certificate entitling the holder to the souvenir of the trip that is to be prepared by Browne.

Tramping Over the Pike.

The march over from Williamsport was made under most favorable conditions. The pike was dry, but dustless, all the trees and fields green with the recent rains, and at one of the halts by a rustic pump the ragged, hardened looking crown gathered beneath a clump of apple trees, whose white petals rained down upon them like a midsummer snow, while the men drank deep of the cold water as though they had never been used to any other drink.

There was a striking example on the march of the sort of discipline that the leaders of the army is bent upon to procure. John Lindsley, an enlisted man, who had been expelled by Marshal Boot-quick from the army at Keedysville on Thursday night, sought Mr. Coxey's buggy and made an appeal of his case. A patriarchal court was convened, Browne and Coxey acting as judges, and the case was given another hearing.

The evidence was strongly against Lindsley, and the sentence of the marshal was confirmed, the man being forced to quit the ranks.

At the tollgate, a mile outside Hagerstown, there was a delay, the old white haired gateman refusing to let the army pass without paying toll on the horses. Browne declared that this was another example of the monopolists and ordered forward the flag. The old gateman respectfully doffed his hat to the stars and stripes, but shut down the gate in spite of the horses and carriages. Coxey was forced to pay 90 cents toll.

The army was accompanied into town by a constantly growing crowd of cyclists, horsemen and pedestrians, and the march through Hagerstown to the camp was equal relatively to an inaugural procession for Washington.

Jones' Army on the Move.

PERRYMAN, Md., April 21.—The Philadelphia division of Coxey's army, numbering 18 men, crossed the Susquehanna river at Havre de Grace and arrived at Perryman about noon. Henry G. Clinton, secretary-treasurer, was in command in the absence of Marshal Christopher Columbus Jones. Three recruits were received at Perryville. The army moved today for Chase's, where Marshal Jones is expected to rejoin it. On Sunday morning the army will leave Chase's and is expected at Baltimore on Sunday afternoon.

Editor Boomer Recruiting.

PROVIDENCE, April 21.—When the New England industrial army arrived in Providence on Tuesday, the prospective Coxeyite will be joined by a large delegation from this city. George K. Boomer, editor of Justice, the socialistic labor paper, will begin the work of enlisting the men today. The Boston men will be taken to Olneyville, where they will be provided with food and shelter for the night.

THE COACHING TRIPS.

The Preliminary Trip made Successfully Saturday.

The old-time method of traveling by stage-coach is about to be re-established between New York and Philadelphia and a trial trip was made Saturday. The coach was drawn by four horses, and changes were made every 5 or 10 miles.

The route taken by the coachers was the same as that over which travelers rode before the time of steam cars: from Philadelphia to Kolmesburg, to Frog Philadelphia to Trenton, to Princeton, to Kolmesville, to Metuchen. At Metuchen the coachers left the old route that ran through Rahway to Elizabethport, where boats were taken to New York. Instead of following that old turnpike, the modern coaches come to Plainfield from Metuchen, and then down South avenue to Elizabeth. At the corner of Park avenue and Sixth street a change of horses was made. The horses are all fine bred animals. The coach did not reach here until 5.30, instead of 5.45 as scheduled.

At nine o'clock the party drove up to the Waldorf Hotel, where a crowd of friends had assembled to greet them. Next Wednesday the coaches Alert and Vivid will start simultaneously from New York and Philadelphia and go over the route.

The rates are as follows: Single seats, one way, $15; single seats, round trip, $25; box seat, extra, each way, $5; entire coach, eleven seats, one way, $150; entire coach, eleven seats, round trip, $275.

BREVITIES.

—The new Leiderkranz is about to change its quarters, for various reasons.

—The assignee's sale of Mrs. Peter M. Demarest's effects is elsewhere advertised.

—The fourth annual May Ride of the "Unknowns" to Wayside Park, will take place on May 15th.

—Councilman Frazee to-day sent two cats to M. Bennett of Elizabeth, who is to Board them this Summer.

—Messrs. Diefendorf and Colyer of Newark paid a visitorial visit to Columbia Lodge, No. 39, A. O. U. W., Friday night.

—Contractor Thomas Dowd of North Plainfield, to-day began to dig up the roads for a new gas pipe line between Elizabeth and Cranford.

—The committee on by-laws of the Bar Association is ready to report, consequently a meeting of the Association will probably be called soon.

—Jacob Wagner, the assistant baggage-master at the depot, who was laid off some time ago to curtail expenses, is to be re-instated on or before the first of May.

—The attendance at the Salvation Army last week was as follows: Monday, 731; Tuesday, 150; Wednesday, 135; Thursday, 200; Friday, 129; Saturday, 245; and Sunday, 1055; total, 2655.

—The Zeta Social Club sent out 1,000 invitations for their dance to be given at Red Men's hall to-night, from which 565 replies have been received, 450 of which accepted and promised to attend.

—Friday night the anniversary of the Jewish Passover commenced and will continue for a week. This is in commemoration of the date when the Jews were taken from Egypt through the Red Sea.

—The following bowlers will compose the Board of Trade team in the game with the Westfield Club in this city Thursday night: Van Emburgh, Reel, Lowrie, Boekies, Wattern, Maltby, Barnes, Littell, Davis, Petrie and Vail.

—William J. Nelson has been drilling a well for Mr. St. J. McCutchen on Rockview Terrace. On Thursday he struck a stream of water, forty feet and four inches below the surface, which rushes in a natural flow through a 1½ inch pipe. The water still flows and is clear and safe for drinking purposes.

—The Westfield Centennial Committee met at the town room Friday evening. It was decided that it would be necessary to raise about $1,200 by subscription for the centennial celebration, which, with $500 from the township government, will be sufficient to defray the expenses. It is projected to have the celebration on July 3 and 4.

—The passengers on car No. 4 of the street railway, beheld a curious spectacle when the car stopped at the Monroe end of the line a few nights ago. On the track was a great heap of tin cans, old wash boilers and the like, about five feet high. The one who placed them there seemed very familiar with all the topics of the day, for on the cans, which were rusty, many of the political questions of the period were mentioned, such as "Pass that Wilson bill," "Harrah for Cox's Army," "Free many more.

IT WAS CHARLES GALLAGHER.

Detective Corse Ascertains the Name of the Man Killed Saturday.

Detective Corse of the Central Railroad ferreted out the killing of the unknown man on the Dunellen train, struck by Saturday morning, an account of which was published in THE NEWS, and found that he was one of three men stealing a ride on a coal train. The man who was killed jumped off, and as he did so he struck a pile of railroad ties and rolled back with his head against the car wheels. The "journal" of each wheel struck his head as it passed causing a compound fracture of the skull. The other two men when they saw the fate of their companion, remained on the cars and got off at Cranford.

The man's name was Charles Gallagher. He has a brother living at Bayonne, whom he left last Fall to go to Baltimore. He was on his way back when killed.

A sister of the dead man is in the employ of Mrs. A. W. MacDonald, of West Grand street, Elizabeth.

The body was sent to Bayonne last night by Undertaker Casey.

PERSONAL.

George E. Vincent, son of Bishop Vincent, is the guest of Mr. Joy.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Darby returned from their honeymoon Saturday night.

Fritz Kersting is seriously ill with pneumonia at his home on West Front street.

Mr. Elon Rogers of Millstone, formerly of this city, visited friends here Saturday.

"Ed." Marble, manager of the Black Crook Company, is stopping at the Grenada.

Miss Mattie Van Horn of Dover street, entertained a few friends at her home on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hodge and son Raymond visited Mr. Hodge's parents, at Somerville, yesterday.

Mr. George Roberts of Philadelphia, visited his father, Mr. D. S. Roberts of North avenue, yesterday.

George Bolsterli of Chatham street is confined to the house by an abscess on his back and one on his cheek.

Mr. Wheeler of Cranford visited his brother, Mr. Charles Wheeler, of Harmony street, North Plainfield, yesterday.

Letter-Carrier Edward Hann of Park place is off duty to-day nursing a boil on his neck. Substitute William Sharp is taking his route.

The Misses Thompson of Farragut road have left Plainfield for a six weeks visit with friends and relatives in Bound Brook and Somerville.

Mr. William R. Moore of New street, who has been confined to the house for seven weeks with bronchitis and neuralgia, was able to go out to-day for the first time since his sickness.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Cain, of Newark were the guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Cain of Grandview avenue. Mr. Cain is a court stenographer in New York. He expects to locate in Plainfield.

Mr. W. F. Brown of the Mount Pleasant avenue portion of the First Church of Christ, Newark, has removed to 167 North Ninth street, Roseville, where he may be found by all members of the First Church of Christ of this city.

C. T. Thayer, general superintendent of the United States Express Co., moved into a house at No. 819 Second place, Friday. Mr. Thayer is both well and favorably known, and Plainfield has won, by his removal here, a good citizen.

Mr. Peter C. Onderdonk, a resident of Plainfield up to about 12 years ago, died at the home of his son, Charles S. Onderdonk, Jenkinstown, Pa., on Saturday. The funeral will be held Tuesday morning, and the interment will be at Elmwood Cemetery, New Brunswick, at 2.30 o'clock, on the afternoon of the same day.

Mr. Chris. Ketzel of this city and Miss Mary Schmitz of New York were united in marriage at their newly furnished home, No. 249 Somerset street, yesterday, at four p. m., by the Rev. Mr. Schneller-dresser. The wedding was private, only a few of the immediate friends of the bride and groom being present. Mr. and Mrs. Ketzel at once started upon the duties of housekeeping.

Rev. Dr. J. P. Taylor, who is accustomed to preach in the Middletown, N. Y., Episcopal church every Sunday morning, did not reach there yesterday in time for service. The engine on the 8.38 Easton train broke down near Somerville, and the train was an hour late reaching this city. The Easton train and the 9.38 Blue Mountain express consisted at Bound Brook and stopped at all way stations between here and Jersey City.

Fined for Leaving His Horses Untied.

A team of horses belonging to a farmer named Bartle of New Brunswick ran away on Park avenue this morning and collided with Peddler Haynes' wagon. Policeman Kiely arrested the farmer for leaving his horses to be left untied without tying them. He was taken before Judge Coddington, who fined him $5.

A Colored Man Killed.

The 8.40 train from this city to New York Saturday night, struck a colored man at Lorraine. The body was picked up and taken to Elizabeth.

The committee is composed of Messrs. William Newcorn, William A. Westphal and David C. Allen.

The Lowe Will Case.

The final arguments in the contested will case of the late William V. Lowe of Scotch Plains, will be made by the lawyers of each side before the Orphans' Court on Wednesday next.

All the testimony has been taken by Surrogate Parrot, who will submit it to the court next Wednesday. The court will be asked to issue an order of sale *for all the goods and stock in the Morris*town and Scotch Plains hotels.

In the City Court.

Saturday night, Policeman Flannigan arrested "Jim" Dolan for being drunk and disorderly in the boulevard. He promised the judge this morning that he would never give the police occasion to arrest him again, and on this condition he was released and sentence suspended.

A boy named Cooper, one of the crowd who were disorderly on South Second street Friday night, was released until Saturday.

"Old One Horn" Gone to Westfield.

"Old one horn" cannon, recently presented to the Westfield Cemetery Association by Winfield Scott Post, No. 75, G. A. R., was taken to Westfield Saturday night by Frank Hand and placed in the Soldier's plot. Wheels have been placed on the cannon and the whole thing painted black.

Dunellen Went Dry Yesterday.

Dunellenites went dry yesterday. On Saturday all the licensed places in the borough were notified that they must close their bar-rooms on Sunday, under strict penalty of the law. There are, however, it is said, a few unlicensed places where Plainfield frequenters went for a "smile."

An Entire Thunder Storm.

An entire thunder storm, thunder, lightning and rain has been brought to Plainfield for use in the production of the "Grey Mare" at the Casino, next week. It is kept carefully locked up in the wings at the Casino and will not be let out until the last of the second act.

$300 Left on a Train.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER ARRESTED.

Bissell is charged with Appropriating $20,000 Belonging to the Company.

Trenton, N. J., April 22—Isaac F. Bissell, until recently Secretary of the American Saw Company of this city, was arrested here at midnight last night on charges of embezzlement and forgery preferred by Alfred I. Keeles, bookkeeper of the company.

Bissell disappeared from this vicinity some months ago. According to the accusations made against him, he appropriated to his own use about $20,000 belonging to the company.

One Million to Charity.

Buck Creek, N. J., April 22—Edward Reed, aged seventy-two, died at his home on Prospect street this morning.

He left an estate worth about $2,000,000, half of which he bequeaths to charitable institutions.

"Trick Egle—W. O. G."

An old crane that had been mounted and was stuffed recently left on the plazas of Policeman Giese's house, on Elm place. Mr. Giese threw it into the back yard. Nothing more was heard of the crane until yesterday morning, when Special Policeman Dennis Carney appeared at the police station carrying the bird, which he said had been left on his front porch. He was mad all the way through and declared "that he would give $20 to know who left it there." On the end of the crane's bill was tied a card bearing the word: "Trick Egle,—W. O. G." It is supposed that the "letters "W. O. G." mean "Whyo Gang." On the card beside the above is what is meant to represent "cross bones and skull."

A Stone Wagon Breaks Down.

Saturday afternoon a wagon heavily laden with flag stones was passing down Grove street. Just after the bridge had been passed the hind axle broke in two, letting the back part of the wagon down and dumping part of the load into the street.

Another wagon was procured, after an hour's delay, and the stone transferred and carted to its destination.

The wagon belonged to Mr. Powers of Somerset street, and his son Michael, who was riding on the rear end of the wagon was severely bruised on one of his legs, which became caught between the wagon and a stone.

Take $1,000 to Repair the County Roads.

The Inspector of the Union County Roads went over the highways Friday, and marked certain places for repair. It will take nearly $1,000 to put the roads in good condition.

The Same Hero.

The Westfield Club will not have a base ball team this season. It has proven an expensive luxury the past two years and will be dispensed with.

—There will be a club dance at the Casino on Monday night next.

—There is to be a vendible at the Park avenue Baptist church on May 8th.

—Wheelmen who ride to Asbury Park during the Summer will be glad to learn that the road from Metuchen to Perth Amboy is being macadamized. This will make a continuous road of macadam from here to Perth Amboy.

New York Fashionable Bonnet and Hats Made in Plainfield.

New York fashionable Bonnets and Hats are now being made in Plainfield, and ladies are no longer obliged to go to New York for these articles, greatly to their delight and convenience. Edsall's then New York Milliners are having a big run, although working under great disadvantages in their present quarters for want of room. They hope in a short time to be located in the new parlors in the Babcock Building, where greater facilities will be offered. Those who have patronized the Department are well pleased, both as to prices and styles, and success in the new enterprise is assured from the start. The patrons of Edsall's Millinery Department can rest assured that their neighbors bonnet will not resemble theirs, for his millinery do not make two bonnets or hats alike. They are competent to create styles, and do not copy.

MURDERED ON HIS RANCH.

R. Randolph Found Dead in His Cabin.—Motive, Robbery.

[New York World.]

Shoshone, Idaho, April 22.—S. R. Randolph, an old-time resident of this State, was murdered on the ranch, ten miles south of Shoshone, on the night of Tuesday, April 17. He was found Wednesday morning by S. A. Stolsworth, a tenant of the ranch, lying dead in bed, his head beaten in with the pole of an axe which lay on the floor. The murderer must have dealt the fatal blow while Mr. Randolph was asleep, causing instant death.

At the Coroner's inquest several jurors suspected Stolsworth, who was later arrested, but on examination no evidence was produced which implicated the accused, and, by request of District-Attorney Barnum, he was discharged. Stolsworth has always borne a good reputation. Attorney Barnum said he should never have been arrested. The general opinion is that Stolsworth is innocent.

It is evident from the appearance of the cabin that robbery was the motive for the crime, but no clue has yet been found. Mr. Randolph was a native of New York, and was seventy-six years of age. He has a brother living in California, and two sisters in New Jersey. A brother, H. C. Randolph, lives in Plainfield.

Shooting on Earl's Grounds.

Messrs. Charles Smith, Neaf Agpar, D. Terry and "Scott" Terry of Plainfield, participated in a shooting match at Earl's shooting grounds on the Elizabeth-Linden road, on Thursday afternoon in sweepstake shooting, the results being as here shown:

Event No. 1, seven live birds, $5 entry —Apgar, 7; Morfey, 7; Brewer, 7; Smith, 7; Terry, 7; McAlpin, 6; Williams, 6. On the shoot-off for first money Brewer and Apgar divided on the fourth round.

Event No. 2 was at 15 live birds, $10 entry—Geoffrey, (31) 15; Williams, (30) 14; Woodruff, (31) 14; Morfey, (35) 13; Scott, (29) 13; Apgar, (32) 12; Jersey, (30) 12; Smith, (31) 11; Antrim, (30) 11; D. Terry, (29) withdrew. Time for third money were shot off and won by Morfey.

Event No. 3, 7 birds, $5 entry—Apgar, 7; Jersey, 7; Williams, 7; Brewer, 7; Jersey, 7; Morfey, 6; Geoffrey, 6; Scott, 6; Smith, 5; Terry, 5; Botsch, 4. On the shoot off Jersey and Brewer captured first money Morfey second money.

White Ribbons to Meet on Thursday.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Union County will meet in Westfield, Thursday, the occasion being the Spring convention, or "School of Methods."

The morning session will open at ten o'clock in the lecture room of the Presbyterian church and the afternoon sessions at two o'clock. All are most cordially invited to attend these sessions and learn of W. C. T. U. work and methods. The interest will center in the evening meeting which will be held in the church, commencing at eight o'clock.

The address will be given by Mrs. Mary A. M. D., of Toledo, Ohio. There will be special music for a quartette from the Union County Band.

Denies the Contractor's Story.

To the Editor of The News:—I wish to deny the contractor's statement published in your paper on Monday evening, April 16, that all the men were called off. In the first place there were six men at work, and only three were called off and they were Union men. This is the second time this same contractor has had trouble with his men, and it seems to be his endeavor to break up the Union in Plainfield.

SMART COVERT CLOTH COSTUMES.

They Are Very Fetching, and a Sun Umbrella Goes With Them.

To the Editor of The News:—

Among the field maiden fabrics intended for serviceable wear, covert cloth is the first favorite. In town, gray and tan cloths it is much used for tailor made costumes as well as for thin outer jackets and is a pleasing change from the monotonous effect of serge or glossy finished goods, the two materials most in vogue for the past few years. Trimmed with the huge carved mother of pearl buttons now so fashionable—white, clouded or iridescent—and finished with neat rows of stitching, these covert cloth costumes are positively "smart," as the phrase goes, and extremely useful for city, seaside or mountain wear. The stuff is thin and light in weight, and if it is sleeply made and lined with silk and linen material it will be found not too heavy for ordinary warm weather. Sun umbrellas having their handles terminating in golden balls have been brought out to go with these goods. They are covered with silk woven in tiny checks of white, with gray, tan or brown, with sometimes an intermingling of more conspicuous colors, such as dark blue, garnet or buff. These umbrellas roll up into remarkably small compass and are provided with tight cases of the same silk and big white silk tassels. Plain white linen collar and cuffs and a hat of mixed straw commend themselves as adjuncts of the covert cloth gown, the wearer of which may feel equally at ease in sunshine and shower, provided her boots are in no danger of becoming damp. Boots are an extremely sensitive part of a woman's anatomy. One writing destroys forever the perfection of their fit and stiffens them into dull unpliability.

Speaking of boots, patent leather retains its popularity and is much worn in both buttoned and laced boots, but the latter are almost invariably cut in the blucher style. It is hardly possible to find a fine laced boot of the once ordinary cut. High heels have quite gone out for street wear. Those made of leather lifts are referred to, for no woman with any pretense to good taste ever wore the wooden kid covered heels anywhere except in the house or in her carriage.

A sketch is given of a covert cloth gown having a plain bell skirt and a round waist, over which is a tightly fitting Eton jacket, lapping diagonally over the chest where it is fastened by three large pearl buttons. The gigot sleeves have also three buttons at the wrist. Rows of stitching finish the costume.

Base Ball.

A very interesting game of base ball was played between the "Moonlights" and the West Ends, on the Pond Top Works ground, Saturday afternoon. The score was 13 to 13. Some fine plays were made and the "Moonlights" have a steady team. They will play the same team next Saturday on the grounds on West Front street.

The batteries were:—Louis Talmay and John Galbraith, and Robert Reed and Bert Nack. The umpire was William Owens.

Light Fines Do Not Deter Liquor Men.

[Elizabeth Journal.]

Plainfield caught a man selling liquor without a license. The City Judge didn't let him off with a mere fine, as is done in some other places in Union County, but sent him to jail. The City Judge was right. Light fines do not deter men who willfully violate the laws. A few days in jail has a much more deterrent effect.

Turkey With Chestnuts.

Stuff and truss the bird as for roasting. Roast a pound of chestnuts on the range over the fire; peel, skin and mix them with half a pound of sausage meat, and with this stuff the body of the bird; bind it, wrap a sheet of white buttered paper round and roast for about an hour and a half. Twenty-five minutes before dishing prepare another pound of chestnuts in the same manner, put them in a pan, add a pint of good broth, and let them stew gently until quite done. Strain the gravy from the chestnuts, add to them a gill of bean essence and the gravy from the bird and make and send gravy. Chicken with a lump of butter rolled in flour, and pour the sauce, boiling, over the turkey. Garnish with mustard and cress.

Country Home in Favor.

During the past few years there has been a constant drift of families from the cities into the small country places. People with regular but moderate incomes have discovered that life in New York or even but small retreats is daily costlier for the sum it cost them to live here. They are heavily taxed even for God's air and sunshine, a flat with "all light rooms" being a very expensive possession. Hence the movement toward the country towns—and hence the growing beauty, convenience and comfort of these places.

Ironing Silks.

China or India silk that has been washed, should always be ironed just before it is quite dry. If ironed when very wet it will become harsh, stiff and ungraceful; and if entirely dry when ironed it will lose all "body" and become limp and flimsy. The right time is when it is nearly dry, but not quite. To iron white silk white very wet will turn it yellow.

DESOLATION IN GREECE

Hundreds of Persons Perish by Earthquakes.

CHURCH WALLS ARE SHAKEN DOWN

A Whole Congregation Crushed Under Falling Walls and Thirty Taken Out Dead. Three Towns Left In Ruins—Inhabitants Terror Stricken.

ATHENS, April 23. — The earthquake shocks that began about half past 7 o'clock on Friday night have continued with more or less frequency. All Saturday night the oscillation of the earth was noticeable, and the people of this city were in a state of semipanic. Thousands of persons spent the whole night in the streets, dreading that should they enter their houses a more severe shock might bring the buildings down upon them. Telegraphic communication with many parts of the country is badly interrupted, and it is impossible to get news from some of the towns that must have been affected by the shock.

This uncertainty has given rise to many rumors regarding the loss of life, some of the estimates placing it at a very high number. That it is large there is no doubt. All the dispatches from the provinces add to the number of killed and injured and greatly swell the accounts of the damage to property.

In three villages alone—Malesina, Proskina and Martino, all in the province of Locris—239 persons were killed. The mayor of Lavyum, although a heavy shock occurred at Proskina while vesper services were being held in the parish church, was there quite an old but very substantial edifice. The walls of the church fell, burying all the worshipers in the ruins.

Thirty Crushed Under Church Walls.

The residents of the village were terror stricken at the violence of the seismic disturbance, and some little time elapsed before they recovered enough presence of mind to attempt to remove those covered with the debris of the church. Finally, however, a force was organized, and the work of rescue began. Hardly a person in the church escaped without injury. Thirty were taken out dead amid the wailing and sobbing of their relatives and friends. Houses were thrown down in other parts of the village, and the money loss is great. Some of the villagers are practically ruined.

At Malesina houses tottered and fell as though built of cardboard. Hundreds of their occupants were caught before they had time to do more than attempt to escape. In this little village 60 persons were killed, some of the bodies being crushed out of all recognition as to humanity. In some cases entire families—fathers, mothers and children—were taken out of the ruins dead.

At Martino 39 persons were killed. Here, as at Proskina, the parish church was the scene of the greatest number of fatalities. She whole of the church was thrown down from their foundations and toppled upon the worshipers. The others who lost their lives were killed by falling houses.

It would be impossible to attempt to describe the scene in these villages. The people appear to be stunned by the severity of the blow that has fallen upon them, and many of them are completely apathetic. Others who have lost loved ones are nearly crazed with grief, and many heart rending scenes have been witnessed as the dead were orderly removed from the masses of wreckage that once represented dwelling houses and places of worship.

In the vicinity of Athens the fatalities were less numerous, but the damage to property is immense. The offices of the Austrian, Lloyd and other steamships companies were partially destroyed. The Church of St. Elias, on Castella hill, has been reached beyond repair and is tottering to its fall. In other towns, walls and mosaics of the famous Byzantine church of Daphne are very seriously injured.

Total Number of Deaths Unknown.

King George, in the royal yacht, started last night for the maritime districts that have been devastated by the shocks. He will be accompanied by the minister of the interior and other officials, and together they will decide upon the measures that must be taken to alleviate the distress among the sufferers.

The reports that have thus far been received show that very nearly of the deaths occurred in the churches. Last week was Passion week in the Greek church, and religious services were held every day and evening. The services were very largely attended and the churches are still filling, this in a measure accounts for the large loss of life. A majority of the victims were women and children.

The government will be compelled to adopt extraordinary measures to help the poor in the districts affected. Steps to this end have already been taken, and the state authorities are giving quick response to the calls that are being made upon them.

The total number of deaths thus far reported is 160, but there is scarcely any question that this number will be augmented when the more remote villages are heard from. As this dispatch was being sent from Athens the following shock was felt that for a time caused consternation among everybody in the telegraph office.

Begins of Denver Gamblers.

DENVER, April 23.—In obedience to the order issued by the police board all gambling houses in this city will be closed at noon today. The proprietors will evade the law by moving their establishments to Colfax, a suburban town.

WATERTOWN, April 23.—Judge Williams has decided the case of Dr. W. S. Webb against Morrison and others, involving the title to a portion of Dr. Webb's private Adirondack preserve, in favor of Dr. Webb.

George Hosmer Makes a Rescue.

BOSTON, April 23.—An unknown woman attempted suicide by jumping off a bridge into the Charles river, but was rescued by George Hosmer, the caruman, and Draw-tender Smith. She refused to divulge her name.

Bank Robber Killed.

CONWAY, Ark., April 23.—George Thomas (colored), who attempted to rob a bank, was pursued by a posse, resisted arrest and was killed by J. R. Brewer, a deputy sheriff.

Think McCreary Was Murdered.

PROVIDENCE, April 23.—It is now believed that Patrick McCreary, whose body was found in the Providence river on Saturday, was murdered.

Weather Forecast.

Light local showers, but fair during the greater portion of the day; northwesterly winds; slightly cooler.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in The News, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in treatment and construction, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

FORWARD, SAYS BROWNE

Coxey's Army Takes the Pike Again For Washington.

THE BOSTON CONTINGENT STARTS.

The New England Commonwealers Are at Last Under Way—Kelly's Lieutenant Indignant Start to Tramp to Des Moines. Frye's Army Stalled.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., April 23.—After a three days' stop in this place the Coxey cohorts are preparing to march on Frederick. There will be one stop at Boonesboro, making the camp at Frederick on Tuesday. There were rumors that Browne would remain encamped here till the return of Coxey from New York, but at a late hour Browne announced positively that the start would be made this forenoon. Owing to the lost time, the original route of the army via Hedgeville and Damascus to Rockville will probably be changed.

The commonweal will march direct down the National pike after leaving Frederick, thereby saving 17 miles. Why the other road was ever selected cannot be understood, as it makes a long detour through a not particularly attractive country and touches no more large towns than are on the pike. To such a question Browne merely replies that it was done to use up time. His ultimate decision as to the road, he says, will be determined by important news he is expecting. This is supposed to mean news of recruits sent out by Colonel Redstone from Washington to join the army.

The road by the National pike will throw the burden of entertaining the army on Urbana, Clarksburg, Middletown and Gaithersburg and relieve the other towns that have been unusually awaiting the coming of the commonweal.

It is possible that after reaching Rockville there will be a further change of route, the army going south through the little settlement of Potomac and marching into Washington from the west by way of the Conduit road.

Browne Preaches a Sermon.

This would throw the last camp outside the city limits at Cabin John's bridge instead of Chevy Chase, as is now intended. Browne, in speaking of the proposed camp in the arsenal grounds, said that he had concluded that the grounds around the foot of the Washington monument would be more convenient and appropriate and announced that he would telegraph Colonel Redstone to make a request for the grounds of the secretary of war.

Mayor Fleming of Frederick is preparing a frosty reception for the army. He has announced that no public meeting will be allowed unless in a hall, and that there shall be no parade on the street. Browne says he would like to see the mayor stop a procession of American citizens with the American flag at its head.

The Sunday services in Camp Nazareth were attended by a crowd of 150 persons. Fifty dollars in all was taken in at the gate. Browne doffed his boots and sombrero in honor of his appearance as a minister and put on a suit of store clothes of a clerical black.

His sermon was on his old theme of theosophy, telling where all theosophists except himself, from the dawn of civilization down to the present, had been wrong, and giving some views on reincarnation that would have been news to Mme. Blavatsky.

The music by the commonweal choir was fully as remarkable as the sermon. The singers were of mixed race and color and broke down in the middle of the last hymn—a parody on "Marching Through Georgia." That ran in part as follows:

Come, rally to our standard, each idle man to-day,
And slow bloated bondholders we mean just what we say.
One hundred thousand unemployed are marching in array.
We're marching on to Washington.

Hurrah, hurrah! Our day of jubilee!
Hurrah, hurrah, for the country of the free!
Hurrah for legal tender, no interest bonds for me!
We're marching on to Washington.

"Hold the Fort" was also rendered in the same strain.

Kelly's Industrials Move.

NEOLA, Ia., April 23.—Kelly and his industrial army made their first day's march from Council Bluffs here and went into camp in a grove just east of town. The entry into Neola was a triumphant march. Almost every man, woman and child of the 900 inhabitants went out to greet the army. Flags were borne, and the cheers were heard for a mile. The 1,000 men tramped down the town's main street to the more or less musical strains of two country bands. The stores and vacant buildings of this place were all kept wide open, and the weary men were offered all available shelter.

Hundreds of people had gone out from Council Bluffs and Omaha to see the beginning of the long overland march, and a half dozen wagons heavily laden with provisions awaited the moving of the column.

From every farm flags were flying, and at every crossroads lines of decorated wagons awaited the army. The little town of Underwood was reached about noon, and a sumptuous repast was provided by the villagers. When the meal was over and the impromptu speeches done, the march was resumed amid the energetic cheering of the crowd that was gathered.

On every hand the deepest sympathy for Kelly and his men was expressed, and farmers and townsmen were eager to supply the wants of the commonwealers. They are with Kelly to a man and condemn the railroads for refusing transportation for the army.

As an ironical expression of the feeling regarding the calling out of the Iowa militia the citizens formed a company of little boys and girls to greet the advent of the army, the badges and banners of the infantile brigade bearing the inscription, "Neola Militia." Throughout the day there was no scene of disturbance or disorder, and the plan of seizing a train has been abandoned.

The railroads entering Council Bluffs will not, however, run trains in this vicinity until the army is well off their routes. Today the commonwealers will move to Avoca, 18 miles away, and if promises are fulfilled 150 wagons will be provided for transportation. General Kelly said that whether the men ride or walk they will move steadily forward for Des Moines. There the army expects to secure a train for Chicago, where the men expect to be well provided with transportation to the east.

Swift's Army Starts.

BOSTON, April 23.—Seldom has the Boston Common been the scene of such a vast concentrated gathering as that which assembled there to witness the departure of the Boston delegation of the unemployed for Washington, where they hope to join Coxey's army and assist in the appeal to congress. By the time Morrison I. Swift stepped on the improvised platform there were 25,000 persons present, and soon after the meeting got into working order fully 35,000 were gathered around the band stand.

The crowd was a good natured, hustling one and did not seem to be at all impressed with the occasion or to be in sympathy with the movement, but had come simply to have and make fun. At no time was there any fighting or anything that could be called disorderly or riotous conduct.

Morrison I. Swift, the leader of the movement, was the chairman and opened the meeting, but not having a very powerful voice he could not be heard at a great distance.

After standing his harangue some time the crowd began to surge forward, and those in front of the speaker were forced onto the small platform, which succumbed to the strain and was broken to fragments. The speaker was thrown against the railing fence that surrounds the band stand.

Swift then took his position on the band stand, which is generally forbidden to the speakers on the Common, and delivered a characteristic speech, denouncing the wealthy, the monopolists and everybody in general that did not sympathize with the socialist platform.

After the meeting had been in progress some time and the tactics of the crowd seemed to be getting the upper hand of the promoters of it word was sent to the police headquarters, and a platoon of 35 extra men made their appearance among the crowd and had the effect of stopping all horse play. During the meeting Mr. Swift submitted a letter to be sent to President Cleveland, which was adopted by a "yes" that could easily have been heard a mile away.

At this point there was a conference between the leaders while one of them was speaking, and as a result those who have enrolled themselves in the delegation were told to slip away quietly and meet at Roxbury crossing, where Major General Fitzgerald would meet them and march to Dedham, where they intended to stop. The immense crowd did not know what had been decided upon and made a break for Tremont street, where they expected the men to pass. They waited in vain, however, as an hour after the order was given 45 men, headed by Leader Fitzgerald and carrying the yellow flag, were marching toward Jamaica Plain.

Jones' Brigade Near Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, April 23.—The northern or Jones wing of Coxey's commonweal army, 19 strong, in command of Division Marshal Clinton, marched into Orangeville, a small village a quarter of a mile from Baltimore, with a great hurrah and went into camp. Every road that led into Baltimore from Philadelphia was lined with people eager to get a glimpse of the soldiers. Fully 30 bicyclers and scores of young men and women in carriages were out as far as Back river to meet the brigade.

Connecticut's Company Ready.

HARTFORD, April 23.—The Connecticut contribution to Coxey's army is booked to start from Bristol on Tuesday morning and expect to reach this city by Wednesday or Thursday. Other detachments, it is thought, will join here, and Leader George Sweetland will devise means to continue the journey to Washington.

Frye's Army Stranded.

WILMINGTON, O., April 23.—Colonel Galvin of Frye's industrial army and 210 commonwealers are stranded here, the railway company refusing to carry them further. The regiment is in camp at the fair grounds.

Farquhar Fought Seven Bears.

CHEYENNE, Wy., April 23.—A letter has been received from Albert Farquhar, who was reported to have been eaten up by bears in the Big Horn basin. He states that he was on his way from Bismarck when he was attacked by seven bears at the place where his horse and wearing apparel were found. He shot four of the bears, but was compelled to swim the river to escape from the three remaining.

Craps Lead to a Murder.

CAMDEN, N. J., April 23.—John Nash was shot through the left eye and brain by Edward Willis of Baxter street, this city. Nash will die. Willis has been arrested and is said to have made a partial confession. Both men were colored, and with a number of companions they got into a row while shooting craps in the Blue Anchor hotel.

A Chicken Thief's Revenge.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 23.—Roger Johnson, a chicken thief, was expelled from his church by the elders and ejected from the building by force. He swore he would turn the house over and "kill them niggers." The next morning the church burned down, and Johnson is accused of arson.

Rock Bay Church Dedicated.

Bonpas, April 23.—In the imposing pomp and ceremony St. Cecilia's church in the Rock bay was dedicated by Archbishop Williams and assistants. After the dedication service pontifical high mass was celebrated by Archbishop Satolli.

Race War on in Louisiana.

TALLULAH, La., April 23.—A race war is on in this section of Madison parish, and so far one white man and one negro have been killed. One white man was badly beaten, and 13 negroes are now in captivity charged with murder.

Killed a Burglar.

NYACK, N. Y., April 23.—Hugo Willis, a notorious burglar, was shot in the head while coming out of a window of a grocery store at West Nyack by David Smith, the proprietor. He ran about 200 yards and then fell dead.

Canadians Seize American Fishermen.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., April 23.—The fishing tug Grace of Dunkirk was seized by the Canadian authorities off Port Colborne, together with over 3,000 feet of nets. Five other Dunkirk tugs escaped to American waters.

Weavers' Strike Off.

NORWICH, N. Y., April 23.—The weavers' strike which has been on at the Norwich silk mill for the past six weeks is off. The strikers returned to work today at the old scale of wages.

Jerry Simpson Worse.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Representative Jerry Simpson's illness has taken an unfavorable turn, his condition being complicated by the return of an old kidney trouble.

Corbett Ignored an Injunction.

PALMYRA, Neb., April 23.—Father Corbett ignored the injunction served on him and held services in the church, but very few were present.

COLONNA MADE HIS PEACE.

Matters Between the Prince and Princess Reported as Patched Up.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Princess Evelyne Galliera di Colonna will sail for Europe in June. Princess Colonna has reached an amicable understanding with her husband and their domestic differences bid fair to be settled to their mutual satisfaction unless some unforseen complication shall arise between now and the time of the princess' arrival in Paris.

The prince made overtures to the Mackay family some weeks ago, it is said, and sued for the forgiveness of his wife. Mr. John W. Mackay, on whom the troubles of his stepdaughter have heavily, received Colonna's message of peace, and after giving the matter thought he consented to arrange a settlement between husband and wife. Prince Colonna made the first advances through mutual friends and appeared from all accounts to be thoroughly contrite.

Mr. Mackay convinced himself of Colonna's sincerity and then set about to reconcile the other members of his family. Princess Colonna herself was not at first disposed to listen to her husband's plea for forgiveness. The advice of her stepfather prevailed, and for the sake of her three children the princess has, with motherly solicitude and self sacrifice, consented to return to Paris and resume the conjugal relationship with her husband.

It is understood that Princess Colonna will meet her mother at the Hotel Bristol in Paris and receive the prince there. With the reunion will begin another chapter in one of the most romantic marriages of international character.

Raided by Hand Car Pirates.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., April 23.—Four masked men stole a hand car from the section house of the Pennsylvania railroad at this point and went to Gardner. They robbed the postoffice, the express office, Howard Russ' general store and one or two private residences, securing money orders, checks, notes and other articles of value to a considerable amount. Then they remounted the hand car and returned to this city, where all trace of them was lost.

Railroad Employees Combine.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 23.—The largest meeting of railway employees ever held in New England took place in this city. Three hundred employees of the Consolidated Railroad company met here for the purpose of discussing the advisability of forming a system federation to be made up of the six labor organizations into which the employees are divided. A vote disclosed the fact that a big majority were in favor of the proposition.

Suffocated by Gas.

ROCHESTER, April 23.—Miss Edith Kirtland, employed as a stenographer, was found dead in bed at her residence. It is supposed that in extinguishing the gas she turned the screw too far and allowed the gas to escape. The young lady belongs in Buffalo.

THE HOUSEHOLD

THE DARK HALL.

How to Prevent It From Being a Pitfall to the Incautious and Unexpecting.

"A fine house, the second hall of which was so dark that a towel pinned on the top step was the only indication that the stairway had been reached," is a remembrance of years ago, with which a writer in Harper's Bazar prefaces the following:

It seems as if even to those days something more artistic than a towel might have been used for the purpose, but now we have lovely translucent glass in delicate colors to give not only light but beauty in place of this sort.

By cutting away the wooden panels in the upper part of the bathroom door, and also of the one at the opposite end of the hall, and setting in leaded panels of glass in pale blue shades, a charming effect will be given, and the mass of light may be further increased by having the walls papered or painted in light tones of buff or terra cotta.

This glass comes in pale and bottle greens, in yellows and dull white and also in shades of red, and to make both "sparkle" and smooth. Leaded in a simple design of one or two colors, it may be had for 75 cents, $1 and $1.50 a square foot.

A mingling of pale amber and white or pale green and yellowish white or rose and pale yellow is a pleasing combination, either of which costs as a perfect several.

Leaded in this way, it is cheaper than the cheapest of ordinary stained glass which disfigures so many otherwise pretty houses, and used in bedrooms is in perfect taste anywhere.

Where a screen is not desired, plain transparent glass set in small leaded panes has an artistic look which is coming to be very generally appreciated. In doorways especially and the upper half of windows, it is much used, and the architect who advises this or the plain colored panes instead of the cheap imitation of mosaic glass does well, for it is a great pity that people thronged by ignorance of what is really good should be tempted to spend their money for inferior work of any kind.

Culinary Terms.

Entremets (intermissions)—Vegetables, such as make or accessories.

Entremets Sucre (sweet)—Puddings, cakes, compotes, etc.

Salade de Saison—A salad made of the greens that are in season.

Farcie—Stuffing, the "force" most of our cooks.

Salmis—An elaborate hash of game or poultry.

Timbales—Cups.

Chapon de Philadelphie, Farcis aux Truffes—Philadelphia capon, stuffed with truffles.

Olives Farcies—Stuffed olives.

Bisque (twice cooked)—A soup made of fish, properly of shellfish, boiled and strained.

La Poulesde Prairie Rotie—Prairie chicken roasted.

Selle de Mouton Anglais—Saddle of English mutton.

Omelette aux Fines Herbes—An omelet made with parsley, etc.

Omelette a Confitures—Omelet with jelly or other sweets.

Poulet de Printempe—Spring chicken.

Tapioca Cream Pudding.

Soak 4 tablespoonfuls of tapioca in water overnight. In the morning put a quart of milk in a farina kettle, and when the milk gets to the boiling point stir in the tapioca. Add a half pint more of milk and, let it cook till the tapioca is all dissolved, so there are no lumps of it to be seen. Beat the yolks of the 4 eggs with 8 heaping tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar to a foamy mass; add a small teaspoonful and add a teaspoonful of vanilla extract. Stir in a pinch of salt. Then take the kettle from the range and pour the milk over the beaten eggs and sugar quickly with a silver fork while it is being poured in to keep it from curdling; put back in the kettle and let it cook until it begins to wrinkle on top; then pour it into your pudding dish. This pudding may be eaten either hot or cold. It is really better cold.

Boiled Custard.

Simple as this dish is, there is a knack in making it. Here is a good recipe: Steep half a thinly pared lemon rind and 3 ounces of loaf sugar in a pint of milk at the side of the fire, till nicely flavored. Just bring it to boiling point, then strain it into a basin and add to it 3 well beaten whole eggs when it has cooled a little. Now strain this mixture into another basin and stand it in a pan of water in a saucepan over the fire, stirring the custard one way the whole time till it thickens. Pour it into glasses rather more than three parts full, grate a little nutmeg over it, and use. If richer custards are desired, use cream instead of milk, or use the yolks of 4 and the whites of 2 eggs or even more to the pint of milk. Lessening the quantity of white of egg in itself increases the delicacy of the custard.

Design For Embroidery.

There is nothing more welcome to a mother who makes her baby's clothes or the tilting little petticoats of her toddlers than a new design for embroidering. Here is one from The Housewife that any clever needle worker can either trace or copy. Another good quality which this pattern possesses is that of being divisible if necessary, making it simpler.

An Attractive Fad.

To fit up one's living room in English fashion with colored linens is a fad so pleasing that it ought to last the summer at least. Stained valance, chair seats, mantel cushions, portieres and window drapes are exhibited in this washable fabric, which is given unlimited decorative touches with embroidery needle and linen floss.

Steamed Brown Bread.

Stir well together 2 cups of cornmeal, 2 cups of rye meal, a cup of flour and 1 of molasses. Add one-half a teaspoonful of saleratus, a little salt and enough milk or water to mix rather thin. Pour this mixture into a tin pudding boiler, tie the cover securely on and boil four hours.

THE GREAT COAL STRIKE

Now Reported to Be Over 125,000 Miners Out.

TROUBLE BREWING IN ALABAMA.

Strikers Will Try to Prevent Workers From Going Into the Mines—The Middle Field In Ohio Is Idle.

All Quiet In Ohio and Pennsylvania.

COLUMBUS, O., April 23.—President John McBride of the United Mine Workers has just completed a careful compilation of reports of the big strike with information at hand. This revised estimate shows that more men have struck in the competitive district and fewer in the outlying districts than anticipated, but the total number of men out remains about the same—125,000.

In Illinois, he states, there are 24,000 out of 35,000 miners idle; in Indiana, 6,000 out of about 9,000, and in West Virginia about 2,000 out of 9,000. Conventions are to be held in Illinois and West Virginia on Tuesday next, when efforts will be made to bring all into the line.

President McBride expects definite information by letter from nearly every district today. There seems to be no doubt that the suspension in Ohio and western Pennsylvania is almost complete. The organizers are more active in West Virginia and Illinois. National Secretary McBride is having gone to the latter place to address meetings. No reports have been received of any disturbances, and none is expected, as a friendly feeling seems to prevail.

The Pennsylvania District.

PITTSBURG, April 23.—The strike situation in this district is unchanged. The first figures given out as to the number of strikers are about correct. There were no special meetings, but organizers and speakers have been among the men all day encouraging them. Today a mass meeting will be held at Turtle Creek, the only weak spot in the district, where the miners of the New York and Cleveland Gas and Coal company are hesitating. The company claim that their men will go to work, but the strikers declare the diggers struck Saturday night. Speakers for both sides will be present at the meeting, and a joint debate is looked for. President Dearmitt of the company and one of the organizers of the union. In the Wheeling district, on the Baltimore and Ohio, Operator Floreshein says he has enough mine to start his mines today and will make the attempt under the protection of 50 deputies now on the ground. This seems to be the only threatening spot in this immediate vicinity.

In the coke region the situation is a puzzle, and nothing definite can be said of this field until after today's delegate convention, which is expected to decide whether or not the men will join in the strike.

Great Northern Strike Almost Over.

ST. PAUL, April 23.—The effect of the opinion of the United States attorney general, expressed as it was by one of the best known lawyers in the United States, had a noticeable effect on the strike leaders in this city and along the line of the Great Northern road, which effect is apparent in the fact that the road is now clear from this city to Minot, and trains on the Minnesota and Dakota division will be run as usual today. Heretofore the strike leaders have maintained that they did not object to the running of mails and they were not obstructing the mail service, but on hearing the decision and before it was known to the public they announced that they proposed to allow all mail trains, including passenger cars, to pass unobstructed. It is believed that the strike is practically over now, so far as these two states are concerned, and the company can begin work on the states farther west, taking them in order one at a time.

Alabama Miners In Trouble.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 23.—A conflict between the striking miners and the military now appears imminent at the Patton mines, as the miners have not struck. All the strikers at the mines in that vicinity swear that the miners shall not go to work. The strikers are assembling at Patton, so it is said, to execute their threat if the men attempt to go to work. All the deputy sheriffs in Walker county have gone to the scene, and the miners who have not struck have been armed.

A large supply of ammunition and guns has been sent there, so that they may protect themselves. Governor Jones reached here at midnight in response to a telegram from Patton, and a conference with mine operators and civil and military authorities. All the military are at their armories ready to respond to a call when ordered out.

Strike of Three Thousand Italian Knights.

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.—Three thousand Italian street cleaners went out on strike at midnight last night. The trouble has arisen through a demand for an increase of wages. The strikers are members of the Italian assembly of the Knights of Valor, branch No. 329, and are receiving considerable co-operation from sympathizers outside the organization. About 100 of the strikers paraded the streets last night and were greeted with loud yells and similar weapons. Their intent was to meet with scabs, but none of these showed themselves, and no damage was done.

Kansas Miners Refuse to Strike.

PITTSBURG, Kan., April 23.—The situation in the various mining districts in this part of the state remains unchanged. A few agitators have made their appearance, headed by J. M. Lacy, ex-secretary of the Kansas branch of the United Mine Workers' association, who took such a prominent part in the strike here last year. They are meeting with quickly among the miners, but with little success, however.

Threatened Strike In Sawmills.

BAY CITY, Mich., April 23.—There are rumors that a general strike will be inaugurated among the sawmill laborers and their employers of all factories will be called out. The police force will be in readiness to promptly act in case of emergency.

Artist Davis' Son Killed.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 23.—Theodore Russell Davis, 22 years old, a son of Theodore R. Davis, the artist, who resides at Asbury Park, was killed on the Royal Blue line at Bayonne City.

Beatification of Joan of Arc.

PARIS, April 23.—Ten thousand persons were present in the Church of Notre Dame, where services were held in connection with the beatification of Joan of Arc.

Cemetery Addition Dedicated.

JERSEY CITY, April 23.—An addition to the Hudson County Roman Catholic cemetery was dedicated by Bishop Wigger.

Two Ways of Making Money

I. Get a job in the United States mint.

II. Attend the great sale that is now on at Whitely's. You will find it the surest and most profitable way. We have been busy during the past month buying goods from manufacturers who would rush and were willing to sell at one price, and we will offer the entire lot of goods at ruinously low figures.

HERE'S { THE GOODS. THE PRICES.

DRESS GOODS—The profit cut off of every piece of Dress Goods in the store. The largest purchase of Dress Goods we ever made at one time we made last week. Over two hundred pieces of fine imported dress fabrics, not one piece costing less than 25c. per yard, and from 75 and 50c. We put them all on one table at the reasonably low price of 39c. per yard. All on table No. 1.

HOUSE FURNISHING DEPT—Our regular annual sale of granite iron ware takes place this week. We put on sale over two hundred cases of this ware. Will be sold at the same prices you pay for tinware.

	Our price.	Regular prices.
Granite iron plates	12c.	25c.
" " Sauce pans	15c.	25c.
" " stew "	20c.	40c.
" " tea kettles	39c.	75c.
" " dish pans	67c.	1.25
" " coffee pots	97c.	75c
" " pails	39c.	60c.

The above goods and prices are just a few of the many bargains this house will offer during this sale. Every Department is over-loaded with the best of everything and you can rest assured that the prices are the lowest.

RAN ON THE ROCKS.

Pacific Coast Steamer Wrecked and Several Lives Lost.

MONTEREY, Cal., April 23.—The Pacific Coast Steamship company's steamer Los Angeles, bound north from Newport, Cal., was put in to San Francisco harbor, ran on the rocks at Point Sur lighthouse, 30 miles south of Monterey, Saturday night. The steamer sank within a few minutes, and the passengers and crew took to the boats. Three boatloads reached shore at Point Sur, and the first news of the disaster was brought by a messenger. Two other boatloads and a raft containing other passengers and members of the crew were met by the steamer Eureka last evening. The Eureka brought them to Monterey.

From those who arrived on the Eureka it was learned that the Los Angeles reached Point Sur lighthouse about 9 p. m. The captain, who had retired, had given orders to have the third mate call him when a certain number of revolutions of the wheel had occurred. The mate failed to do so, and the steamer went upon the rocks at 9:15, and in 10 minutes she sank.

The captain instantly ordered out the four boats, and a raft of two floats containing about 30 men succeeded in reaching the shore. Two others and the raft kept out to sea. Quartermaster Hall was in charge of one of the boats, saw the steamer Eureka and succeeded in getting within hailing distance. The steamer lay to and sent a boat to search for the lost rocker party. They soon found the raft with seven persons aboard, whom they rescued, and later they picked up the other boat containing 17 other persons. They sent word to those on shore and offered to take them aboard the steamer, but owing to the roughness of the surf they failed to do so.

Four dead bodies have been recovered, and Captain H. D. Leland of the Los Angeles is reported in a critical condition by his brother, Captain James Leland of the Eureka. All the ladies and children were saved and brought here on the Eureka. Her passengers and crew numbered 70.

The Los Angeles was a very old vessel, having been used by the Pacific Coast Steamship company for 20 years. The rocks at Point Sur, which are a cluster of ugly spurs about a mile from the shore, have long been a menace to navigation on the southern route.

Three Hanged From a Bridge.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 23.—At Tuscombia, Tom Black, John Willis and Tony Johnson, all negroes, were lynched. About a week ago these men were arrested for burning the new bridge of Wheeling, at night a masked mob of 200 men went to the jail, took the three incendiaries and led them to the Tennessee river bridge. Ropes were placed about the necks of negroes' necks, and with the end tied to the bridge timbers they were compelled to jump off. The jerk broke their necks and the bodies, after being filled with bullets, were left dangling where they hung.

Stopped Her Critic's Face.

MONTREAL, April 23.—The Theatre Francais was the scene of an exciting episode when the theater was filled with a fashionable audience. Horace St. Louis, a well known lawyer and contributor to La Patrie, who made some uncomplimentary remarks about Mme. Blouvilla in his weekly chronique in that paper, occupied a box. Mme. Blouvilla requested him to visit her behind the scenes, but he refused. She, however, at the conclusion of the next act, made her way to the box, and in full view of the audience she slapped Mr. St. Louis's face.

Mine on Fire.

ASHLAND, Pa., April 23.—The St. Nicholas mine at this place, which is owned and operated by the Reading company, has been on fire since early Sunday morning, and the fire is still raging fiercely. All the mules in the mine have been brought to the surface, and preparations are being made to extinguish the fire by diverting a creek from its natural bed into the workings, thus flooding the mine. The fire originated in an unknown manner.

Brooklyn Embezzler Caught.

BROOKLYN, April 23.—Inspector MacKellar of the Brooklyn police received a telegram from the police authorities at Toronto to the effect that William D. Lohmann, the embezzling cashier of the Brooklyn excise department, had been arrested in that city.

Maritime Harbor Beclouded.

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 23.—The enormous quantity of ice which has floated down along the Nova Scotia coast has blockaded Halifax harbor, and together with a dense fog which has prevailed for four days it has temporarily suspended navigation.

Ex-Governor Daniels Dead.

TACOMA, April 23.—W. B. Daniels, aged 76, ex-governor of Idaho, died after a two months' illness. Governor Daniels was born in Ohio on a farm adjoining that on which James A. Garfield was brought up, and the two were boys together.

Wrecked by a Washout.

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 23.—A work train on the Grand Trunk road from Island Pond, Vt., ran into a washout near Woolcock station, killing a brakeman named Thomas White and badly injuring an engineer and several workmen.

Pottery Strike Nearing Settlement.

TRENTON, April 23.—The long lockout in the potteries, owing to the cut in piece price wage lists, is nearing settlement on the basis of a day wage system. Two potteries have adopted the new scheme, with satisfactory results.

Four Young Burglars.

NORWICH, N. Y., April 23.—Clifford Haughton, Charles Green, Frank Lewis and Lewis Crandall, all under 18 years of age, were arrested here, having been implicated in a series of burglaries in this vicinity.

Bishop Ryanakos Installed.

WHEELING, April 23.—Right Rev. P. Donahue, the new bishop of Wheeling, was formally installed in his new office, being conducted to the throne by Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop J. J. Kain of St. Louis.

Five Years For a Heinous Crime.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 23.—Lambert W. Jackson, who pleaded guilty to the charge of setting fire to a house after forcing Mrs. John B. Cowan and her child in it, has been sent to state prison for five years.

Brothers Expected to Recognize.

MILWAUKEE, April 23.—John Lynch was removed to the isolation hospital with a well developed case of smallpox. He had spent the day in a saloon with the striking longshoremen.

National Republican League Conference.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—A conference of the members of the executive committee of the National Republican League of the United States begins here today.

A CLOSE RANGE DUEL.

Two Rival Mashed Southerners Testify In a Shooting Scrape.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 23.—A deplorable tragedy here resulted in the death of one young man and the possibly fatal wounding of another. Walter L. Bragg, son of the late interstate commerce commissioner, and Dr. Jesse Naftel had a misunderstanding at the theater, where Senator Morgan also spoke. They did not know each other, but had seats close together. Naftel spoke to Bragg regarding the position in which the latter placed himself, claiming that he was obstructing his view of the stage and speaker. He finally said to Bragg, "A gentleman would not act that way." Bragg then gave his name and asked Naftel's in return, with the statement that the matter could be settled afterward.

Bragg went into a drug store where Naftel's office is located and asked Naftel to step aside. They went to the rear, where a partition separated the store into two parts. Those in front heard no conversation, and the first they knew of the difficulty came with the sound of rapid firing. Who fired first or what was said is not known. Bragg was fatally shot in the abdomen and died in an hour.

Naftel was wounded in two or three places, but not seriously except where a pistol ball struck him squarely between the eyes and glanced off the bone. Naftel was taken to his home. Bragg was an attorney of decided ability and bade fair to make a reputation.

Colonel Hopkins' Term.

KANSAS CITY, April 23.—Colonel Hopkins, theatrical manager and backer of pugilists, gives to a local paper a sensational interview in which he says Pitzsimmons Hall fight at New Orleans. According to him, Hall was paid to get knocked out, and Charley Mitchell, who was aware of the scheme, made a pot of gold out of it, while Mitchell's friend, Squire Abingdon, was victimized.

Spanish Pilgrims See the Pope.

ROME, April 23.—Eight thousand five hundred Spanish pilgrims were present in the basilica of St. Peter's at the further services held in connection with the beatification of Juan d'Arvila Diego, known as the "Apostle of Andalusia." The pope entered the basilica for the purpose of venerating the new patnt. An immense crowd was present.

A FIRE IN THE NIGHT.

A FAMILY AWAKENED TO FIND THEMSELVES SURROUNDED BY FLAMES.

They Escape Through a Second Story Window in Only their Night Clothes —A Thrilling Time Trying to Save Their Lives—The Lucky Coughing of a Little Child.

FIREMEN in the borough were called out, about one o'clock this morning, by an alarm from District 8. The fire proved to be in the home of Henry Bodenheimer, 251 Somerset street, and consumed the house and furniture, as well as about 100 pairs of trousers in process of manufacture.

Mr. Bodenheimer occupied the house, with his wife, two children, (a little boy and girl) and a young woman. They were all sound asleep when the fire started, and did not awaken until after it had got under considerable headway.

That the family was even then aroused was due to the little girl awakening her mother by its coughing, due to suffocation from the smoke. The mother then heard the crackling flames. She screamed in terror. Her scream awakened her husband. He quickly jumped up and saw the awful danger to his family and himself. The whole lower part of the house was in flames. There was only one window at the rear from the second story, by which there was any chance to escape. He got them out on the roof of the kitchen extension and in an instant alighted to the ground. A ladder, used for getting into the bay mow of the barn where he kept his horses and cows, stood nearby. He seized this and put it up against the extension, and got his terrified wife, children and servant to the ground safely in time to save their lives. They did not have time to secure their wearing apparel.

They were given shelter in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winans, a neighboring couple, and when Mr. Bodenheimer had them safe, he hastened to the barn to save his stock. The fire did not extend to the barn, but to be on the safe side the cattle were driven out, and put all in Mr. Winans' barn, except one cow, which became wild with excitement and ran away. She was recovered after daylight.

The fire whistle sounded the alarm too late to give the firemen any chance to save the house itself, although they did well in confining the house adjoining by wetting it well. It is doubtful if the firemen could have saved Mr. Bordenheimer's property after the first few precious moments.

The cause of the fire is supposed to have been a lamp, which had been left burning during the night, become overturned and exploded.

The furniture, it is said, was insured for $600, and the dwelling was also insured for $1,500 in the Mercantile Company, through Van Buren & Timpson, agents.

Mr. Bodenheimer has been known in the borough as a man of extraordinary strength. He and his wife were exceedingly industrious and thrifty, and were rapidly acquiring a competency, when Mr. Bodenheimer over-taxed his strength one day at work, and sustained a rupture in consequence of which somewhat incapacitated him. The strongest expression of sympathy were heard on all sides this morning for the family in their latest misfortune, and of the hope that they will some out of it all right.

The alarm was sounded on the Plainfield side of the brook also, as it was reported that the fire department was on fire and that ladders were needed. It was found that the report was grossly false so the truck was not taken out. Chief Dunne went over to see if help was needed.

At the Park Club.

Prof. J. Grestel, an expert billiard and pool player, has been engaged by the house committee of the Park Club to give an exhibition of fancy shots at pool and billiards at the Park Club on Thursday night. As there is a limited space around the billiard tables, only club members will be admitted on that evening.

The Park Club will give the third formal dance of the season at the Club house Friday evening, April 27. The patronesses are Mrs. F. P. Dupee, Mrs. A. Van Deventer Mrs. S. Townsend and Mrs. S. St. J. McCutchen.

Claims he was Assaulted.

Yesterday afternoon, Garret P. Smith made a complaint before City Judge Coddington of assault and battery against Frank Hart. According to Smith's statement he was going through Mr. D. S. Roberts' livery stable from North avenue to Second street when he was struck by Hart, because he refused to leave the stable by the way he entered.

Hart pleaded not guilty to the charge this morning, and trial was set down for Saturday morning, at nine o'clock.

A Score of 245.

Saturday night, Mr. William Worth made the highest score so far this month on the Park Club alleys. He rolled 245. A handsome watch was offered as a prize to the member making the highest score for three months.

BOARD OF EDUCATION BILL PASSED

By the New Jersey Senate at Last Night's Session.

Senate bill, No. 31, providing that boards of education in cities may borrow money by issue of bonds to amounts of $5,000 only by consent of Common Councils, introduced by Senator Voorhees of Union county was passed by a decisive last night. This bill is the one that affects Plainfield, and the passage of which was fought so hard against by the Plainfield Board of Education.

A Surprise Sociable on Somerset Street.

Mr. John Voehl of Somerset street, was treated to a complete surprise at his home last evening. The guests, about 90 in number, arrived between half-past eight and nine o'clock, and were soon gliding over the floors in a waltz to the music furnished by Prof. Frazee. Refreshments were served about twelve o'clock, after which the company were entertained for a short time by Mr. John Voehl in his inimitable Dutch recitations. Dancing was then resumed until nearly half-past two, when the company dispersed for their home. Among those present were:

Miss Della Voehl, Miss Lena Scudley, Miss May MacLaughlin, Miss Cora Shepard, Miss May Dunham, Miss Etta Blatz, Miss Lizzie Stafford, the Misses Bliss, Miss Smith, Miss Coriell, Miss Young, Miss Springer and Miss Mower. A. D. Hoagland, A. B. Johnson, H. Coddington, H. Woolston, J. DeMoss, Edward Clark, Louis Schutt, John Voehl, Robert Clark, George Chandler, Frank Blatz, Harry Stafford, Frank Folkes and James Stafford.

The committees of arrangements were: Messrs. A. D. Honeyman and A. B. Johnson.

Started to Beat His Mother.

About 4 o'clock Sunday morning, Constable John M. C. Marsh sent for Judge Collins to dispose of Ownie Fraine, who had been making things lively for the residents of Spring street, Westfield, all night. After Ownie had abused everybody on the street he started in to hammer his old mother. Dick Ratchford, who lives in the house, then went to Mrs. Fraine's assistance. Ownie then assaulted Ratchford and tried to cut his with a butcher knife. Ratchford escaped, and went for the Constable. Fraine will tell his story before the Grand Jury.

Dance of the Æsnas.

The second social of the Æsna Social Club was given in Red Men's Hall last night. The affair proved a most delightful success. About fifty couples attended and danced until dawn this morning, to the music of Prof. Gutzmann's orchestra. The hall was beautifully decorated. The grand march was led by F. W. Canfield and wife. The committee in charge of the entertainment was composed of Mr. C. E. Ball, Mr. F. W. Canfield and Mr. Charles Stortevant.

The Coaching Record Broken.

Col. Edward Morrell broke the coaching record yesterday by driving from the Hotel Waldorf, New York, to the Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, in 11 hours, 28 minutes, a distance of 106 miles. Fourteen changes of horses were made, lunch was partaken of at Princeton and twenty-three minutes were lost by opening drawbridges. The Colonel won a heavy bet by accomplishing this feat.

A Match for $100 a Side.

"Scott" Terry of this city and Mr. Patterson of New Brunswick are to shoot a match on the South avenue grounds tomorrow afternoon, for $100 a side and at 50 birds each.

The meeting of the New Jersey Trap-Shooters' League will take place at the Bonita Side Gun Club grounds, Newark, on Thursday. The Climax Gun Club's team will participate in the "shoot"

Board of Health Meeting To-Night.

A meeting of the Board of Health will be held to-night, when Health Inspector Dunham will make a report of the number of inspections made. Mr. H. Otis Newman, who was appointed to take the place of Mr. C. B. Leonard, who resigned, has been elected secretary of the Board and will act in that capacity for the first time to-night.

A Painful Injury.

Mrs. Jacob Voehl of Somerset street, has been confined to the house for several days past from the results of an accident. While walking in the yard adjoining the house, she stepped on a rusty wire nail, which penetrated nearly its full length in her foot. The injury, although gradually improving, is still very painful.

Drafting By-Laws for the Indians.

The By-Law Committee of Peaugh Canoh Nauch Sinque Tribe of Red Men will meet to-night to draft a constitution and by-laws for the new tribe, which holds a regular meeting to-morrow night. The By-Law Committee is composed of Messrs. Eli M. Odam, J. H. Carney, H. C. Runyon, Chas. Bullock and S. H. Cleverly.

Caulfield Fined $4.

James Caulfield, who was arrested Saturday night for fighting with Dominick Duffy on Somerset street, pled guilty last night when arraigned before Justice Cassidy, and a fine of $4 was imposed.

NEWS OF THE WHEELMEN.

The Atalanta Wheelmen to Hold an 150 Miles Relay Race.

WHEELMEN generally, will be interested in the action of the Atalanta Wheelmen of Newark last night in arranging for a long interstate relay race, in which the incentives will be handsome gold medals. The meeting at which this important action was taken was largely attended and enthusiastic.

The relay race decided upon will be 150 miles—from New York to Philadelphia by way of Elizabeth and Plainfield, and will take place on Saturday, June 2. It will be of an interstate character, teams from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania taking part. There will be six men on each team and the relays will be twenty-five miles. The start will be in front of the New York Times office, New York, and finish at the baseball grounds on Broad street, Philadelphia.

City Court.

Judge Coddington this morning, fined Frank McClade $1 for being drunk on Front street. Policeman Frederickson made the arrest.

Geo. Potter was adjudged guilty of being drunk and disorderly last night on the street and with using profane and indecent language. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or spend 20 days in jail.

Now Able to Take Care of Himself.

Judge Collins yesterday granted an appeal to Clark Township in the matter of the legal settlement of Ferdinand Smith, the old man whose condition aroused so much sympathy last Winter. Smith was sent to St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, and came out in fine condition. He is now able to take care of himself. He expects to farm this Summer.

In the Justices' Courts.

BEFORE JUSTICE NASH.

Yesterday afternoon, the cases of Kessler & Co. vs. Crowley, on contract, and Kessler & Co., vs. Wiedman, were tried before Justice Nash. As the defendants failed to appear judgment was rendered for $200, in each case in favor of the plaintiff.

Hotel Grenada to Have Waitresses.

Commencing this morning, the hotel Grenada will have meals served to the guests by waitresses, instead of colored waiters, as has formerly been the custom.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

SIX AMERICANS ARRESTED.

Canadians Say They Killed Fish with Dynamite.

Ottawa, Ont., April 24.—Mayor Sherwood, Superintendent of the Canadian Secret Service, sent two men to Prescott, Ont., opposite Ogdensburg, N. Y., last Saturday, to watch for residents of the American side of the St. Lawrence who had been killing sturgeon in Canadian waters by means of dynamite. Last Sunday night the Canadian officers arrested six Americans, all of whom had dynamite on their persons. The prisoners were lodged in the County Jail.

CHOLERA SPREADS IN LISBON.

Reports of 104 Cases and Three Deaths Yesterday.

Lisbon, April 24.—During the twenty-four hours ending yesterday evening there were 104 cases and three deaths from cholera reported here. The Portuguese Government has stopped all telegraphic messages.

Hanged to a Gas-Pipe.

New York, April 24.—Wolf Cohen, a coal and wood dealer, at 8 Forsyth street, committed suicide between 6 and 8 o'clock this morning by hanging himself from a gaspipe in his store in the basement.

Business reverses and the duplicity of supposed friends who have profited by his benefactions are said to be the cause.

BREVITIES.

—Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will hold a meeting to-night.

—Chief Doane tested the fire alarm system to-day by sounding the gong from box 13.

—Frank McClade was arrested this afternoon while beastly intoxicated on Front street.

—Thursday night, a ball will be given in Saengerbund Hall for the benefit of John Rosch.

—Workmen began to-day to cut down trees in front of the Babcock building, on West Front street.

—Bowling teams from the Potter and Scott-Press Works will bowl the second game of their series on the Arlington Hotel alleys, Friday night.

—There is to be a concert in the Methodist church in Dunellen on May 10th, at which Mr. Van Epe of this city will take part. He will play the zither.

—Mr. Van Epe, the Park avenue jeweller, will shortly have on exhibition in his window a complete miniature electric light station in full operation. It will be running on Saturday nights.

75th Anniversary of Odd Fellowship.

On April 26, in Baltimore, Md., will be celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding in this country of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and preparations on a large scale are being made for the celebration.

It has been suggested, and the suggestion is being carried out, that the lodges hold meetings on the evening of the 26th, for the purpose of celebrating amongst themselves the seventy-fifth anniversary of the birth of this order in this country. Fitting and appropriate programme of speeches, etc., will be arranged, looking to the deeper impressing in the hearts of the members the history, principles, and possibilities of the Grand Order of Odd Fellowship, and to make the seventy-fifth anniversary of the order a memorable event in its history.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, of this city has arranged to hold exercises, commemorative of the occasion, in Odd Fellows' Hall.

The American membership alone numbers 1,400, so that some idea of the magnitude of the Order may be had when we think to this number must be added the vast foreign membership. Great preparations have been made to have this commemorative service the most impressive series of ritualistic observances ever held in America. The greatest share of the responsibility in making these arrangements has fallen to the lot of Grand Secretary Theodore A. Rose, who is a Jerseyman.

Rehearsing "Arrah Na Pogue."

The play to be given by the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum in Music Hall, on May 1st, was rehearsed in the Lyceum Hall, last night. The title of the play is "Arrah Na Pogue." The excellent manner in which the Lyceum presented "Married Life" in Music Hall, bespeaks for those who attend "Arrah Na Pogue," a most pleasing entertainment. Mr. Charles Ward has charge of the affair.

DEATH VALLEY.

The Most Desolate and Deadly Spot in the United States.

HAT there should be many curious places, many marvelous regions, many wonders of nature confined to narrow districts, in a country so large as ours, is not strange. But the most remarkable spot, perhaps, within the United States is in Inyo County, California, where a plague exists, as burning sands, shimmering landscape and deadly desolation, which the author of "Glimpses of America" thus realistically describes:

"This county (Inyo) is remarkable for embracing a region of extraordinary wonders, greater indeed, in several respects, than any other district in the world. In the northern part is a marvelous depression, 198 feet below the sea level and nearly 150 miles in circumference, known as Death Valley. It is distinctively a volcanic region, in which, however, the fires have long since burned out, leaving the ground covered of cinders, or parched that no drop of water exists within its borders, though rivers of lava ramify it in every direction. Many have perished in an effort to cross this fiery plain, and looking down from the mountain, the observer sees a shimmer in the atmosphere as if a furnace were in active blast beneath. Here the temperature rises to 123 degrees Fah., and the air hangs in a hot envelope, lazily swinging to and fro, rising and falling in waves of heat, and making the sands blaze with an almost blinding light. Scorched, burned out, furnace-like though the region be, it is, nevertheless, the abode of life, but no less curious than the valley itself. The centipede, scorpion and horned toad find here a congenial habitation; and, strange to say, a species of kangaroo rat is peculiar to this cursed spot, burrowing in the hot sand and feeding on insects.

"Thunder storms at least around the valley, but up drop of water ever moistens its burning lips. The dryness of the air is such a preserver of dead bodies that decay is impossible, and the animals that die within its borders are mummified until they become like parchment. This cursed spot, seven as it is with dragons' teeth, is not wholly without attractions, though they are as dangerous as were the soft, lute-like voices of the sirens. It is a field of wonderful illusion, from which spring the quivering air the most astounding and alluring mirages, rippling brooks, moving palms, flowery meads, ships under sail, banks of thyme, and travelers moving in processions across the landscape more beautiful than an oriental vision.

This admirable description occurs in our splendid portfolio, "Glimpses of America," which is within the reach of the readers of The News. Everyone subscribing to this country should get the complete series of this peerless work. One coupon and ten cents will secure Part I, or any of the numbers, in person or by mail.

MARRIAGE LICENSES IN NEW JERSEY.

A Bill Fining Any Person $100 Who Marries a Couple Without One.

Trenton, N. J., April 24.—The House of Assembly adopted to-night a concurrent resolution offered by Mr. McEwen, providing that the Legislature adjourn on Friday, May 4th, until Monday, Sept. 3.

A RESOLUTION OF THANKS.

A resolution was adopted thanking the New York Legislature for courtesies extended to the Jerseymen on their recent trip to Albany. These resolutions are to be engrossed and forwarded to Albany.

FOR NON-PARTISAN BOARDS.

Bills were passed providing for a non-partisan board of managers for the Boys' Reform School at Jamesburg, and forbidding the removal of gas meters from buildings without the consent of the owner. Mr. Storrs introduced a bill providing for the appointment of separate boards of managers for the Trenton and Morristown Asylums, and legislating out of office the single Board which now manages the two institutions. The new boards are to be non-partisan, appointed by the Governor.

A MARRIAGE LICENSE BILL.

Mr. Thompson introduced a marriage license bill, which inflicts a penalty of $100 on any person who marries a couple who have not procured a license. Bills were also introduced legislating out of office the State Board of Pilot Commissioners, and the Boards of Excise, Boards of Health, and Boards of Assessment in Jersey City and Newark, and providing for the appointment of non-partisan Boards to succeed them.

TO TEACH ABOUT SCHOOLS.

The Senate passed to-night the bill requiring instruction in the public schools of the effects of alcohol and tobacco on the human system. Senator Bradley had charge of the bill.

The Senate passed the bill abolishing the Boards of Public Works in Paterson, Camden and Trenton.

Dr. Shrady on "How to Obtain Perfect Health."

"What manner of life, said a reporter, recently, to that eminent physician, Dr. Shrady, do you think is most favorable to perfect health?"

"A moderate life. Take plenty of sleep. Take plenty to eat. Take plenty of exercise. We need more walking philosophers in this world. Keep a contented mind. Remember that the man who wants little is always rich, and the man who has much isn't, always. Sometimes a man owns a house, but sometimes the house owns the man. It is better for the man to own the house and to have in mind that a big man can live in a very little house. I need not say that little men often live in big houses. This life can only give a man at best one thing—contentment."

Dr. Lewis Makes a Change.

Dr. Lewis's evening with the Sacred Books will be Thursday instead of Wednesday, for the present week only.

INDUSTRIALS WARNED.

District of Columbia Commissioners Issue a Proclamation.

NO ROOM FOR THEM IN WASHINGTON

Coxey's Army and Like Organizations Are Officially Notified That They Are Not Wanted In Washington—Senate Refuses a Hearing—The Day In Both Houses.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The commissioners of the District of Columbia took action on the impending Coxey invasion. They held a long executive session and consulted with S. T. Thomas, the attorney for the District. As a result a manifesto was prepared and given out. It began as follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

Whereas, It is reported that bodies of men are approaching the District of Columbia with the avowed purpose of creating such emergency and action as would relieve the condition of unemployed laborers throughout the country;

Now, therefore, the commissioners of the District of Columbia, who are charged with the duty of maintaining peace and good order and enforcing the laws in said District, being sensible of the gravity of the situation, and fully appreciating the hardship which must come upon many innocent but misguided people if this ill considered movement should be continued, do hereby appeal, in the interest of humanity and in furtherance of the peace and good order which are enjoined by the laws in force in said District, to the good sense and patriotism of all those engaged in or who contemplate taking any part in the proposed demonstration, and urge them to reconsider their intention to come into the District of Columbia for that purpose.

The Warning.

The commissioners, while in entire sympathy with all people out of employment, and having no desire or purpose to deal harshly with unfortunate but honest men who seek relief by reasonable and lawful means, are in duty bound to protect the public and also are compelled under any pretext to swell the number of unemployed persons already here that there is neither work for them nor means for their maintenance in the District; that the law does not permit the soliciting of alms in our streets and forbids parades, mass meetings or marches in the capitol grounds, and the obstruction of any public grounds, streets, highways or avenues and the passage thereon to public or private buildings.

The commissioners give notice also to the criminals and evildoers who, under cover of a crowd of unemployed men in our streets, may seek to commit for the purpose of crime and disorder, that all such will be apprehended and summarily dealt with.

And finally they give notice to all who come here against their advice and protest that the laws in force in the District of Columbia are adequate for every emergency and will be rigidly enforced.

JOHN W. ROSS,
GEORGE TUCKERMAN,
CHARLES F. POWELL,
Commissioners District of Columbia.

The meeting was then closed by a vote of 3 to 2 to appoint a special committee to hear Coxey's representative.

In House and Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Senator Washburn of Minnesota consumed almost the entire afternoon in a speech against the adrif bill, which was mainly a protest against the abrogation of the reciprocity clause of the McKinley law. He expressed the belief that the Wilson bill in some form would be enacted into law. In the few moments that remained after Senator Washburn concluded his speech Senator Dolph gave an installment of his speech.

During the morning session a bill was introduced by request by Senator Peffer "to relieve the idle labor and diversify idle wealth in the District of Columbia," which was referred to the committee on the District of Columbia. He also sought to take up Senator Butler's joint resolution for the appointment of a committee on communications—his "Coxey committee"—but the motion was lost—17 to 26.

The house then took the entire day to business from the committee on the District of Columbia. Two bills of more or less general interest to the people were acted upon first, which was passed, was a bill extending the time allowed the Metropolitan Street Railroad company of this city to change its motive power. As passed, the company must within 18 months put in an underground electric system or forfeit its charter.

The other bill was to permit bookmaking at the regular spring and fall meetings of the jockey clubs and driving parks of the District of Columbia. The bill has been vigorously pushed and was earnestly championed on the floor, but met also with bitter opposition. Mr. Cockran of New York made a strong speech against it. When the vote was taken, to the surprise of all, the bill was defeated—87 to 69.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

New Jersey—Alfred B. Hunter, Bordentown; James P. Ross, Center Brunswick; Charles Springer, Centerville Station; M. S. Vanderipe, East Schenkel; J. W. Yarbrough, Gravelton; C. S. Dunham, South Petersburg; Horace Green, Pemberton; Joseph Hunter, Schuylerville; James Boscraft, Stephentown Center; A. J. Clark, Valley Falls; Thomas Dorsa.

Pennsylvania—Amity, John R. Lucilles; Bald Mount, F. H. Cooper; East Benton, C. S. Corey; Blanchers, R. B. Rood; Lincoln, Silas E. Bard; Mountainville, H. F. Swinehart; Narrow Haven, Charles M. Miller; New Salem, Elias Hatfield.

Chairman Wilson's Condition.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—William H. Wilson, son and secretary of Chairman Wilson of the ways and means committee, is home after a month with his father in Mexico and Texas. He says Mr. Wilson, Sr., will start for the north in about two weeks, stopping at Asheville, N. C., for a time and then come to Washington. There is little prospect, however, of his taking up congressional work for some time.

Caught In the Dynamo Belt.

BALTIMORE, April 24.—Thomas Wythe had charge of the dynamo that supplies light to the large plant in the Maryland steel works at Sparrow's Point. He was caught in the big belt as he reached under it and hurled against the machinery. The top of his head was knocked off, and his brains were scattered around the place.

FOR YOUNG AMERICA.

What Little Boys and Girls Will Wear the Coming Summer.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Shades of brown are much used for girls' dresses. Besides the favorite tobacco brown there are various tones of tan, and these light shades, in serge especially, wear well and will even bear washing, although brown was formerly considered, and with good reason, a tint not to be depended upon. It used to be prone to fade in the sun and spot in the rain and "run" if it got wet, but the new browns seem to be as fast as any other color. Scotch plaids are also sold for children's wear and are always pretty and suitable, whether the smallest maidens are selected or the darker ones of blue, green or brown. The red plaids are soft in color in spite of their brightness and are very pretty for young or little girls' frocks, trimmed with rows of narrow black velvet ribbon. Little French girls are wearing ecru straw hats trimmed with wide plaid ribbon and cream lace.

A good model for a child's dress in this wool goods is shown, having a sailor blouse with a wide collar, puffed sleeves with deep cuffs and an accordion plaited skirt. Accordion plaiting is still used for women as well as children and seems to be a permanent addition to the wardrobe. It is shown again in a long serge cost for a little girl. The body of the coat is plain, but an accordion plaited cape mounted on a round yoke is worn over it. Jackets have been brought out for very small children, to be slipped on over the thin white frocks on cool days. One was of fine sky blue flannel cut with a wide collar. It was trimmed with white lace and had a double row of pearl buttons in front. Another was of striped stuff and was exactly like a sailor's pea jacket, except that it was only about 10 inches long and narrow in proportion.

The boy's suit in the accompanying cut is made of dark blue cheviot. The jacket or blouse waist opens over a vest of striped jersey material. The girl's costume is of hazel nut brown serge. The skirt is trimmed with four narrow bands of velvet ribbon. The full bodice fastens behind, and the waist is encircled by a sash of black velvet ribbon. The sleeve has a balloon puff and three shoulder ribbons, ending in a ruffle trimmed with velvet ribbon. A wide collar covers the shoulders, and a standing collar of velvet finishes the neck.

JESSE SELIGMAN'S DEATH.

The Multimillionaire Banker Dies While Searching For Health.

CORONADO, Cal., April 24.—The death of Jesse Seligman, the New York banker, occurred here. The end came peacefully, and consciousness was retained to the last. Mr. Seligman came to Coronado last Friday, accompanied by his wife and two daughters. He sank steadily during Sunday night and until the end came. The body has been taken to an undertaker on the San Diego side of the bay, where it will be embalmed and retained until the arrival of his three sons, who, it is said, left on a special train for San Diego. When they arrive, the body will be sent to New York.

He was born in a small village in Bavaria in 1827 and was the fourth child of a family which consisted of eight brothers and three sisters. Joseph, Abraham and Jesse, and two of the sisters are now dead. The surviving members of the family are William, James, Henry, Leopold, Isaac and one sister.

He arrived in this country on the 4th of July, 1841, and joined his three elder brothers, who were in the dry goods business in Alabama. Seven years later he returned north and started in business for himself in Watertown, N. Y. In 1850, during the time of the gold fever, he went to San Francisco, where he was successful in business. He took a great interest in public affairs there, and when mob rule broke out he joined the vigilance committee. Afterward he joined the committee of forty, which put the affairs of San Francisco into the hands of men who had the interest of the citizens at heart.

In 1857 he returned to New York and five years later started the banking house which is now known the world over. He was always a stanch Union man and a Republican.

He was a man of extreme courtesy and dignity and had an imposing personal appearance. He was influential in all great financial movements, as able banker, a loyal and charitable citizen, respected by all classes of the community and always having at heart the welfare of the land of his adoption. He leaves three sons—Theodore, Henry and Albert—and three daughters—Mrs. Emma Wasserman and the Misses Alice and Madeline. It is said that the fortune is in the neighborhood of $10,000,000.

Two Girl Highway Robbers.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 24.—One of the roughest regions in this section of West Virginia is on the ridge between Twelve Pole and Tom's creek, in Wayne county, about 20 miles south of this city. Recently a number of men passing over it on horseback have been held up by a couple of men, it was supposed, but when William Balanger was stopped and relieved of $100 he found that the highwaymen were women in disguise and also they were Misses Ella and Tina Gore, daughters of a respectable farmer. He reported the matter to their people, and the mysterious gang on Tom's creek ridge has been revealed.

Two Ways of Making Money

I. Get a job in the United States mint.

II. Attend the great sale that is now on at White's. You will find it the surest and most pleasant way. We have been busy during the past month buying goods from manufacturers who wanted cash and were willing to sell at one price, and we will offer the entire lot of goods at remarkably low figures.

HERE'S { THE GOODS. THE PRICES.

DRESS GOODS—The profit cut off of every piece of Dress Goods in the store. The largest purchase of Dress Goods we ever made at one time we made last week. Over two hundred pieces of fine imported dress fabrics, not one piece costing less than 75c. per yard, and the most of them $1. We put them all one table at the remarkably low price at 39c. per yard. All on table No. 1.

HOUSE FURNISHING DEPT.—Our regular annual sale of granite iron ware takes place this week. We put on sale over two hundred cases of this ware. Will be sold at the same prices you pay for unware.

	Our price.	Regular price.
Granite iron plates	12c.	25c.
" " sauce pans	12c.	25c.
" " stew "	25c.	60c.
" " tea kettles	49c.	1.00
" " dish pans	66c.	1.25
" " coffee pots	32c.	75c.
" " tea "	49c.	65c.

The above goods and prices are just a few of the many bargains this house will offer during this sale. Every Department is over-loaded with the best of everything and you can rest assured that the prices are the lowest.

SPRING COATS AND CAPES—The entire line of one of the leading coat and cape manufacturers of New York city. We cleared out the entire line one third off and they will be sold the same way. Every garment is made of the best material, handsomely trimmed and made in the latest style. In addition to coats and capes, you will find in this department and elegant line of house wrappers and street dresses. Fine cambric wrappers, ready made, 59c. This is a new department, and to bring it before the people we have made prices very attractive.

MATTINGS—At the recent trade sale in New York, we bought over two hundred rolls of the finest matting made at lower prices than anything ever sold in this form. "C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the grandest discovery of the age, and it ranks even more than you claim for it. My wife has been sick for the past four years. For three years she could not do her housework. We had good physicians, but she did not recover her health. She was suffering from Bright's disease and Lumbago in the Back.

Her trouble was covered with blotches; had no appetite, and was very weak and low with general debility. I insisted on her taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and she has been improving ever since. She has taken five bottles, and is so well

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. THE FIRST BLOODSHED.

Rioting Now Accompanies the Big Coal Strike.

ROBBED BY FRENZIED WOMEN.

A Gang of Furious Females Attacked Deputy Sheriff—Their Leader Had an Ax. Violence Reported in Illinois—The Strike Is Still Spreading.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 24.—The Oliver plant, near here, was the scene of disorder and bloodshed. A striker named Michael Petsko stoned the coke drawers while they were at work in the yard. Sheriff Wilhelm and a posse of deputies arrested him, and about 30 women assembled and demanded his release. The officers warned the women not to interfere. The answer was a yell of defiance, and then the whole crowd of cursing, screaming women charged the squad of men, attacking them with every conceivable missile and weapon except fire-arms.

Blood was flowing from numbers of the men in a moment, and when some of them had been knocked down they were forced to fight back. Mrs. Petsko, the leader of the furies, rushed at Deputy Sheriff Richards with an uplifted ax. He evaded the blow and knocked her senseless with his revolver, and she lay stretched at length on the ground, with the blood gushing from a gash in her forehead. The cry was raised that she was killed, and the bedlam of savage excitement that followed cannot be described. She revived after fully 20 minutes.

When she struck at Richards with her ax, the other deputies threw off the restraint that had made them helpless against those women heretofore. Numbers of women were felled with blows from clubs. Others were stabbed with bayonets or beaten with the stocks of winchesters, and the sheriff had great difficulty in preventing the men from shooting them down like dogs. The situation at Oliver is alarming.

Rejoicing Among the Leaders.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., April 24.—The delegate convention of the coke workers at Scottdale passed a resolution ordering the entire region out to join the national strike of coal miners. The prospect of spreading the strike in the coke region has thrown this section of the region into excitement. Leaders here now assert that within two days all the miners of the region will be out.

While they expected a cessation of work at some of the smallest of the plants yesterday, none even of the most sanguine leaders expected the larger plants to shut down, and when the news reached here that the men at the Valley and the Standard, the largest plants in the region, had all come out there was general rejoicing among the strikers. These men refused to join the recent strike, but now they are the first to obey the order of the United Mine Workers' association for the general strike. This indicates that the northern end of the region is prone to come out, and that Frick's men will join the strike. Many of the operators now admit that the whole region will be on strike in a few days. Some of them predict a long strife, characterized by more violence and bloodshed.

Effects of the Strike Felt.

ROCHESTER, April 24.—The effects of the big coal strike in Pennsylvania are beginning to be felt here. The coal business is practically at a standstill on all of the railroads running from the Pennsylvania districts, and many men are laid off. On the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg 25 trains have been discontinued, throwing 100 men out of work, and an equal number are reported idle on the Western New York and Pennsylvania and some on the Lehigh Valley and Erie.

At the office of the several operators in this city it was reported that there was but little to give out regarding the strike. The company has shut down all of the mines operated in Clearfield county, and did not intend to resume operations until the trouble was settled in one way or another.

All was quiet at Dubois, Reynoldsville, Urbana and other places operated by the Rochester and Pittsburg Coal and Iron company. The men as yet have made no demonstration, but gather in groups about the mines and discuss the situation in an orderly manner.

Colored Miner Lynched.

CHEROKEE, Kan., April 24.—Frank Haman, a coal miner, living with his family near the Schwab mines, is dead at his house, half a mile east of the mines, at the hands of some colored Alabama coal miners, and the leader of the murderers has been lynched. The colored man came to Haman's house for the purpose of robbery. Haman ran out to get help, but was shot in the throat. He ran about 150 yards and fell where he was found dead an hour later. Jeff Tuggle, a colored miner, is charged with the murder. He was caught at Weir City and brought to Cherokee. A few minutes later Mrs. Haman, the dead man's wife, accompanied by a score or two of miners, arrived, and when the woman was taken before the prisoner she identified him instantly as one of the robbers. Before officers could get Tuggle away a mob captured him. They marched him, with a rope around his neck, about half a mile northwest of town and hanged him to a cottonwood tree.

McBride's Orders.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 24.—J. A. Crawford, state president of the United Mine Workers of America, received reports from the state at large, showing 94,000 miners now on strike out of 30,000 in Illinois. The Peoria district is virtually out. One Danville district is out to a man, and southern Illinois is also pretty well up. This district is out with four exceptions, and these will be out today.

John McBride, national president, has wired Mr. Crawford the following general order:

"The fight, being for living wages, is a general one, and no local settlement will be authorized or recognized until a general settlement is determined. The following rule must be observed: Coal must not be loaded at any price for any purpose. When a company wants coal or coke hauled, teaming and other work or repairs, it will be granted provided the same be done are according to the scale demanded by the national convention.

O'Malley Won the Debate.

PITTSBURG, April 24.—The joint debate at Turtle Creek between President Andrew Arnitt of the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal company and Organizer O'Malley of the Miners' union resulted in a victory for the miners. On this meeting the success of the strike in this region largely depended; consequently every effort was put forth on both sides to win the day. Twelve hundred miners of the 1,300 in the Turtle section were in attendance at the meeting, and at the close of the debate the men decided unanimously to obey the call of the National Miners' union.

Mr. de Armitt said that the company's loss on contracts already in the books would be $65,000. He would relinquish all contracts if the miners would furnish bond for this amount. As the increase demanded by the 200,000 strikers would amount to $60,000 a day, he thought his proposition was a fair one. The accession of these men to the ranks will make the number of men out in this district between 18,000 and 20,000.

Rioting In La Salle.

LA SALLE, Ills., April 24.—A mob of 300 miners from neighboring towns marched on La Salle to prevent the men here from going to work, and a riot was precipitated, in which a number of local miners were beaten and badly injured. Fritz Kiehling was cut and bruised, and his condition is serious. Michael Begley, fireman in the La Salle shaft, was severely pommeled. The majority of the other miners who were intending to go into the pit were scared out, and those who attempted it were roughly handled.

Very few if any Americans were among them. A majority of the men were armed with bayonets and revolvers.

Begley, who was the first man to be discovered going to work, was assaulted and brutally beaten. Others were promptly assaulted or intimidated as soon as they appeared. A committee was sent to Tolono to stop the men at work there, and if the request to them is not acceded to the same crowd that marched to La Salle will go over to Tolono and compel the men to go out. They also threaten to do so in this city today if any of the miners attempt to work.

In the West Virginia Mines.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 24.—The Diamond, Brooklyn, Red Ash, Pine Creek, Central Eagle, Dimmick, Rush Run and Thurmond, all New river mines, are idle. Five hundred men met at Thurmond and have decided to stay out. At the Camden mines, 12 miles above Point Pleasant, the Ohio miners, 600 strong, crossed over the river and took out forcibly the men at work there. No one was hurt. The sheriff then wired to inform the governor of all the details, and the private secretary to the governor was sent to the scene to find out and report if assistance was needed.

In the Tennessee Mines.

CHATTANOOGA, April 24.—There is only a partial suspension of work at the Soddy coal mines. There is no dissatisfaction among the miners, and those out have gone out in sympathy with the general strike. At Jellico 2,000 miners have struck, and there is a total suspension of work.

COLUMBIA IN COMMISSION.

Captain Sumner Takes Command of the Brand New Cruiser.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—The cruiser Columbia went into commission at the yards of the William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building company, her builders. The ceremonies were simple and were in effect a transfer of the vessel to the government.

The ceremonies took place around the flagstaff at the stern. About 75 of the crew were ranged on the port side, and the officers in full dress uniform ranged themselves on the starboard side, while the marine guard stood facing the flagstaff.

Captain George M. Sumner, U. S. N., then stepped from his cabin in full uniform, and after being assisted to read the order of the secretary of the navy placing him in command of the cruiser. The raising of the American flag concluded the ceremonies.

The crew uncovered their heads, the marine corps saluted, and with the beating of drums the quartermaster drew the colors up the flagstaff. Later the commission pennant was hoisted to the masthead, and the Columbia was part of the navy.

Captain Sumner made a brief address to the men under the caption of "General Order No. 1." Among other things he said: "It is not saying too much, I think, to say that we have just commissioned one of the noted ships of the world. She is noted for her exceptional speed and the great power of her engines."

The Columbia will remain at Cramps' for about a week and will then proceed to League Island navy yard. She is finished with the exception of several minor details, and all of her guns are in position except two pieces.

The Gateway to Wonderland!

TEN CENTS PER WEEK.

From Florida to Alaska, and between the two oceans, to accomplish which a two special trip, at an expense of $50,000, was made in a special photographic car by a corps of expert artists, the results of whose labors are now published in

GLIMPSES OF AMERICA.

No other publication can equal it for splendor of illustration, in half-tones and colored plates, while every scene pictured is graphically described, not by brief and uninteresting foot notes, but by running text, occupying as much space as the pictures. It is a work admirably planned, charmingly arranged, and satisfactorily completed, the series constituting a book of unparalled magnificence, that both illustrates and exhaustively describes all the matchless scenery of the United States and Canada.

AND THE CAMERAGRAPHS! THE HELIOTYPE JEWELS!

The Photographs in Natural Colors! Incomparably Beautiful Portfolio.

"Glimpse of America" can only be obtained through THE PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS, but upon the following exceedingly liberal terms: Clip the coupon from page 1 and bring or send it, with ten cents, to the office and part 1, which is now ready will be delivered or mailed to your address without further expense. Previous numbers will be supplied upon the same conditions.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN

A Doll Story.

He met her in a toy shop on Broadway in Xmas week,
And with true celestial eloquence made bold his love to speak.

He asked her to be his, at which she blushed and answered "Yes."
Then he lovingly embraced her, and she named the happy day.

They took a little doll's house, which they both
It was just the thing to suit them, and the price was fifty cents.

Alas, their joy was not to last, for on the wedding day
A little girl took his love and left him all forlorn.

In vain he begged the little girl to take him with his bride,
But she didn't understand, so he committed suicide. —Once a Week.

He Shot the Gobbler.

It was a time of Indian raids, and the settlers in the neighborhood of Clarksburg, Va., were living in the fort for safety. One morning a famous hunter and Indian fighter, Jesse Hughs by name, saw a lad intently at work putting his gun in order.

"What are you about, Jim?" asked Hughs.

"I am going to shoot a turkey that I hear gobbling out on the hillside."

"I hear no turkey."

"Listen! There, didn't you hear it?"

"Well," said Hughs, "I'll go kill it."

"No, you won't," said the boy. "It's my turkey. I heard it first."

"Oh, well," said Hughs, "you know I'm the best shot. But you may have the turkey after I shoot it."

The boy agreed to this, and Hughs stole out of the fort on the side opposite to the sound, and taking a course along the river came up a ravine which brought him behind the place from which the gobbling had proceeded.

There, as he expected, he saw an Indian sitting on a chestnut stump in the midst of the sprouts, gobbling and watching. Hughs crept up and shot him, and taking his scalp went back to the fort.

"There, now," said the boy, "you didn't get the turkey after all."

"Yes, I did," said Hughs, and he threw down the scalp.

Jim had had a narrow escape, and also he had learned a lesson.—Youth's Companion.

A "Bogy" Party.

Each child has a well sharpened lead pencil and some large sheets of paper.

When the leader says "All ready!" each player goes into a corner, or behind a chair, or under the table—anywhere that will prevent the others from seeing his work.

All have been told by the leader that each is to draw a picture showing his idea of what a "bogy" looks like.

When the leader says "Time's up!" they come out from their corners and compare "bogies." The most ridiculous picture is marked highest—No. 10. The others are marked in proportion down to No. 1.

When they are tired of drawing, they either redeem their pictures from the leader by paying such forfeits as he chooses to impose or they may take a vote to see whether in place of paying forfeits they will not rather invest in pictures together into an album and present it to No. 10.

All this does not "read" as funny as it really is, but children who try the game will have a great frolic.—Elizabeth Palmer Mathews.

In Charge.

Here is a cute picture which appeared in a recent number of the Pall Mall Budget. The contributor who sent the picture to the editor of The Budget said in a letter which accompanied it: "You will notice that the two children do not look very unhappy. I fancy that the policeman has not interested himself to the public station this time. In fact, I have seen his face there, and I shouldn't at all wonder if, when the photograph has been taken, he doesn't let the prisoners go with out fine and without imprisonment."

NEWS FROM THE FRONT

Redstone Assures the Commonweal a Big Reception.

SAYS 15,000 WILL WELCOME THEM.

Kelly Calls His Army a Living Petition Which Cannot Be Pigeonholed — His Plans on Reaching Washington — Boston's Contingent Makes Rhode Island.

BOONESBORO, Md., April 24.—The coming of the commonweal army has created almost as much disturbance in the heart of the Blue Ridge as it did in the mountains of western Pennsylvania, where the hill dwellers came down with winchesters and pinstop whisky to clean up the invaders under the impression that a second civil war was at hand. Hereat the foot of South mountain, where camp Daniel Boone was pitched for the night, the same impression has prevailed for weeks past, and it was only on the return of Sheriffs Herbert and Mulean from Hagerstown with reports of the peacefulness of the army that they began to assume the interest that they were not going to have another term of field service thrust upon them.

As it was, they poured into town by the hundreds, giving the commonwealers such a reception as they have had at scarcely any othertown on the journey. The townspeople themselves, while better informed as to the real nature of the commonweal, were equally curious to see the army and thronged the doors and windows all along the main street for two hours before the marchers came in sight.

Quite generous provision was made for the army. S. C. Wagner giving them the use of a big field on the east side of the town, with a stream of fresh water running through it, and contributing besides the use of an empty barn for shelter, a load of firewood and five bushels of oats for the stock. The Boonesboro people fed the men, contributing 126 loaves of bread and almost 100 pounds of meat. The campers were very comfortably provided for, but the thing that brought them the greatest encouragement was the arrival from Washington of Colonel A. R. Redstone, the representative of Mr. Coxey at the national capital.

Colonel Redstone Arrives.

Colonel Redstone was accompanied by his private secretary, J. S. Bartlett, formerly private secretary of Congressman Coffeln of Wyoming. He met the army of the commonweal at a point a mile west of here and had a short conference with Carl Browne before the latter clapped him into Coxey's private buggy and drove into town in triumph, with the Washington representative at the head of the procession.

Colonel Redstone brought news that made the eyes of the army bulge out in anticipation, but which was received by the correspondents with considerable allowance. He declared that the coming of the army into Washington was to be the greatest reception ever accorded to any organization in the history of this country.

"There will be a guard of honor of 15,000 men to march into town with you boys," he said. "There have been promised 500 hackmen and all of the labor unions will turn out to greet you. The committee on ways and means has accumulated provisions enough to prevent any fear of want, and there will be little to do in preparing for the unanticipated members. The labor unions, the Grand Army and all the similar institutions have promised to care for their own people, and there will be no great drain on any part of the community."

The commonwealers were wildly jubilant at the news, taking the success of the expedition as a foregone question. The colonel further ingratiated himself into their good graces by announcing that he would ride on to Washington in a hack. "I have been in the army myself," he said, "and I do not ask my men to go in for any hardship when I am not in it with them."

The privation will be only one night in duration, for Colonel Redstone goes back to Washington today, but it is more than likely that he will take back a case of acute rheumatism and chills with him, as the ground was damp and the air malarious about the camp.

On leaving Hagerstown the army was the indirect cause of one casualty. Jennie Burke, an old colored woman, was standing on the sidewalk watching the army file past. She had been much excited over the coming of the army, and before the last of the procession had passed she fell in a faint, dying of heart failure a few minutes later.

Kelly's Living Petition.

AVOCA, Ia., April 24.—Kelly's reception here was fully as flattering as that which was accorded him at Neola. The 2,000 inhabitants were apparently all on the streets, and brawny countrymen and gaily decked maidens vied with one another in showy demonstrations upon the brigade. Many of the men received clothing along the route, and the army as it went into camp presented a much better appearance than at any time before since the start from the far west. Company C, which had been disbanded at Neola, rejoined the army during the afternoon, and after a personal apology from each member Kelly mustered them back into service. By this peaceful quelling of the mutiny the young commander has secured an even more firm hold on his men.

Kelly consented to outline to your representative his plans for the end of the journey. Should his army be refused an approach to the capital, he will upon his arrival in Washington, he said, take four of his men and make a personal appeal to Congressmen Pence of Colorado and McGuire of California and Senator Allen of Nevada. Through their efforts he hopes to be allowed to draw up his men where the lawmakers of the nation must see them.

"Petitions from laboring people have been numerous and ineffective in the past," said Kelly, "but this living petition will be hard to pigeonhole. That is the reason I am leading these men to the capital. Once there, our plans will be successfully carried out. Two congressmen are already pledged to present a memorial in our behalf. That memorial is now being drawn up by a well known Washington firm of constitutional lawyers and will be ready for us when we reach the journey's end. Our demands are set forth in the memorial will be about as follows:

Kelly's Industrial Plan.

"We will ask that the commission already in existence to look after the redeeming of arid lands in the west be instructed to proceed with the work. We will ask that the men in our army and the great army of the unemployed which we represent be put to work on this irrigation. My idea is that by the time those arid wastes have been reclaimed from sagebrush and jack rabbit and have begun to bloom the men who have worked there will have saved enough money to carry them through their first year of farming. They can settle on the lands they have reclaimed, and within a short period they will have developed from homeless wanderers into sturdy farmers and property owners. That in substance is our demand. We will not attempt to dictate what wages will be paid. What we want is work.

"If we can only get to Washington, if we let the lawmakers see that we are breadwinners, honest and sincere, we will be successful in our mission, for our demands are not unreasonable. I have no connection with Coxey. We will combine with his army if we can reach Washington in time, but if not we will go alone."

Today the army will go by wagon to Adelantic, where it will remain a day for rest and then move on toward Des Moines.

Warrants were received here for the arrest of the two women—Edna Harper and Annie Houton—who have accompanied the army since it left Council Bluffs and who were with the crowd which captured the train and ran it to Kelly on Friday evening. The warrants were sworn out by the Union Pacific company and were given to the sheriff of Harrison county. Little effort was made to serve them, the women being given an opportunity to return to Council Bluffs, where they can secure bonds. It is thought by Kelly's sympathizers here that serious trouble is likely to follow an attempt to arrest the women in Council Bluffs. Arrangements are secured for all the people who were connected with the seizing of the train.

The Boston Commonwealers.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., April 24.—Fifty-one dusty and footsore soldiers of the industrial army—the New England branch of the Coxey movement—marched into North Attleboro, and according to previous arrangements prepared to encamp for the night. Courier McKinnell had arrived early in the day, and the town fathers gave permission for the army to be quartered at the town farm. When the army was reported in sight, Selectman Brannigan, Overseer of the Poor Peck and Deputy Sheriff Brown rode out and ordered the army to halt. Commander Fitzgerald was informed that the industrials would not be allowed to enter the center of the town.

The poor farm being in the northern part of the town, after a short rest on the common, proceeded to camp. When in motion, the color bearers unfurled the banner of the army, but this the town officials objected to, and it was put away and the United States flag substituted.

At the poor farm the town provided food, ordering 125 pounds of beef for the supper of the men. Arrangements had been made by Commander Fitzgerald providing that the men should not have to saw wood for their meal, as is the usual custom with tramps. In the evening, accompanied by some of his fellowers, Fitzgerald came into the town and delivered a lecture on the common, at the conclusion of which considerable money was gathered for the benefit of the soldiers. Commander Fitzgerald, when seen by newspaper men, said he would not increase the numbers of the army. They were all picked men and fitted for the march. This morning the army shook the dust of Massachusetts from their feet and entered Rhode Island. Dinner was had at Pawtucket.

Citizen Train to the Rescue.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Mr. George Francis Train announces that, in view of the decision in congress that they will not hear the Coxeyites, he will at once proceed to Washington as the representative of 70,000,000 people and guarantee that they are heard. For this purpose Mr. Train says he has engaged Metzerott Music hall for a period of two weeks to be used by the Coxey people for their meetings, which will open there on Thursday. Mr. Train declares that if they arrest anybody they are at liberty to arrest him, but he dares them to interfere with him.

Colonel Galvin's Regiment.

WILMINGTON, O., April 24.—Regiment No. 3 of the United States industrial army, under command of Colonel Galvin, passed a comfortable night in the horsesheds at the fair grounds. They have been well provisioned by the civil authorities and the citizens. The railroad companies still refusing to transport them, the regiment packed up, broke camp and started on the road for Dublin, 10 miles east of here, where they camped.

The Coxey Home Guards.

DENVER, April 24.—A movement has originated in this city looking to the formation of a home reserve of Coxey's army. The idea is to form a home guard to show sympathy with the active members of the army in a substantial manner and to lend them encouragement and aid. It is the intention of the promoters to extend this organization to every state in the Union.

Applying Coxey's Principles.

IRONWOOD, Mich., April 24.—Five hundred unemployed workingmen and many business men left for Bessemer to demand of the county supervisors that a proposition for bonding the county in the sum of $75,000 for building roads and furnishing work to the unemployed be submitted to the people.

Quebec's Citadel Defenseless.

OTTAWA, April 24.—The attention of the minister of militia has been called to the inefficient state of defense at the citadel of Quebec. This fine natural fortress is virtually defenseless. The guns are of ancient pattern, and many of them have fallen out of their carriages.

In Honor of Grant.

PITTSBURG, April 24.—The arrangements for the American Republican banquet to be given on next Friday night, the anniversary of the birth of General Grant, have been completed. Ex-Speaker Reed will be the principal speaker on the politics of the country.

Fear of Poverty Made Her a Maniac.

CLEVELAND, April 24.—Mrs. Amelia Mueller, a widow, took carbolic acid and tried to murder her aged father and mother in bed with a hammer. She was a dressmaker and the fear of poverty had been preying on her mind.

Whirled to Death.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 24.—John Edward Mills, head carpenter at Lorillard's brick works, was instantly killed by being entangled and swept around a shaft. Every bone in his body was crushed and his head torn off.

On the Lucania.

QUEENSTOWN, April 24.—The Lucania, now on her way to New York, has on board Mr. August Belmont and the Earl of Kintore, governor of south Australia.

Michael Boland Dead.

KANSAS CITY, April 24.—Michael Boland, one of the celebrated triumvirate of the Clan-Na-Gael, died at his home in this city.

New York Fashionable Bonnet and Hats Made in Plainfield.

New York fashionable Bonnets and Hats are now being made in Plainfield, and ladies are no longer obliged to go to New York for these articles, greatly to their delight and convenience. Edsall's three New York Milliners are having a big run, although owning under great disadvantage in their present quarters for want of room. They have for a short time to be located in the new parlors on the Babcock Building, where greater facilities will be offered. Those who have patronized the Department are well pleased, both as to prices and styles, and success in the new enterprise is assured from the start. The patrons of Edsall's Millinery Department can rest assured that their neighbor's bonnet will not resemble theirs, for the milliners do not make two bonnets or hats alike. They are competent to create styles, and do not copy.

The Cook-Adams Fight.

BOSTON, April 24.—Fully 5,000 people crowded the Casino to witness the battle between Young Griffo, the Australian featherweight champion, and John T. Griffin of Brooklyn. Time was called according to the agreement of the men, which was that if both men were on their feet at the finish of the eighth round it should be a draw. Referee Daly so declared it. Griffo proved himself much the better man, however.

A Dramatic Suicide.

NASHUA, N. H., April 24.—Samuel Sawyer, a well known Lynn (Mass.) druggist, committed suicide at the Dexter House here by taking arsenal. He came here with Grace Perkins of Lynn, who registered as his wife. The couple quarreled, and he went out. He returned with the poison, which he drank in her presence. He died at her feet.

Prize Fighting Legalized.

NEW ORLEANS, April 24.—The supreme court decided the matter of the state versus the Olympic club, affirming the decision of the lower court, which was by a majority vote of a jury decided in favor of the club. The case has been pending for months, and the decision will permit a return of glove contests in New Orleans.

The New Coach Line.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—The coach Alert and its owner, Colonel E. Deb Morrell, and members of the Suburban Coaching club arrived in this city from the preliminary trip to New York city and back prior to the establishing of a coaching line. The trip was made in 10 minutes over the schedule time.

Seven-year-old Suicide.

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa., April 24.—Jasper, the 7-year-old son of Jefferson Walters, was punished by his mother for some little misdeed. He went to the barn, built a scaffold and then hanged himself. He was nearly dead when discovered, but declares he will repeat the attempt at the first opportunity.

THE MELOPOIA SOCIETY.

ITS SECOND PRIVATE CONCERT OF THE FOURTH SEASON.

Given Last Evening with Great Success.—Mr. Chapman, the Leader, Bids Farewell to Plainfield.—His Musical Triumphs Here.

The last private concert of the season, if not the final concert, of the Melopoia society, under its present leadership, was given last evening at the Casino of the Union County Club, the finest picture of whose beautiful headquarters is given herewith.

The society has been in existence four seasons, and under the able direction of Mr. William E. Chapman, has greatly promoted the musical talent of our people, of whom it deserves much.

Its concerts have been generally social events, as well as rare musical treats, and last night's affair was generally no exception to the rule, the verdict being that it was a good concert, though there was but little in it that was exceptionally brilliant, compared with other of the society's best efforts. There was a large attendance present, and it manifested its pleasure by hearty applause.

At the conclusion of the concert Mr. Chapman expressed himself as much gratified, and bade the members of the society farewell, it being understood that his numerous engagements in New York and other of the larger cities will make it impossible for him to come to Plainfield for another season. On this account it is not probable that the society will continue, at least that seems to be the present impression.

The programme as rendered last evening was as follows:

PROGRAMME.

PART I.

1. Happy Day—Country Dance from Robin Hood..... DeKoven
   Melopoia Society.

UNION COUNTY CLUB HOUSE AND CASINO.

CARELESS DRIVING.

A Farmer Turns His Wagon Too Short and Upsets.

One of the most careless exhibitions of driving seen on Plainfield streets was witnessed yesterday afternoon. About 4:30 o'clock a farmer seated in a carriage in which were also three young women, stopped near Mr. George Moore's cigar store and asked a man on the side walk where the post office was. On being told, the old man started to turn around and drive back to the office. In turning he pulled the horse too short and the result was that the wagon was overturned before the occupants had time to even make an effort to get out.

Wagon and occupants were all in a heap, and had the horse been inclined to run away a serious accident must surely have resulted, ending possibly in the loss of life, as all hands were wedged in by the carriage top.

Several men ran to the farmer's assistance, and in a "jiffy" had the wagon "right side up with care." Strangely enough no one was injured and the wagon was not even damaged.

THE RAILS SPREAD.

Two Cars Loaded with Lumber, Off the Track.

Yesterday afternoon about half-past three, engine 200 was pushing two cars loaded with lumber up the incline, back of the freight house, the intention being to place them on Rheaume's trestle. The rails spread, throwing both the cars off the track. Engine 106, commonly called the "buck rabbitt" came along and with its assistance, engine 200 succeeded in getting the heavily laden cars back on the track.

Decided in Favor of the Printing Press.

Two Ways of Making Money

I. Get a job in the United States mint.

II. Attend the great sale that is now on at White's. You will find it the surest and most pleasant way. We have been busy during the past month buying goods from manufacturers who wanted cash and were willing to sell at one price, and we will offer the entire lot of goods at remarkably low figures.

HERE'S | THE GOODS. | THE PRICES.

DRESS GOODS—The profit cut off of every piece of Dress Goods in the store. The largest purchase of Dress Goods we ever made at one time we made last week. Over two hundred pieces of fine imported dress fabrics, not one piece costing less than 50c. per yard, and some 70 and 90c. We put them all one table at the reasonably low price at 39c per yard. All on table No. 1.

HOUSE FURNISHING DEPT—Our regular annual sale of granite iron ware takes place this week. We put on sale over two hundred cases of this ware. Will be sold at the same prices you pay for tinware.

	Our prior.	Regular price.

" " tea kettles	65c.	1 00
" " dish pans	65c.	1.25
" " coffee pots	87c.	75c.
" " "	48c.	90c.

SPRING COATS AND CAPES—The entire line of one of the leading coat and cape manufacturers of New York city. We cleared out the entire line one third off and they will be sold the same way. Every garment is made of the best material, handsomely trimmed and made in the latest style. In addition to coats and capes, you will find in this department and elegant line of house wrappers and street dresses. Fine cambric wrappers, ready made, 50c. This is a new department, and to bring it before the people we have made prices very attractive.

MATTINGS—At the recent trade sale in New York, we bought over two hundred rolls of the finest matting made at lower prices than matting ever sold for before. We offer a good heavy matting for 10c. per yard. Extra heavy seamless fancy matting, 14c. Extra heavy seamless white matting. A great bargain, 14c. Worth, 25c. Linen warp seamless matting, 20c. Regular value 40c.

The above goods and prices are just a few of the many bargains this house will offer during this sale. Every Department is over-loaded with the best of everything and you can rest assured that the prices are the lowest.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES

SOMERSET COUNTY'S FINANCES AS SUBMITTED TO THE COMPTROLLER.

The Township of Bridgewater the Largest Floating Debt, and the Borough of North Plainfield Comes Next.—The Highest Tax Rate is Paid by the Residents of Warren Township.

THE financial report from the Somerset County Board of Freeholders as submitted to the State Comptroller for the year 1893, and published in his report recently issued, shows that the county has a floating debt of $122,-782.99. There is no funded debt. The Township of Bridgewater has the largest floating debt of any of the municipalities of the county. This amounts to $32,600. The borough of North Plainfield comes next with a debt of $6,000, but these municipalities have many more improvements than any others. The town of Raritan has a debt of $730.41, and Somerville reported a debt not exceeding $5,000 with matter in litigation which may result in there being no debt. Bound Brook has a funded debt of $6000.

Bedminster Township reported a floating debt of $600; Hillsborough, none; Montgomery, $1,500; Warren, none.

The highest tax rate in the county is paid by the citizens of Warren Township and those who reside in the Borough of Bound Brook. They each pay $1.50 per $100. The Borough of North Plainfield has a tax rate of fifty-five cents per $100. The rate in Bedminster Township is $1.04, in Bernards, $1.30; in Branchburg, $1.07; in Bridgewater, $1.30; in Franklin, $1.05; in Hillsborough, $1.10; in Montgomery, $1.40; in North Plainfield, 71 cents.

In Hillsborough the sheep bills amounted to $1,425.75 caused by ravages of worthless dogs. In Warren, from the same cause, damages were paid to the amount of $26.50; in Franklin, $128.57; in Branchburg, $26.10; making a total reported of $1,606.85.

The Borough of North Plainfield has expended the largest amount on streets of any town in the county. The amount last year was $4,763.83. Bound Brook expended $3,230.16, Somerville, $2,447.50; Raritan, $1,937.82. Bridgewater township spent $11,000 on roads. The township of Bedminster seems to be making improvements on this line, for there was an expenditure of $3,300 on roads last year. Branchburg spent $1,850; Franklin, $4,034.30 on roads and bridges; Hillsborough, $4,129.61 on roads and bridges; Montgomery, $2,000; North Plainfield, $1,000; Warren, $992.95.

The poor in the various townships of the county last year cost the public $13,532. Of this amount Bridgewater expended $6,000.32; Bedminster, $1,300; Bernards, $1,930; Branchburg, $720.54; Franklin, $201; Hillsborough, $955.75; Montgomery, $400; North Plainfield, $1,500; Warren, $600.—Unionist-Gazette.

THE SCHOOL BILL LOST.

REPUBLICANS JOIN DEMOCRATS IN VOTING AGAINST IT.

The Repeal of it was Having Been Passed was Premature—The Free-holder Bill Amended—Other Business.

The report in the Trenton papers yesterday regarding the school bill being passed seems to have been premature and instead of the bill being passed it was lost.

On the motion of Middlesex's Senator, the bill was put back on second reading for amendment. Mr. Drake presented a resolution practically killing the bill by excepting Morristown and Plainfield. He said it was the will of the inhabitants of these towns not to come under the provisions of the act.

Mr. Voorhees replied that the sole principle involved was: "Shall one body have control of the budget?" He claimed it was a pernicious principle and he had been fighting for its repeal in face of much opposition from these towns.

Mr. Drake claimed that the boards of Morristown and Plainfield were non-partisan and composed of good men in these cities, and he did not consider that school matters should be controlled by any political body, as common councils were. The bill was lost, Messrs. Thompson and Ward voting with the Democrats.

"I move that the vote by which the bill was lost be reconsidered," said Mr. Voorhees.

"I move that the motion be laid on the table," interposed Mr. Adrain. His motion was carried and the bill is in such shape that it may be taken up at any time.

Senator Ketcham has amended Senate 139, the first-class counties' freeholder bill, by inserting provisions for boroughs not provided for in the original bill; changing the limit of population in townships from 13,000 to 10,000 inhabitants; the two freeholders from second-class cities must be one from each of the political parties, and the present Auditor and Collector may be retained at the will of the board.

Mr. Ketcham also amended Senate 6, State Board of Education act, by making the State Treasurer a trustee of the school fund. Senator Voorhees has introduced a bill providing for the appointment by the Governor of a fourth person on the State Board of Taxation not of the same political party of the majority of the present board. Term of this new member shall be for five years. Salary $2,000. It also provides that when the terms of the present board expire, no more than two shall be of the same political party. It gives the board power to raise assessments when to low.

The bill to annex Stockton to Camden was passed, 12 to 8, Mr. Perkins voting with the Republicans. Senate 135 and 136, campaign bills, were also passed.

The race track men made a hard fight in the House when Sterrs' anti-gambling bill came up on final passage. The bill was passed on third reading in a manner that stirred the blood of ex-Speaker Flynn, "Duke" W. J. Thompson, and Bookmaker "Teddy" Carroll, of the Gloucester race track. The Senate amendments were so sweeping that they greatly displeased the "Duke."

The amended bill removes the discretion that the judge could formerly exercise in pronouncing sentence, and the offenders who were always prepared to "go to Gloucester" will get off easily in the future, because the punishment now for betting, buying a pool, or gambling on a horse race, is to include both a fine and an imprisonment, the fines to range from $1,000 to $5,000, and the imprisonment from one to five years.

The bill then passed and was carried to the Governor. This concludes all the legislation needed to prevent race track gambling or the sale of pools in New Jersey.

—The step that follows suspension of advertising is almost certain to be suspension of business.

COAL SUPPLY FAILING.

Mr. McBryde Says Only Three Weeks' Stock Is on Hand.

THE STRIKERS' RANKS INCREASING

It Is Now Estimated That There Are 125,000 Coal Miners Out—Coke Workers Falling In Line—No Mining Until All Agree to Pay the Price.

COLUMBUS, O., April 25.—The national officers of the United Mine Workers expect a complete shutdown of all the coal mines on May 1, when the contracts of a large number of miners who are now at work will expire. The estimate of the total number of strikers given out by President McBryde is 125,000—an addition to the ranks of about 7,000.

Effects of the strikes are beginning to be felt in every section of the country, and President McBryde says there is not more than three weeks' supply of coal on hand in any region. This, the miners' officers predict, will make the strike of short duration.

Telegrams have poured into the national headquarters all day from operators asking permission to work mines at the prices demanded under certain conditions. In every instance these requests have been denied, President McBryde saying the order for suspension adopted by the advisory committee must be carried out; no coal should be loaded. Only repair work about the mines is allowed under any circumstances.

Cutting Off the Supply.

It is by cutting off the supply of coal altogether that the miners hope to bring the operators to terms.

At a meeting of coal miners at Leechburg, Pa., delegates representing 3,000 miners who have not heretofore been connected with the National Miners' union joined that body, the strike was declared in favor of a strike.

This will take out practically all the Pennsylvania railroad miners along the Kiskiminetas river and the Conemaugh. The strikers claim that this new move will tie up the West Pennsylvania railroad entirely within two or three days, and as the Pennsylvania main line from Altoona east depends for coal supply on these pits the situation may become embarrassing for the whole Pennsylvania system east. Elsewhere in the Pennsylvania district the situation remains unchanged, with both sides watchful at every point. The coke region is coming into line with the strikers, and the men claim that the whole region will be out today.

May Suspend Steam Navigation.

BUFFALO, April 25.—The first result of the soft coal miners' strike is beginning to be felt. The price on the docks has been advanced to $2.75 a ton. If the strike continues for any length of time, the lake steamers will be seriously crippled, as their supply is limited. The railroads have a supply sufficient to keep them running for three or four weeks. The mariners think they will be out of coal within two weeks and fear a virtual suspension of navigation will follow. This will be speedily terminated by compromise or other settlement.

Big Strike In Poland.

BERLIN, April 25.—A dispatch from Breslau says that a great strike is now in progress in the Piotrkow district, the principal industrial center of Russian Poland, which is situated close to the German frontier. The strikers consist of miners, ironworkers and the men employed in many other trades. There has been trouble in the district for some little time, growing out of the dissatisfaction of the men with their wages and hours of labor.

Co-operative Mines Asked to Suspend.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills, April 25.—At a delegate convention of the mine workers of Illinois a resolution was adopted requesting all co-operative mines not organized to suspend work at once. It was also declared that no local settlement be recognized or authorized and that no settlement be made had throughout the entire United States.

The Great Northern Strike.

ST. PAUL, April 25.—The general conference committee of the Great Northern men concluded their meeting, but will give out nothing as to the decision reached. They say they have decided what to do; that they are unanimous, and they will announce their intentions after they have communicated with President Hill.

More Strikers In Illinois.

DANVILLE, Ills., April 25.—The miners of the various country strip banks decided to join the strike. Nearly 5,000 miners near the Danville field are now out. The miners at Tilton, Ills., will not permit the Wabash engines to coal there. This cuts off the coal of the Wabash road for three divisions.

To Break the Chicago Gas Trust.

CHICAGO, April 25.—Steps were taken in the circuit court upon whose issue hangs the existence, let alone the possession, of $30,000,000 worth of stocks and bonds in the Chicago Gas trust. The action was begun by a petition of Attorney General Maloney for leave to begin quo warranto proceedings, and if successful the great Chicago Gas trust will cease to be.

Gang of Boy Burglars.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., April 25.—Fred Brelling, aged 16 years; Hufford Barth, 14 years old, and Charley Brown, 16 years old, were arrested on a charge of burglary. A quantity of eatables, merchandise and silverware that had been stolen from dwelling houses and stores was discovered beneath a pile of straw behind a barn in an alleyway.

Injured by Dynamite.

PITTSBURG, April 25.—An explosion of a quantity of dynamite occurred in a blacksmith shop on Natchez street, Mount Washington, wrecked the building, probably fatally injured two persons, and four others were hurt. The explosive was the property of some contractors who were blasting near by.

Deacon Daniels' Short Courtship.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 25.—To become acquainted and get married and go to housekeeping within 24 hours is what a couple did on Monday when Deacon George Daniels of Hamburg married Miss Alice de Wolf of Salem. The deacon is 66 and wealthy, and his bride is aged 26.

Massachusetts Episcopal Convention.

BOSTON, April 25.—The Protestant Episcopal church of the diocese of Massachusetts opened its one hundred and ninth annual convention at Trinity today.

Want Carnot to Run Again.

PARIS, April 25.—Friends of President Carnot are trying to persuade him to abandon his intention of withdrawing his candidature for re-election.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I have taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and am now using the fourth. I can truly say it has made a new man of me and my advanced age of 71. I have suffered with rheumatism for many years. For ten years there has been a swelling in my joints and the pain was almost unbearable. It was so severe I could not stoop down without pain. Nothing gave me relief until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have confidence to recommend it to the public. I have testimonials to improve standing." FREDERICK SEFTER, St. Peters, Penn.

A YANKEE IN GRAY.

"And I have nothing to tie you up with until I can get safely away."

"That's so. You remind me of the chap who caught the bear and dasn't let go."

"I must take you along with me to the Confederate outpost. We shall cut across the fields and woods to reach it. You go ahead, and I will follow. It is needless"——

"I'm no fool!" blandly interrupted the Federal. "When I'm down and the other feller has got his thumbs in my eye and my nose in his jaws, I know enough to care. You won't have to shoot me, and I want to ask a favor of you."

"Well?"

"Don't walk me in a prisoner."

"I'll see about that. Let's go on."

They struck through the woods, crossed an old field, skirted a meadow and entered another piece of woods. As they were traversing this they came upon a negro cutting firewood, and he informed them that the Confederate outpost was only 20 rods below them on the highway.

"At this stage of the game one prisoner more or less is of no earthly consequence," said Kenton as he looked at the cavalryman. "I'm going to let you return."

"And I've concluded to be taken prisoner and sent to Richmond," replied the man.

"For what reason?"

"Plain as a pumpkin on a gatepost. If I go back without my arms, what can I say? I'd just have to admit that a Johnny reb came along and played me for a sucker and got the best of me. That would mean ridicule and disgrace forever. If I don't go back until exchanged as a prisoner, I'll be all right. I'll sort o' give out that I was tackled by about six of you, you know."

"I am sorry that I was obliged to deceive you to save myself," said Kenton after a moment of thought, "and there is no need to disgrace you. Here are your weapons, and you are free to return to your post. The war has not fairly begun yet. There will be hate and bitterness and rancor after awhile, and there will be few opportunities to extend courtesies."

"Say, Johnny, that's a square deal!" joyfully exclaimed the Federal as he received his weapons, "and I want to shake hands with you! Put it there! Can't tell but what we may meet again before this row is over, and if we do I hope it'll come my way to do the fairthing. So long to you!"

Kenton watched him out of sight and then walked down to the highway to find himself at the post of a vidette. He was directed back to the reserve, his pass examined, and he was then within the Confederate lines and ready to push on to Manassas and Jackson's headquarters. When his information had been laid before the stern faced man, whose title of "professor" had been changed to that of "general" within a few brief months, he quietly said:

"You have done excellently. My command is ordered into the valley. I shall have further need of your services in this line, but you may return to your company at present."

CHAPTER X.

No part of the south witnessed so much of the wreck and misery of war as the Shenandoah valley. Its highways, fields and forests, its houses, barns and sheds, its every breeze by day and night for three long years, echoed the fierce shouts of contestants and the groans of wounded men. Nature made it a garden. War converted it into a vast graveyard.

The Federals had begun their march up the valley from Harper's Ferry. Jackson was ordered over to bar the way. Historians may write with prejudice and politicians speak in bitterness. Let us be fair and conscientious, even if we cannot be neutral. Jackson's first battle was on the broad fields of Kernstown. All historians who have written for the future have pronounced him a wonderful man in the science of war. Before his command was fairly in the valley Royal Kenton and others were far ahead, scouting for information. Their reports decided Jackson on moving swiftly up and attacking the Federals as they reached Kernstown. He was beaten back and fairly routed, but that was to be the first and only time.

As Jackson's own brigade swept forward into the fight Kenton was in the ranks of the Shenandoah guards. On his right was Steve Brayton, on his left Ike Baxter. He had known but little of his company since detailed for scout duty. He divined that Captain Wyle's bitterness had intensified and that the prejudice against him among his comrades had rather increased with his absence. He had been detailed from his company, and his return to it as Jackson ordered an advance and everybody knew that a battle would be raging within a couple of hours proved his metal in the eyes of all. And yet not over a dozen men in the company had a nod or a word for him. Ike Baxter, under the intoxication of his master, was carrying out a plan to drive him out in disgrace.

"He un's yere fur no good, and yo' kin lay to that!" Ike had whispered from man to man. "Jist yo' fellers keep yo'r eyes open! I'm gwine to do it, and if he un tries to play the traitor I'll put a bullet straight into his carcass! Mebbe he un kin fule Gineral Jackson, but he un can't play no Yankee tricks on me!"

As they marched forward on the highway Steve Brayton found opportunity to say:

"Look yere, Kenton. Ike's goin to play yo' some onery trick if the chance comes, and yo'd better be ready fur him. He an hates yo' like pison, and he jun's tryin to make all the rest do the same."

"I am aware of that," replied Kenton, "but can you tell me the reason for it?"

"Reckon thar ar' several. In the fust place, yo' didn't happen to be bo'n down yere, while Ike Baxter and the rest of us critters did. In the second, yo' took the shine out o' the officers at Bull Run. In the third, as nigh as I kin make out, thar's a gal in the case. Looks to me like Ike had been hired to talk agin yo'. At any rate, he's got the boys all stirred up, and yo'd better be keerful not to git too fur ahead of the crowd in case we hev a fout down yere!"

"How does it happen that you are not down on me with the rest?" asked Kenton.

"Reckon thar ar' several reasons in that too. Fustly, yo' could hev got away to the Yankee army if yo' had wanted to. Yo' didn't, and that's a purty good sign yo' un ar' all right. Nextly, yo've got pluck, and I like a plucky man. Mo' nextly, the mo' men we hev the less chance of my bein hit myself. Lastly, I've seen Captain Wyle and Ike Baxter with their heads together about yo', and I've heard that both yo' and the captain was sweet on the same gal, and I've sorter put two and three together and made seven. I'm goin to be right alongside o' yo' in this fout, 'cause I like yo'r way o' fightin, but yo' jist mind what I tell yo'! The bullet which hits yo' today is liable to come from our side!"

Jackson's command, numbering not quite 6,000 men, made a rapid march of 40 miles down the valley to strike a blow at General Shields' command of 8,000. They were waiting for the Confederates. Jackson attacked at once.

Even while the rear of his marching column was still two miles away he attacked. It was a fierce and bitter fight. As daylight began to give way to twilight on that dismal March afternoon the guards were ordered to charge a battery which was making a portion of the Confederate line untenable. They dashed forward to be met by a volley which killed or wounded a dozen men, and a swift move on the part of a Federal regiment resulted in the capture of nearly one-half of the guns. An hour later Jackson was retreating. He had been defeated.

Ike Baxter was among the wounded. With others he was taken to the field hospital to be cared for, while the unwounded were marched to the rear and placed under guard. Ike had been hit in the shoulder. While his hurt was being dressed he said to the surgeon:

"If a Yankee deserts to our side and fights agin yo' un, what happens to he un if yo' captur' him?"

"He'd be shot!" was the blunt reply.

"But s'posin he un also played spy fur our side?"

"He'd be hung instead of shot! Do you know of such a case?"

"Reckon I do, and I feel it my docty to tell yo' about him. Jist tell yo'r gineral to inquar among the prisoners for a man named Kenton—Royal Kenton. He un's a Yankee deserter and a spy fur Gineral Jackson!"

"But why do you tell of it?" queried the surgeon.

"'Cause it ain't a fair deal."

Half an hour later Kenton was taken before General Shields under the charge made by Baxter. The latter had overreached himself. Had only the two been captured it would have been a different matter, but there were 20 of the guards who gave testimony in favor of Kenton, though it came from most of them grudgingly. A search of his person brought to light a pass from General Jackson in which he was mentioned as a scout.

"While you are cleared of the charge," said the general after a long examination, "how does it come about that you, a northern man, are found in the Confederate ranks?"

"I am united in the cause of Virginia, my adopted state," was the reply.

"But the cause of Virginia was and is unjust. She is guilty of treason. Every one of you under arms is a traitor to the government. The principle is so plain that no one need doubt."

"But there are doubts, sir. A large proportion of the northern people are doubtful, and some of the most influential of the Democratic papers contend for the right of secession."

The general could not gainsay that. The government was rushing troops into the field, and battles were being fought, but the principle was still being discussed, and men eminent as jurists, statesmen and journalists were still divided. Kenton was dismissed to be returned to his fellow prisoners. Only one guard accompanied him.

Half way between headquarters and the spot where the prisoners were being held under guard they encountered two men bringing in a wounded man on a stretcher. The victim proved to be the guard's brother. For a moment he forgot his prisoner, and when he had recovered from his excitement over the discovery he no longer had a prisoner. Kenton had walked off into the darkness and made good his escape.

And now as the night drew on apace and the cold rain steadily beat down upon the battlefield parties of men went forth in search of the wounded. They cared not for the dead. At the front there is but little sentiment or sympathy for the wounded. They are cared for because many of them will recover to fight in some other battle. They were found in the open fields, in the furrows half full of water, in the deeper ditches skirting the forest, among the trees and bushes dripping with the rainfall. Some cried out in the darkness with the broken voices of lost children; others prayed or cursed or wept. And here and there, with their faces buried in the grass or dirt or with faces upturned to the sky of night and eyes half open, were dead men, a thousand or more. The morrow would do for them. The dead of a battlefield ask nothing. The living give them a covering of a few inches of blood soaked soil, and give that grudgingly.

The Italians Must Go.

AKRON, O., April 25.—Akron's unemployed workingmen have declared war upon foreigners and declare that they will not allow that class of labor to work upon the street improvements. About 100 Italians employed on paving and sewer contracts were set upon by a mob of 400 or 500 men and driven from their work. The timely arrival of Mayor Wallsey was the only thing that prevented violence. The contractors declare that they will employ the Italians, and trouble is feared.

COXEY JOINS HIS MEN.

Army Resting Today in Barbara Fritchie's Town.

FICKING UP MANY RECRUITS NOW.

The Western Forces Are Centering In Chicago, and a Big Army Is Expected to Leave There on Sunday—Movement Slow In New England.

FREDERICK, Md., April 25.—General Coxey returned to the commonweal army and was received with cheers on the very spot where stood the house of Old Barbara Fritchie. Mr. Coxey was well pleased with the result of his New York expedition. He said that the trunk line roads had not yet decided whether or not they would give reduced rates to Washington on May 1. There was a special meeting of the trunk line managers yesterday, he said, and their decision would be telegraphed him.

In commenting on the manifesto of the District commissioners Mr. Coxey said that it was just what might be expected under the circumstances. There was no need of any preparatory proclamations by the District authorities as to the order they were going to preserve, and the whole thing was the same sort of bluster that had been made by Mayor Fleming of Frederick when he declared that the commonweal should never parade in his town and then allowed the procession directly under the noses of 20 deputy sheriffs.

While in New York, Mr. Coxey said he had been offered the use of Woodly park, outside of Washington, as a camp ground for the army.

May Camp In Woodly Park.

This is one of the most beautiful of the suburban real estate divisions about Washington, with good roads, grass and close to Rock creek and an abundant water supply. The offer was made by Mrs. E. F. Waggaman, one of the owners of the tract, whom Mr. Coxey had met at Tattersall's during the horse sales. The offer has not yet been accepted, but a conference between Browne and Coxey on the subject will be held today.

During his stay in New York, Mr. Coxey addressed a large meeting of the Industrial league, and he is hurried to return to New York on Saturday to lecture at the Grand Opera House for the benefit of the movement. Two other very encouraging pieces of news were received by Mr. Coxey —one in the form of a note from Congressman Coffeen of Wyoming, inclosing $50, with his blessing on the commonweal movement. The Massillon farmers who were opposed to Coxey and the commonweal when the start was made a month ago have also changed in their opinion and wrote saying that should Mr. Coxey be detained in Washington beyond the time of spring plowing, they would see that all his crops were planted without his returning to superintend the work.

The reception of the commonweal in Frederick was a complete surprise to the commonwealers themselves. They were met near the county line by a posse of 30 mounted deputies under Sheriff Zimmerman and escorted into town. But the people of the city were more disgusted over calling out the Sheriff's than were the Coxey men, for the deputies were all being paid for at $3 a day out of the people's pockets, and it has already been denounced as a political job. The deputies are anxious to prolong their services as much as possible, and the order has been that they shall stay with the commonweal night and day until it is gotten out of the county. Therefore they have been trying hard to have Coxey camp here for a day or two, while the taxpayers have been ready to offer a bonus to him to stop at Hyattsville, on the Montgomery county line, tonight. The general feeling is that it would have been better to appropriate $500 to buy food for the army than to pay $1,000 to the sheriff's posse to prevent the army from committing depredations that they never contemplated.

The Army Growing.

It was finally decided by General Coxey and Browne to hold the commonweal together at the baseball park, where they are very well provided for, and move to Hyattsville on Thursday. But the town authorities decided at the same time to discharge the deputies, so they will not draw $60 a day out of the county treasury during the stopover here.

The commonweal army is growing. Nearly 300 then marched out of Camp Daniel Boone. They were joined by stragglers along the road, and in Frederick they found another party of men under "Windy" White, the old trumpeter discharged at Williamsport. White was taken back into the fields, and the recruits were accepted and enrolled. The party of 35 will be sent around by the old route of Ridgeville, Damascus and Laytonsville, which was to have been traveled by the main body on their march. Mr. Coxey said this was to divide the foraging ground between the two parties, as the general impression is that there are other bodies camped along this route awaiting the coming of the main body, and the squad of 35 will act as a nucleus to pick up these additional companies.

Hogan and His Stolen Train.

LIVINGSTON, Mon., April 25.—Sheriff Conrow received a dispatch from Helena attorneys for the Northern Pacific instructing him to arrest "General" Hogan on the charge of larceny of a Northern Pacific train, and a warrant has been sworn out by the company's local attorney.

Superintendent Finn left in a private car, going east. There is considerable excitement in the city over the coming of the army, and it is awaited with great interest. The army was delayed several hours at Timberline, 14 miles west of Livingston, by a cavein in the tunnel a short distance this side of Timberline, but they got through there and came here. Such trifles as running orders did not deter the Coxey brigade, and from the time they left Butte until they reached Bozeman the officials were kept in a fever of anxiety lest a collision should occur. The army numbers 475 men. A subscription for their benefit has been taken up here, and the money, meat and other provender collected were turned over to "General" Hogan upon their arrival. Superintendent Finn was asked whether the Coxey brigade would take the right of way to the end of the road and laconically replied, "They have done it so far."

When the officials sent them word to look out for trains, they replied, "If you don't want your trains hurt, keep them out of the way." They had supper here. If they leave at once, they will reach Big Paul tonight.

The Boston Contingent Excluive.

PROVIDENCE, April 25.—When the New England contingent of the Coxey army arrived at Providence, they marched at Range hall square by George H. Bloomer, editor of Justice, and escorted through the main streets to Olneyville square. Contrary to expectations, no halt was made at the city hall. When Olneyville was reached, the commonwealers were taken to Textile hall, where they rested until supper was served. It was a repast such as had not been enjoyed since the army left Boston. There were corned beef, salmon, sardines, sausages, cheese, rye and white bread, crackers, coffee and all kinds of pie. After the supper General Fitzgerald acted as recruiting officer and received the applications of nearly 40 men. A council of war was held, and it was finally decided to reject all applications, as well as the 15 received at Pawtucket.

There are rumors talk of forming another branch with those men to take the second road to Hartford via New London. This may be done today. A mass meeting was held in Marine Park. Speeches were made by M. I. Swift, George H. Borman, John H. Stevens, Rev. H. N. Casson and Edward Tyng. The crowd gathered in a pouring rain and listened. The army was safely housed in Germania hall, where they spent the night. The army started on the tramp at 11 o'clock today. Bristol fast was served at Germania hall. The army will probably go to Scituate.

The next important place is Taylorville, and there there are miles of small towns on the way to East Hartford, with bad roads and little chance of support from the people.

Kelly's Army Breaks Up.

ATLANTIC, Ia., April 25.—Kelly's industrial army reached Atlantic, with Colonel Speed and his followers in the ranks. The day had been an eventful one, Speed having been deposed and a separation of the Sacramento and San Francisco divisions having been effected during the march, with a narrowly averted internal war. Speed refused to obey orders issued by Kelly, was promply court martialed and deposed from the ranks. The Sacramento division at once declared that it would desert Kelly and follow Speed, and the temporary camp just east of Butler was soon a scene of wild disorder. About 200 declared for Speed, and the men argued their differences with much profanity and a liberal show of clubs and stones. A fight was averted, however, by Kelly's coolness.

Before they reached Atlantic the Sacramento division elected Speed as general, and the men said that their intention to follow no banner but his. They openly denounce Kelly as having appropriated to his own use the army's funds and even that they will obey his orders no longer. Speed has accepted the leadership, but says that he will march to Washington with Kelly, but not under his guidance. Henceforth, says Speed, there will be two armies absolutely distinct, but sharing provisions and glory. Kelly hopes for a reconciliation. He said to your correspondent that he can and will account publicly for all funds he has received and denied that he has ever been given more than $1,000. The two armies will remain in Atlantic until Thursday.

Chicago's Army Numbers Seven Hundred.

CHICAGO, April 25.—Randall's commonweal army is having a boom. Recruits have come in faster than they could be enlisted. Seven have been filled with the names. An important ruling has been made by Chairman Vincent. He decided that no one unable to speak the English language would be enlisted among the soldiers of the Chicago army. Many applications were made by Poles and Swedes, but all who could not answer the questions put to them were not enrolled. The chairman of the finance committee reported, "There will be $234.80 in the treasury when we get the $250 promised to us."

The commonweal has issued a call for provisions and has opened a room where they will be received. Both the women and the general meeting of the army passed a resolution condemning the resolution passed by the city council calling on the chief of police to prevent Kelly's army from entering Chicago.

On this Mayor Hopkins said: "The council cannot give such orders to the chief of police. The resolution is but an expression of opinion of the aldermen. I do not say that that course should not be pursued or that it will not be followed. Neither do I say it will. We will act in this Coxey matter promptly and as the exigencies of the case require."

The present number of the Chicago army is about 700, but it is indefinite, but will probably be made by Sunday.

Iron Molders Will Not March.

CHICAGO, April 25.—The grand army of iron molders which "General" Jeremiah Sullivan has announced he would lead to Washington seems to exist for the most part entirely in the eye of "General" Jeremiah." He said that he had engaged transportation for his men over the Baltimore and Ohio, and that the onward movement would begin on Thursday. The officials of the Baltimore and Ohio say that all they know of the "general" or his army they have learned from the newspapers. Last of all, the iron molders themselves say that they know nothing whatever about "General" Jeremiah Sullivan and care about him even less than they know. Prominent men in the Iron Molders' union expressed themselves as utterly opposed to any march under the auspices of Coxey, and the insinuation that they were following where Sullivan leads made them wrathful.

Sweetland's Army of Three.

HARTFORD, April 25.—General George H. Sweetland, self-elected marshal of the Bristol delegation of Coxey's army, left Bristol for Hartford en route for Washington, with three followers. Under Sweetland waited for recruits, but as only Timothy Whalen and "Jimmy" Murphy appeared the march began. Sweetland made a speech in which he implied United States Senator Hawley for his recent reply to Senator Allen of Nebraska. The three men then had their photographs taken and started for this city.

Oklahoma City's Company Organized.

OKLAHOMA CITY, O. T., April 25.—A company of the commonweal has been organized here, with an enlistment of 100. Colonel Ralph Beaumont, the noted Knight of Labor lecturer, was the organizer. The company will join the Guthrie branch of the commonweal, and all will go to Washington together without change of cars.

Denver Has a Regiment.

DENVER, April 25.—The first regiment of the Coxey home reserve was formally organized at Lincoln park. There were present about 1,000 men and 100 women, and it is stated that this number has already signed the roll, which is expected to reach 2,000 within the next few days.

Frye's Army In a Box Car.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 25.—Frye's army left here for Brazil, 200 strong. About 60 were recruits from this vicinity, but not more than three were citizens. The army chartered a box car for Indianapolis, and the members will attempt to ride over it in.

MILLS' TARIFF VIEWS.

Doesn't Like the Wilson Bill, but Will Vote For It.

HIS DEFENSE OF THE INCOME TAX.

He Says the Workingmen Who Are Coming to Washington Should Turn Back and Appeal to the Ballot Box—Appropriation Bills In the House.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The closing speech of the so called general debate on the tariff bill was made in the senate by Mr. Mills of Texas for the Democratic party. The galleries, which had been deserted during the morning, filled up, and a number of representatives came over from the house. A number of Republican senators also gave Mr. Mills close attention throughout.

Mr. Mills appealed to his Democratic brethren to pass the bill promptly and fulfil the party's pledges. He ridiculed the idea of duty being imposed for the benefit of the workmen and said it was merely a case of "going from skin to core and from core back to skin again," meaning that the manufacturers got all the benefit of the protection which was demanded in the name of the workingmen.

Mr. Mills' Speech.

At the outset he remarked that legislators often had to make a selection between two parliamentary measures, neither of which meets their approval. It must necessarily be so, for no man could frame a measure to meet the approval of every one. Every act of a legislature must be a compromise measure, and no act more so than one regulating taxes.

"This bill does not meet my approval," said he, "and I doubt if it entirely meets the approval of any gentleman on this side of the chamber; but, such as it is, it will have my hearty support. I might want to offer some amendment to the bill," he continued; but, whether or not he was able to secure its adoption, he would bow to the will of his party and vote for the measure as they presented it. It was not in strictly a party measure and had been a party measure from the foundation of the government and from the foundation and organization of the Democratic party.

If he had been chosen to construct this bill and had had the 44 members on the Democratic side of the chamber in accord with his views, he would have constructed it on far different lines. He would not have left coffee on the free list and would not have put cotton, coal and iron on the dutiable list. It had always been the policy of the Democratic party to put a tax on those articles which were used by all the people and would yield the largest revenue at the smallest cost to the people.

The Republican promise of an enlarged home market by a protective tariff had not been fulfilled. He would put on the free list metals, wool, cotton fibers, iron and steel in the rough and every article which required to be manufactured. He would do this in order that the manufacturers of the country might manufacture their goods at the lowest possible price, so that they could go into the markets of the world.

He declared agriculture to be the staple interest of this country, and no benefit had been derived from a protective duty by this interest. He declared that no other country could compete with us in agriculture. Not even land could compete with us in the raising of wheat.

It was ridiculous to say that a man plowing with the fork of a tree and a yoke of oxen, and who could not sickle an acre in two hours, could compete with a man who uses machinery in every stage; who by the use of one engine could cut, thrash, winnow and bag 80 acres of wheat in a day. He told of a farmer in California who could gather 1,200 bushels of wheat in a day at a labor cost not exceeding 2 cents per bushel. Yet the Republican party had been trying to get up a scare and had been singing a little song:

Hush, hush, hush! The boy man is coming!
You've got no shoes; you'd better lie low!
He'll get you if he can!

The Home Market, Fallacy.

The Republican policy, he said, was to provide a home market, but there was $6,000,000,000 worth of goods made in this country. Where were the people to come from to consume them? In order to carry out the Republican policy people would have to be imported to consume our surplus agricultural products. It would require 114,000,000 people to consume these products and would require the importation of Chinese, Japanese, Singalese, Maltese and chimpanzees to join Coxey's army of aborigines. (Laughter.)

Mr. Mills then brought by a pious mother to read the Bible, and he remembered having read how Elijah had attacked the 400 prophets of Baal and slaughtered them.

It had always been believed that all of the false prophets were dead, but he believed that some of them had come down to our times. He deemed that the present condition of the country was due to tariff agitation. It would have come three years ago but for the large crops of 1888, 1889 and 1890. It did not come with the advent of the Democratic party, as charged, but the people felt that the squall was coming on Nov. 3, 1890, because the crop of 1892 was falling below that of 1891, and the crop of 1891 was below that of the preceding year, so that the country was just in the same place as in 1889.

It was the exhausting McKinley tax and the exhausting obstructions to agriculture that produced the farmers' woes, and as they fell they threw out their arms, as Samson did, and pulled down the whole structure of the temple of national prosperity. The farmers when they planted their crops began to fall, and when they stopped buying the manufacturers stopped producing, and when they stopped producing they closed their mills and turned out their mechanics, and this had brought on the prostration.

"Emancipate our people," he said. "Give them a chance to show their skill, their genius, as a natural and heaven born right. Give them back the ocean, and then the workingmen will not be coming to Washington to implore the government to do something for them."

Their proper presence was not to come to Washington anyhow, but to turn back home and appeal to the ballot box.

A large part of the speech was devoted to a discussion of the income tax, which he warmly advocated. Taxes, he said, should be proportional to the protection afforded, and if the New England states received two-thirds of the benefits of the government's protection it was not sectional to demand that they should pay two-thirds of the expenses of the government. He made a strong plea for closure in the senate and declared that, if all the Democratic senators were of his opinion the tariff bill would be passed in 48 hours.

The house resumed the consideration of appropriation bills. After spending the entire day in the discussion of amendments to the pneumatic bill it was passed. Most of the time was devoted to debate on the Kyle amendment to strike out the subsidy of $202,000 for the last southern mail. The opposition to the appropriation proved surprisingly weak, however, when the vote was taken, only 86 votes being cast against it.

After the bill was reported to the house an amendment adopted in committee without attracting any attention, to classify at a high postal rate books, serials, etc., issued in periodicals under the name of circulating libraries, was reported by antagonized as a blow at the circulation of cheap literature and was stricken from the bill by a large majority.

Only two amendments of importance were in the bill as passed—one by Mr. Dockery to outlaw money orders at the expiration of 10 years, and the other by Mr. Springer to classify as second class matter all periodical publications issued from a known place of publication at stated intervals or four times a year, by or under the auspices of a benevolent or fraternal society or order organized under the lodge system, and having a bona fide membership of not less than 1,000, or by a regularly incorporated institution of learning, or by or under the auspices of a trades union, and all publications devoted to the scientific, literary, historical or scientific societies, including the bulletins issued by the state boards of health.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The fourth class postmasters appointed were:

New York—Everton, M. W. Griffin; Hubbardsville, Oscar F. Standing.

Pennsylvania—Batesville, Nelson J. Miller; Branchton, Edward Seyfried; Feasterville, F. F. Vanartsdalen; Iron Bridge, John A. Jackson; Jackson's Mills, Harry A. Jackson; Susquehanna, Martin G. Buzy.

Mr. Boltzhoover at His Desk.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Representative Boltzhoover, who has been seriously ill at his home in Iowa for several weeks, has returned to Washington considerably improved in health.

Miss Pollard Improving.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Miss Pollard is gradually recovering from the nervous prostration following the trial of her case against Representative Breckinridge. The rest and quiet of the hospital have benefited her, and she grows stronger with each succeeding day. She is not yet giving thought to plans for the future and will not decide what she will do for some little time yet.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE CONTRACT WITH THE WATER COMPANY RENEWED FOR EIGHT YEARS.

Considerable Debate on the Question.—Ordinance Passed.—An Application Received for an Electric Railway Franchise from the Central Jersey Traction Company.—Councilks Ordered Laid, and Other Matters.

The City Common Council held a special meeting last night. All the members were present except President See. Ex-President Gunn was elected president pro tem.

The clerk read the call and Mr. Erickson stated that the charter of the Plainfield Water Supply Company he read, as one of the objects for which the meeting had been called was to renew the contract with the company.

Mr. Erickson then offered a resolution to the effect that it was the desire of the Council to renew the contract with the Water Supply Company for a period of eight years, and that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to execute the proper contract.

A letter was read from Frank Bergen, president of the company, to Craig A. Marsh, corporation counsel, stating that the resolution was perfectly satisfactory to the company.

Upon the resolution being seconded and opened for remarks, Councilman Frazee arose and stated that he did not favor giving the contract for so long a time. He thought it would be unwise to take such action.

Mr. Frost said that he had no fault to find with the present rate—$15—charged for hydrants, but he also wanted to see the citizens protected, by having fixed rates for water for private use. He didn't blame the company for taking out the meters. The prices at present paid were not exorbitant, but what provision was there to prevent them being raised under the long contract?

Mr. Erickson then read a portion of the contract referring to the rates charged for water for private use, showing that the company can average only 40 per faucet for dwellings, etc. The contract covers fully the rates for private use, and exorbitant prices could not be charged.

Mr. Frost said he was not in favor of anything that tended toward monopoly, and it was a well known fact that the men that controlled the Gas Company, the Electric Light Company and the Water Company were practically the same. Plainfield, he said, paid 90 per cent. more for its gas than any city in the United States. He favored the city's owning its own water works and said he wished to be put on record as against monopoly of any kind.

Mr. Frazee said that the giving of a contract to the Water Supply Company was bringing a big monopoly, and he didn't think for that reason that a contract for more than one year should be made.

Mr. Dumont thought that the rate at which Plainfield was getting its water was very favorable to the city and was lower than any other city that he knew of. If excessive prices were charged families then they could resort to their wells. $15 per hydrant he considered very reasonable.

Mr. Erickson explained that it was through the Lowe-Moore litigation that the city had secured a one-year's contract, in the first place, with a privilege of ten years. If it hadn't been for this litigation the city would have made a ten-year contract with the company at the outset. He doubted, if the present contract were not renewed, if as favorable terms could ever be secured from the company.

Mr. Frost said that if, as reported, the company were going to extend its supply to Bayonne, it would seem that some action should be taken to find out if the water would hold out if the company kept on branching out. By giving an eight year contract the city would be, in his opinion, absolutely in the power of the company. Having had considerable experience in this line he knew that the statement made by the company that it had pumped for a certain length of time without the supply dropping off any was absolutely worth nothing.

Mr. Westphal said he would not like to see the city make a contract for eight years. He would rather see the contract renewed from year to year.

Mr. Erickson replied that it was not an option of taking a one-year or an eight-year contract. The city had already made a contract with the company for two one-year periods, with the privilege of eight. The two years having expired nothing remained for the Council to do but to renew the contract. It was not giving away a valuable franchise. It was not giving away any franchise at all. The company had been organized under a State law and had a State charter. By not taking water from the company would not hurt the company as much as it would the city. Under its charter the company could furnish water to all towns and villages in Union county. It was merely a matter of rental, if the city wanted the water it could have it by paying so much, if not it could let it alone.

Mr. Dumont asked where the city would get its water for fire purposes if the contract were not renewed. The fire wells, he said, were only sand holes.

Mr. Frost, having been convinced that it was a mere matter of rental and not the giving of a franchise, said he would vote for the resolution.

The resolution was carried by the following vote:

Yes—Bird, Dumont, Erickson, Frost, Fisk, Gunn, and Stockton.—7.

No—Frazee, Millington and Westphal.—3.

A certified copy of the resolution was ordered sent to the company.

The tax ordinance was read for the third time and adopted.

Smalley Bros. were given the contract of grading Grant avenue from Front street to Fourth street for $702. The street railway company is to pay $200 of the expense. The Street Commissioner will oversee the work.

Mr. Erickson read the following extract, in reference to the water company, from Mayor Gilbert's last message:

"Another question which cannot be lightly or ignorantly considered by the people of Plainfield is connected with the Water Company. The contract between the Water Supply Co. and the Borough of Plainfield, for furnishing Plainfield, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle and Elizabeth with water, will expire by limitation in the course of supply. How long this drain can continue without exhausting the supply, or how long, in a question worthy of thoughtful consideration, it can be maintained without danger of not being sufficient for our purposes, I recommend that during the year some investigation be made, and that we obtain information such as to the extent of the danger referred to, and also to our rights under the present contract."

The matter was referred to the Committee on Water and Sewerage to confer with the corporation counsel to see what steps can be taken in the matter.

Residents of Stelle avenue petitioned for a fire hydrant on that street. Fire hydrants were ordered placed on Stelle and Sherman avenues.

The petition for an electric light on Central avenue was referred to the Committee on Lights.

A communication was received from the Central Jersey Traction Company stating that several additional hydrants had been put in, making a total of 222.

An application was read from the Central Jersey Traction Company for a franchise to build a railway, with the necessary tracks, and to be operated by electricity or other motive power, and to erect the necessary poles, wires, buildings and power plant, beginning at the southeasterly line of Fanwood township, where Midway avenue crosses the same; thence along Midway avenue to Third street; thence along Third street to Watchung avenue, there to connect with the tracks of the Plainfield street railway, and from the corner of Grant avenue and Front street up Front street to the Middlesex county line. The application was referred to the Street Committee.

The application read from Grant avenue up "North avenue," but Councilman Fisk said the company meant Front street, as there was no "North avenue" in that end of town.

Action was taken on the petitions for crosswalks as follows:

REFUSED.

On Somerset street, near the bridge.

PERSONAL.

Miss Taylor of Watchung avenue, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Huff of Duncllen.

Miss Gussie Colthar of Dunellen is the guest of Mrs. John Kitchen of Somerset street.

Miss Jennie Tingley of Dunellen has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Gavin of Jackson avenue.

Cards of invitation have been issued for the approaching marriage of Charles Apgar of Dunellen, to Miss Helen Clark of Asbury Park.

H. Dorr, who was a long time connected with the religious census bureau on North avenue, is now a reporter for the New York Press.

Professor and Mme. Wasser, to-day, took up their residence at No. 417 East Sixth street. Mr. Wasser is the new proprietor of the riding academy in the Crescent Rink, and he has six well trained horses there now ready for use. He will have an informal opening on Monday night, when he will teach riding, breaking horses, etc. Miss Wasser, is accomplished both as a vocalist and pianist. She will make a tour to Europe early in May and secure a class for harmony in the Norwegian language.

News from the West End.

Mr. Abram Wilde, of Raritan is visiting friends in the West End.

Mr. Fred Schomp, of West Front street, is confined to the house by sickness of a dangerous nature.

Mr. Frank Shattle, jr., of West Second street, has accepted a position with the Armour Beef Company at Elizabethport.

William Gray of Grant avenue has secured a position at the Garwood Steel Works, and Mr. Harry Page has taken his place with the railway company.

Mr. William Chamberlin of the Potter Press Works has returned home after a three months' absence setting up the large double Webb Presses in Chicago.

The Hope chapel team last evening bowled a match game with a delegation from the Board of Trade and the Dunellen Club. The Hope chapels won. The scores were 720-693.

The newly elected officers of the Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel were duly installed to their positions at the meeting last evening, and some new plans for the giving of a franchise, said he would vote for the resolution.

The resolution was carried by the following vote:

Yes—Bird, Dumont, Erickson, Frost, Fisk, Gunn, and Stockton.—7.

No—Frazee, Millington and Westphal.—3.

GOOD FOR COUNCILMAN FISK.

He Holds Back the Trolley Petition for Better Terms and Will Get Them.

On Thursday, March 8th last, THE NEWS published a map and gave particulars of the proposed trolley scheme to extend the line through the State.

On Monday, April 9th, we gave further particulars, and called attention to the project to extend the line over Johnston's drive on the mountain.

Later we told of the examination by the President and other officers of the Plainfield Street Railway and local speculators in real estate, of the route along Somerset street to Washingtonville, for an extension to that beautiful village, and thence along the valley road back of the mountain to Scotch Plains.

The Plainfield Company has had a petition before the Plainfield Common Council for several months for permission to extend the road to Dunellen, and consents are being secured for an extension to Fanwood.

The Dunellen petition was referred to the Street Committee, of which Councilman Fisk is chairman.

The committee has found that other towns were asking for more complete terms than Plainfield which is getting practically nothing, for franchises which carry with them valuable privileges.

Councilman Fisk, on behalf of himself and the, others of the committee, has made such objections to granting permission to extend unless certain reasonable conditions are complied with.

The Plainfield Company has shown itself in no hurry to comply, presumably under the idea that it practically has the monopoly, and could afford to wait, confident that it would get in the near future what is wanted without paying the city anything.

Mr. Fisk was also satisfied that the city could afford to wait, and last night was gratified to see a petition from another Company as given in our report of Council proceedings, which showed him that he was right in his surmise.

The old "combine" is not in power now and never again will be in this town. The interests of the city will be protected.

MAP OF THE PROPOSED CENTRAL JERSEY TRACTION CO'S ROUTE.

Wild Geese Seen Last Night.

A flock of wild geese, numbering about 60 birds, passed over this city last evening. They were flying very high. A peculiar thing about these birds, is the position they attain while flying. They have been noticed to form a V and for a mile after mile without getting out of position. These last evening were observed to be flying in a straight line, filing one after another.

Thieves Rob a Dead Man's House.

While the body of John Smith, who was killed at Lorrain, Saturday night, was being prepared for burial Tuesday afternoon, thieves entered his late home at Lorraine and ransacked the place from top to pottom; carrying off, it is alleged, all his personal effects and over $100 in money, which Smith had by thrift and energy succeeded in laying by.

A Freight Train Jumps the Track.

At an early hour yesterday morning a freight train on the Central Railroad jumped the track at Dick's switches, Elizabeth, demolishing four cars and blocking travel in both directions for several hours.

A portion of the wreck was thrown against the signal tower nearby, causing the operators to flee for their lives.

Base Ball.

The Young Arlingtons will play a team from Bound Brook on Saturday, at 3:30, on the cricket grounds in North Plainfield.

Colored Y. M. C. A. to Give Dinners.

The colored Y. M. C. A. will give a dinner party for the benefit of their association next Thursday and Friday. String music and other things will help to make the occasion a pleasant and pleasing attraction. The marvellous for the silver cup will be on Friday evening, instead of Thursday. On the 26th of June the association will give an excursion to Coney Island.

Sociable at Seventh Day Church.

A sociable was held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church last night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Society for Christian Work. There was no regular programme rendered, Miss Cottrell recited, and Miss Mabel Maxson rendered some music on the piano. The best part of the evening was spent in general sociability, and enjoying refreshments.

"Scott" Terry Won.

The shoot at Bonner's road house, yesterday, between "Scott" Terry of this city and Samuel Dettart of Lincoln Park, Morris county, was witnessed by at least 150 persons. The shoot was for $100 a side, 50 live birds each, Harlingham rules. Terry killed 42 and Dettart 40. The birds were poor flyers.

—The freshmen of various shoot books concerning love and friendship," will be the Rev. Dr. Lewis' theme in the parlor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, to-night at eight o'clock.

P. C. B. CLUB CONCERT.

FINE MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT AT MUSIC HALL.

The Attendance Small but This Did Not Deter the Band From Carrying Out Its Programme.—A Dance Follows.

FOR the benefit of Stage Manager Mattox of Music Hall, the Plainfield C. B. Club gave a delightful band concert in Music Hall last night, under the direction of Prof. Gattmann. There was a poor attendance, the entire audience numbering about 150 people, who made up in enthusiasm for lack in numbers and every number on the programme brought forth a round of applause. The band won hearty applause. The 24 pieces presented rendered metropolitan music in a very acceptable manner, even the descriptive pieces being finely executed.

The programme was opened by an "Olympia March" by Reeves, an "Overture" by Chambers, "Amdante and Waltzes," "Dumbter of Love," Descritive, "The Hunting Scene," Concerto, Trombone Solo, "The Vision," by Brooks, and executed by G. T. Dunham, Caprice, "Frolic of the Sylphs," by Vosburgh; descriptive, "The Mill in the Forest," Characteristic Piece, "The Cocoanut Dance," Descriptive, "The Forge in the Forest."

THE FIRE WAS IN THE STOVE.

Blazing Wood in a Stove Made a Bright Reflection.

Between eleven and twelve o'clock last night Mr. Edward Vail, while passing along West Front street, saw a bright light in the back part of Lenardi & Co's store. Thinking the place was on fire he hurried to Councilmen Frazee's flat in the same building and procuring his key sent in an alarm from box 12.

The response of the firemen was very prompt. Gazelle's hose wagon arrived before the gong had finished blowing. Meanwhile the door of the store had been broken open, when it was found that the only fire in the place was in the stove. A quantity of wood had been placed in the stove and the stove door left open. The reflection from the burning wood upon the board partition might have been easily taken for a fire.

BREVITIES.

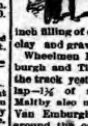
—The coaching people, some of whom have traveled over the best roads Europe affords, say that the Union county roads are the best they have ever seen, says the Elizabeth Journal.

—Theodore Smith, A. Marsh and D. Morey went sparking near New Market, last evening, and came home with some fifty fish. They got three German carp, weighing 14, 7 and 5 pounds, respectively, besides a lot of catfish, eels, suckers and two pikes.

—M. Bingham, formerly of the firm of Bingham & Fulper, who broke his leg in three places, while at work for the Armour Beef Company in Williamsburg, has been discharged from the New York Hospital, and can now go around with the aid of crutches.

—Good will Lodge, No. 161, K. of P., of Scotch Plains, has changed its meeting night from Friday to Thursday. The cause of this is that the three lodges in the district meet on the same night, and it is an utter impossibility for the District Deputy to visit them all on the same night.

Trying the Bicycle Track.



WORK on the Crescent Wheelmen's bicycle track is progressing rapidly and it is expected that it will be completed in about 10 days.

To-day men are putting on a four-inch filling of cinders, and four inches of clay and gravel.

Wheelmen Kenny, Maltby, Van Emburgh and Titsworth enjoyed a run on the track yesterday. Mr. Kenny made a lap—1¾ of a mile—in one minute. Maltby also made a lap in one minute. Van Emburgh and Titsworth went around the course in 1:08 and 1:05 respectively.

Accident to Car No. 5.

At about half-past ten last evening, car No. 5 of the Somerset street branch of the street railway, burned out its armature, and had to be towed by one of the other cars to the car house. The missing tripwere made up by car No. 3.

New York Fashionable Bonnet and Hats Made in Plainfield.

New York fashionable Bonnets and Hats are now being made in Plainfield, and ladies are no longer obliged to go to New York for these articles, greatly to their delight and convenience. Edsall's three New York Milliners are having a big run, although working under great disadvantages in their present quarters for want of room. They hope in a short time to be located in the new parlors in the Babcock Building, where greater facilities will be offered. Those who have patronized the Department are well pleased, both as to prices and styles, and success to the new enterprise is assured from the start. The patrons of Edsall's Millinery Department can rest assured that their neighbor's bonnet will not resemble theirs, for his milliners do not make two bonnets or hats alike. They are competent to create styles, and do not copy.

Bitter Fight Over the Plainfield Post Office.

[Washington Correspondence in True American.]

Representative Dunn has not yet succeeded in having John M. Hetfield installed as postmaster of Plainfield. The fight against Mr. Hetfield has reached a most bitter stage. It has got to that point where even the President's mail is loaded down with protests and remonstrances not only against Mr. Hetfield but against Mr. Dunn. The latter contrives to insist that he will not reopen the case and proposes to stand by the man he has recommended. He is watching the outcome of the case with considerable interest, for he believes that the recommendation of a Congressman ought to be binding.

Semi-Centennial Year Book.

The session of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church has appointed Israel C. Pierson, 738 Watchung avenue, and Frederic H. Andrews, 816 Central avenue, a committee to compile and publish a semi-centennial year book. It will contain pictures of the old church, of the pres ent church, of the former pastors living, and of the present pastors of church and chapels. It will also include the quaint manual prepared by Rev. Wm. Whittaker in 1869, a resume of the addresses by Rev. Theo. S. Brown and Rev. John C. Bliss, D. D., on March 31st, the historical sermon of the pastor on March 25th, reports of church work during the past year in all departments, list of officers during the past 50 years, rolls of the membership in the church and chapels, etc.

It is now in the hands of the printer, inasmuch as the edition will be limited in number, those who desire to obtain copies should give to their names at once to either member of the committee. The book will cost 50 cents.

PREPARING FOR MOBS.

Washington Awaits May Day With Anxiety.

THE PRESIDENT WILL NOT ACT YET

Even the Populist Senators and Representatives Are Fearful of the Consequences. District Police Have the Regular Militia to Fall Back Upon.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The Populist senators and representatives in congress had a conference last night at Populist headquarters to reach an understanding as to the Populist attitude toward the oncoming Coxey army. There were present Senators Peffer and Kyle of Kansas, Allen of Nebraska and Representatives Penes and Bell of Colorado, Baker and Harris of Kansas, Simpson of Kansas and Kem and McKeighan of Nebraska. Chairman Taubeneck of the national committee was also there.

While there was no indorsement of the movement, the speakers urged that it was the legitimate and natural outcome of national legislation. Senator Stewart urged with his usual vigor that the "gold aristocrats" were responsible for the popular uprising. The main discussion was as to the steps to be taken to avoid conflict and bloodshed which might ensue if the police or militia took radical steps. Grave fears were expressed as to the outcome of the next few days.

It was pointed out that while the Coxey men might be well intentioned and harmless their coming would probably be utilized by the thugs, bummers and worst elements of Baltimore, Philadelphia and adjacent cities to come here and commit depredations which would be charged to the Coxeyites.

The caucus learned also through private information that large bands not yet recorded were headed this way. One of these was being led by Ralph Beaumont, a prominent figure in Populist circles, and was made up of 200 Oklahomans.

Allen's Resolution Indorsed.

The Allen and Boen resolutions now pending before congress were discussed, the former receiving general approval as voicing the attitude of the Populists toward the movement. No formal resolutions were adopted, yet a pretty full understanding was reached as to the attitude to be assumed. The bills are not indorsed, as they are no part of Populist doctrine.

There is no desire to discourage them, however, but to give to Coxey the same right as other citizens to advance his views. Neither is the method of assembling peace armies to besiege Washington indorsed, yet as such armies are in existence the Populists will recognize the fact and endeavor to ameliorate the condition of those who come and protect them from invasion of their rights of speech, petition and peaceable assembling.

It is reported at Populist headquarters that General Coxey in person will be here by Saturday, preceding the entrance of the army by several days.

The question of the present intentions of the administration, no attention will be paid to the Coxey movement by the government unless there is necessity for action a thrust upon the federal authorities as that it cannot be avoided.

This information is obtained from the highest authority, and the position of the president and his advisers was outlined to your correspondent by one in a position to know. The question whether Coxey's men shall be allowed to enter the district will be considered a matter for the local authorities.

If the commonwealers violate any municipal laws, they will be dealt with by the police officials. If they violate the regulations of congress by assembling on the capitol grounds, they will be dealt with by the capitol police, who are under the supervision of the sergeants-at-arms of the senate and house. These officials can call the local police to their aid.

In the event of trouble which cannot be subdued by the police the District commissioners are empowered by law to call upon the Washington militia, of which there is a brigade of 1,200, commanded by General Albert Godway.

Only in case of an appeal for aid from the commissioners, on the ground that the newcomers cannot be handled by the municipal forces, will the federal government take a hand and order out federal troops.

No Special White House Guard.

A local paper printed a story that a special guard was on duty each night outside the president's door, but the report is not true. The White House grounds and house will be well guarded, and a close watch will be kept for suspicious characters, but President Cleveland is decidedly averse to being kept under guard, as it were, and moreover the ordinary arrangements for guarding the White House when crowds are here are considered sufficient. A matter which gives the president concern is to avoid paying rent to a local real estate dealer gave Coxey to encamp in Woodley park, which adjoins the president's country place.

The Massillon (Ohio) company says preparing to protect themselves from any acts of vandalism that may be contemplated by the crowds of tramps and hobos who will undoubtedly flock to join Coxey when he gets within striking distance of Washington. No uneasiness is felt at the coming of these commonwealers, but fears are felt that idle and vicious characters may overrun the country and commit depredations under cover of the Coxey movement.

At Gaithersburg a company has been formed that numbers 40 men, each of whom possesses a rifle or a shotgun. A signal has been agreed upon which will assemble the entire party at the point where the alarm may be sounded in a very few minutes, fully armed and equipped for an emergency.

In House and Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Five hours were spent by the senate in considering the tariff bill by sections, but no progress was made. The question under discussion to-day is the date when the bill should take effect, and the entire afternoon was devoted to the debate of this question without reaching anything like a conclusion. The discussion was quite animated, sometimes personal, but always good natured.

The only speeches made which were not in the order of a running debate were made by Senators Aldrich and Platt, both of the former speaking for more time for the manufacturers to prepare for the change. Senator Palmer urged the speedy passage of the bill, and Senator Allison offered an amendment striking out the date upon which the bill should take effect and leaving the date blank. All the amendments were rejected upon the senate adjourning. A brief discussion was precipitated by Mr. Gray, who made the point that Mr. Stolph was out of order in speaking from the rostrum, such is the letter of representation, and the vice president sustained the point.

In the morning hour, Senator Peffer introduced a bill to give work to the unemployed people in the District of Columbia.

Senator Allen introduced a resolution affirming the right of Coxey's army or any one else to come to Washington and peaceably assemble in the capitol building. It went over.

Mr. Harris sought to arrive at some arrangement by which the tariff bill should be considered each day from 1 to 6 o'clock, but no vote was taken, and it, too, will come up today in the form of a motion.

In the House.

The house devoted the day to the consideration of the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill, but made little progress. Mr. Cannon of Illinois was vigilant and aggressive in criticising every change made in the bill, insisting on an explanation in cases of increased salaries and offering amendments to reduce appropriations wherever opportunity afforded. None of his amendments prevailed, however.

The feature of the day was the attempt through an amendment offered by Mr. Hepburn of Iowa to cut off all unofficial fees of consuls of the first, second and third class, which Mr. Hepburn says are "blackmail." Charges of wholesale abuses in the consular service were made, and some partisan remarks were indulged in.

It was generally admitted on both sides of the house that there should be some reform in the fee system which obtains in the consular service, but the Democrats contended that to cut off these fees without due consideration by placing a rider on an appropriation bill would be a blow at the fees and do more harm than good. The amendment was lost by a strict party vote.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The fourth class postmasters appointed to-day are:

New York—Brainard Station, Frank P. Larkins; New Hartford, John Ganey; North Hero, Vt., Mrs. S. Thayer; North Pownal, Vt., P. Waterbury.

Pennsylvania—Comly, J. A. Smith; Gibson, Edward A. Jones; Hawbuck, C. S. Gumaer; Newry, Franklin McIntosh; Old Forge, M. V. Stark; Schotzville, A. L. Gerry; Starr, H. A. Blendell.

Legislation at Albany.

ALBANY, April 26.—The bill making the mayor the head of the police department in Albany was passed by a party vote—yeas, 19; nays, 13. Mr. Schoepflin's bill creating a commissioner of jurors in Erie county was then taken up and passed by a party vote—yeas, 17; nays, 13. The senate passed the bills to give the next mayor of New York power to remove heads of departments; to abolish the fees of the sheriff of New York; to require the duck board to have its work done by contract; to abolish the present police commissioners of Albany and to have a new commissioner of jurors for Buffalo. After this was done the assembly passed a resolution to adjourn on Friday.

Fire In a Penitentiary.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 26.—Fire destroyed the shoe factory located within the walls of the penitentiary and operated by private parties. The convicts had quit work and were locked in their cell quarters. There was no stampede among them, and some of them assisted the firemen in fighting the flames. The fire is supposed to have been started by a convict who was left to look up the factory.

Mayor Acted as Hangman.

JACKSON, Miss., April 26.—On a gallows erected immediately over the place where Horace Smith murdered Sundley with an axel, A. A. Bridges, the negro who on Singleton murdered Lulu Paine in the prison walls, each of these life convicts, sentenced by the supreme court to hang for their sex and murders, were executed. Deputy Sheriff Chiles, who is also mayor of Jackson, acting as hangman.

Confederate Reunion.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 26.—The fourth annual reunion of Confederate veterans was formally opened by General Fred S. Ferguson in the Winnie Davis wigwam. There were fully 10,000 in the building. The many could not gain access to the immense hall.

Married Her Rather Than Pay Her.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 26.—William H. Tanner, a wealthy farmer of Pine Plains, was married to his housekeeper, Mary Ann Hall, to avoid paying her a judgment of $1,000 secured for services during the past 15 years. Tanner is 57 years old, and his bride is 53.

Took Poison In Prison.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., April 26.—Charles Hunter, in jail here awaiting trial for the murder of James Reynolds a year ago, tried to commit suicide by swallowing a dose of opium, but his life was saved by prompt medical action.

Her Modesty Cost Her Life.

WHEELING, April 26.—When natural gas burned the house of George Hibbard, his step-daughter, Miss Jane Redmans, aged 26, refused to leave in her night clothes, and before she could dress herself she was suffocated.

Also Burned Arrested.

READING, Pa., April 26.—Alex Buzzard, the notorious ex-outlaw, now an evangelist, was arrested here, together with Daniel Weinhold, charged with being implicated in a recent safe robbery at Lancaster.

Hanged Herself From a Rafter.

COLUMBIA, Pa., April 26.—Mrs. Adam Longenecker of Maytown, four miles from here, hanged herself to a rafter in the garret of her house. No cause is assigned for the suicide.

Republicans Want a Week More.

TRENTON, April 26.—The Republican leaders here think it will be impossible to get all their bills through by May 4, and they will not adjourn until a week later.

Fell Three Stories.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 26.—W. L. McCormick of Cedartown, Ga., a delegate to the reunion from that place, fell from the third story of the Dude saloon and died.

Arbor Day at Ocean Grove.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 26.—Arbor day was celebrated at Ocean Grove. Trees were planted in memory of those who died during the year.

The Sultan Will Travel.

VIENNA, April 26.—The sultan of Turkey has ordered that preparations be made for a tour of Europe that he intends to make shortly.

Ice Off Halifax.

PORTLAND, Me., April 26.—The steamship Labrador, just arrived, reports immense fields of ice off Halifax.

Weather Forecast.

Fair; variable winds; warmer.

A Wonderful Cure
Ulcer in the Stomach
Hood's Sarsaparilla Restores Flesh Strength and Health.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:
"I feel it my duty to suffering humanity to give a statement of the wonderful cure Hood's Sarsaparilla has brought about in me. Over two years ago I became ill from an ulcer in my stomach. I had six or seven different physicians, but my suffering was of the highest kind all the time. I was broken down in health and lost 50 pounds in weight from 148 to 118 pounds. I could hardly get around, and after suffering severely for about a year, I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the first bottle I began to feel better, and now, after using six bottles, I am entirely well. I have gained my former weight and strength and can do my work with ease. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all suffering humanity."

SLAIN BY A Ppriest.

Father Dorsey's Love Made Him a Murderer.

CINCINNATI, April 26.—Miss Mary Gilmartin, a handsome, highly educated young gentlewoman from the County Sligo, Ireland, was murdered in the public square by the Rev. Father Dominick O'Grady, also of Ireland. The priest is a renegade to his faith and his holy office, and Miss Gilmartin's charms worked his ruin.

Reports differ as to whether he forsook his charge in Ireland and eloped to America with the young woman, or whether he followed her here, and being repudiated by her took her life in a fit of jealous rage.

Circumstances rather bear out the theory of elopement, as Miss Gilmartin is not of the immigrant class. She moved in the best circles of Sligo, and when she set sail for America left behind her a luxurious home and social ties of the highest character. Miss Gilmartin was employed as a clerk by a manufacturing concern in this city. She was on her way to work when Father O'Grady, who was lying in wait, stopped her. An instant later she screamed, and five shots were heard, fired from a revolver in the priest's hands. He seemed to be in a frenzy, for he stood over the dead body of the girl and snapped the empty revolver four times.

Then he is said to have brutally kicked the body and turned to walk away, when he was seized by bystanders.

At the police station he gave his name as George Lind. Letters on his person revealed his identity. One of these, addressed to Bishop Lynch of Ireland and signed by the murdered girl, denied that there had been any wrongdoing between them. While being searched in the police station the priest swallowed a dose of poison from a small vial. He was at once rushed to the City hospital, where prompt remedies thwarted his attempt at suicide.

NATIONAL COAL STRIKE.

Serious Trouble Looked For Today In the Coke Region.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 26.—The national strike is practically complete in the Connellsville coke region in its entirety. The authorities have taken a position that will almost certainly involve an outbreak if persisted in. It is held that the strikers in assembling to bring out the men who persist in working are guilty of assemblage for unlawful purposes and can be legally dispersed by force. The strikers swear they will not surrender their right to hold meetings. So far as their means allow they are buying arms, and dealers report that quantities of ammunition have been sold.

At Broad Ford and at other points in the region people have left their homes and sought other employment or other places. The Oliver plant is completely guarded, and the company is going to fight the strikers to a finish.

Not since the origin of the late local strike has the situation looked so serious as now because of the immensely greater number of men on strike and their evidently fixed purpose to win or die in this final fight.

In every direction as midnight approached the strikers were busily preparing for the marches this morning, and the armed forces at the works, where men were waiting to go to work, were busily re-enforced. Indeed it is said that an armed deputy was on duty for every coke worker.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 26.—The situation in the miners' strike looks less favorable for the strikers. Men are at work in several mines, and only eight mines of the 70 in the Springfield subdistrict are closed.

Indiana Republican Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 26.—The Republican convention, held here, was the largest gathering of the kind for years. When John K. Gowdy called order, there were 3,000 people in Tomlinson hall. The venerable Richard Thompson of Terre Haute presided. Ex-President Harrison made a political speech. The election of state officers was a victory for Harrison Republicans.

DID YOU EVER

hear tell of a purchaser wanting to buy an imitation? Why do men who try to sell such articles speak of the act as "working them off?" Simply because people want the best, and it takes work and likewise deception to sell them the worst. This unpleasant experience may befall the housekeeper who determines to

WILD COXEYISM.

The Western Industrials In a Lawless Mood.

BATTLE WITH HOGAN'S MEN.

The Train Stealers Captured by United States Troops.

Excited Deputy Sheriffs Fired on the Industrials at Billings, Mon., and a Serious Row Followed—The Original Coxey Army Almost at the Capital—New England Regiments Are Forming Rapidly—Fry's's Men Stole a Train Too—Kelly's Army Reunited and Peaceful Under Three Lead-ers—Jones Takes a Fresh Start.

St. Paul, April 26.—Reports from the train that was stolen by the Butte Coxeyites, which has been coming this way since night before last, have come in from various points. The train left Livingston on Tuesday night and during a short distance when they went into collap for the night. That was at Columbus, and they got away from the deputies there and later showed their superiority in numbers at Billings so decidedly that the force of deputies withdrew, and the stolen train continued its victorious journey on to Washington.

However, the authorities had not been idle, and orders were sent out to the army posts stationed near or on the line of the Northern Pacific road, and troops have been in readiness for moving orders at Fort Snelling, near this city; at Fort Yates, near Bismarck; at Fort Keogh, near Miles City, and the last named post, right on the line of the road.

At Fort Keogh, Colonel Page is in command, with half a dozen companies of infantry and two companies of cavalry, two Gatlings and a few mountain guns. The hardy troops are now found in the United States service. Colonel Page is a firm commander and believes thoroughly in obeying orders, and he is a hard hitter when the orders are to strike, so that the outcome of the coming scrimmage between Hogan's army and Uncle Sam's army is not much in doubt.

Cannot Get Past Fort Keogh.

If by any possibility the train should be able to run past Keogh, double the force of troops stationed there could be thrown in the way in a very few hours.

At Fort Keogh the garrison was in readiness for the enemy although it was not thought they would reach there before this morning. The men have shown a fear of night running since their first night and were expected to go into camp for the night at some point between Billings and Keogh.

They have an idea that the company will block the track by throwing a mass of dirt across it or in some similar way deter their progress. The Northern Pacific operators along the line kept the company advised of the progress of the train, and the troops were in readiness.

After their capture it is probable that the Coxeyites will be returned to Butte under military escort. The only way that the army could escape apparently is by leaving their train and starting on foot across country.

It is reported that Colonel Page's force surrounded the train at St. Paul early this morning, and that Hogan and his men surrendered.

Methermost Have It Up.

Billings, Mon., April 26.—The 800 members of Hogan's army arrived on their stolen train in this city, and some at their heels was a train bearing 75 deputy United States marshals. A conflict between the deputies and the army was at once precipitated, which resulted in one man on each side being severely wounded.

The stolen train, with Ha Coxeyites on board, had spent the night at Columbus, a small station formerly known as Stillwater, and the deputies overtook them at that point and demanded their surrender. General Hogan paid no attention to the command of the deputies to give up possession of the stolen train and ordered his men to go ahead.

The two trains came on slowly, the deputies closely following the army train and watching for an opportunity to seize them and their train. On arriving at this city a stop was ordered, and the conflict resulted. United States Marshal McDermott ordered the leaders of the army to surrender, and on their refusal a few of the deputies, nervous at the shout and oaths, fired upon the men in the cars. A few shots were exchanged before the marshal could regain control of his men and stop the firing.

During the firing one of the deputies was seriously wounded, and at least one of the army was wounded. There was a report that "General" Hogan was himself wounded three times, but the fact that the train has pulled out for the east makes it impossible to confirm that report. Marshal McDermott decided that his men were not equal to the work cut out for them, and he could see no use in his army stop fring he withdrew them and notified the authorities that his force was insufficient for the arresting of so large a mob as the train load of army men soon afterward slowly started for the east again.

Coxey and His Men Excited.

Frederick, Md., April 26.—There was a lively time in the camp of the commonwealers last night. Two telegrams were received by Browne and read to the men, throwing the army into wild excitement. The route of the army for today had been settled after much discussion, the first day's march being to Hyattsville, 10 miles distant, one more stop being made either at Clarksville or Gaithersburg before reaching Rockville on Saturday. The inclosure where the camp is was crowded when Browne mounted one of the wagons and read a telegram stating that a collision between General Kelly's men and the militia in Iowa had occurred, and that the laborers had been fired on, six of them being killed.

The news was received with a shout of anger from the men, which was followed by a general burst of discussion as the men sought out their companions to talk over the news. There was a general feeling of indignation, but no fear, and no sign of regret expressed except for the loss of men by the industrials.

One man said when questioned that it was only what all of the army had been expecting ever since Kelly started. The men, he said, were paid nothing and were under no obligation except to themselves, so that it was not true that an outbreak had not occurred before.

Later in the evening Brown and Coxey were shown another dispatch saying that a collision with the Butte City industrials at Billings, Mon., had occurred, with the loss of a man on each side. Neither Brown nor Coxey could be seen after the receipt of the news, but neither expressed himself at all troubled over the denial about the affair would have on the industrial movement.

Cities For the Army.

In speaking of the movement Mr. Coxey said: "Of course I deprecate violence of any sort in this movement, but it is hard to draw the line in saying how far a man may go in the pursuit of his own rights. But, whatever trouble there is in this affair, the monopolies have brought it on themselves. Just as soon as the armies are set upon and maltreated in this movement, just so sure will they have the sympathy of the people given them.

"You see how it was when the Frederick people sent out the deputies to capture us. Public sympathy turned to us at once. Public officials, I tell you, are only hastening their own doom by the stand they are taking in this matter. They will be absorbed by the government. As private parties they will come to grief."

The latest move of Carl Browne has been to furnish all the commonwealers with formidable clubs. These are ostensibly fashioned after those suggested by the appearance of the Frederick county deputies, Browne saying in a jocular way that he was going to furnish each of his men with a flag of truce to show the peaceable intention of the army. The flags have arrived. They are half the size of a small sized handkerchief, but the sticks are of oak four feet long and weigh about a pound each. They are as formidable as a policeman's club at night and Browne announced that he intended to have iron sockets put on the ends to hold small bouquets that would be furnished by the youth and beauty of Maryland who would greet them on the march.

The bouquets will not impair the usefulness of the stick as a weapon, and the addition of the iron socket will make them little short of deadly weapons.

There have been generous contributions received by the army since going south. The list includes 225 loaves of bread, 100 pounds of fish, 50 pounds of meat, a keg of pickles and some minor articles.

Kelly's Army at Peace.

Atlantic, Ia., April 26.—Comparative peace reigns in Kelly's camp. The generals, Colonel Baker and Colonel Speed have been brought together and sworn allitance to the army, and the army, with the exception of one company, is again a unit. The return of white winged peace was brought about by Rev. J. C. Lemen, a Council Bluffs man, who was active in arousing sympathy for Kelly in Omaha.

Speed and Baker submitted their conditions to Kelly. One was that a treasurer should be appointed to carry funds and should keep his books open for inspection. The second condition provided for a consultation of the three officers in event of emergencies. The third and most important called for the reinstatement of Baker and Speed. Kelly hesitated for a time, but finally accepted the conditions pending, however, that the colonels pledge themselves to future obedience.

Annie Hoolen and Edna Harper, the women who aided in the capture of the Omaha train and who were to have been arrested at Avoca, are still with the army, making speeches and soliciting assistance. They are looked upon with little favor by the men of the army, but have insisted on continuing the march to Washington.

Two Ways of Making Money

I. Get a job in the United States mint.

II. Attend the great sale that is now on at Whitely. You will find it the surest and most profitable way. Whitely is the largest buyer of manufacturers' stocks in the country. During the panic hundreds of manufacturers were wanted cash and were willing to sell at one price, and we will offer the entire lot of goods at remarkably low figures.

HERE'S

THE GOODS.
THE PRICES.

DRESS GOODS—The great cut off of every piece of Dress Goods in the store. The largest purchase of Dress Goods we ever made at one time we made last week. Over two hundred pieces of the imported dress fabrics, not one piece costing less than 60c. per yard, and some 75 and 80c. We put them all one table at the reasonably low price at 39c. per yard. All on table No. 1.

HOUSE FURNISHING DEPT.—Our regular annual sale of granite iron ware takes place this week. We put on sale over two hundred cases of this ware. We do sold at the same prices you pay for tinware.

	Our price.	Regular price.
Granite iron plates	10c.	20c.
" " large pudding pans	16c.	30c.
" " pie "	22c.	40c.
" " cake "	22c.	40c.
" " tea kettles	85c.	1.50
" " coffee pots	85c.	1.50
" " coffee pots	27c.	50c.
" " "	48c.	75c.

The above goods and prices are just a few of the many bargains this house will offer during this sale. Every Department is over-loaded with the best of everything and you can rest assured that the prices are the lowest.

SPRING COATS AND CAPES—The entire line of one of the leading cloak and cape manufacturers of New York city. We cleared out the entire line—bought them cheap and they will sell the same way. Every garment is made of the best material, handsomely trimmed and made in the latest style. In addition to coats and capes, you will find in this department such elegant line of house wrappers and tea gowns. Fine cambric wrappers, ready made, 89c. This is a new department, and to bring it before the people we have made prices very attractive.

MATTINGS—At the recent trade sale in New York, we bought over two hundred rolls of the finest matting made at lower prices than matting ever sold for before. We offer a good heavy matting for 20c. per yard. Extra heavy seamless fancy matting, 16c. Extra heavy seamless white matting. A great bargain, 16c. Worth, 25c. Linen warp seamless matting, 25c. Regular value 40c.

WHITE, of Plainfield.

"BOWLED OVER."

Competition goes down like a row of ten pins before such bargains as we offer.

We have no really "cheap" goods to offer, but we really do intend to go out of the shoe business.

Every pair of the balls we are rolling are bargains.

A wealth of patterns here to choose from in

"NEVER RIP."

Working suits at $25. Another line in fine Tweeds and Fancy Cassimeres, which we consider cheap at our office at $20.50. Worth double. Call and be convinced.

Chicago's Army Has a Goddess.

Chicago, April 26.—Chicago's industrial army has a goddess to lead it to the capital. Jessie Johns is the goddess, the commander of the land detachment, announces that in their "run to Washington" the goddess will be followed by a lady commissary in white and riding a milk white horse. Mrs. Nile C. Smith of 1,400 Judson boulevard has volunteered to do the commissary part of the work, and it is a book publisher. Mrs. Smith is the daughter of "General" Randall.

There are now about 300 men enrolled, and it is believed that a start will be made within a week. The general chief his staff have not decided yet whether to apply for railroad passes or walk or not. The place of assembling about out of Chicago for 25 or 30 miles, so that the recruits not in to stay will drop out near home, will probably be Joliet. The movement is attracting the liberally, attracting the leafer element. Superintendent Troy of the Chicago division of the railway mail service has sent out three special orders warning employees against interfering with the transportation of the mails. George Ratrope and William J. Bierman, of the Iron Molders' union say no iron molders are going to Washington.

The Boston Contingent.

Providence, April 26.—When the New England army of industrials, under Jerry Simpson, left Olneyville, they proceeded slowly up to Plainfield, through Cranston and over the Pontiac road. While this course is the longest, the original plans were changed when it was discovered that one and perhaps two independent armies would go over the Hartford pike. Towns on this short cut are so small that the leaders feared every one would suffer.

At East Greenwich they received an ovation. Along the line of march, awoke to the novelty of the movement, and hundreds of people crowded out to meet the commonwealers. The men were taken to a hall, where the supper of canned corned beef, bread, cookies and coffee that had been prepared by the people was served.

After supper a meeting was held on Main street. A motion for the army was made by Fitzgerald, and the men were then taken to Coxy's barn on School street, where they spent the night in hay.

Fry's Men Take Trains.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 26.—An exciting day was passed by Fry's army of industrials. Its 300 members captured a Vandalia freight train, with the intention of going east, but the train was abandoned by the crew, and that stopped operations, the men camping out all night on the track and using the company's ties for firewood. The next afternoon the army captured another freight train at Prairie, bound east, a few miles east of this city. The leaders were supposed to have armed themselves engineers and firemen among the soldiers, and if they did not move the train men out of the army would. After a journey of about an hour the trainmen took the train to Brazil, where the industrials got off. They were camped there last night. The tactics of Invermann have aroused the indignation of citizens.

Sweetland Recruiting In Hartford.

Hartford, April 26.—George W. Sweetland's contingent of the Coxey army numbered 10 members when it reached the city. They slept in a barn near the state prison at Wethersfield, Sweetland called on Chief of Police Bill and was informed that no squatting on the State House or in the parks would be allowed without a permit. All the men are under 30 years of age and of good physique. They will remain here until Friday, awaiting the arrival of Swift's Boston contingent. Sweetland will meanwhile visit Broomfield, Parkville, Windsor and other places in the vicinity to secure recruits. About 30 men in this city have effected an organization, and through their spokesman, John R. Healy, they will negotiate with Sweetland to join his party.

Citizen Train Active.

New York, April 26.—Citizen George Francis Train has telegraphed Senators Peffer and Allen, who have been making efforts in the senate in behalf of the Coxyites, that he will speak at the Masonic temple in Washington tonight on the Coxy movement. Citizen Train has also sent invitations to the 17 senators who are supporting Senators Peffer and Allen to be present on the stage.

Jones' Division Moves.

Baltimore, April 26.—The commissary wagon of the Jones division of Coxey's army, which is encamped two miles west of Ellicott City on the farm of Mrs. Edward Poland, was pulled through Ellicott City and loaded with provisions by the citizens. A camp was taken this morning and the move was made toward Rockville.

Want Solon Chase to Lead Them.

Portland, Me., April 26.—One hundred men are said to be anxious to join Coxey's army, provided Solon Chase of, "Neck steak" fame will lead them. The reason given is that the ex-Greenbacker stands very high with Senator Frye and would be able to get a hearing if any one could. Chase is in Colorado.

Swift Wants Yale Recruits.

New Haven, April 26.—Morrison I. Swift, commanding the Massachusetts division of the commonweal army, has sent a letter to the president of the sophomore class at Yale asking for an addition to his forces, which will pass through this city on the way to Washington.

From the Far Northwest.

Portland, Or., April 26.—The Portland contingent of the Industrial army, about 300 strong, began its march eastward over the line of the Union Pacific. The supposition is that it is their intention to capture a train before proceeding far.

Big Strike In New Bedford.

New Bedford, Mass., April 26.—One of the greatest strikes in the history of New Bedford is about to be begun. At a shop meeting of the Wamsutta mill weavers it was almost unanimously voted to call out all weavers in the Wamsutta corporation, numbering about 1,200. This action, if carried out, means the closing down of every mill under the Wamsutta corporation and the throwing out of employment of 5,000 operatives.

Big Mining Enterprise.

Denver, April 26.—M. Guggenheim & Sons have bought the whole mining camp at Tepenala, Mexico, including 14 copper, lead and silver mines. The consideration is about $1,000,000. The firm will build a refinery at Perth Amboy, N. J. They will put on a line of steamers between Tampico, Mexico, and Perth Amboy, N. J., to carry the product of their smelters to the refinery.

Great Northern Strike.

"CODDING" NO GOOD THIS TIME.

Despite an Old Trick to Win the Westfields Suffered Defeat.

The first of a new series of games between the Board of Trade and Westfield Club teams was rolled last night on the Board of Trade alleys. The Westfields tried an old trick—that of leaving one man behind and then each man roll a frame and put the score to the credit of "Codding." Before, when the visitors worked successfully the same dodge, they put up a score of 200 for "Codding," but this time "Codding" had to be satisfied with 130. The Board of Trade won by 26 pins. The score:

BREVITIES.

—There will be a sociable at the Congregational church to-night.

—Mr. W. F. Williams' residence at the corner of Somerset street and Jackson avenue, is receiving a new coat of paint.

—The sidewalk in front of the Babcock building is being graded. The trees in front of the building have been removed.

—The next game in the series between the Board of Trade and Westfield Club teams will be rolled next Friday night at Westfield.

—Mr. Seely Edsall expects to move into his new store in the Babcock building next week. The carpenters finished fitting up the shelving to-day.

—A new lodge of the Jr. O. U. A. M. is to be instituted at Scotch Plains on Tuesday next. It will include in its membership people from South Plainfield.

—The first house ready for occupancy on Fairview avenue, the new street recently cut through Watchung Park, was taken possession of the beginning of the week.

—Deputy Sheriff Amos Moffett yesterday summoned the Plainfielders who are to serve on the next Grand Jury. The names are not made public until announced in court. There are three from here on the list.

—At the regular council fire of Minnisonono Tribe of Red Men to-night the chief's degree will be conferred upon several members. The initiatory work will be done in amplified form. The entertainment committee will have the cards of admission to their entertainment ready for distribution.

—On April 1st, Charles Johnson, a milkman of Harrison, Conn., bought a house and lot from Joseph Schmitt on Wilson avenue for $1,200. Schmitt, on second consideration, thought the amount was too low. Yesterday, through his counsel, Mr. Johnson was awarded $312 by the owner for relinquishing his claim.

—Central Lodge, Ancient Order of United Workmen held a meeting, which was marked by the usual large attendance. Action was taken on the amendments to the by-laws and the new sick benefit clause adopted. Mr. Thaddeus C. Smith, the representative to the Grand Lodge, made his report. The members were entertained with considerable vocal music.

PERSONAL.

John R. Pfeiffer of Somerville has leased a house in Plainfield.

UNION CO. SCHOOL OF METHODS.

Reports and Discussions Take Up the Morning Session.

The Union County School of Methods of the W. C. T. U., was held in the Presbyterian church, Westfield, yesterday. Mrs. Jennie Bourne, president of the State organization, was present at the morning session, at which a report of the Executive Committee was read. Mrs. W. B. Deland, of Elizabeth, conducted the devotional exercises. The evils of home-made beer and other Summer drinks was discussed by Mrs. Carpenter of Roselle. The Bible reading was conducted by Miss Cora Peck of Plainfield. The afternoon was devoted to praise service, the reading of several papers and parliamentary drill under the direction of Mrs. Bourne.

Cast of "The Grey Mare."

Probably no amateur dramatic performance given within the last four or five years in the Union has caused the interest or has been looked forward to with such anticipation as "The Grey Mare," to be presented next week.

A Stranger and he Lives in Plainfield.

The Dunellen Call says that last Sunday night, as the sexton of the Presbyterian church was about to blow out the lights, a man came staggering in and ensconced himself comfortably in a rear pew. The sexton was unable to get him to leave and had to summon the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Martine, before he could be induced to leave the building. The stranger is said to live in Plainfield.

The Euchre Team Didn't Come.

St. Johns' euchre team, of Newark, failed to come to Plainfield last night, as scheduled, to play with the C. Y. M. L.'s.

The latter will without doubt claim the game under forfeit as the St. Johns did not ask for a postponement. If the game is forfeited to the Plainfielders they will thereby secure first place in the standing of the teams. The C. Y. M. L.'s are working hard for the championship of the Union.

As the Riding Academy.

The following were noticed among the riders at the Riding Academy: Mr. Coard, Miss Alice Coard, Mr. J. W. Johnson, Mr. Johnson, jr., Mr. A. W. Haviland, Mr. John I. Holly, the Misses Holly, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roome, Mr. Henderson, Mr. A. C. Vail, Mr. Geo. Van Boskerck, Mr. and Mrs. Penta, Mr. A. Streuli, Mr. Daniel Ginns, Mr. E. J. Waring, Mr. C. W. McCutchon and Mr. John Munn.

Which is the Most Popular of Our Pincet.

The fair to be held by Pauch Cauch Nauch Sinque Tribe of Red Men will take place in Central Hall, corner of Park and North avenues. One of the contests will be for the most popular policeman, the prize being a solid silver badge, belt and club. There will also be other contests, which will be duly advertised.

A Bicycle Broken While the Rider was in Church.

Last evening a bicyclist named McDonough, living at South Plainfield, rode to St. Mary's church to attend worship. His bicycle was taken by boys while McDonough was in the church, and after riding it around and breaking it, they left it and ran off. McDonough had to walk home.

Miss Bliss Entertains.

Miss Sadie Bliss entertained a few of her many friends at her home on Somerset street last evening. Miss Bliss made a charming hostess, and with the aid of singing, dancing and refreshments, the evening passed away very pleasantly. The party wended their way homeward about midnight.

Building the Grand Stand.

The new grand stand and "bleachers" to be erected at the Crescent Wheelmen's bicycle track was begun yesterday. The grand stand is to be 60x25 feet. It is to be completed by June 2, the Wheelmen's opening day.

—Rain are numerous now the sewer basins at Front street and Park avenue. Last night, as Policeman Rockafellow and Rockafellow with a two-foot club chased a rat also at the gutter nearly to Second street and nearly lost track of it.

CRANE FOR LAY JUDGE.

HE RECEIVES THE APPOINTMENT FOR UNION COURTS.

Mr. Levi Hatfield of this City was After the Appointment. — Bills Passed.—Governor Werts Signs a Number of Bills.

TRENTON, N. J., April 27.—A document bearing the names of twenty-nine Republican Assemblymen was presented to the Governor yesterday, asking him to withdraw Anderson's name and send to the Senate that of Speaker Holt, but the Governor refused to do so.

The bill reorganizing the law departments of Newark and Jersey City, from which the Democratic Senators succeeded in striking the enacting clause when reconsidered and passed and will go to the Governor, Sidney's bill, giving control of the Capitol to the Comptroller and Treasury, was passed in the Senate by the aid of four Democrats, as Bradley is not voting for partisan bills this week.

Afterward two of the Democrats asked to change their votes, as they had been misled by Senator Skirm's statement that Superintendent Ford was already out of office, when the bills were still in the hands of the Governor. Senators Daly and Winton refused to change, explaining that the Republicans were determined to have all the places, and there was no use in prolonging the agony.

Three nominations were received from the Governor: Herman Schalk, to be lay judge of Essex county in place of Carl Brittner; John W. Crane, lay judge of Union county; William A. Baker, lay judge of Hunterdon county, Capt. John F. Stevens to be Brevet Major in the National Guard, after twenty years' meritorious service; Benjamin F. Lee of Mercer, Barton F. Thorn of Burlington, and Martin P. Grey of Camden, Trustees of the Home for Feeble Minded at Vineland.

In the House Assemblyman Borden introduced a bill providing that a person leaving a hotel without paying his board shall be guilty of disorderly conduct, and liable to arrest anywhere in the State without a warrant. The Sea Girt Camp Appropriation bill, defeated yesterday by almost unanimous vote, was passed to-day by the vote of 39 to 4.

The Governor signed to-day the Storrs Anti-Gambling Bill, which inflicts penalties of both imprisonment and heavy fines on persons convicted of buying or selling pools or books on races.

MORE NEW LAWS.

The Governor yesterday approved the following bills:

Senate 96, enables Atlantic City to open and lay out a public park along the ocean front.

House 124 makes trout fishing legal between April 1st and July 31st.

House 126, the Starr anti-pool selling and bookmaking bill.

Senate 21, prohibits the catching of striped bass or perch in the Hackensack river and its tributaries except with hook and line.

Senate 95, provides for the issue of bonds for the Paterson City Hall.

Senate 113, provides that trust companies may become sureties for receivers, executors, administrators, etc.

Senate 141, grants a pension for the widow of the late Deputy State Prison Keeper J. B. Lippincott, recently shot by a convict.

Senate 147, permits trust companies in cities where there is no bank, to discount notes and bills and do a general banking business.

Senate 158, provides that insurance companies making insurance against injury, disablement and death, resulting from traveling or general accidents, shall be granted a certificate when the requirements of the law have been met, and their capital shall not be required to be greater than $100,000.

Mt. Pleasant.

"Jack" Stevens is grading and fixing up his farm at Mt. Pleasant. A family named Marcelo has taken possession of the place, and yesterday a force of white-washers were busy decorating the trees in front of the house.

A new chapel for worship is soon to be erected at Mt. Pleasant. The land has been secured and almost enough money to erect the chapel. The building will be of stone, and the farmers will cart them gratuitously.

Which Builds the Bridge?

Committees from the Somerset and Middlesex county Boards of Freeholders met the other day in regard to a bridge near Bound Brook at a place called Smithville. The Somerset Freeholders claimed that Middlesex should build the bridge, which spans a small creek, but as they had no maps and it was not certain which county was responsible, the conference came to nothing.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Four New Jersey Stations Entered.

New York, April 27.—Four stations on the New Jersey and New York Railroad were entered by thieves last night. They broke in the windows, rifled the ticket cases, money drawers, express packages and weighing machines.

The stations entered were Woodcliff, Park Ridge, Montvail and Pearl River. At Woodcliff the thieves broke open the automatic weighing machine and carried off the pennies that were in the bag and a C. O. D. express package.

At Montvale they secured $10 worth of postage stamps and opened a number of small express packages, but did not get anything else of any value.

Four rough-looking men, three carring grip sacks, passed through Nanuet village this morning, going toward New City.

They are supposed to be the guilty parties. Steps have been taken to arrest them.

Scotch Plains.

W. R. Buckler is ill with the grip.

A new stage goes on the Scotch Plains route, Saturday.

Constable Hezekiah Hand, is said, is expected to assume control of Lowe's Hotel on May 1.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club Race Meet.

The committee having in charge the first annual race meet of the Elizabeth Athletic Club Spiders, which is to be held at the New Jersey State Fair Grounds, Waverly, June 16, has selected a partial list of events.

There will be nine races in all, open to Class A riders only. These agreed upon up to date are one mile novice, quarter mile open, one mile open, quarter mile handicap, two mile team race, one mile handicap, half mile open and two mile handicap. The other event will be devoted to Union county riders.

From present appearances fully 600 riders will start in the century run of the New Jersey Associated Cycling Clubs, June 23. The Metropolitan Association of New York will also participate. The route to be travelled will be from Newark through Bellville, Rutherford, Paterson, Montclair, Orange, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Red Bank and Long Branch, thence to Asbury Park.

Set Aside Judge Huff's Decision.

People who remember the coal stealing case at Dunellen in which Michael Gallagher was fined by Judge Huff, will be interested in the action of Judge Rice at New Brunswick on Monday last. Judge Rice inquired if there were any persons present in that case the proceedings of Judge Huff's conviction of Michael Gallagher, remarking that the Court could not sustain the conviction. No one responding, he took up the conviction and informed the Court that he had received complainants to appear. He read the following complaint of Henry C. Corse, that on February 20, 1894, in the township of Piscataway, in the county of Middlesex, Michael Gallagher was found at and about the premises of the Central Railroad Company at or near the Greenbrook watering station, constituting the said Michael Gallagher a disorderly person within the true intent and meaning of the disorderly act. He then pointed out the defects of Judge Huff's conviction, which he fully showed to the Court was not as the law required. He then ordered the Clerk of the Court to record the conviction as being set aside.

Woodland in New Jersey.

Arbor Day was celebrated by the schools of the State to-day. It is interesting to note that over 2,250,000 acres, or about 48 per cent. of the total area, is woodland, and over one-half of the woodland in the State represents such configuration of the soil as to be unfit for agricultural purposes. Nearly two-thirds of the woodland is occupied by pitch pine (P. Rigida) and cedar swamps, mostly in the southern portion of the State, while in the northern part chestnut copsice is prevalent with a good portion of oak, hickory, locust and other hardwood varieties scattered among. The growth is such that it fires and wasteful practices are prevented, natural reforestations easily recuperates the area cut over, and from twelve to fifteen years such forest becomes valuable for fuel purposes, ties, etc. Fire is the chief destroyer of our forests in this State, and its ravages increase from year to year. Since 1880 it is estimated that $20,000,000 worth of property has been destroyed by fires.

Slings That Wounded.

Not long before she died Lucy Stone said, in an address to the young girls of Mount Holyoke college, "I never can think now, although I am an old woman and that time is long past, of the epithets and abuse that were once heaped upon my head, and by good and kindly men, with whom I was associated, because of my hair. And as she spoke the scarlet color flamed up over her gentle face, and a distressed, shamed expression came to her eyes. Upon the same subject Susan B. Anthony remarks, not without a pardonable bitterness: "There is not a jeer, nor a jibe, nor an insulting word or look that I have not had at a human being that has been spared me. I have always been selected as the object of the woman's rights movement and its laughing stock."

Teeth.

A homely set of teeth will spoil the prettiest mouth ever fashioned after Cupid's bow. On the other hand, a commonplace face becomes positively attractive when the mouth opens upon a display of clean, well kept ivories. They need not be the distinctive advertisements, and the "pearly gates" old fashioned baseline are in this practical age but lightly esteemed. But there must be about the well groomed mouth a wholesome, cleanly look. Proper digestion will help to keep the teeth in this condition. Have a box of it always on your toilet stand and see what it will do toward freshening up a dingy mouthful of teeth. —Family Herald.

Variety at Table.

Variety is the spice of life, and the housekeeper who forgets to remember it. It stands to reason that no man wants to sit down to fried steak and fried potatoes for breakfast every day in the year, with a hundred suppers of the same dishes, even if they are got up in appetizing style, which they are not if he gets them that often, for a good appetite is a thing unknown to every day menu. A man grows to hate eating at home when he knows to a grain of pepper what he will get for a given meal.—Popular Magazine.

The Golden Haired Girl.

A few drops of ammonia added to peroxide of hydrogen is what gives the beautiful golden color to the hair. Without the ammonia one or two applications of the bleach will brown dark tresses a reddish bronze that is it.—New York World.

DEATHS

MARSH—In this city, on April 26, 1894, Corrine Estelle Marsh, aged 9 months, daughter of Francis E. Marsh and the late Elizabeth Dodd Marsh.

Funeral at 205 Madison avenue, Saturday afternoon, at three o'clock. Interment at convenience of the family.

The Etiquette of Visiting.

Married women leave their husband's cards with their own when they go to see, nor is left for the gentleman of the house and one for the hostess. A dinner party demands a call within two weeks, but this is not required after a five or a large reception. If a friend is ill, it is proper to call in person and leave a card with kind inquiries written upon it. A very pretty English fashion is gradually finding its way here. After a severe illness a lady may send by mail to all the people who have called to inquire for her or an engraved reading in this way. "Mrs. James Brown presents her compliments and her doctor presents kind thanks." This does away with the necessity of making visits when one is still in ill health, and yet it is a recognition of the courtesies received. It is polite also to leave a card of congratulation when a new baby appears in the family, but one is never expected to call to see the mother.—Ladies' Home Journal.

What Soda Will Do.

In washing dish towels, brushes, the sink and other kitchen utensils dissolved soda will be found most useful, cleaning and sweetening all that it touches. It should be kept in a large olive bottle and should be labeled "washing soda." To prepare it put a pint of the dry soda in a common pail, kept for this purpose, and add in 3 quarts of boiling water. Let this mixture stand upon the stove, stirring it frequently, until the soda is dissolved, then bottle, put into bottles. This preparation when hot is an excellent agent for cleaning and sweetening the plumbing in the house. Pour a pint of the hot liquid into each bowl, basin and sink about once a fortnight. As the liquid unites with grease it keeps the kitchen sink pipes free of any impurities. It is well to buy sal soda by the quarter barrel. It is extremely cheap when bought by the quantity.

Give the Youngsters Sand.

One of the cleanest and nicest playthings in the world for a little child is sand. In summer a load of it dumped in a clean spot in the back yard will amuse the little ones for hours each day. They love to shovel it, build miniature forts, make gardens with stones or sticks and dig wells. Washed and it is clean as sawdust, and a child can play in it in its white frocks and not soil its clothes. For winter playing a basket of sand can be kept just outside the door. A shallow box of a few inches in depth and 2 or 3 feet square can easily be made. Spread a lot of newspapers on the floor, set the box in the middle, fill it with sand and turn the children loose. Teach them not to get off the newspapers with it, and they will play all day in it and not litter the house half as much as though they had cut paper or scattered toys.—New York Advertiser.

Jackets.

Short jackets are made with large capes of moire to match or black, forming large godets; the sleeves large. There are also silk jackets which in small sizes are like the bodices with long basques and ornamented with lace collets. Therefore the general effect is nearly the same as the thick cloth, small waist and plain skirts a little draped.

MINING TOWN MOBBED.

Five Thousand Strikers March Into Toluca, Ills.

A BLOODY RIOT IS NOW IMMINENT.

The Strikers Will Demand That the Mine Mines Now at Work There Join the Cause or Else Massacre Will Result—Governor Tanner Sends Troops.

Trouble Feared on the Great Northern.

TOLUCA, Ills., April 27.—The little mining village of Toluca, situated in the heart of a vast prairie in Marshall county, is wide awake this morning. An army of nearly 5,000 coal miners from Spring Valley, Lacey ville, Lentonville, La Salle, Peru and Oglesby have gone into camp at what is known as the Big Sandy, 4½ miles north of this place.

The Spring Valley, Ladd and Lentonville men left Spring Valley at 4 o'clock Thursday, 2,500 strong. They were met at Mount Palatine by more of La Salle and vicinity. The army took Mount Palatine by storm and went into camp. They were accompanied by seven brass bands, a fife and drum corps and seven commissary wagons, the contributions of the business men of Spring Valley and vicinity. Food was distributed to the army at this place, and a riot almost ensued among the men. Throngs climbed upon the wagons, and those who had charge of the distribution had great difficulty in managing the hungry miners.

At Mt. Palatine an attempt was made by the leaders to hold a mass meeting, but the men were too anxious to march on to Toluca that the leaders failed to get their attention. At 11 o'clock last night Commander Knox ordered a halt for the night at the big Sandy.

The order for march was given at 4 o'clock this morning. The programme of the army includes a march to Toluca, a small a mass meeting immediately and try to use moral suasion upon the Toluca miners to quit work and help the cause. Many of the marchers are old men and there are some women among them.

The Strikers From Spring Valley.

SPRING VALLEY, Ills., April 27.—Intense excitement prevails here over the coal miners' strike, and strong fears are expressed that a conflict between the strikers and the men who refused to leave their work will result in riot and bloodshed. The center of the conflict will be Toluca, where the miners refuse to quit their work.

A committee went from La Salle to persuade them to join the strikers, but it returned with a report that the men in the mines there absolutely refused to lay down their tools or to help the strikers in any way.

A meeting of the strikers was immediately held, at which this report was presented, and it was determined that from 3,000 to 5,000 men from La Salle, Peru, Oglesby, Spring Valley, Seaton, Ladd and Laceyville should organize and march in a body to Toluca and compel the men at work there to quit.

The mine owners have provided themselves with arms and ammunition in abundance, and it is feared that when the army of strikers reaches Toluca there will be bloodshed and death. Feeling is running very high here against the men who have refused to quit work, and should they fall into the hands of the strikers little mercy would be shown them.

A wing of an army of miners has left the city and surrounding towns are getting preparatory to a march on Toluca to force the men there to quit work. They expect to reach Toluca, which is 99 miles distant, today.

PERU, Ills., April 27.—Fully 600 miners left here for Toluca. They will be joined by a force of 1,000 men from Spring Valley, Laceyville, Ladd, Seaton, and will march to Toluca 3,000 strong.

Request Made For Troops.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 27.—The state miners' conference adjourned after a two hours' session. The delegates to-day failed in pledging all delegates to work for the success of the miners' strike, to prevent if possible any miners from going to work, and to protect the lives and property of all during the progress of the strike. After the adoption of a lengthy political platform the convention adjourned sine die. President Crawford left here for Toluca as he received a telegram from Streator that 300 coal miners, mostly Hungarians and Italians, were ready to march on Toluca and drive the miners there from the mines.

Acting Governor Gill received the following telegram from Sheriff Cone of Marshall county, sent from Toluca:

Three hundred armed strikers from Spring Valley, La Salle and Peru are here. I anticipate serious trouble this afternoon. I anticipate that I will be unable to meet them, I respectfully call upon you for the protection of the lives of voting people from Chicago or Joliet. Such a force I would have special train waiting for them at either point. Try to get them here by 5 o'clock if possible. Answer quick.

Governor Gill telegraphed at once that he did not believe he was warranted in calling out the militia from where he got forms in the telegram, as he had no proof that the strikers were armed, or have yet, or are likely to have violence. He said he would not leave for the scene of the anticipated trouble and personally investigate the matter.

Governor Gill left on the midnight train, accompanied by Assistant Adjutant General Boyle, for Toluca. Adjutant General Orendorff was notified at Kansas City, Mo.

The Great Northern Strike.

ST. PAUL, April 27.—All overtures for a peaceful settlement of the great Northern railroad strike have been declared off, and the company and the American Railway union have begun a test of strength that may cause considerable bloodshed before it ends.

The Great Northern railroad extends from St. Paul to Seattle, with many branches in this state and the Dakotas, and its 4,495 miles of track goes through considerable comparatively new country, where no other means of traffic are to be had and where the conditions of society allow a somewhat rougher element to control affairs. The result is that in such sections, when the road begins to run its trains with new men, there will be war to the knife.

It is believed to have been this fact almost as much as the order to give his men every chance to make known their grievances that induced President Hill to wait two weeks without an attempt to get out any other than mail trains, but he has started the first freight in two weeks, and the battle may be said to have begun. The officials of the road secured the injunction by the United States court in this state and Dakota and also in Montana restraining orders ordering the men not to interfere in any way with the handling of the road.

Under this order deputies were sent out in all mail trains and on the freight trains to guard them.

During the time that the strikers have been preventing the running of the road a committee of 25 members of the American Railway union employees of the road assembled in this city in accordance with a reply favorable to their request for a conference with the officials of the road.

They submitted a brief communication to President Hill unconditionally rejecting his proposition for arbitration, renewing their demand for other schedules and giving him to understand that this is their ultimatum. Mr. Hill sent a reply to the men last night in which he says that the Great Northern has no grievances and negotiations as far as he is concerned. He will no longer recognize the American Railway union and will at once proceed to operate the Great Northern railroad without regard to that organization.

Block Miners Will Join.

BRAZIL, Ind., April 27.—It is apparent now that the miners of the block coal fields of Indiana will join the general strike for a uniform coal mining state. The block miners had agreed with the operators to work until May 1, but the striking bituminous miners formed by notice and visited the block miners and induced the men to come out. In some instances they make the argument fearfully forcible with knotted clubs.

The bituminous strikers divided into two mobs, and headed by bands of music started on a circuit of the district, visiting every mine and calling the men to come out. Mines No. 4 and 5 of the Crawford Coal company closed. About 200 bituminous men visited Carbon, and the miners left their work there. They also visited the Eureka mine and that of the McIntosh company, with similar success.

About 800 bituminous men, headed by a band, went to Caseyville and induced the men in the mine there to join them. The bituminous miners are determined that the block coal shall join them, and by to-night, it is said, there will not be a mine in the whole block coal district in operation. Bituminous men marched through this city, headed by fife and drum, on their way to the mines just north of here.

Strikers Turn Assassins.

GREENSBURG, Pa., April 27.—An attempt was made near Mammoth to assassinate Sheriff McCann. He left Mount Pleasant in a buggy to drive to Scottdale, a short distance from Mammoth he noticed two ugly looking Huns or Slavs crouching behind a little outbuilding, and just as he got past them two shots were fired at him, and so close did they come to hitting him that he could hear the balls whistling. An effort will be made to run down the would be assassins.

At Oliver an attempt was made on the life of one of the workmen. An unknown striker stole through the line of guards about the houses occupied by the workmen, and creeping to the open door of the house of George Lewis fired two shots at Lewis, who was sitting in the room near the door. Luckily the shots did not hit the mark aimed at, but imbedded themselves in the wall. The deputies ran to the spot, but the miscreant had escaped in the darkness. The strikers have threatened to kill all the workmen who they term "scab hogs," but this is the first actual attempt.

Strikes In Russian Poland.

VIENNA, April 27.—The strikes of miners, iron workers and others in Russian Poland continue to spread and are accompanied by many disorders. The most serious riots have occurred between the troops and striking workmen at Czenstochau, Zgiers and Silesia. The strikers are in an exceedingly ugly mood, and upon every possible occasion assault the men, such as overseers, foremen and others who had directed them while at work. In some cases men who refused to join the strike have been set upon by mobs and killed.

Tied Up by Lack of Coal.

BUFFALO, April 27.—Fifty boats are tied up along the Buffalo docks for want of coal, though only five days have elapsed since the great strike of soft coal miners began. If there is not a settlement of the strike very soon, the owners will seriously consider refitting for burning hard coal. At present it is not considered there is not enough coal for all railroads centering in Buffalo to continue business with for three weeks.

A Perfect Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

B. Webster Baker
York, Pa.

"I personally recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to my friends and others, whenever I have an opportunity, and I am willing that this statement be used for publication as I have derived the best of good results from it. I have been troubled more or less with dyspepsia and nervous headache for several years. After using other preparations without success, I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I am pleased to say that I have been benefited more by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla than by

All Other Medicines Combined.

In fact, I have been 'cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.'" You can find Hood's Pills very beneficial."—D. Webster Baker, 205 Penn St., York, Pa.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists.

MORE TIME FOR TARIFF

Senate Devotes Six Hours a Day to the Debate.

ALLEN DEFENDS THE COXEYITES.

His Resolution Was Generally Condemned, However, by Other Senators—Represented Silver Object to Having Their Salaries Docked For Lost Time.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Senator Allen's resolution declaring that it was the constitutional right of American citizens to assemble and petition congress was laid before the senate. It was opposed by a number of senators and finally went to the calendar without action.

Mr. Vest deprecated the introduction of the resolution, holding that any compromise by congress with so called Coxey movement would open a movement in the integrity of the government, which would end in flood and destruction.

Mr. Wolcott of Colorado characterized the resolution as a cringing invitation to a horde of lawless marauders. The formation of these disunited bodies of men was due largely to men like the governor of Colorado, whose gyrations and antics had brought dishonor and discredit to the state and sullied its fair name. It was time to take courage and stand together against the socialism, populism and paternalism which was running riot throughout the country and which would end in the destruction of liberty.

Senators Dolph and Gray also opposed the resolution. Senator Allen spoke in favor of it. It was disposed by the resolution to meet each day at 11 o'clock, which was taken up by the overwhelming vote of 54 to 6 and agreed to without any opposition on the part of the Republicans. Senator Jarvis of North Carolina, the successor of the late Senator Vance, was sworn in.

Senator Higgins took the floor on the tariff bill as soon as it was taken up and spoke until 5 o'clock. His speech was devoted almost entirely to a review of the late Hawaiian incident, in which he severely criticises the policy of the administration.

Senator Dolph resumed his speech on the tariff question and spoke for nearly an hour. Senator Harris then said he reluctantly moved an executive session. It is understood that efforts are being made to secure unanimous consent that no more executive sessions be held until after the tariff bill is disposed of.

In the House.

For the first time since the Democratic caucus determined to impose the law of 1856 to dock members absent save on account of sickness the matter was officially brought to the attention of the house. It came up in the shape of an alleged privileged resolution presented by Mr. Malson, a Pennsylvania Republican, who contended that the rights of the members had been invaded by the sergeant-at-arms, the latter having distributed blank certificates to members with the law requiring members to make statements as to the number of days they had been absent, the reasons therefor, etc.

After a lengthy debate the speaker held that the resolution was not privileged on the ground that the question of the right of a member to his salary was purely a legal one and in no way affected his parliamentary rights. This put a sudden stop to the discussion, and the house proceeded with and completed the consideration of the diplomatic bill.

No amendments of importance have been adopted, although more than a week has been devoted to this bill. As passed the bill carries with it $1,513,738, a decrease of $66,706, as compared with the appropriations for the current year. Today is private bill day, and on Saturday the army appropriation bill will come up.

The Coxey Movement.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The authorities in charge of the capitol building are now considering the advisability of formally surrendering their authority to the District of Columbia and asking that a sufficient protection be given by the police force of the city. This step has seemed desirable owing to the small force of capitol policemen.

An Odd Fellows' procession attempted to march through the capitol grounds, but was turned back at the entrance by the capitol police. The officials explained that the law prohibits any organizations in a parade entering the grounds and that no exception could be made.

The District commissioners cast a damper over the local supporters of Coxey's movement by refusing them permission to hold open air meetings. It had been expected by the enthusiasts that these meetings would draw converts and what is equally desired by them cash contributions for the cause. The refusal of the commissioners was based upon a law that prohibits congregating on the public streets or parks or engage in loud and boisterous talking, and they state that they have no power to grant a permit.

The Coxeyites are angered at this refusal, declaring that the law never was intended to apply to orderly speech making. They point to the Salvation Army meetings which are held in the streets and to the sidewalk services of itinerant evangelists who flourish here as instances of nonenforcement of the rule.

The event of the day was the advent of Citizen George Francis Train, the unique concentration of psychic force, to participate in the movement. At an up town hotel the citizen was surrounded by a crowd, to whom he discoursed learnedly.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The fourth class postmasters appointed were:

Massachusetts—Waverly, J. E. Mackessy.

New York—Castleton, W. P. Smith; Gravesend Beach, J. E. Ahern.

Pennsylvania—Blair Station, Albert E. Walker; Excelsior, John Glow; Fairchance, Hensley Humphreys Repo, Miles Meeki Mortimer; Ida, H. F. Frank.

McGarrahan's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—William McGarrahan, the claimant who died in Providence hospital Monday, worn out with 40 years of vain endeavor to secure what he believed to be his rights, was buried in Mount Olivet cemetery.

Three Children Burned to Death.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 27.—Three young children of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Schneider were burned to death during a fire which entirely consumed their home.

Jerry Simpson Out of Danger.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Representative Jerry Simpson continues to improve, and his physicians now consider him out of danger.

Weather Forecast.

Fair; southerly winds.

Jealousy Caused These Tragedies.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 27.—William Green, a teamster, committed a terrible scene at his home in the village of Adams, beating his wife's brains out with a hammer wrench and then cutting his own throat with a butcher knife. Green was insanely jealous.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., April 27.—Charles Howard, aged 21, of Burke, Franklin county, quarreled with his bride of three months. The wife was jealous of him, and when Howard expressed a wish that he were dead his wife called him a monster and and handed him a bottle containing 41 grains of morphine. He took the poison and went to his room, where he was found dead an hour or so later. The wife, crazed with grief, became divorced outside, but was prevented by her friends.

Vetoed the Bill In Advance.

ALBANY, April 27.—The last day before the adjournment of the legislature resulted in adding two more to the bills to those already passed. These were the Sheffield blanket ballot bill, with the individual paster clause from the Saxton bill, and the bipartisan park board bill for New York city. Governor Flower and his private secretary, Colonel Williams, are making great efforts to get back the copies of a message vetoing the blanket ballot bill, which he expected to send to the assembly, but has not sent because the bill he wished to veto has not reached him.

During Bank Robbery.

THOMSONVILLE, Conn., April 27.—One of the boldest bank robberies on record in this section of the country was committed here when the H. D. & Hobart F. Spencer company's bank, a small institution, was robbed of $1,374 by three men who are supposed to be professionals. A stranger with a team stopped in front of the little bank and called Mr. R. D. Spencer, the principal owner and only occupant, to the door. While his attention was engaged, another entered the bank and took the larger portion of the contents of the safe.

Breckinridge's Friends Active.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 27.—A tremendous effort is being made to convince the people of this district that the verdict against Colonel Breckinridge in the Pollard case was due to the unfair charge of Judge Bradley to the jury. Thousands of circulars asserting that the charge and verdict were unjust are being circulated. In Woodford county the friends of Breckinridge are so aroused that a big meeting is to be held, at which Judge Bradley is to be burned in effigy.

The Deadly Smallpox.

LITTLE ROCK, April 27.—It was learned from a reliable source here that 15 deaths from smallpox occurred in Texarkana in one day, and the total number of cases up to date is 98. The situation is more alarming than has been reported. The epidemic is still confined to the colored population, and the negroes are making frantic efforts to get out of town.

Oyster Pirates Captured.

CRISFIELD, Md., April 27.—A report reaches here that three Maryland oystermen were captured by Virginia oysters in Pocomoke sound and were taken to Drummondtown by an armed force of 12 Virginians, who took the law into their own hands and forced the captured parties to surrender.

Child Decapitated by a Trolley Car.

NEWARK, N. J., April 27.—William Schenck, 3½ years old, while playing in front of his home, was run down by a trolley car. The child was dragged beneath the wheels and his head severed from his body. His arms and body were badly mangled. George Edwards, the motorman, was arrested and held.

Seligman Special Made Quick Time.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 27.—A special train bearing Theodore Seligman and Henry Seligman, sons of the late Jesse Seligman, the New York banker who died at Coronado on Monday, arrived from Chicago, having made the run in 62 hours, a day and a half faster than regular time.

Striking Silk Dyers Win.

PATERSON, N. J., April 27.—The striking silk dyers acknowledge a victory. Several of the shops offered to take their old men back at increased wages, and the men declared the strike off in those shops. It is thought that the remainder of the shops will give in within a day or two.

Vigilantes and Bandits Fight.

COAL CREEK, I. T., April 27.—A party of bandits supposed to be the Dalton gang encountered a posse of vigilantes near here and had a terrible fight. Three of the bandits were wounded, one mortally. Three of the vigilantes were killed and others wounded.

The Cornell Poisoning Case.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 27.—The jury in the Cornell chlorine poisoning case adjourned until May 17, the reason for adjournment being that the jurors wish to await the decision of the general term in the proceedings against Sophomore Taylor.

Defaulter Attempts Suicide.

TOPEKA, April 27.—Robert J. Stewart, treasurer of two lodges of the A. O. U. W. and Select Knights respectively, is a defaulter in $1,600. He confessed, and made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide.

Women Will Not Drink Openly.

BUFFALO, April 27.—The new police superintendent has ordered all stalls out of saloons. Hereafter when women go to saloons they will have to drink openly and not in places of concealment.

Father of Forty Children.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 27.—Abram Convant died here at the age of 94. He was a veteran of the Mexican and Indian wars. Convant had been married twice, and was the father of 40 children.

Drowned In the North Bay.

NORTHPORT, Ont., April 27.—Whitecross Mosquit Bay is a small duckhunt Grant Peters and Richard Trumpour of Big Island were upset and both drowned.

Charley Mitchell Will Race Horses.

LONDON, April 27.—Charley Mitchell and George W. Moore have decided to go on the turf. They have purchased a racing stable.

Corbett Will Appear With Mace.

LONDON, April 27.—James J. Corbett has promised Jem Mace to appear with him in a public exhibition both in England and Dublin.

Chief's Daughter Divorced.

CHANDLER, O. T., April 27.—Walter Battice, secretary of the Sac and Fox tribes, and his wife, the daughter of Mukteahtoe, chief of the tribe, were divorced.

Strikers Released.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 27.—Twenty of 40 strikers held for the murder of Chief Engineer Paddock were discharged by the court.

VELVETEENS AND VELVETS.

A Dazzling Display and Fabrics to Suit a Stout Figure.

To the Editor of The News:—

Corduroy in the reputation heaving gray and brown, which has prospered this season, while velveteens are shown in as large a variety of colors as silk velvets and are really beautiful in that soft texture. They are much more serviceable for ordinary wear than velvet, being unaffected by water, and are wider and far less costly, but these virtues are not sufficient to relegate them to a deserved position in the wardrobe. Velveteen is often combined with fine wool goods in imported street gowns and is generally embroidered in patterns for trimming purposes. Besides the plain varieties sold by the yard there are a number displayed having tiny silk embroidered dots or flecks in a contrasting color. There is also a kind having narrow ribs in two tones, which catch the light with a changeable effect. Besides the more subdued shades for gowns and dress trimmings, cherry, turquoise, lavender and all the brilliant and delicate tints now fashionable in silk velvets may be obtained in velveteen, although for what purpose these light colors are utilized it would be hard to guess, since there is an insurmountable prejudice against using velveteen in millinery.

As for velvets, the display is dazzling. Cherry, bright green and purple stand forth in fashionable prominence, a twist or knot of one of these colors being a favorite adornment of hats and bonnets. Prices this year are exceptionally low, and brilliant shades, which are usually more costly than dark ones, are now sold at the same valuation. Silk plushes have also come down surprisingly, fine qualities being offered at less than half the former price.

Since china silks came into such universal popularity surah has retired into the background, being used mainly for linings, and even for that purpose being often superseded by glace changeable silks. It seems to be regaining favor, however, as is seen in many of the new Parisian designs. Gauze evening gowns are often made up over underdresses of surah, and it is now beginning to form a part of more elaborate costumes. A sketch is given of a gown the skirt of which is of accordion plaited surah, Russian green in color. A second skirt, also of the same shade falls over it and is caught up on the left side by a rosette of ivory silk crepon. A gathered belt of crepon surrounds the waist of the tight velvet bodice, the upper part of which is covered with a puffed drapery of crepon bordered on the lower edge by an accordion plaited frill of surah. Similar frills pass over the shoulders, forming epaulets at the top of the balloon sleeves of crepon. A wrinkle crepon collar finishes the neck. JUDIC CHOLLET.

"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" his adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

The Bath.

Every now and then comes a dictum from a physician: "Don't bathe every day. A daily bath is weakening."—Old in substance. Don't bathe every day. Don't bathe to-day, for one day, an entire ablution of the person is a discomfort, a something missed for all the waking 24 hours. Mother Eve, Cleopatra, the sweet sirens of Stamboul in Bavaria, whose hygienic code has for its chief point to harden and strengthen the body, luxuriate in the daily bath; save the bath, medicated ones, but will have his patients to take cold baths very swiftly, putting on their garments the instant the dripping is wet and getting warm and dry by immediate active exercise. A bathtub is by no means a necessity. A basin, a pitcher of water, a piece of oilcloth or a fragment of waterproof carpet or blanket, or an extra Turkish towel to stand on, another Turkish towel for drying and a pair of bath mittens, or a square of flannel, or even the bare hands and a warm room if possible—these are the chief necessities. A soap bath once or twice a week is desirable for cleanliness, and even the soap scrubbing need not take over eight minutes. No better soap can be used than a pure white castile.—Hospital.

Reason In Queer Colors.

Since Whistler introduced his celebrated "yellow room," the hankering of eccentments in odd tones has been extensively developed. A strong effect has been frequently obtained by the use of violet—color or no odd color to use—but used with taste it has given a result which is extremely pleasing.

The woodwork and furniture are carried out in white enamel, the walls having a paper with a design of violet figure on a white ground, with a deep frieze of the popular clematis. The chief hangings are at windows and doorways; show the wisteria blossom, and the bed is draped with violet silk fabric shaded with the same purple flowers.

A purple velours is used for upholstering the divan, heaped with pillows in white and heliotrope combined, the dressing table, like the bed, being draped with soft violet silk. The white framework of the mirror is ornamented with a spray of clematis, the linen covers and toilet mats being dotted with tiny purple blossoms wrought with a needle in washable silks.

A large rug, with very light ground, covers the centre of the floor, and is carried out with white goatskin rugs effectively distributed.—Upholsterer.

The Couch a Necessity.

There are times when so many of the things that distract us could be straightened out and the way be made clear, if only one had a long, comfortable couch on whose soft bosom he could throw himself, boots and brains, stretch his weary frame, unmindful of tidies and tapestry, close his tired eyes and let the tension of his muscles and give his harassed mind a chance.

Ten minutes of this soothing narcotic, when the head throbs, the soul yearns for endless, aimless, dreamless rest, would make the vision clear, the nerves steady, the heart light and the star of hope shine again.

There is no doubt that the longing to die is mistaken for the need of a nap. Instead of the immortality of the soul business, men and workingmen want regular and systematic doses of doing. And, after a money bank in the shade of an old oak that succeeding seasons have converted into a tenement of song birds, there is nothing that can approach a big sofa or a low, long couch placed in the corner, where tired nature can turn her face to the wall and sleep and dose away the gloom.—New York Ledger.

Pinch a Trying Color.

Why are people so reckless in the way of wearing pink? It is undoubtedly a lovely color, but should be consulted in selecting the exactly suitable shade than in any other, with one exception. It is the most trying color to the complexion. I noticed a charming brunette to me the other day, with tears in her eyes, as she laid down a beautiful salmon pink silk. "But it is of no use," she said, "I look as red as a lobster."

"Red is of no use. It makes the best of us look as a smoked haddock." She would have relinquished it, but the happy idea seized her of lavishly adding a deep dull red with it, arranging it in such a way that the lighter color did not come next her face. The effect was certainly all that could be desired and quite set the fashion in a small country town, though it must be confessed that some of the imitations were simply hideous through the stupidity of those people who could not understand that a rose pink, with a red in tone bordering on magenta, would not have quite the same effect.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Well Dressed Mothers.

Anything that tends to make a girl look down upon her mother is fatal to the best interests of both. For that reason a woman should try to keep abreast with the times, that her notions may not seem antiquated. Her dress should be as tasteful and well chosen as her means will allow. It is a gratification to a girl's pride to present her young friends to a mother who is well dressed, gracious and versed in the requirements of good society. Buttons are not "nothing because love like pride is the beloved object."—Mrs. Burton Kingsland in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Courageous Woman.

Miss Ada Oliver is postmistress at Deerfield and station agent for the Santa Fe railroad. She carries on a grocery store and proved her independence of near Deerfield after seven years' residence and cultivation. She had her entire farm broken before final proof day came, a negro's enterprise she shows to men who take up homesteads. This courageous young woman is a leading citizen and in her various capacities transacts most of the business of her town, but she cannot vote.—Deerfield (Kan.) Correspondent.

Bicycle Riding.

The opinion of physicians seems to be that only good can result from the use by women of the improved form of bicycle. Growing girls who indulge freely in horseback riding suffer from enlargement of one hip and partial atrophy of one leg. If our woman physicians would advocate cross saddle riding, which the divided skirt could make seemly, they might do much to prevent serious mischief. Bicycle riding, though less exhilarating, is safer.—American Woman's Journal.

Dressing Is an Art.

Cultivate dress as a fine art, for minute attention to personal adornment and the graces of toilet are the duty of every man or woman in civilized society. It is the outward show that enables the world to judge of us personally, our character, refinement and condition, of the station of life in which we are thrown. It is a duty we owe our family, our friends and the world at large. It is the passport to good breeding and the support of fine manners.—Dressmaker.

New York Fashionable Bonnet and Hats Made in Plainfield.

New York fashionable Bonnets and Hats are now being made in Plainfield, and ladies are no longer obliged to go to New York for these articles, greatly to their delight and convenience. Plainfield these New York Milliners are having a big run, although we have under great disadvantages in their present quarters. They hope in a short time to be located in the new parlors in the Babcock Building, where greater facilities will be offered. Those who have patronized the Department are well pleased, both as to prices and styles, and success in the new enterprise is assured from the start. The patronage of Plainfield's Millinery Department can rest assured that their neighbor's bonnet will not resemble theirs, for the ladies will not make two bonnets or hats alike. They are competent to create styles, and do not copy.

HOGAN'S INDUSTRIALS CORRALLED.

Whole Train Load Held by Deputies For the Secretary of War's Orders.—Frye's Men Precede a Train Too.—Coxey's Own Army Moves a Little Nearer.

FORSYTH, Mon., April 27.—Troops promptly made an end of the Butte contingent of the Coxey army that was marching on to Washington. For 40 hours all traffic on the Northern Pacific tracks had been stopped in this state, and during all that time a train had been running with from 30 mountains to this point, where it was taken in charge by Colonel Page of the Twenty-second United States Infantry, with 300 men from Fort Keogh garrison. This place is 42 miles west of the fort, and the military had been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to intercept the train when it arrived at that point.

At Dart Wednesday night the stolen train was at Sanders, 15 miles west of here and coming very slowly with an old "hog" engine. The authorities came to the conclusion that an aggressive movement was desirable, as it was feared that the Coxeyites would remain all night at Forsythe and there paint the town. Two special trains were quickly made up and the regiment loaded on board.

It was a grim sight as the men stood at rest, with the bayonets flashing in their muskets and faces almost happy looking at the chance for a little relaxation from garrison duty. The regiment, with 10 days' rations, all field equipments and ammunition, were prepared for any kind of service.

Surrendered Peaceably.

At Rosebud it was learned that the Coxeyites were at Forsythe, but were having trouble getting an engine, and it was decided to run right through to this place without a stop. The run was made without incident. When they arrived here, they found the stolen train standing at the depot. The commonwealers themselves flagged the train, and when told by Superintendent Dorsey that the troops were on board he remarked, "Well, the jig's up." The soldiers lined up on the platform beside the Coxey train, and the Montana commune was summoned to surrender. It was scarcely a necessary command, and they promptly obeyed.

The commonwealers' train consisted of 14 cars, one well filled with provisions, one with railway tools, one with coal and the other 11 cars carrying men. Each car carried from 30 to 40 men, together with their baggage, camp equipage, etc., making a total of about 400 men. The men were a hard looking set. Whether all together naturally or from their recent experiences it would be hard to say. In a short time their train had been sidetracked and put under guard. General Hogan, Conductor Wiley and Engineer Cleveland of the train's crew had been taken possession of.

Soon two sections of the passenger train came in from the west, and the conductors reported a large number of Coxey recruits who refused either to leave the trains or to pay fare, and the military promptly took charge of these also. There were nearly 100 of these.

Before leaving Miles City the authorities had warrants sworn out for the arrest of General Hogan, his lieutenant, Pat Kenney, Conductors Smith and Wiley, Engineer Cleveland and Fireman Reed, and 10 others, charged with grand larceny in stealing a box of tools and a can of coal. A further charge of burglary will be added to-day by entering against them as soon as the government reaches them. The commonwealers are still here and will be here until orders are received from the secretary of war.

With Coxey's Own.

HYATTSTOWN, Md., April 27.—Coxey and his followers marched out of Frederick this morning with flying colors and made the event quite blithe. The sky was as soft as in June, and the tops of the Blue Ridge mountains cut the horizon in vigorous blue waves that were distinct. The old town turned out to see the start. Men, women and children flocked on the streets and at the camp ground. The inspiring martial drum corps of Frederick, with clashes and cornets added to the fifes and drums, accompanied the commonwealers on their start. Then again the air resounded to the cheers of commune E so agitated the air that there was another exciting if not blithesome element added to the event of starting.

To be sure Coxey's own was left in the Frederick jail, but this caused no depression. Again there were going along nine of the stoutest confederate men on the whole line of march, who participated in the ablest shellmen in the land. Thus the army was assured of expert if not desireable attendants.

The trail lay southward over the Georgetown turnpike, and the tramp of 11 miles from Frederick to this little hamlet was over the best of the trail. The inspirited commonwealers, Sheriff Zimmerman of Frederick county, who went out to meet the army with 30 heavily armed deputies, made a concession to the peaceful situation and started to show the army out of the county with only 10 deputies.

At the little knolls of houses that is called Urbana the wealers stopped for lunch. They reached here about 2 o'clock and went into camp in the bend of a little mountain stream in the valley. The exhibition canvas was set upon edge and thus corralled the Coxeyites. The men came outside soon, however, and scattered over the hillsides in the valley. The wives and children of the army of the points of observation, and any train ran in opposition to such a concession to the peaceful situation and started to show the army out of the county with only 10 deputies.

SOCIABLE AT THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

"Questions and Answers" Brought About Much Sociability.

A very pleasant time was had by all who attended the sociable of the Y. P. S. C. E. in the Congregational church last night. There were about 100 persons present. During the first part of the evening a musical programme was rendered which consisted of a piano solo, by Miss Lula Jenkens; a banjo solo, by Miss Capitola Conover; and a piano solo, by J. V. Beekman, Jr. After this was rendered a season of general sociability began. This was promoted by the game of "questions and answers." As each person entered the door a slip of paper was handed them with either a question or answer written on it.

The object of this was to get the one who held the question in his hand the one holding the answer, and in this way a general feeling of sociability was brought about.

After all the answers had been found, refreshments were served.

The young lady who deserves much praise for the efforts to make the affair a success and who certainly succeeded was Miss Mary Chase, she having had charge of the whole affair. During the evening many prominent members of other churches were present.

TUXEDO.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. James Neal of this city is visiting relatives in Clinton, N. J.

Mr. Levi Hetfield of Madison avenue is recovering from his recent illness.

Mrs. Joseph Powlison, of Grandview avenue, spent last week in Plucksamin.

Mr. Broadway of La Grande avenue, yesterday, bought a handsome road horse at Montclair.

Mr. E. B. Clark, formerly a resident of Waynewood place, is now residing on Crescent avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Nolan of Yonkers visited Mr. Nolan's parents on Manning avenue yesterday.

Mrs Sarah Hildebrand of Glen Garden is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry Van Middlesworth of 110 Liberty street.

Miss Lillie Bowers has just returned home from the bedside of her sick sister, Mrs. Coddington, at Plainfield.—Clinton Democrat.

Mrs. Frank Vanderhoof of West Front street returned yesterday from Newark, where she has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Townley.

The Rev. Mr. Krueger of Bloomfield will occupy the pulpit of the German Reformed church, on Craig place, tomorrow evening.

Theo. Smith of East Second street treated his friends to a German Carp supper at eight o'clock last evening. The fish was the fourteen pounder he speared the night before.

Mr. H. D Christman of New York has rented a house on Rockview avenue, belonging to Mrs. Curtis of Brookline, Mass. Mr. Christman secured the place through Bulford's real estate agency.

As Judge Coddington had not returned from Washington, D. C., this morning, the city court cases were postponed. The Judge, it is understood, is at the Capitol in the interests of Mr. John M. Hetfield, the candidate for postmaster.

Twelve years ago there was no more promising young man in Plainfield than Charles Godfried Solon, when he, at twenty-four years old, contracted the measles. This developed into consumption, as is usually the case, the physicians say, when one does not have the disease until they have reached the years of maturity. The young man's father was a prominent coal merchant here. He retired a few years ago. After finding that the physicians here were unable to cope with the disease, and cure his son, he sent him by their advice to Denver, in the hope that the change of climate might do him some good. He got no better, and within a reasonable time was brought home. In his father's opinion it would have been better if he had not gone there at all. On his return the most careful and persistent efforts were made to save him. It was a long battle for life, but after a twelve years' struggle, he has succumbed to the inevitable and is to-day one of the great majority. So closely has he been confined to his father's home though feebleness from the disease that some of Mr. Guion's most intimate friends did not even know that he had a son.

Meeting of the Amalgamated Engineers.

The local branch of the amalgamated Society of Engineers met in the Sons of Temperance rooms, last evening, with president Wm. Jessot in the chair. The question of Federation labor was talked over at length, and it was decided to send representatives to the State and National conventions. The society has 51 members, and a meeting is held every two weeks. Thomas Chamberlain is the treasurer of the society and Geo. Radford secretary.

Ran Into a Man, and Then Into a Horse.

"Sam" Bedden was run into and knocked down by Bicyclist Petsis on Park avenue at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. "Sam" was somewhat injured. The bicyclist fell off his wheel after steering into John Morton's horse in his efforts to keep his seat after colliding with Mr. Bedden.

AN OLD MAN RUN OVER.

Knocked Down while Crossing North Avenue.

An old man named Ball, who lives on Watchung avenue, was run over by a buggy, while crossing North avenue, at about 5.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Ball is lame and was walking with the aid of a cane and crutch. The horse struck him, knocking him down, and the wheels passed over his shoulders.

The occupant is understood to have been Miss Ross.

News from the West End.

The work of grading Grant avenue is being pushed along rapidly.

Mr. George Firstbrook of Essex street will spend to-morrow in Philadelphia.

The West End Minstrel troupe is talking of giving a show in Paterson on May 9th.

The Kings Daughters of Hope chapel are making extra preparations for their entertainment next Thursday night.

Mr. Alex Muir of Fourth street caught a carp in the New Market pond last night that tipped the scales at 10 pounds.

Mr. Abraham Wilde, of the Hope Chapel League of Young Men, made a score of 245 on the chapel alleys Thursday night in a practice game.

TUXEDO.

The Men Will Look After All the Details.

The bachelors of the Monroe avenue chapel have made up their minds to do something in return for the many good times afforded them by attending entertainments arranged by the ladies, and have decided to give a bachelors' entertainment in the chapel on May 23d. The male sex will do all the work of preparing the refreshments and serving them.

The men have a good start in securing good music for the evening, in the person of Mr. Van Epa. He will render several solos during the evening.

A Girl of Sixteen Injured by a Bad Sidewalk.

Miss Virginia Adelman of Grant avenue while passing along Grant avenue underneath the Central Railroad bridge, met with an accident which might have been serious, and was caused by the large hole in the sidewalk to which attention has been called by THE NEWS. As it was, Miss Adelman was severely bruised, but no bones were broken. It would be well for the Street Commissioner to see that the proper authorities have the matter attended to at once, as it is dangerous for pedestrians, especially at night.

Plainfield's Progressive People.

It is interesting to note in comparing the map of the City made by the old firm of J. R. & F. A. Dunham in 1878 with City Engineer F. A. Dunham's new atlas of the city and borough, the changes and improvements that have been made in the last 16 years.

Mr. Dunham informs us that even during the time between the completion of the original plans for the present map and the final reading of the proofs of the same more than 60 new houses were erected in the city and borough.

Special Meeting of School District No. 38.

A [special] meeting of the voters of school district No. 38 will be held in the North Plainfield School Building, on Somerset street, on Tuesday evening, May 8th, for the purpose of authorizing the trustees to provide for fuel, books and other school supplies, and to supply the same free, and a vote for a special tax to buy the same. It is thought that about $1,000 will be needed for this purposes.

The Arc Light Wouldn't Burn.

The large arc light hanging at the west end of the North avenue station refused to burn last night. This left that end of the depot entirely in darkness except for the light from the telegraph office situated at that end of the depot. The night operator was unable to see the number of engines which passed. A lineman was unable to find the break in the circuit and the small incandescent light was used in place of the arc light.

Dance at the Park Club.

The third formal dance of the season of the Park Club took place at the Club house last night. The attendance was most as large as at the previous events of this kind. The music was furnished by "The Mendelssohn Trio" of New York. The instruments played were piano, violin and 'cello.

The receiving patronesses were Mr. George F. Dupee and Mrs. James Scott.

Reception at Vincent Chapel.

The reception at Vincent chapel last night tendered to the senior classes of the Sunday school proved a success in its prime object—that of promoting sociability. During the evening Miss Mitchell of Philadelphia delighted all present by her vocal solos.

Three Cocks Killed in a Cock Fight.

There was a cocking main last night near this city between New Brunswick and Plainfield birds. Three Plainfield cocks were killed in the fight, and the New Brunswickers took home with them all the others.

DANCE OF THE FIREMEN:

Reception Tendered to the Ladies who Assisted in the Fair.

Engine Company, No. 2, gave a reception and dance last night to the ladies who assisted them in their recent fair. The dance was held in Central Hall and the music was furnished by Prof. Gutman. Admission was by invitation and about 100 couples attended and danced until early morning. Supper was served at midnight. Those who had the affair in charge were: General Director, William Chamberlain; floor manager, Frank Band; assistant floor manager, William Townley; floor committee, B. B. Rogers, Garrett Dreir, Theo. Smith, Harry Connett.

Committee of Arrangements—William Chamberlain, chairman; W. S. Marsh, Jas. Dawe, C. J. Newman and Frank Band.

Reception Committee—Frank Schuck, A. T. Marsh, Robert Eick, Charles Smith, Jacob Benner and H. C. Wilson.

BREVITIES.

—Noah Pike's leaflet, entitled That Paper, made its appearance to-day.

—Several fishing parties were seen wading through the waters of stony brook spearing fish last night.

—One of Barnum and Bailey's advance cars passed through this city going east last night. It was coupled to the 5.49 train.

—As a mixed train passed west through this city late last night it was noticed that the floor of a flat car on the train was on fire.

—George Cook, for a long time connected with the American steam laundry in this city, has started a similar establishment in Perth Amboy.

—The next game of the series between the Board of Trade and Catholic Young Men's Lyceum teams will be rolled on Tuesday evening, May 8th.

—Mr. McCorkle was showing some visitors over the house. Arriving at the nursery he remarked, "This, gentlemen, is the bawfroom."—Tit Bits.

—Rudolph Spiegel, the new proprietor of the Crescent Hotel, has an advertisement in another column, and calls attention to specialties offered to-day free of charge.

—The music to be rendered by the male choir of the Y. M. C. A. at the Association rooms, to-morrow at 4.15 p. m., will be of an especially interesting character.

—A full choral vesper will be sung in Grace church, Seventh and Sycamore streets, to-morrow, at 7.45 p. m. Sermon by Rev. Henry C. Leventzel, rector of St. Luke's church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

—The Whist Committee of the Park Club announce a whist meeting of ladies and gentlemen, Tuesday evening, May 1st. Encouraged by the successful meeting of April 17th, they expect a large attendance at the next one referred to.

—The Colored Commandery of the K. T. did not meet last evening, as the janitor of their rooms in the Vermeule building could not be found. About a dozen of the members waited around the door until ten o'clock, but the janitor did not materialize.

Contest Between Machinists.

Bowlers from the Potter and Scott Press Works contested in a match game on Woodland alleys last night. The Potter Press Works team won by the following score:

A Coal Train Parts.

A coal train while passing through this city, going west, about nine o'clock last night, parted near the Church street crossing.

The engineer thing he had all his train "pulled out" at a tremendous speed, leaving the other half of the train running slowly behind. When the engineer got almost to Dunellen he discovered the break and slowly backed up for the other half.

The two parts were coupled together again near Madison avenue.

The Horse and Engine Met.

Plainfielders who rode to New York on the train leaving here at 10.04 yesterday were very much frightened by being thrown from their seats by the sudden stopping of the train at Garwood. When they looked out of the car window they saw the cause of it all. A horse stood with its head against the engine. The engineer had stopped his train and saved a serious accident. The driver of the horse was so frightened he hardly had sense enough left to back the animal off the track.

The Musical Programme for "The Gray Mare."

Visitors from New Brunswick.

Cyrus Voorhees and Jacob Welby drove over from New Brunswick with their wives, yesterday afternoon, and supperred at the City Hotel. They came here to witness the changing of the tally-ho horses. At New Brunswick, Mr. Welby said, the four-in-hand was changed in one minute and three seconds. The change here, yesterday was made in a minute and a half. There was a large crowd waiting to see the tally-ho go through.

Entertained His Scholars.

Mr. Fred Newman of West Sixth street gave a supper to his Sunday-school class of Hope Chapel at his home Wednesday evening. Games were played during the evening and the party broke up about eleven o'clock. The winners in the games were John Young, Charles Hartfellow and Louis Tallamy, Mr. Fred Newman and Miss Newman. Mr. Newman is very much liked by his scholars and it gave him great pleasure to have them present at his home.

More Contests Decided Upon.

The General Fair Committee, of Paugh Cough Naugh Sinque Tribe comprising Messrs. V. W. Nash, F. X. Schoonmaker, Elmer Neal, W. K. McClure, E. M. Odam, John H. Blimm and W. S Bullock met last night. It was decided to open contests for a boy's bicycle, a girl's bicycle and a lady's gold watch.

Engine Company No. 2's New Carpet.

Last Saturday Engine Company No. 2 bought a new velvet Brussels carpet. It was laid in the parlor of their apartments yesterday, and the members claim it is the finest carpet in any engine house parlor in the city.

PRETTY OUTING COSTUMES.

Duck Suits Will Be Much Worn the Coming Season.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Duck suits are being much worn. Last year plain white, and black and white, and blue and white stripes were almost the only varieties to be found, but this season there are many more kinds. The suit pictured here usually made up with a plain skirt and a close fitting Eton jacket or short blazer and are trimmed with braid of various sorts or rows of stitching. They are very useful, as the goods have subsided enough not to shrink after one washing, and yet may be washed as frequently as is necessary and come forth from the ordeal as good as new. A white duck suit is very pretty worn over a blouse of delicately tinted wash silk. White nainsook blouses are also worn, having frillings embroidered with scarlet, lavender, blue or yellow. These waists are belted in, and the lower part does not show below the girdle. They are made with and without yokes, but usually have a ruffle down the front. Standing collars are more used than they were last year, when turn back collars and cuffs prevailed. Shirt waists are also seen finished exactly like men's shirts and stiffly starched.

While belts are worn this season and have most new work done in sterling silver and silver and gold plate. These clasps may also be obtained separately and come in some exceeding of a buckle, hook and slide. Sometimes a small buckle for the neck is included. Woven silk and canvas belts come in numerous shades, and when a belt is desired to harmonize the belt match the gown the firm bodied belting may be covered with a piece of the goods. This is a better plan than that of making a belt of over lining material, as the latter is apt to lose its stiffness and will down into an untidy string.

The picture is given of a duck jacket intended to form part of a costume. It fits closely behind, but is straight in front, and is ornamented with two rows of large buttons. The gigot sleeves have pointed cuffs, and the standing collar is flaring. The jacket is conspicuous through the absence of revers, which are usually a prominent feature. It is finished with rows of stitching. JUDIC CROLLEY.

GUESTS FOUGHT FIRE.

Many Persons Burned at a Conflagration in the Adirondacks.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., April 28.—The Mountain View House at Bloomingdale, the largest of the resort in the Adirondacks, was completely destroyed by fire. The house was filled with guests, mostly New York people, but all escaped without harm or loss of baggage. A strong wind blew the flames about the steeple of the Methodist church and other buildings directly opposite, but the curious throngs occupied by city people were on fire at the same time, but none of them was destroyed.

A bucket brigade of several hundred men, guests and employes, formed on the roof and saved the entire town from destruction. The guests are safely lodged at the Crystal Springs House and at cottages in the vicinity. The loss is estimated at $100,000. Many were severely burned, and it is feared that in some cases the burns will prove serious.

Record Breaking Train.

NEW YORK, April 28.—A record breaking train arrived at the Pennsylvania railroad depot in Jersey City. It started from Jacksonville, Fla., on Friday morning, making the run over the road of the Florida Central and Peninsular, the Richmond and Danville and the Pennsylvania railroads in the unprecedented time of 24 hours and 25 minutes. The 1,000 miles were covered at an average rate of 41 miles an hour, which shows a rate of speed of 58 seconds to the mile.

A DISCREPANCY.

Between Councilman Frost's Memory and Our Reporter's Note Book Being Out Some Interesting Facts.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In your issue of the 20th you have reported me as saying that "Plainfield paid 20 per cent. more for its gas than any city in the United States." What I did say was that "Plainfield paid more for its gas than 70 per cent. of the cities of the United States," quite a different statement, and I will be obliged if you will make the correction. I challenge the Plainfield Gas Company to disprove this statement.

In a list of 62 cities varying in population from 10,700 to 1,200,000, from which statistics were obtained recently, one city pays 32 cents per 1,000 feet for both city and private consumption; two cities pay eighty cents; two cities pay 62; one city, (Houston, Texas), pays 45; the rest vary from 91 to $1.80, most of them being under $1.50; one city is charged 70 cents for city use and $1.50 for private consumers. One of the latest cities to investigate the relative cost of electric arc lighting under public and private ownership is Evansville, Ind., a city with a population of 50,756 by the last census. The investigation was made by the Mayor and Board of Public Works and the results were given to the public last month. The conclusions reached were:

1. "That Evansville is now paying over 60 per cent. more for her street lighting than she ought to.

2. That 55 cities doing their own lighting pronounced the same a complete success, and we have ascertained the average cost of arc lights per year to be $67.80.

3. That cities lighted by private contract are paying on an average per light per annum $114.48.

4. That our city is very poorly lighted and should have about double the lights which she now has.

5. That the entire cost of building an electric lighting plant for our city, with 200 lights, would not exceed $75,000, and the annual cost of maintaining such a plant in the city would not exceed $60 per lamp per annum, or a total sum of $17,000 annually.

And should commercial lighting be added, the revenues received therefrom would still further reduce the operating expenses of the plant.

The experience of cities owning their own electric and gas plants is that the same can be maintained and operated far more cheaply than the same is done by private companies.

Your committee has also ascertained that municipal ownership of all plants, such as water-works, street railways, lighting and heating generally requiring franchises from the public should in the opinion of the best thinkers of the age, be, and ere matured municipal government, be owned by the public, instead of by private corporations. One of the most glaring mistakes now chargeable against all American cities of the present day is that of granting "vested rights" or valuable franchises of every description to private corporations and companies. Time and time again the history of these and other cities, is now suffering from this kind of folly, committed in the past."

As the gas and electricity furnished It is desired to have the belt match the gown the firm bodied belting may be covered with a piece of the goods. This is a better plan than that of making a belt of over lining material, as the latter is apt to lose its stiffness and will down into an untidy string.

BLOODSHED AT TOLUCA.

Three Men Shot as the Result of the Miners' Movements.

THE MOB WENT HOME, THOUGH

Lieutenant Governor Gill Persuaded Them to Go and Sent Them Back on a Train. Starving Mob In a Michigan Town That Means Mischief.

TOLUCA, Ills., April 28.—When Lieutenant Governor Gill was introduced to the assemblage of 7,000 miners, he opened his address by saying that the telegram he had received from Sheriff Lenz and also the reports he had sent in answer to them, giving it as his opinion that the ordering out of the militia was unnecessary. He said he knew that the situation was not as serious as the sheriff had represented it to be, and he further said that he had every confidence in the miners not making a hostile demonstration.

President Crawford urged the Toluca men to join the strike and march to the front and be men, as did also Vice President James W. Murray.

After the speaking a motion was carried requesting all the miners not residents here to immediately depart from the city and allow the Toluca men to settle among themselves about joining the movement.

Lieutenant Governor Gill and Mr. Devlin telegraphed for a special train to take the miners to their respective homes as soon as the sheriff decided had been reached, and the men were in a very congenial mood when they learned that they were not to march home.

The trouble feared in this city during the afternoon, and the army boarded the 20 flat cars bound for Streator, going thence to La Salle and Spring Valley. The people of this city left much relieved at the departure of the men, and the excitement died down. The Toluca miners at once called a meeting to decide upon the question of returning to work. Some of the colored men said on the streets that they were willing to take out their tools if the whites would. Mr. Devlin said that if his miners quit he would import negroes from Florida to work in the mines. If the miners here do not return to work and any such action will be taken, trouble will come.

Rioting broke out here late in the evening, and the first blood was shed, owing to the discharge of several miners to work. Three men were wounded before the deputies could reach the scene of the trouble. The fighting lasted not more than two minutes. Several pistols were fired without other effect than to attract a crowd of miners who had been carousing in the neighboring saloons and dance halls.

Desperate Men Demand Bread.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., April 28.—Four hundred men, chiefly Italians, paraded the streets here behind a red flag demanding bread. They marched to the high school grounds, where a brief conference had men working, and stopped them. At a meeting the miners unanimously voted to favor a resolution ordering Poor Commissioner Hamilton to feed the men for two hours. The governor was notified by telegraph of the proceedings.

Poor Commissioner McClintock handed his resignation to Chairman McNaughton of the county board. Several hundred idle workmen had met and unanimously passed a resolution giving him two hours to leave the city or suffer the consequences. Every one who marched through the streets with a red flag was given a poor commission order for $2, good at the store, and 300 orders were issued to married men, representing a total number in families of 1,000. Fully as many more orders will be issued.

Single men cannot get orders and are getting boisterous. Unless outside assistance arrives soon serious trouble is bound to occur. A committee left here last night for Lansing to appeal to the governor. Conservative estimates place the number in the city without work, a solitary thing in the house to eat at 2,500.

Many pathetic instances come under observation. Fully 600 men gathered last night in a building in Chapin, and the cause will be asked to give immediate aid to prevent starvation. The assistance given yesterday will tide them over two days, but other help must be had by Monday or Iron Mountain will be the scene of riots and possibly bloodshed. The men are mostly Italians and Austrians, with a sprinkling of Cornish and Austrians.

Great Northern Strike.

ST. PAUL, April 28.—When asked for a statement of the situation after the strike was declared on the entire Great Northern system, President Dehs of the union said that a representative of each class of employes was still in the city to watch developments and report to headquarters.

The conference with Mr. Hill, he said, was carried on pleasantly, but without the effect of bringing them any closer together. "As near as I could be by means of a long men to run the road, I believe Mr. Hill has been misinformed by his own friends, who are misleading him by false reports," he said. "Strict orders have been issued that all the strikers along the line stay in their homes and refrain from any interference with the trains, but the company may attempt to move. If any violence is attempted or any injury is done to the property of the company, it will be in direct violation of the strict orders of the committee. But the trains will not run simply because the company can't get men to handle them."

The Tennessee Strikers.

JELLICO, Tenn., April 28.—The unemployed and striking miners of the Jellico region have issued a call for a public meeting to be held next Sunday for the organization of a Cooper division. The meeting effort is being made to get Coal Creek miners to come, but they still refuse. The local miners have been in favor of forcing the Coal Creek men to lay down their picks, and if they do not come out on May 1 trouble may be looked for.

Black Coal Miners Stay Out.

BRAZIL, Ind., April 28.—The block coal miners' committee met and operators bluntly refused to accept their proposition to pay 80 cents per ton until the general strike was settled. Most of the miners are out, though the men claim that those wanting to continue work until May 1 are not prohibited from doing so. The intimidations miners are still out and threaten violence to the men who continue to work.

Coal Strikers Evicted.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 28.—The first eviction suits in the history of the strike have been issued, and 11 strikers were thrown out on the highway to-day. In the strike of 1891 evictions were accompanied with bloodshed and riot. The strikers are now in charge of every plant from Connellsville to Fairchance except at Oliver, where another attempt is being made to run.

CHAPTER XI.

As before stated, Ike Baxter belonged to the class known at that time and still referred to as "poor whites." Through the efforts of his wife he had managed to hold onto a small farm just outside of Winchester, left him by his father, but it is doubtful if her arguments would have carried the day had any one made a cash offer for the few acres. While Ike always referred to himself as broken down by hard work, about five days out of every week had been spent tramping around the country with his gun or discussing "Yankees" and "niggers" in the village barrooms with others of his ilk. According to him, no line of argument, however, a martyr. Ill luck had always followed him, even to the birth and death of triplets.

Mrs. Baxter also had a constitutional and ready made grievance. If she had been allowed to have her way about things, she always argued, they would long ago have been rich and owned niggers. "Yes, ash, real niggers and mo' or fewer $70 mewels."

Ike Baxter had also been granted a furlough, and according to the stories he told after reaching home the battle of Bull Run would not have been a victory without him. When anything was said about Kenton, he was prompt in replying:

"Durn the Yankee! But we uns has got our eyes open now, and he un can't play us no mo' tricks!"

He was so outspoken in his language, and his language was so bitter that Lawyer Williams and others were given an inkling of the true state of affairs. The lawyer found opportunity to inquire of Ike:

"Didn't my nephew enlist of his own accord, and is there a man in the company who has exhibited more bravery and won more of a reputation?"

"What did he un rush in and rally at Bull Run for beb' Duke Wyle could git thar?" demanded Ike in reply. "He un just wanted to show off and make believe. And isn't he un givin us away to the Yanks all the time? And isn't he un talkin 'bout Gineral Jackson and holdin his head above us? And if he un gits the chance won't he un give up our hull army to Gineral McClellan? Oh, we uns has our eyes open fur him!"

Mrs. Baxter had got the idea from Ike's letters that he had not only won a crown of fame under fire, but was holding the whole Federal army in check. She could read and write, but very poorly. She had picked up most of her information and all her military terms from others, scarcely less ignorant. When Ike appeared in sight down the road, she ran to meet him and welcomed him with:

"Hurrah fur Gineral Ike Baxter, who fit and fit till the Yankees dun run away!"

"Don't yo' un know nothin?" angrily demanded Ike as he came nearer.

"Didn't yo' un fit and fit?"

"Of co'se I fit, but yo' needn't gab it all over Virginny and make other folks jealous!"

"What's yo'r stripes?" she asked.

"What stripes?"

"On yo'r arms—yo'r gineral stripes?"

"I hain't no gineral!"

"Yo' hain't? Why, I thought yo' was boss of the hull army! What's the matter yo' hain't no gineral?"

"What's the matter yo' hain't got no sense in yo'r head?"

"But yo' un's a corporal!"

"No."

"A major?"

"No."

"A leftenant?"

"No."

"Hain't yo' un nothin but jest common folks?" she persisted.

"No."

"Didn't I allus say yo' un had no speech about yo', and that's why we was allus pore and low down?" she bitterly exclaimed as they passed into the house. "Ike Baxter, yo' hain't shucks! You un's low down, and yo' like to stay right thar! Everybody else is comin home with gineral's and corporal's and major's stripes on thar sleeves, but yo' has dun let 'em walk yo' inter the mud and hain't got no specrit to resent it! If I'd gone down thar, I'd 'a' come back as big as anybody! I've dun told everybody yo' un was a gineral, and how—now yo's only jest common!"

Mrs. Baxter sat down and wept and used her apron for a handkerchief. Ike had expected just such a reception, and he had a plan to develop at the proper time. While she continued to weep he helped himself to a bite to eat from the cupboard and maintained silence.

"And why didn't they make a gineral of yo'?" asked Mrs. Baxter after about 10 minutes.

"If yo' un dun had any sense in yo' head, I could tell yo'," he sullenly replied.

"Sense! Sense! If I hain't got sense, who has? If it hadn't bin fur my sense, we uns would hav bin right down to tater skins y'ars ago! It's my sense that has kept us outer the poorhouse and let us hold our heads up with the best of 'em! Leastwise I've allus held my head up, even if yo' hain't!"

"It's this way," said Ike as he continued to eat and reflect. "It's corporal, sergeant, orderly sergeant, leftenant, captain, major, kurnel and gineral. Takes a heap o' time to git up thar! Everybody has got to begin way down."

"But yo's not even a corp—corporal yit!" she exclaimed as one eye filled with tears of disappointment.

"And what's the reason I hain't? Do yo' un remember that Yankee lawyer who lived yere—feller named Kenton?"

"Seems like I did."

"He un's to blame. Tried to git us all captur'd at Bull Run. Tried to put all the officers down. Got in with Gineral Jackson and talked agin us, particklarly me. Reckon he un said a heap 'bout yo', too, while he un was at it. If it hadn't bin fur he un, I'd hev had stripes on my arms—heaps o' stripes—and yo'd bin proud o' me! It's just he un that keeps me down. We all hate he un, but him's got Gineral Jackson on his side."

"The pesky varmint!" she gasped, with uplifted hands. "He un's all to blame then?"

"All to blame."

"Talked about me to Gineral Jackson! What could he un say?"

"Dunno, but I reckon he un went on 'bout yo'r gwine b'arfut to church and dippin snuff and gaddin 'bout and complainin. He un rubbed it in on both of us powerful hard, most likely. Befo' that Gineral Jackson was as good as pie to me, but afterward he un wouldn't dun notice me 'tall!"

"Then—then it's the Yankee who dun keeps yo' all back?" she asked after taking a couple of minutes for reflection.

"Jest he un alone," answered Ike as he finished his snack.

"And yo' all hain't got spunk nuff to drive he un out! Ike Baxter, yo' un allus did dun let folks walk yo' inter the mud, but I didn't reckon it was as bad as this! Fur shame on yo'!"

"How's we all to drive he un when Gineral Jackson is in the way?" asked

"Shoo, how you talk!"

Ike. "If I never git to be a gineral, it's he un's fault. If I git killed or captur'd, it's the same. Duke Wyle would make me sergeant tomorrer but fur that dod blasted Yank!"

"Then if yo' doan' pay him out I will!" exclaimed Mrs. Baxter as she rose up with a look of determination on her face.

That's what Ike was waiting to hear. He was now ready to develop the little plan sketched out in Captain Wyle's tent before leaving camp.

"I reckon yo' kin do it better'n we all if yo' want to try," he finally said. "Yo' know them stuck up Percys in town, of co'se?"

"Of co'se."

"He un's in luv with the gal."

"I heard that yisterday."

"If we all could brek it up, it would flatten he un out. Jest think of a southern gal luvin a reg'lar Yankee spy, and probably goin to marry him, when she could hev Duke Wyle!"

"Shoo, how you talk!"

"And if we all could flatten him out I'd soon be a gineral and prance around on a hoss," continued Ike. "Drat him, but he talked about yo' to Gineral Jackson, and that's what hurts me mo' than t'other!"

"How kin I flatten him out?" she asked, ready to begin work at once.

Ike slowly lighted his pipe and sat down on the doorstep and made room for her beside him. He kept her waiting for another minute and then unfolded his plan. She listened patiently until he was through and then pointed out the obstacles here and there. He reviewed the case and explained how everything was to be overcome. Although an ignorant woman, she had a good deal of natural shrewdness in her composition, and after the plan had been gone over in detail for the third or fourth time she said:

"I'll try it anyhow. I hev allys dun hated Yanks like pizen, and that Percy gal is jest too stuck up fur anything! Might do her a heap o' good to come down a few pegs! If I flatten he un out, that will make yo' a gineral?"

"I reckon."

"And yo'll ride around on a critter and w'ar a cocked hat?"

"Yes."

"And buy me two new kaliker dresses, a bonnet, a pa'r of shoes, a—a"——

"Yo'll jest be richness and wealth and look like a queen!" said Ike as she hesitated.

"Then I'll do it if I hev to walk through fire, and p'raps I'll ride around on a critter too!"

Mrs. Lease Has Heart Disease.

RICHMOND, Ind., April 28.—Mrs. Mary E. Lease, the Kansas reformer, who spoke here in company with Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, was taken suddenly ill at her hotel, and it was thought for awhile that she was dying. A physician revived her and pronounced it heart disease.

Portugal Returns Refugees.

BUENOS AYRES, April 28.—Portugal has acceded to the demands of the Argentine Republic regarding the return to Argentine territory of the Brazilian insurgents who were captured by boats from the Portuguese warships while seeking to escape from those vessels here.

Miss Gilmartin's Funeral.

CINCINNATI, April 28.—Miss Gilmartin, who was killed by Father O'Grady, was buried in St. Joseph's cemetery after mass at the cathedral. Her brother, Father Gilmartin of Chicago, and another brother, John, from Emmettsburg, Md., were present.

Big Game of Whist.

CHICAGO, April 28.—The biggest match game of whist ever played in the world will be played in the drillroom in the Masonic temple tonight between the Chicago Whist club and all the rest of Illinois. There are not less than 400 players.

GREECE AGAIN SHAKEN.

Two Cities Entirely Destroyed and Many Lives Probably Lost.

ATHENS, April 28.—The country had hardly begun to calm down after the frequent earthquakes before another shock has wrought death and destruction in many parts of Greece. Late last night, during the usual Friday procession in the cathedral heroic violent shock occurred that seemingly shook the building to its very foundations. The duration of the shock was 15 seconds. The cathedral was crowded with devotees, who were on the verge of a panic when the shock began.

M. Houphides, minister of the interior, who only a few days ago returned from Chalcis and other places damaged by the previous shocks, hurried to the central telegraph office to get information as to the extent of the earthquake. He learned that it had been felt throughout the country, and that immense damage had been done. The shock was felt with the greatest severity at Thebes and Atalanta, both of which places were extensively damaged by the last shock. Both the cities were completely destroyed, not a single house being left standing. Incalculable damage was also done at Lamia, Larissa, Volo, Chalcis and Patras.

At Lamia the walls of the prison fell down, and many of the uninjured prisoners made their escape in the frightful confusion prevailing. There is little doubt, though the telegrams thus far received make no mention of the fact, that there has been great loss of life.

Eveland Gets Twenty Years.

CORNING, N. Y., April 28.—In the case of Allie Eveland, on trial here for the murder of his father in October last, the jury filed in at 12:23 o'clock this morning and rendered a verdict of manslaughter in the first degree. Justice Ramsey then sentenced the prisoner to 20 years in Auburn prison.

Armstrong's Sudden Death.

ST. LOUIS, April 28.—Benjamin Armstrong, widely known as a sporting writer, dropped dead here of heart disease. Armstrong was getting off a street car when a horseman rode upon him suddenly, and the shock given and his effort to get out of the way precipitated the fatal attack.

SENATORS PLAY BLUFF.

Tariff Debate Took an Interesting and Exciting Turn.

DEMOCRATS CHALLENGED TO VOTE.

First Lindsay Bluffed and Was Called by Aldrich. Who Was Joined In Turn by Harris—A Short and Hasty Conference on the Floor of the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—It was a field day in the senate. There were maneuvering, marching, clashing and rapid firing. The bugle notes of defiance had sounded on both sides. The battle flags waved in the senate over the heads of chieftains of tariff reform and protection. Hostilities did not actually begin, but it was apparent that there was no intention that they should begin. There were counter marching, retreats and a quick reforming of lines, leaving the contesting armies within the same fortifications and camping on the same grounds as before.

The news of the lively passage at arms going on spread rapidly, and a number of representatives from the other end of the capitol hastened over to make eager inquiries. Belated newspaper men came hurrying excitedly toward the capitol from up town, and the wires from the senate telegraph office were quickly loaded with widely varying opinions as to whether there was to be a vote of the tariff bill immediately or not.

The discussion was started by the senior senator from Ohio, Mr. Sherman. It was not his intention to create a disturbance when he injected a remark into the speech of Senator Lindsay of Kentucky.

The junior senator from Ohio has been enjoying considerable notoriety by his recent assertion that "a tariff bill had been agreed upon by the Democratic leaders which would pass the senate," but it was not Senator Sherman's intention to again bring Ohio prominently to the front.

Aldrich Drops the Gloves.

Sherman's remark was followed by Mr. Aldrich, who is the recognized leader of the Republicans in the tariff fight, and in the colloquy in which he engaged with Mr. Lindsay there developed the most interesting situation that has yet taken place during the tariff debate in the senate. Mr. Aldrich had pointed out the difference of opinion between the Democrats of the senate and intimated that they could not agree upon a tariff bill, to which Mr. Lindsay replied that if the Republicans would give them an opportunity they would soon show that they could agree.

Mr. Aldrich here started the senate by offering in behalf of the Republicans to vote at 3 o'clock on the bill as it came from the house. Mr. Lindsay skillfully parried the thrust by asking why they not vote upon the bill as reported by the senate finance committee?

Mr. Aldrich here became bold, but at the same time wary, in his use of language, and he asked Mr. Lindsay if the Democrats would vote on the bill as it now stood as the Kentucky senator was willing so far as he was concerned, but could not pledge the vote of his colleagues.

Mr. Aldrich demanded that Mr. Harris of Tennessee speak for the Democratic side and say whether or not the Democrats would vote on the bill as it now stood at 3 o'clock. The interest of senators and spectators in the gallery became intense.

All eyes centered upon the sturdy, white haired senator from Tennessee, but he did not reply. There were hurried consultations, and it was soon known that the defiance of the Republicans would be hurled back, and there was an air of expectancy when Mr. Lindsay neared the end of his speech. When he finished, Mr. Harris was on his feet immediately, and although others sought the floor he was recognized. With the official report of the colloquy between Senators Lindsay and Aldrich in his hand he read the proposition, as he said, of the senator from Rhode Island—first, to vote on the bill as it came from the house, and then to vote on the bill as it was reported to the senate by the finance committee at 3 o'clock. Mr. Lindsay had disclaimed any authority to speak for his party on these propositions, and Mr. Aldrich said he would like to hear from the senator from Tennessee (Harris), who had charge of the bill.

As Mr. Harris read the report of the debate the interest and anticipation became intense, and visitors in the gallery and senators and members on the floor became wrought up to a high pitch of excitement.

Harris Returns the Defiance.

"Now," said Mr. Harris, "while I have not the vanity to assert that I represent the Democratic party, I may venture the senator from Rhode Island that so far as I am concerned, or so far as I can control the action of the majority of the senate, I will consent that at 3 o'clock we will proceed to vote on the amendments of the finance committee and then on the final passage of the bill. That can be done only by unanimous consent, and I now go further and ask for unanimous consent."

The Presiding Officer (Mr. Turpie)—Are there any objections?

Mr. Cullom—I object. [Democratic laughter.]

Senators Cullom and Aldrich were trying to gain recognition, and Mr. Aldrich was heard above the tumult and laughter to say that he wanted to address the senate.

The presiding officer told him somewhat tartly that he would recognize him after he had recognized the senator from Illinois (Mr. Cullom).

Mr. Cullom yielded to Mr. Aldrich, who said: "Mr. President, in the course of the remarks of the senator from Kentucky he asked the senate the question as to whether they would be willing to proceed to vote on the bill and pending amendments of the finance committee at 3 o'clock. It had no response on that side of the chamber."

"I tried to respond to the senator from Rhode Island," said Mr. Lindsay.

"I had no response to that inquiry, which was a direct and easily understood question," persisted Mr. Aldrich. "I did offer for this side of the chamber to take a vote on the bill as it came from the house without amendment. I received no response to that proposition. I then asked of the senators on the other side were ready to vote on the bill as it stood. I would suggest that I did not ask it of a Democratic caucus, and also, that the senator from Ohio (Mr. Brice) may understand better than would the senator from Tennessee, that I would not give an option of 30 days to answer. [Laughter.] I have been told since I asked that question, on credible authority, that last night the members of the finance committee representing that side of the chamber agreed to more than 300 amendments to the pending measure."

Mr. West said, "Name your authority."

Mr. Aldrich replied: "I think that the senator from Missouri found out the day before yesterday that he was not well advised as to what was going on on the Democratic side of the chamber. He may be as ignorant of what is now going on, and before the hour of 3 o'clock more than 100 more amendments may be made to the bill. Now, I do not intend to commit myself or any one else to a bill I know nothing about. If the senator will state a proposition to vote on the house bill at an early hour next week, I believe that proposition will be accepted."

"Will the acceptance of such a proposition exclude the offering of any amendments by the finance committee?" asked Senator White of California.

"Certainly," replied Mr. Aldrich.

"Does the senator think that a candid proposition?" asked Mr. White.

Aldrich Bluffed Down.

"I think it is perfectly candid," replied Mr. Aldrich.

"That sole thing seems curious," persisted Mr. White. "Here it is half past 1, and a proposition to vote on the bill at 3 o'clock is made, and he (Aldrich) is 'called' on that proposition—that is a phrase which perhaps he will understand [great laughter]—and he has declined to respond [great laughter], and now he proposes to fix on the next week to vote on the bill as it came from the house without amendments, and he thinks that a candid proposition. I do not."

"It is well understood that in the game to which the senator from California refers," asserted Mr. Aldrich, "that a man could easily decide to call a hand the next day always." [Laughter.]

"But a few minutes have transpired," replied Mr. White, "and in view of the dignified dilatoriness manifested on that side of the chamber there can be no claim of undue expenditure of time on this."

"Sufficient time has transpired to hold a Democratic caucus," said Mr. Aldrich.

Mr. Gray remarked that the proposition of Mr. Aldrich was agreed to by the senator from Tennessee (Mr. Harris) as soon as the senator from Kentucky had taken his seat.

"If the senator from Rhode Island chooses to back out of it, let him do it like a little man," said Mr. Harris deliberately. "You directly proposed to the senator from Kentucky to vote on the bill at 3 o'clock. I have your language here," (tapping the official report, which he had obtained from the official reporters). "The very moment the senator from Kentucky took his seat I addressed the chair, was recognized and accepted in good faith the proposition of the senator from Rhode Island, from which he seeks now rather ingloriously to retire." [Great Democratic laughter.]

"I made no proposition," declared Mr. Aldrich. "I simply asked a question. [Democratic cries of 'Oh, oh!'] I did not say for myself or for others on this side of the chamber that we would accept the measure. My proposition was to take a vote on the bill as it came from the house, without amendment. I then asked if the senators on the other side were ready to vote on the bill as it stood. I would suggest that I did not ask it of a Democratic caucus, and also, that the senator from Ohio (Mr. Brice) may understand better than would the senator from Tennessee, that I would not give an option of 30 days to answer. Mr. West said, "Name your authority."

Mr. Aldrich replied: "I think that the senator from Missouri found out the day

"Well," in that way is can be made palatable to those on the Democratic side to whom it is now unsavory."

Mr. Voorhees Denies.

Mr. Voorhees put the stamp of his denial on the statement that a new bill was in preparation. "So far as I know," he said, "there is not one word of authority or of truth for the statement that a new bill is in preparation, or that one will be offered here within the next few days or weeks or months. This bill will take the usual course of all bills and will be subject to consideration."

"The statement made by the senator from Rhode Island that last night in the finance committee 300 amendments or 100 or two or one were agreed upon or even discussed is untrue."

But the interest in the battle had disappeared, the day sounded a retreat, and the most dramatic incident of the senate tariff debate closed.

Two speeches were made during the day —one by Senator Lindsay in favor of the bill and the other by Senator Cullom against it, while Senator Dolph delivered another installment of his speech, begun several days ago. Again, just before the close of the day's session, when Senator Harris asked Senator Dolph how much more time his speech would occupy, Senator Chandler was on his feet to suggest in a mischievous way several points which he hoped the senator from Oregon would touch upon before concluding his speech. He sought to draw out Senator McPherson with a question, but the cross firing was cut short by Senator Harris' motion to proceed to executive session.

Pension Bills Passed.

Twenty-one private pension bills passed the house of the day's work in the house. Mr. Hepburn of Iowa, who has been harassing the Democratic side daily for a week to force action on these pension bills, finally succeeded through the aid of Mr. Pickler of South Dakota, who has been acting with him, and the bills were passed in 21 minutes. The beneficiary of one of the bills—by act of the 30th—is a blind, the widow of a soldier of the war of 1812—had died since her bill was reported from last Friday night or Saturday. When it was read and about to be placed upon its passage, Mr. Taylor of Indiana interrupted. "Never mind, Mr. Speaker," said he, "that bill can be laid aside. The old lady is dead." The members who had been chatting and laughing stopped.

There was a moment of silence. The relief for the old lady had been striving so long was at hand; but, like many other congressional claims, it came too late. The clerk passed and then went on reading the next bill. The remainder of the day was devoted to the consideration of private bills, but only one—that to reimburse Hiram Johnson and some other Tennessee war claimants—was disposed of, and it was recommitted for further investigation.

One other bill was taken up—a bill to refer an Alabama cotton claim to the court of claims. It met with strenuous opposition, however, on the ground that it would open the way to other cotton claims aggregating $120,000,000 and was not voted upon before the recess. The evening session was also devoted to pension bills.

Cleveland Will Visit Morgan.

BUZZARDS BAY, Conn., April 28.—It is authoritatively stated that President Cleveland will go to Huntington in a few weeks as the guest of United States Treasurer Morgan at the latter's summer residence. The president will remain with Treasurer Morgan for several weeks.

New York Fashionable Bonnet and Hats Made in Plainfield.

New York fashionable Bonnets and Hats are now being made in Plainfield, and ladies are no longer obliged to go to New York for these articles, greatly to their delight and convenience. Edsall's three New York Milliners are having a big run, although working under great disadvantages in their present quarters for want of room. They hope to a short time to be located in the new parlors in the Babcock Building, where greater facilities will be had. Those who have patronized the Millinery Department of Edsall's know its prices and styles, and success in the new enterprise is assured from the start. The patrons of Edsall's Millinery Department can rest assured that their neighbor's bonnet will not resemble theirs, for his milliners do not make two bonnets or hats alike. They are competent to create styles, and do not copy.

New England Industrials Cooped Up In Jail.

COXEY'S MEN WANT BETTER FOOD.

Hogan and His Army Still United States Prisoners, and Kelly's Disgruntled Followers Started on a Long Forced March. Chicago's Army May Not Start Tomorrow.

GAITHERSBURG, Md., April 28.—The journey of the army, though over good roads, was made more than usually weary because of the succession of high hills and deep valleys over which the roadway lay. A halt was made for 19 minutes' rest at Clarksburg, which is a little huddle of houses on either side of the old pike road. At Green Center, where lunch was had, Coxey again spoke. The tramp was resumed, and without incident the army marched in here and went into camp about three-quarters of a mile from the center of the hamlet.

There are rumblings of discontent in the army, and there are predictions that the army, though it seems scarcely probable, may go to pieces before Rockville is reached. Hardtack and coffee alone for two days is evidently causing some grumbling. There have been some happenings at Rockville. "Unknown" Smith is down there with about 25 followers, who left Coxey's ranks back on the trail when Coxey decreed Sabbath and re-settled Brotherly Love.

They are camped on the fair grounds at Rockville, whither Coxey marches his men today. "The Unknown" has printed white badges on his men thus: "Friendship, Cooperation and Peace. The Unknown Contingent of the Commonweal Army. We Favor All Laws That Bring Peace on Earth and Good Will to Men."

"The Unknown" formed his men at the Rockville station, and carrying sticks with white banners he started out the Baltimore road. The contingent of 60 men that is marching from Baltimore under the leadership of Christopher Columbus Jones, "The Unknown," returned to camp later, saying that he had not seen any of the other marchers on the road.

"The Unknown's" contingent affect to believe that when Coxey reaches Washington his men will largely desert to the ranks of "Unknown" Smith. They don't know, however, but that they might go over to Coxey if Marshal Carl Browne were deposed. They expect that the Jones contingent will join ranks with them on their arrival.

Jones Joins "The Unknown."

This morning the army started on the five mile tramp to Rockville, where they will encamp in the fair grounds. There they will remain until Sunday, where the last march outside of Washington will be made, with the rendezvous at Brightwood park, which is about two miles from the city limits of Washington and on Fourteenth street, one of the principal roads of the city to the north. There the army will be until Tuesday, when it is Coxey's purpose to march his men into Washington and up to the capitol steps.

Talk of surrender in the Coxey camp have become more definite. It is stated that the men propose today to demand of Coxey better food than hardtack and coffee. It is said that they propose to ask a division among the men of the dimes paid by the public who come inside the canvas to stare at the army.

Again it is stated that the men will demand of Coxey some assurance as to what he proposes to do for them if their demands on congress are successful and that he will do for them if their mission comes to naught.

There is news from Rockville. The Christopher Columbus Jones contingent of commonwealers from Philadelphia arrived there, 40 strong. They started the day's tramp from Ashton, Md. The commissary ran ahead of the army. The detachment has a wagon drawn by four negroes. A rope has stout sticks knotted into it, and two men, one on each side of the rope, grasp each stick at either end and so haul it along.

The force is made up of young men of fair appearance. They wear red, white and blue ribbons. The party has an "unknown." He is one of a committee of miners who came to Washington from Crede, Colo., some time ago in behalf of silver. He came out to march in with the Jones men. He says "Soapsy" Smith of Colorado is coming to Washington with 1,000 men. Another story is that between May 1 and 15 between 2,000 and 5,000 men from Colorado will be in Washington on the same errand.

Northern Pacific Trains Guarded.

TACOMA, April 28.—Every train on the Northern Pacific leaving Seattle or Tacoma is accompanied by deputy United States marshals armed with revolvers and winchesters. The Coxeyites have declared that they will ride over the Northern Pacific. Marshal Drake says he hopes to have no trouble with the men, but they must understand that they cannot steal a train on the Northern Pacific without serious trouble. Seattle's army is making no progress whatever, still being camped about six miles from that city. Tacoma's army, 300 strong, will start today. It is supposed that both armies will meet at Meeker Junction, and it is feared that there will be trouble at that place.

Kelly to Make a Long March.

STUART, Ia., April 28.—General Kelly intends to make a forced march of 41 miles from Des Moines today. The army cannot reach the state capital before 3 or 4 o'clock Sunday morning, and it is probable that the 30 hour march will have many of the men by the wayside. The indianiola contingent a solid front when they marched into Stuart at 6 o'clock last night, but not more than 200 were in the column which followed Kelly's prancing black charger. The remaining 400 came straggling in for hours on foot, on wagons, on the railroad track and on the wagon road. The men were well fed at Stuart, and though tired out were in better humor.

Frye's Army Took a Ride.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., April 28.—Galven's detachment of General Frye's army took freight accommodation of an eastbound train on the Baltimore and Ohio and went to Mount Sterling, where they are now encamped. All freight trains on the Baltimore and Ohio are running over the Little Miami tracks, but passengers are going through as usual.

Hogan's Army Still Prisoners.

ST. PAUL, April 28.—The contingent of the Coxey army that was arrested by the United States troops at Forsythe on Wednesday night is still at that point waiting orders from Washington to their captors for their disposition. They are 81 in number, and they are guarded by Colonel Page with a detachment of the Twenty-second regiment. He had been ordered to turn them over to the marshal, but that official seems in no hurry to take them in charge. It seems that the plan is to wait until the greatest excitement at Butte and Helena has considerably subsided and then take them to Helena for trial.

No Buffalo Contingent.

BUFFALO, April 28.—There will be no Buffalo contingent in Washington when Coxey's army strikes the capital. The movement started out two or three days ago by some Populists, who had a trip by R. R. to Washington at 1½ basis, has fizzled out completely. No better rate than $10 could be obtained, and there was not a man at the meeting held to make final arrangements who would pay that much to have all the interest bearing bonds in the country slaughtered.

Galven's Army Besieged.

MOUNT STERLING, O., April 28.—Detectives Mahoney, Murphy, Bauer and Schlesinger, with a posse of 100 men, arrived here on a special train from Columbus at 1 a. m. Their purpose is to drive Galven's 285 industrials off of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad's property. Governor McKinley sanctioned this movement. The army is camped behind the stolen freight train and has guards out. The industrials dared the detectives to fight.

New England Army Locked Up.

WESTERLY, R. I., April 28.—The entire New England industrial army was arrested and locked up here. This is the first time since the march has been commenced that the army fell into the hands of the authorities. The arrest was made under the vagrancy act.

MERIDEN, Conn., April 28.—The Connecticut contingent of Coxey's army, led by George Sweetland, arrived here.

Chicago's Army Delayed.

CHICAGO, April 28.—General Randall's commonweal army will not start for Washington on Sunday, and the date of its departure was postponed. Some tough characters have worked their way into the army, and Randall says he will not move until he has forced them out, and it will take him over Sunday to do the purging.

Frye's Army In Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 28.—General Frye's army, with the merged Aubrey branch, numbering 400, are at the Blake street porkhouse. The general has expressed his determination to breed Sunday on "If Christ Came to Indianapolis," provided he can do so under the auspices of the ministers of the city.

An Officer Made Peace in the Family.

Mrs. Henry Jackson, colored, stood at the corner of Front street and Park avenue yesterday morning, looking for an officer to have her husband arrested for non-support. She did not want him arrested for assault and battery, but she simply wanted to learn him a lesson. She said that they were married in Petersburg, Va., in 1887, and that she had been the mother of six children, two pairs of twins, and a boy and a girl. Her husband, she said, had made grave accusations against her and she was going to make him prove them. An officer accompanied her home where quietness was restored.

A Battle Between Frenchmen.

Two Frenchmen named Santour and Parillard, while endeavoring to come to terms over a farm that the former was trying to sell to the latter, came to blows on Park avenue, Saturday afternoon. Santour drew first blood. Police Sergeant Kiely stopped further bloodshed by arresting Santour, who made the assault.

Santour was convicted and fined $5 by City Judge Coddington this morning.

Exchanged Horses in 50 Seconds.

Ever since the tally-ho has been running between Philadelphia and New York the men at the relay stations have been breaking records in changing horses in the least time. Before Saturday last New Brunswick held the record, having made the change in one minute and four seconds. On Saturday, however, the men in charge of the horses in Plainfield's relay station broke all the records, doing the work in 50 seconds.

Dunellen News.

Yesterday was a very quiet Sunday in Dunellen. The notice served a week ago had some effect, but there are still said to be two or three places between Dunellen and the tanks where no liquor licenses are granted, and as usual they were going in full blast. The W. C. T. U. here taken the matter in charge, and they intend to see that these places are closed up.

Cutting Down West Front Street.

The work of cutting down and grading West Front street from Grant avenue west was begun this morning. The cost of the work is to be borne partly by the city and largely by individual subscribers. Recap's hill will be lowered about 18 inches and the dirt will be taken to the bottom of the hill to fill in the low places.

To Adopt Nine Pale Faces.

The Good of the Order Committee of Minetoncoma Tribe of Red Men are actively engaged in preparing a programme for Friday night to properly celebrate the adoption of nine pale faces on that "sleep." A collation to suit the tastes of all the Indians will be provided.

Discharged the Entire Force.

The entire force of graders and other workmen, employed about the Barnaby grounds on Plainfield avenue, 16 in all, were laid off Saturday, and, it is said, no entirely new force is to be engaged. The cause for the wholesale discharge is not known.

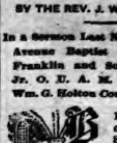
OUR FREE INSTITUTIONS

TRIBUTE TO THE PUBLIC SCHOOL BY THE REV. J. W. RICHARDSON.

In a Sermon Last Night in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, Before Franklin and Somerset Councils Jr. O. U. A. M. of This City and Wm. G. Holton Council of Dunellen.



BESIDES members of Franklin and Somerset Councils Jr. O. U. A. M. of this city a number of members of the Order from Dunellen and New Market were present at the Park avenue Baptist church last night to listen to a special sermon to the Order, by the Rev. J. W. Richardson. After an exposition of the text, "Render therefore unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's."—Matt. 22 21, Mr. Richardson said in part:

"Our Republic is the only legitimate government ever adopted by man. All others arise from usurpation and imposition. Our temple of human rights is not corrupted by the residence of a privileged despot, nor polluted by the footsteps of barbarism. A solemn charge is laid upon us, to transmit it uncorrupted to the generations of Americans that are to follow. Each American must insist that the United States be preserved against the shackles of any political slavery. Each true American must say 'Hand's Off,' to all ecclesiastical interference with our ballot box, and public institutions.

"This is a Republic—'a government of the people, for the people.' God through this peculiar civil institution has placed before us the sublimest opportunity ever granted to man. Through our Government Providence has done its noblest for the race. From the bleak shore and wild forest, under these institutions, in little more than a century, our country has marched up to that eminence and splendor, that strength and reserves, which makes her the envy of the nations. Here poverty and want are almost wholly confined to the idle and vicious. Here our young man are nobles and our old men sovereigns. Here the lords that tread the nations are found in the shop and store, and the sceptre of each man is his free ballot.

"Like the 'morning star' among the planets, so far beyond all the nations of the earth shines the glory of the 'Republic.' Corrupt in its principles, legitimate in its nature, mild in its laws, protecting the welfare of each individual, offering golden opportunities to all its citizens; yea, the very benediction of God himself is stamped on all the land.

"There is nothing like it anywhere else on the face of the earth.

"The citizen may rise just as far as pluck and brain and brawn will carry him. In America we say to no man 'Your Majesty.' But we do recognize true worth and ability, whether it shines from the eyes of some country rail-splitter like Abraham Lincoln, or in the chaste classics of a Charles Sumner. Birth and chaste have no monopoly over the gates to fame and honor in this country.

"We must not spare with our great privileges until we lose them. Let us be alert that no covetous hand, even under the guise of religion, shall dictate our laws, nor command our commerce.

"To do this means also our firm support of America's public school system. When we consider the present prosperous condition and happy situation of our people, either by contrasting the present with the history of this nation, or our situation with that of the people of any other nation, the solution of it is found in the American Free School. This system of education fits our boys for the real business of life, and of every state is the importance of the 'public school' to our State. Look yonder at the history of Mexico. Men from the 'Old World' settled on her broad plateaus a century before the pilgrims stepped upon Plymouth rock. Unlike these Puritanical exiles who sailed in the Mayflower to a sterile shore, these men who went to Mexico were a company of trained soldiers, under the auspices of Queen Isabella, generalled by brave Cortez, with the benediction of a papa resting upon their banners. Here was a country, the like of a constant summer, her soil promised a perpetual harvest; her hills were bursting with the wealth of ages; verily, it was a land flowing with milk and honey; land, mines, and everything for colonization—plenty of it—but they had no free school—and the land they have occupied has been incapable of self-government.

"Look at Spain. She had her colonies, ticklish, but no public school. Where are her great men? Where are her lovers of home? Where is the spirit of true liberty? Look at Spain and Mexico, occupying the the lowest places among nations, without developing wealth at home or credit abroad, political paupers at the castle doors of the Sovereigns of Europe! Our public school system has been tried for two hundred years. It has interwoven itself into every part of our State. It is the pride of every citizen, and the strongest stance which have made bright American history. Its record is a clear one; concerns in written annals its honor and its hands are chaplets of honor. What American heart is still while a lisping head is raised to tender it its crown and humiliate the school.

"The 'Old School' was never more efficient than now. It gives instruction nearly as high as that imparted by the high-priced academy and college. The American mechanic, in his boyhood, is taught those sciences which have enabled him to bewilder with the world in all branches of skilled industry. Educationally, the 'common school' is the foundation of happiness; and this is why the American mechanic is better educated, better developed, better domiciled, than any other class of laborers in the wide world."

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Tailor Stockman Succumbs to Heart Disease.

There was a sudden death on South Second street early yesterday morning. About three o'clock Mrs. Stockman was awakened by a peculiar noise made by her husband. She tried to arouse him, but was unsuccessful, as he seemed to be in a sort of stupor.

Dr. Primrose was summoned, but by the time he arrived Stockman was beyond the need of medical aid. He died without regaining consciousness. Death was due to heart disease. He had retired evidently in the best of health.

County Physician O'Reilly was sent for and after he had made an examination of the remains he gave a permit for burial.

The body was taken charge of by Undertaker Ira Elmer who shipped it to New York to-day.

Stockman was born in Austria, 32 years ago, and had resided in Plainfield only about eight months. He was a tailor and had been out of work for some time. He recently secured work and had only been busy a short while.

He leaves a wife and four small children.

Rally at Mt. Olive Church.

The new pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, the Rev. Mr. Gibson, has begun his work in this city by determining to cancel the debt of the church $180.

For this purpose he held a rally at that church all day yesterday. In the morning at 10.30 the Rev. Mr. Hill of Newark conducted the services, taking for his subject "Pure Gold." The services included good singing by the church choir. In place of the regular Sunday school collection a contribution was asked for to add to the fund. At night the Rev. Mr. Gibson preached the sermon.

$76.60 were raised.

McCarthy's Mule Will Bray.

The rehearsals of "Arrah Na Pogue" have been very successful and those who took part have learned their parts to perfection, guaranteeing an entertainment at Music Hall to-morrow night, of much pleasure.

Two features of the play will be the braying of Mr. McCarthy's imported musical donkey, and the Irish pipes. There will also be a real old "Irish breakdown."

The tickets are selling in a way to promise a full house to-morrow night.

Mr. Krueger at the German Church.

The largest congregation that has assembled in the German Reformed church on Craig place in a long while, gathered last night to listen to a powerful sermon by the Rev. Mr. Krueger of Bloomfield. His eloquent discourse was listened to with deep interest by all. The congregation was very much pleased with Mr. Krueger and it is not improbable that he may be extended a call.

A Still Alarm.

At 7.15 Saturday evening a still alarm of fire was sent to headquarters, that the chimney on the house occupied by Mr. Mattoz, on Webster place, was on fire. No. 2's engine and hose wagon and the truck were ordered, and the burning soot in the chimney was extinguished with the patent fire extinguishers.

Taking Testimony in the Brand Will Case.

To-day in Lawyer William M. Stillman's office Surrogate Parrott took testimony in the Brand will case. L. Craig A. Marsh represented Mrs. Brand, and Mr. Anderson appeared for Mr. Robert Brand.

A Load of Lumber Upsets.

About eleven o'clock this morning, as one of Thorpe & Irvine dell-ivery wagons was passing along Crescent avenue, with a load of lumber, one of the front wheels collapsed, depositing the contents of the wagon in the street. No further damage resulted.

Took a Ride to Rahway.

Messrs. Harry Coddington, William Kitchen, Warren Rice and Robert Clark, took a ride on their wheels to Rahway yesterday afternoon. On their way home two of the bicyclist collided, but no serious damage resulted.

Prof. W. Nasser's Opening To-Night, Free.

Prof. W. Nasser's Riding Academy, at the Crescent Rink, is to be opened this evening to the public free, this being the opening night. Gentlemen and lady riders will be welcomed.

"The Needs of the Hour."

Mrs. S. M. Perkins, of Cleveland, Ohio, will speak under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., in the Congregational church, Thursday, May 3d, at eight p. m. Subject: "The Needs of the Hour."

After Wild Flowers.

A party of girls from the High School started on a flower hunting expedition this afternoon.

—"The Grey Mare" will be presented at the Casino Thursday evening.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Mrs. Bard Wakened by Barking to Find the House on Fire.

Binnamora, N. J., April 30.—The barking of her dog at 5 o'clock this morning warned the wife of Charles Bard, of Smithtown, about two miles from this place, that the house in which she and her thirteen-year-old daughter were sleeping was on fire. Mr. Bard is a night watchman in New York, and was not at home.

Without wakening her child Mrs. Bard ran to a neighbor's for help. When she got back the roof of the house had fallen in. She rushed in and rescued her daughter just in time to save the latter from falling timbers.

The house and outbuildings, including a hennery, in which there were fifty fowls, were destroyed. The loss was about $1,000. There was no insurance.

New York Fashionable Bonnet and Hats Made in Plainfield.

New York fashionable Bonnets and Hats are now being made in Plainfield, and ladies are no longer obliged to go to New York for these articles, greatly to their delight and convenience. Edsall's three New York Milliners are having a big run, although working under great disadvantages in their present quarters for want of room. They hope in a short time to be located in the new parlors in the Babcock Building, where greater facilities will be offered. Those who have patronized the Department are well pleased, both as to prices and style, and success in the new enterprise is assured from the start. The patrons of Edsall's Millinery Department can rest assured that their neighbor's bonnet will not resemble theirs, for his milliners do not make two bonnets or hats alike. They are competent to create styles, and do not copy.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

A Union County School of Methods was held in Westfield on April 26th. Mrs. Tomlinson the county president presiding. After devotional exercises led by Miss Kerrou of Elizabeth, a paper was read by Miss Titus of Westfield on "How to help the soldiers, sailors, firemen and railroad men." By this it was shown that much may be done by interesting them in temperance work, and by sending reading matter to the Life Saving Stations on our coast; of which there are 40 between Sandy Hook and Cape May. The value of such is not in used old papers and magazines, as are also the light-house keepers, and they are very thankful for anything sent to them to help while away the many hours they have to be on guard.

A paper on "Home-made beer and other Summer drinks," read by Mrs. Carpenter of Roselle, led to much discussion and many recipes were given to take the place of the so-called harmless root beers, which are found to contain much alcohol.

Miss Starr of Westfield gave many valuable hints and remedies in a paper on "Medicines without alcohol," such as are in use at the Temperance Hospital in Chicago.

There was much rejoicing over the passage of the bill, enforcing Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public schools. The Rev. Mr. Honeyman gave a history of the hard work undertaken to secure its passage and spoke of the untiring efforts of our State President, Mrs. Bourne, who was present, and who responded by telling of Mr. Honeyman's valuable help to the Committee.

A cordial and visitors were present and the following resolutions, were adopted:

WHEREAS, The Scientific Temperance Instruction bill for which we have been so long working has finally become a law,

Resolved, That we extend our thanks to Governor Werts, who signed the bill, and the Senators and Representatives who voted for it. To the churches and young people Societies, who have used their efforts in its behalf, to our State President who has labored so untiringly in its interest, and to Mrs. Mary Hunt, National Superintendent of the Department. We make special mention in this connection of Hon. C. U. Codding, Judge Cross, Hon. F. M. Voorhees, Hon. J. N. Burger of Union County, who rendered great assistance to our leaders in this work.

Resolved, That we rejoice that the question of Woman Suffrage is attracting so much attention, and that we shall hail with joy the day when women shall be on an equality with men before the law. In the evening Dr. Mary Wood Allen of Toledo Ohio, addressed a large audience on "the Beatific Vision."

To Present Resolutions to Elizabeth Red Men.

A set of resolutions neatly framed are to be presented to Leola Tribe, No. 162, I. O. R. M., of Elizabeth, to-night, by Pauchaugunshaugnisique Tribe, No. 194, of Jamesburg, as a token of appreciation of the initiatory work done by the former tribe at the institution of the latter.

The resolutions are as follows:

"Whereas grounds of Elizabeth Reservation of New Jersey, to Leola Tribe whereas so generously offered to exemplify the ancient degree of Pauchaugunshaugnisique Tribe. Sleep of the eleventh sun, plant moon, G. S. D., 405, be it

Resolved, That we tender to them our sincerest and grateful thanks for imbibing us so impressively into the mysteries of the forest, which they so freely roam, and that should the Great ever lead them to our village our wigwam shall be their home, our tepee their shelter and our Council fire shall burn for their presence among us.

Resolved, That a page of Records other these resolutions upon his scroll.

Messrs. F. X. Schoonmaker, V. W. Nash and W. S. Bullock comprise the committee to present the resolutions. Other members of the tribe will accompany them to Elizabeth. As many Red Men as possible of Pauchaugunshaugnisique tribe are urged to go to-night to help swell the delegation.

News from the West End.

The Young Men's League of Hope chapel meet to-night.

The sidewalk under the Grant avenue bridge is being repaired.

The West Ends defeated the Cuban Giants on the John street grounds, Saturday, by a score of 17 to 11.

Mr. Fred Firstbrook of Essex street is now able to resume work after four weeks suffering from having his finger cut off.

Mr. Frank Marsh of Plainfield avenue, last Saturday, rode to New Market. He left his bicycle standing alongside the road. Some malicious person tore both the tires from the wheels.

Mr. Thomas Wallace of Spooner avenue was run into by a wagon on Saturday, and knocked down, the wheels passing over his foot. No bones were fractured, but he received a veral severe bruises.

TUXEDO.

The Salvation Army.

One person confessed conversion at the Salvation Army Hall last night, Capt Marsh who was in charge of the work shortly after it was begun in Plainfield, and who is on a vacation, lead the meeting. Ensign Albright and Capt. Blackbird of the headquarters were also present. The attendance for the week was as follows: Monday, 50; Tuesday, 150; Wednesday, 175; Thursday, 250; Friday, 150; Saturday, 300; Sunday, 7 a. m., 75; 11 a. m., 95; 3 p. m., 200; 8 p. m., 75; total 1,320.

NEW SHAPES IN STRAW HATS.

These With the Corners Turned Back Like Wings Are Popular.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

Among the many shapes in which straw hats appear this season a few are shown with the fantastically small crowns precisely after the fancy of ages. Crowns having a broad brim or one along the top shuffled to those of soft felt hats are also seen and are appropriate enough to the coarse braided straw in which they are made up. A favorite device with small bonnets is to cut straight into the flaring brim in front, turning the two corners back like wings. Bonnet shapes are displayed made of guipure attached over a light wire foundation, and the same process is employed with beaded and spangled net. These shapes require very little trimming, but most of the other head coverings seen are overloaded with flowers, feathers, lace and ribbons. A very beautiful hat, suitable for carriage or garden party wear, was composed of coarse rose colored straw. It had a wide brim that was bent becomingly and was trimmed with large pink roses and their leaves. Another picturesque hat was of fine black straw and was loaded with curling black ostrich plumes, while two long ends of wide black satin ribbon depended from the back. Some of the prettiest hats are those made of wide braid in which colored or white chip is woven in with the straw, either natural or tinted. The blendings are done with remarkably good taste, and when flowers are used as trimming the effect is charming. Leghorn flats, which seem to never go entirely out of fashion, are fairly well represented this season, although they are eclipsed by the new straws already mentioned. The brim is always more or less bent and profuse trimming employed.

Double faced satin ribbon is the millinery favorite at present and is much softer and richer in appearance than moire, although the latter is likewise used. A woman has also been found out combining a satin face and moire back.

Bonnet strings are usually over an inch wide and are made of satin ribbon as a rule. Small black bonnets composed of a jet crown, with a frill of black lace for a brim, and trimmed with a spangled ornament and a tiny twist of cherry velvet are much worn. These little knots of brilliant velvet are an effective way of enlivening a black hat, but ribbon cannot be successfully utilized in the same way, as it at once assumes a flat and shabby look when it is twisted.

A sketch is given of a hat made of black rice straw. It is trimmed with spangled tulle and black ostrich plumes and has strings of black velvet ribbon. A spray of flowers is placed at the back of the brim, resting on the hair. JUDIC CHOLLET Dropped His Fertilizer.

A Fourth Warder, who comes from over the brook, met with a peculiar upsetting. He was carrying a 25-pound bag of fertilizer, let the bag drop at Front and Somerset streets, scattering the contents on the side-walk. He said it cost him five cents a pound. The man gathered up the stuff and put it in a handkerchief, while the last car over the electric road waited for him.

The People's Services.

Next Sunday evening the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, will preach the first of a series of five sermons, in the Trinity Reformed church, on the "Prodigal Son." The service, consisting of hymns, responsive readings, etc., will be printed.

Fated to Die.

WINCHESTER, Va., April 30.—John Newcomb, a prosperous farmer residing in Clarke county, was driving home when his horse ran away, throwing him out. His son hearing of it went to the wagon to look him, when the son's horse likewise became unmanageable, and a second runaway occurred, in which the elder of the two was again thrown out and killed.

ART IN HAIRDRESSING.

25 Studies Showing Fashionable Coiffures With Charming Results.

There have not been for years so many charming ways of arranging feminine locks as today. With a skillful maid even a homely woman who has a reasonably good complexion can be made to look almost handsome, so exquisitely and picturesquely is it possible to dress the hair. With the modern maid locks every strand of hair is made available and made the most of, and it is doubtful if any quantity of false additions will be worn for many a year to come. Art has really invaded, in these days, the dressmaker's rooms and the hairdresser's shop. The New York Tribune gives some illustrations of these remarks, which show that a woman's natural defects and beauties are studied with a view to remedying or developing them. If her forehead is too high and round, curly locks are allowed to fall over it and soften the outlines. If the head is too high and round on the crown for symmetry, the hair is dressed low to give balance and grace to its shape. There is really no profile, there is no expression, which has not its appropriate hairdressing.

Very Natty Conceits In Ties.

The matter of making a judicious selection of ties no longer bewilders man alone. Since the advent of the "gentlemanly girl" it becomes one of the questions of woman's toilet also. Really the latest thing in the tie line is the butterfly tie, which is, of course, black or white for evening wear, but which can be had in colors for day purposes. As well proudly it seem, the tie takes its name from its peculiar shape and marked resemblance to the real article in the butterfly line. Of course the "butterfly" comes in the made tie, but, according to the New York Herald, which is authority for the fashions here given, every gentleman will want a tie his own, which will not be a difficult matter.

BUTTERFLY BOW AND STOCK TIE.

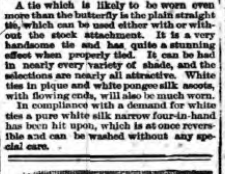
A tie which is likely to be worn even more than the butterfly is the plain straight tie, which can be used either with or without the stock attachment. It is a very handsome tie and has quite a stunning effect when properly tied. Its cost is not in nearly every variety of shade, and the selections are nearly all attractive. White ties in plain and figured silk novelty goods, with flowing ends, will also be much worn.

In compliance with a demand for white ties a pure white silk narrow four-in-hand has been hit upon, which is at once revers ible and can be washed without any special care.



"A Yankee in Gray."

This is the title of the story now running in THE NEWS, Wednesdays and Saturdays alternately. It is the story of a northern man who "went with" the adopted State of Virginia, and wore the gray of the confederacy. The tale is novel in theme and treatment, and is full of dramatic situations and powerful character drawing. This wonderful story is

THE BUFFALO MYSTERY

Murderer of Lawyer Gibbs Is as Yet Unknown.

REVENGE THE PROBABLE MOTIVE.

It Is Suspected That He Was Decoyed to the Spot Where the Unknown Assassin Emptied a Revolver at Him—What Two Boys Saw.

BUFFALO, April 30.—Montgomery Gibbs, who left the city editor's desk of the old Evening Republic, this city, to go into a lawyer's office 19 years ago and who became one of the best known of the younger members of the bar and a prominent real estate dealer, was mysteriously murdered on Delaware avenue, Buffalo's most fashionable street, and the tragedy is still unexplained.

Residents of Delaware avenue, near the corner of Bryant street, heard three revolver shots in rapid succession late Saturday night. A man named Sloan, who lives in that vicinity, looked out of his house and saw the body of a man lying on the roadway leading into the premises of Miss Sophie M. No. 44. A man named Stinton, who was wheeling a baby carriage on the opposite of the street, ran across the road, and the two men examined the body in the roadway. They saw that blood was spurting from a bullet hole in his temple, and Sloan ran to call a doctor. In the meantime a crowd had gathered, and ambulance took the wounded man as Montgomery Gibbs.

The patrol wagon came from Station 6, and the wounded man was carried into the General hospital arrived. Gibbs was taken to the hospital, but died just after he had been lifted on the operating table, and three minutes after he had arrived.

Every detective from headquarters and many from the special precincts were put to work on the case. Today the police confess that they have not a single clew. They are completely baffled.

Plainly Not a Suicide.

The first theory was suicide. This was effectually set at rest by the autopsy. This showed that two of the three bullets fired had taken effect. One entered his elbow. The other entered his right temple. He could not have fired the shot into his left elbow, nor could he have fired the shot into his head, for the bullet took a downward course, and he was a tall man. His assailant was out for revenge, for the last bullet was doubless fired while Gibbs was on the ground.

The second theory is footpads. This is tenable. Buffalo is infested with highwaymen, and holdups are frequent. But Gibbs was not robbed. He had money in his purse, a diamond on his shirt, and his valuable gold watch was in his pocket. Then, again, footpads would wait to fire a shot at a man who was down.

The third and most plausible theory is that they were a man and his boy. Gibbs was murdered.

The police think he was decoyed to the spot where he was killed. No trace of his movements on Saturday night between the hours of 6 and 11 o'clock, and the time of the murder can be found. He did not live on the avenue, and while his house on Main street was not far distant he was not walking toward it.

Boys Furnish a Clew.

The only thing that resembles a clew is the tale told by two small boys who were delivering shoes for a local shoe store. They say they were out on the avenue about 10 o'clock and heard the shots. Then they saw two men running down the roadway leading into the Squier yard, at the street end of which Gibbs was found.

So far as known nothing has been found among Mr. Gibbs' papers that implicates him in any questionable transactions.

Gibbs was 38 years old and had always lived in Buffalo. When he left the high school, he became a reporter on The Evening Telegraph, now dead. He was city editor of The Republic for three years. He studied law and was admitted to the bar, dealt in real estate and had a future full of bright promise.

Fought In a Prison Chapel.

COLUMBUS, O., April 30.—A sensational scene occurred at the Ohio penitentiary during the chapel exercises. Warden James and Deputy Warden Playford engaged in a fistic setto on the rostrum, and James was knocked down. The trouble that was going on the more than 1,500 prisoners rose in their places and made demonstrations which looked like a mutiny was at hand, but the strong words of the chaplain restored quiet.

She Was Bound to Die.

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—Mrs. Anna E. Rhea, 66 years of age, of 2149 North Twenty-ninth street, committed suicide by taking laudanum. She was a confirmed invalid and subject to attacks of melancholia. Her family had warned neighboring druggists not to sell her poison, but Mrs. Rhea eluded them by throwing money, wrapped up in a note, out of the window and obtaining the laudanum through the first passing stranger.

Henry Taken to La Roquette.

PARIS, April 30.—Emilie Henry, the anarchist who was sentenced to death for causing the explosion at the Hotel Terminus, has been transferred to the Prison de la Roquette, from which he will not emerge again until he is taken to the guillotine that will be erected in the Place de la Roquette for his execution.

Cut Through Iron Cells.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 30.—Y. C. Hughes, Sam McLaughlin, Jos Griffith and George Rice (colored) made a daring and successful escape from Jefferson county jail. A hole a foot square was cut out of a solid sheet of iron in the top of the cell, through which the prisoners got to the roof.

Run Down by a Ferryboat.

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—George W. Wills, 16 years of age, and two companions were boating on the Delaware river when their craft was run down by a ferryboat. Wills was drowned. His companions were rescued.

The Cholera at Lisbon.

LISBON, April 30.—There were 45 new cases of cholera reported here yesterday. Sixty-four patients were discharged as cured. There were under treatment 284 persons. No deaths occurred.

Destructive Forest Fire.

SOMERS POINT, N. J., April 30.—The forest fire at Scullville, which is still raging, has destroyed 30,000 worth of timber, fruit trees and hay.

In Memory of General Sherman.

BROOKLYN, April 30.—Memorial services in honor of the late Major General Henry W. Slocum were held in Plymouth church.

Pains and Distress After Eating Relieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I must praise Hood's Sarsaparilla for the good it has done me. I was troubled with dyspepsia. I had severe pains in my heart, and the suffering of my stomach and distress after eating caused me much suffering. I tried different medicines, but found no relief. At last I decided to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial, being my last hope in order to live. After I had taken

KELLY IS DESPERATE.

He Leads More Than a Thousand Hungry Men.

AWAITING A TRAIN AT DES MOINES

The Wretched Condition of His Weary, Wet and Almost Starving Army Arouses the Sympathy of All but the City Authorities.—Will Not Seize a Train.

DES MOINES, April 30.—Des Moines is in a state of intense excitement over the arrival of Kelly's industrial army. The men had marched 57 miles without food and were held by the police five miles out of the city in a driving rainstorm all day, with no provisions or shelter. The action of the authorities aroused much indignation, and when the army finally marched up Grand avenue to the camp on the east side of the town, wet, haggard and weary, their condition aroused sympathy almost as great as that which was there in Council Bluffs.

A mass meeting of laboring men has been called for today, committees are at work soliciting food and money, and threats are made that unless transportation is secured at Chicago radical steps will be taken. During the last 24 hours the army has undergone greater hardships than at any time since it left Utah, but notwithstanding the severe test not 12 men were missing when Des Moines was reached.

The start from Van Meter was made in a heavy storm, and when day dawned the column was still 15 miles from its destination. The commissary wagons were empty, and the men, wet and hungry, plodded on until they reached Walnut creek. The men struggled in during Sunday afternoon, and by 5 o'clock 1,000 men had gathered. Mayor Hillis sent 50 policemen and Sheriff McGarraugh as many deputies to meet the army and inform them that they would have to pass on through Des Moines to a deserted stove factory, where food and shelter were provided.

A Thousand Hungry Men.

This Kelly flatly refused to do, saying that his men must be fed before they marched another mile. The officers were obdurate, and the 1,000 hungry men stood shivering in the rain until half past 4 o'clock hoping for provisions. General Weaver sent out 40 loaves of bread, and that served as breakfast and dinner. Mayor Hillis insisted that if the men did not go to where the food was they should have none. At last Kelly consented to march to the stove factory.

The industrials finally moved through the streets feebly singing their army songs. The streets were lined with spectators, and as the weary men marched by, weak from hunger and sympathized with them and denounced the authorities. The stove factory, a mile and a half east of the capitol, furnished shelter for all the men, and their spirits revived at the wholesome supper furnished by the city. Many struggled in during the evening, and 1,250 slept in the camp.

All day long the city authorities were in a turmoil of excitement. The mayor announced that the city would furnish but one day's provisions and then request the army to move on. Kelly was weary but determined when seen at the camp and seemed in no wise discouraged.

"Of course we will get a train," he said. "We will stay here until we do get one. I have been informed that arrangements are being made to take us out Tuesday with teams, but we won't go until we go on a train and on one furnished by railway officials. We will not seize one, however. There need be no fear on that score."

The army expects to remain quietly in camp today awaiting the result of the efforts of the trade and labor assembly to secure transportation. The mass meeting is expected to decide what will be done. Governor Jackson will to your correspondent that he would take no action until requested to do so by the county authorities.

"The matter is entirely in the hands of the city and county," he said, "and I will do nothing until called upon."

Sacramento's White Elephant.

SACRAMENTO, April 30.—The San Francisco and Oakland industrial armies, numbering about 900 men, arrived here from Richland. They took up their quarters at the baseball grounds. Accommodations are very poor, and many of the men are without blankets. They are fairly well supplied with food, however, one man on the road having given them three steers. Mrs. Anna Smith, who heads the Oakland contingent, came to the city to look up a camping place. What the newcomers are going to do nobody knows. The citizens will not feed them more than a day or two at the most, and the military officials are on the alert for any disturbance.

Colonel Bowman of Stockton is now under arrest in the city jail, charged with vagrancy. Being asked if he was not an ex-convict, he replied that he was and admitted having served three terms, two of them for stealing horses while drunk and one for forgery. Carpenter, alias Inman, was released from Folsom prison on the 16th inst. and in less than 24 hours afterward was an officer in the industrial army quartered at Agricultural park, this city.

Chicago's Army Starts Tomorrow.

CHICAGO, April 30.—Unless something unforeseen occurs the Chicago contingent of the commonweal army will leave for Washington on Tuesday morning. The spirit of discontent is allayed, and all are looking forward to the start. Numbers of people visited the barracks, and quite a sum was realized from their generosity. Food and clothing are scarce. The men are living on scant provender, the boom of Wednesday having apparently died out.

Industrials' Officers in Jail.

PORTLAND, Or., April 30.—The Portland contingent of Coxey's army which seized a Union Pacific train at Troutdale and was arrested by United States troops at Arlington was brought back to this city.

General Schoeffler, with Quartermaster General Brackinridge and 30 others, were taken to jail, and the remainder were placed under guard of the regular troops. The industrials number 507 in all. They are being fed at the expense of the United States and express no desire to escape. The leaders will be arraigned in the federal court today on the charge of contempt.

Raising Galvin's Army.

COLUMBUS, O., April 30.—The Galvin contingent of the Coxey army reached here and went into camp beyond the west bank of the Scioto. Their wants are being supplied by the trades assembly of this city, which is furnishing them provisions and raising a sum of money to transport the army as far as Wheeling or Pittsburg.

Cossyites Denounce Wolcott.

PUEBLO, Colo., April 30.—At a meeting held for the purposes of forming a home contingent of the Coxey army Senator Wolcott was denounced by speechless and in a long set of resolutions for his speech in the senate a few days ago against the commonweal movement.

Young Parks Found.

DETROIT, April 30.—Early this morning a private telegram was received in this city from Sarnia, Ont., stating that James H. Parke, the missing New Yorker, had been found in a hotel there. Sarnia is about 60 miles from this city.

GREAT NORTHERN STRIKE.

The Road Tries to Resume Today Under Government Protection.

ST. PAUL, April 30.—Business will be resumed on the Great Northern today. In some respects the strike situation is unchanged, although there have been some interesting developments. The proposition of the commercial bodies of the two cities for submission to an arbitration board of five disinterested persons has been generally discussed. At the union men's mass meeting at Labor hall it was hooted down. Mayor Eustis of Minneapolis and State Labor Commissioner Powers were present and addressed the men, urging them to accept the new proposition.

At this same hour of the day, in another part of the city, President Hill was telling some business men he would agree to any fair propositions for arbitration on the sole condition that the men resume work at once, this same proposal was being hissed by the strikers and their friends at the Labor hall meeting. Mr. Hill explained that he could not fight and arbitrate both at the same time, and therefore made this one condition of immediate resumption of work in case arbitration was agreed upon.

The only train sent out yesterday was the one bearing the regulars from Fort Snelling under Major Patterson, which went to Devil's Lake to help Marshal Crowan make arrests for interference with the mails. The company expects to start the usual trains on schedule time, and it is then becoming clear whether the men will stay by the union and go out or accept the company's offers to the brotherhoods and stay at work.

St. Paul machinist engineers will resume work at once, and as the other brotherhoods are with them the company feels assured of its ability to carry on business, and protection being assured by the government.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., April 30.—A train arrived here bearing 200 United States regulars, who are on their way to Devil's Lake. As the train was pulling out of the yard some one threw a heavy piece of iron at Brakeman Frank, who was on the platform, striking him on the head and cutting a deep gash. The train was held at Fergus Falls while his injuries were attended to. It is asserted that this was done by a striker.

FIVE WERE LOST.

Burning of the Famous St. Charles Hotel in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, April 30.—It is believed that five persons lost their lives in the St. Charles hotel fire. One man leaped from the fourth story and was almost instantly killed, while four men and one woman were seen to leap from the iron staircase leading from the rear of the building and were lost to view in the court, which looked to be almost a solid mass of flames. One man made his escape into the street, but nothing was seen of the others. It was reported that a child was missing, but this lacks confirmation.

The St. Charles hotel was one of the most famous hostelries in the country. It was owned by the St. Charles Hotel association, and its proprietor was Colonel Bob Rivers, well known in political, social and racing circles all over America.

The St. Charles possessed a magnificent colonnade and was a very imposing looking structure. Its office rotunda was a general rendezvous for all N'ew Orleanians, and in times of political excitement it was the great place of meeting in the Crescent City.

Many personal encounters occurred in it, and no less than 20 fatal shooting affrays took place within its bounds. The destruction of this hotel obliterates not only a southern, but a national landmark.

Escaped From a Burning Mine.

PORT ORAM, N. J., April 30.—The fire which appeared to threaten the destruction of the Hibernia mines at Hibernia, about 10 miles from this place, was got under control and is now thought to be totally extinguished. All the men who were forced to remain below the surface on account of the fire at the mouth of the mine were gotten out in safety.

Fatal Freight Train Collision.

DOWNINGTOWN, Pa., April 30.—A freight train collision occurred on the Pennsylvania railroad near here, in which Samuel Houck of Stockton, N. J., was instantly killed, his brother slightly hurt, and I. L. Stauffer, a flagman of Harrisburg, seriously hurt.

Another Negro Fiend.

STAUNTON, Va., April 30.—Lottie Rowe, a 15-year-old girl, was assaulted and murdered by Lawrence Spiller, a negro, who was arrested. Excitement is very great, and the local military is under arms to preserve the peace.

Killed by a Fall.

DUNMORE DEPOT, N. Y., April 30.—William Gaffney, a carpenter, fell from the roof of one of the buildings on the Brooks locomotive works, a distance of more than 30 feet, and was instantly killed.

Explorer Wellman Heard From.

TROMSOE, Norway, April 30.—The north polar expedition under the command of Mr. Walter Wellman has arrived here en route for the island of Spitsbergen and the far north.

ROME, April 30.—The bishop of Providence has arrived in this city. It is expected that the bishop of Springfield will arrive here shortly.

LABOR CONFERENCE.

Another Meeting of Organization Leaders to Be Held.

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—The labor conferences called together in this city by Joseph Buchanan adjourned its secret session after deciding to meet again on Sept. 10 at a place to be selected by Chairman Buchanan. Before adjourning the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Your committee has considered the various propositions which have been put before it, and the mere fact that this conference has been held is a living evidence that the organized labor sentiment of the country is a unit on the fundamental truths that underlie the labor problems; and

Whereas, This body recommends that the official conferences which we are assured will soon be held between the Knights of Labor and the other national organizations should take such steps as will lead to an agreement for united action of the forces in the industrial and legislative field; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that the conference between the representatives of the organizations herein referred to should be held on or before the 1st day of July, and in the event that the labor convention called for by the general executive board of the Knights of Labor is not held by the forementioned date the chairman of this conference is hereby authorized to issue a call for a conference on Sept. 10.

Resolved, That this conference hereby recommends to the labor forces of America to unitedly resist any further reduction of wages and to energetically renew our efforts for the reduction of the hours of labor.

Resolved, That we urge all working people to unite their efforts in such action as shall secure that legislation for which all phases of the labor movement have announced, to the end that the industrial class may have full recognition of their rights in the laws of the land.

The place for holding the September convention will be, it is thought, a western city, as was suggested by James P. McGuire on Saturday. President Gompers of the Federation was not enthusiastic when the idea of holding another convention was broached. He said he was opposed to it.

The Widow Back at Windsor.

The Original Star

THE FIRST ARTISAN.

The Craft of the Smith as Traced in Ancient Records and Monuments.

The first smith mentioned in the Bible is Tubal Cain (Genesis iv. 22), and he is also in the first record of any handicraft in history. He was "the instructor of every artificer in brass"—i. e., copper—"and iron." Canaan was rich in metals, and the early inhabitants knew how to procure and use them. Iron especially was much used. Og, the king of Bashan, the land of giants, had an iron bedstead. The spear of Goliath was of iron and weighed 600 shekels, or about 23 pounds—that is, the head. The stem would be of strong wood. There were also chariots of iron, harrows, axes and other heavy tools.

The workers of metals and their various implements are frequently mentioned throughout the Old Testament, but we find only two notices in the New—those of Demetrius the silversmith and Alexander the coppersmith. The ancients appeared to have had a considerable knowledge of metallurgy, for metals of all kinds entered largely into the construction of their greatest works. Perhaps representations of every portion of the smith's craft are found on the monuments of ancient Egypt.

Isaiah gives the list of a smith's tools—the anvil, hammers, pincers, bellows, troughs, bellows, crucible and melting furnace.

Romance of the Insect World.

Popular Science News mentions that some insects play the part of farmers and harvest grain, others keep domestic animals as we keep cows, and some play the part of slaves, compelling the frugal to support them. The adaptations of form and coloring to the requirements of the various kinds of insects is wonderful. They imitate in their external shapes and colors flowers and leaves, the soil on which they walk and old dead sticks on which they rest and even each other. All such acts of imitation aid the insects to survive in conditions otherwise unfavorable for them.

Edible insects imitate in appearance those that are unpalatable, thereby being protected from the depredations of birds. Spiders imitate ants so perfectly in color and form that they are able to approach and secure their prey without arousing suspicion. Harmless caterpillars imitate snakes so perfectly, when at rest, that they frighten off their foes, etc.

Submarine Cables.

Commenting upon the cable map of the world prepared by the United States navy department, an exchange says it shows that the Mediterranean is thickly netted with cables and wires. So is the North Atlantic between the thirty-eighth and fifty-fifth parallels. The North sea, the Red sea and the Arabian sea have many cables. The only great unbridged spaces are the Pacific, the south Atlantic and the great stretch of the Indian ocean between Madagascar and Australia. There is a considerable cable north of Stockholm or south of Nelson, New Zealand. The Black sea is completely girdled by land lines and crossed by one cable. The gulf of Mexico is crossed, though not at its widest, by several cables, and the waters of the West Indies are becoming thickly netted with Famous Feet.

In Europe it is supposed that the tiny foot is the half mark of race, if only it be artistocratically small. This small foot notion is absolutely essential, and it is a fixed stamp of high breeding to have a foot that is delicately formed and arched, even if it is somewhat large. On the other hand a foot that is short and flat. It is related that in olden times Cleopatra was famous for her small feet, and in more modern times Napoleon de l'Eaclos and Mme. de Pompadour, whose two feet Louis XV could hold in one hand, are cited as remarkable for the beauty of their feet, while the beautiful Duchesse de Dino could put her foot, with her boot on, into any other woman's "chaussure."

The People of the Earth.

It has been calculated that there are about 1,500,000,000 of human beings now living on the earth. Of these 800,000,000 are packed in Asia, 320,000,000 dwell in Europe, over 200,000,000 are found in Africa, more than 100,000,000 in North and South America, and the rest may be said to belong to the islands. Black and white are born between them 400 or 500,000,000, the remaining 700,000,000 being brown, yellow and red.

One-third of the race wear clothing, one-sixth wear nothing, and the remainder are partially clad. One-third also are well housed, nearly a half dwell in caves or huts, while the rest are houseless.

Old Tunes.

"Old Hundred" has been variously ascribed to Dr. Martin Luther, Dr. John Dowland and William Damon. The Book of Mason wrote quite a treatise on the old tune, saying emphatically that it was written by Guillaume (William) Franc (1543). But later musical historians say it was composed by Louis Bourgeois of France in 1551.

The old tunes, "God Save the King" or "America," so universally sung to "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," is credited to Dr. John Bull (1562-1628), music teacher to Queen Elizabeth about 1600.

The Honeymoon.

The honeymoon is the first month of married life. Among northern nations of Europe there was an ancient practice for newly married couples to drink methaglin or mead, a kind of wine made from honey (hydromel) for 30 days after marriage; hence the term honeymonth or honeymoon. Attila, the Hun, drank so much mead at his wedding feast that he died.

The Language of the Ruby.

In the language of gems the ruby is the emblem of elegance and beauty. By the ancients it was also considered to possess the power of correcting evils resulting from mistaken friendship and to reveal poison. And in the middle ages it was regarded as an amulet, protecting against the plague, sadness, evil thoughts, wicked spirits, ill health, danger and death.

Some Children of the Slums.

Dr. Paul Garnier has made a study of those children of the slums in Paris who are the offspring of habitual drunkards, and he comes to the conclusion that "there is a flaw in the very nature of these young wretches that the psychologist can observe only and notes with apprehension—the absence of affectionate emotions," and where this is not there become lunatics they show "insensibility and pitilessness."

COXEY AT WASHINGT

Intends to March to the Capitol Steps Tomorrow.

THOUSANDS UNITE VISITING HIS CAMP.

The General Says That If the Army Is Shot Out of the Capitol Grounds by the Courts a Revolution Will Follow—Camp Looks Like a Circus Ground.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Citizen James Slecher Coxey, commander-in-chief of the good roads army of the commonweal, standing on a rickety wagon in the corner of the Brightwood Driving park, waving aloft his Alpine hat to one of the most cosmopolitan and extensive audiences ever gathered in Washington, announced that the greatest march of the nineteenth century had been accomplished.

"What has been accomplished," as Citizen Coxey said, but its ending was in pitiful contrast to the massing of the thousands of unemployed that its projector had prophesied. There hundred and a half of miserably dressed, woebegone, grumbling, out-at-the-elbow and run-down-at-the-heels specimens of humanity, who bore a striking though perhaps undeserved resemblance to the familiar genus tramp, marched into the park, led by a wheezing apology for a band, pitched tents and stretched themselves in the sun.

Thousands from the city turned out to make a holiday of it and inspect the strikers and Willard's hall early listened to the weird talk of Marshal Carl Browne and the populistic speech of Coxey. Then they turned toward Willard's hall, instead of wonderment at the whole queer performance, the perseverance with which it had been carried out and the notoriety it had attained.

Thousands Viewed the Army.

Thick clouds of dust overhung the two roads leading to Brightwood from the city all day long and all day were plowed with more travel than customarily beats them in months. Two endless processions swept along the roads all day, with such variety of travelers as had never turned out in Washington since war times. There were plenty of carriages bowling along with senators, representatives and their fami lies; swells of the foreign legations, mounted, with their legs incased in long riding boots, astride of steeds with closely cropped tails; carriages filled with the elite hitched to the most unique vehicles, into which they had piled friends and neighbors of their own color; stages and grocers' wagons carrying picnic parties of young people; tallyhos with clubmen packed like sardines on the top; pedestrians, young and old, black and white, plodding through the three miles of dust, and darting among the crowds were bicyclers galore.

Lining the entrances to the park entrepreneurs of all kinds had established their booths for traffic in gingerbread and sweetened water, which passed current under the guise of lemonade. The semblance to a circus layout was further enforced by the thimbleriggers and shellmen skulking about the outskirts of the crowd.

When the people poured into the park inclosure, the suggestion of circus day was full blown. In the center of the half mile race track flapped the canvas inclosure which encircled the quarters of the commonweal army.

Half a dozen weather beaten army tents bowed their the canvas drawn close with the exception of the entrance, where a couple of armed guards paraded back and forth. Tents were covered with black patched duck—legends which were a queer mixture of good roads, currency reform and the army of the unemployed. Two horses, with shaggy hallucks, were tethered about the wagon. Near by were fastened half a dozen large dogs, and the lifeless bodies were piled on the ground. Most interesting of the sights, however, were the human exhibits—the men who had marched and borne the brunt of mud and storms and cold. They were the most unique and inexplicable aggregation ever brought together. Some of them were at work about the tents and wagons, others carried up on the damp ground subsisting great chunks of bread, and many were stretched sleeping in the sun, with their heads pillowed on rolled up coats. Fashionably dressed ladies stood about enquiring the men and commenting upon their appearance, with no apparent realization of the fact that the subjects of their comments were human beings who could hear and understand them.

Coxey In Crowded Trousers.

Over in the most pretentious tent, which bore the sign "Headquarters" painted across it, were found the leaders of the army, General Coxey and Marshal Browne. The marshal, whose personality has been made familiar to the country, busied himself in dispatching a few mails for a more conventional black cutaway in preparation for the "incarnation services" which were about to begin. He was evidently proud of the possession of the badge who stood at the entrance viewing his toilet.

Clad in a fashionable spring suit of light drab hue, with as perfectly creased trousers as could be seen on Fifth avenue, with a cup of coffee in one hand and a bolled egg in the other, Coxey, as he alternately took refreshment and sustenance, sat General Coxey, as mild a mannered man as ever headed an army of peace.

The question of the hour most agitated Washington of late was propounded to him by your correspondent. "What do you intend to do when the police prevent you from holding your meeting in the capitol grounds?" he was asked.

"No one will prevent us," replied the sage from Massillon, with great promptness. "That is the constitution gives us the right to peaceably assemble and petition congress!"

"But there is a police regulation passed by congress which forbids processions and assemblages on the capitol grounds, and the police will stop your army if it attempts to trespass."

"The constitution was written before any police regulations," replied the general. "If they come in conflict with the constitution, they are void. We stand squarely upon the constitution. That is our platform."

"How do you intend to force your rights?"

"There is but one way—by an appeal to the courts. We will go before the highest court in the land if necessary. Meanwhile we will wait here in Washington if it takes all summer. If the courts refuse us our rights, there will be a revolution. I do not advocate revolution, nor do I desire it, but it will be irresistible, and it will be the greatest revolution of history if the American people are once thoroughly aroused."

A Miserable Meal.

While Coxey and Browne were speaking the army inside the canvas had been dispensing of a miserable meal. The men lined up before a commissary wagon, from which the squares of bread which they call "punk" were dealt out to them. This they took over to the campfire, where several buckets of uninviting looking meat were being concocted. Each tender received a big spoonful of the stew on his bread, and they sat about on the ground gnawing this ration in a famished way.

Although there is much humor about the affair, the sight of such a Sunday dinner and the ravenous way the men fought over it was not a humorous one. It was pitiful, too, to see the unhappy looking wretches stretched out on the bare ground in the blazing sun poorly clad, although all of them were clean shaven. A much more elaborate meal was served for the leaders in the headquarters tent.

Some few of the men had money and purchased meals at the eatables stands, but most of them stayed by the camp. Visitors came until dark, inspected the camp, looked at Coxey's handsome horses in the stables near by and went home with whatever fears they may have entertained of lawless outbreak from the men pretty thoroughly quelled. The gate receipts for the day are said to have been but $10.

General Coxey came into the city at night and registered at one of the hotels. He declares that his army will march to the capitol Tuesday noon, hold its great mass meeting on the steps to demand the passage of his bills and then return to camp to wait until they become law.

The start of the army from Rockville on the final stage of its march was delayed by the wind of provisions for the hungry members of the army. The only provision possible was attendance in the almshouse of Montgomery county, of which Rockville is the county seat.

When it was learned by the sick men that they must be cared for at the poorhouse, all but three refused to go there, and would march the last half mile with the ranks if they might ride on the wagons up to that point. This they did, but the seventh man was compelled by rheumatism resulting from exposure that he could exercise no option as to his course.

The column was organized in the same as when left Rockville, save that the Christopher Columbus Jones contingent from Philadelphia marched at the end of the line.

Mr. Jones wore a silk hat. Part of the way he footed it in the mud with the others, but on the last stretch he rode Coxey's Hambletonian blotter barefoot. This was very trying for Mr. Jones, and a saddle was procured for his use while riding into Washington.

Last Stage of the March.

The way out from Rockville to the main pike, a distance of 4½ miles, lay along a back road, over which the mud was deep and the brooks too wide to feed at a jump. At Mitchell's crossroads, about seven miles from the city, the army was met by 200 wheelmen who had come out from Washington to greet Coxey as a champion of good roads. They lined up on one side of the pike road and gave Coxey three lusty cheers and a tiger for good measure. This slogan gave Coxey his cue, and standing in his phaeton he spoke for five minutes upon the need of good highways and what he deemed the certainty that would follow the passage of his good roads and noninterest bearing bond bills. The wheelmen cheered the definite declaration when he sat down. Then they cheered Carl Browne, and the march was resumed with a stream of flashing wheels flowing along on either side of the column.

Soon men on horseback and men and women in plain and in handsome turnouts were met. They had driven out from the city in the bright morning to see the Coxyites march in. The sightseers increased with almost every rod as the top was neared until at the tollgate near the District line the curious crowds by far outnumbered the tramps' army. The residents were enjoying a spectacular entertainment, with Carl Browne and Chief Coxey in the leading parts.

At the District of Columbia boundary line the army was halted to give cheers for the federal powers. Just as the army moved on after this a dozen men were discovered over the fence in an open lot, drawn up in line. It was "The Unknown's" contingent of Confederates, who had tramped over from Rockville early, and at their head was the man Bizarro, if that be "The Unknown's" name.

"Men of 'The Unknown' contingent of the commonweal, give three cheers for the main body of the commonweal army, for Brother Coxey, for Brother Browne and the whole business!" he yelled. And they cheered and stayed where they were.

"Don't pay any attention to them," commanded Carl Browne as he rode forward. And they did not.

No other incident save constantly increasing crowds marked the progress and arrival at the camp on the Brightwood park racing grounds. The camp disappeared within their wall tent, and up went the placards.

No admission charged to these grounds, but all persons entering here are expected to contribute at least 25 cents or as much as they can afford for the good of the cause. All people admitted free. CARL BROWNE.

Swift's Men Moving On.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 30.—Morrison I. Swift's unemployed, or, industrial delegation as he calls it, spent a quiet Sunday here in comfortable quarters and were supplied with food, including a hot dinner which was prepared for them in Knights of Labor hall. At a public meeting in the opera house $15 was collected, which Commander Swift said was a larger amount than was received in all the towns in Rhode Island through which they passed.

Sunday afternoon another public meeting was held, at which Fitzgerald delivered an address, and a collection amounting to $8 was taken up. In the evening the musical talent of the army gave a fine concert. None of the money raised had to be expended for food, as a soliciting committee collected an ample supply to feed all and had some left over. A few attended church, but for the most part the men remained in and about their headquarters.

The leaders expressed much satisfaction at the attitude of the Connecticut people toward them as evidenced in New London. This morning they left for New Haven, where they expect a reception from Yale students and transportation by boat to New York. Their first night today will be at Lime village, near the Connecticut river, 18 miles from New London. The delegation now numbers 60 men.

SEALE-BLAINE.

Miss Blaine Wedded Amid a Bower of White Lilies and Roses.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The marriage of Miss Hattie Blaine and Mr. Truxton Beale took place today. It was a quiet home wedding, and the young couple, it is understood, will sail soon for Europe.

White lilies and roses were the flowers selected by Miss Hattie Blaine for the decorations. The large front drawing room on the second floor of the Blaine residence on Lafayette square was one vast conservatory. The bride's gown was of heavy white silk, devoid of ornamentation other than the elegant jabot of lace down either side of the front of the skirt. The high neck bodice was trimmed with wide ruffles of lace over the shoulders, with the ends crossing at the waist.

The collection of presents was a notably elegant one. The Hon. Whitelaw Reid's gift to the bride consisted of two very elegant silver dishes. Senator and Mrs. Chandler sent an after dinner silver coffee pot. The young sons of Representative Hitt sent a jeweled smelling bottle, and Senator and Mrs. Hale sent two large dishes in repousse silver. Mrs. Emmons Blaine sent a splendid gift of diamonds. Mr. and Mrs. Letter sent a complete toilet set in repousse silver.
